Not Over-Wise.

There is an old-allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly treading on a snake. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglecting to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all Druggists.

ARMY SIGNAL STATIONS

Captured by Navy In Attack Upon the Coast

DASH TO THE WESTWARD

After Having Secured Martha's Vineyard and Block Island as Bases of Operations—Attacks on Forts Are Repulsed by Artillerymen

Newport, R. I., Sept. 2.—Admiral Higginson did not long delay after the declaration of hostilities yesterday to cut out work for the jackies and marines of his fleet, accomplishing in daylight, but under cover, two things that General MacArthur's army had anticipated. These things were the seizure of Martha's Vineyard and Block Island and the capture of the army's signal station on each. Last night he followed up his good work by a demonstration in force against the extreme western end of the line of defending fortifications, but it cannot be determined until later if he actually attempted to force his way into Long Island sound or simply aimed to give his crews a little big gun practice, and his captains the opportunity to maneuver within striking distance to determine the location and calibre of the ordinance in the forts.

The navy's night attack was not expected at the western end of the line quite so early in the game. The theory was held all day, after it was known that Higginson had secured a base on the outlying islands, that he would send his cruisers for reconnaissance against both ends of the line, and then swing his fleet into the centre or around Newport for a sharp, yet heavy, attack there, maneuvering quickly, and then when things became most interesting sail to the westward and make his grand effort to force his way into Long Island sound. This would have been his night attack, for it seems almost certain that the day attack will be against Fort Rodman, the eastern point.

Once last night Newport got a scare when a message came from Point Judith that marines were being landed there in the fog. All communication with that point was cut off. Then at 10:30 came an official bulletin covering the bombardments of Forts Michie and Wright, and wonderment arose if the favorite theory was about to be carried out in practice. But very soon Point Judith signal station was again in touch with the central intelligence bureau. Then it was explained that the Point Judith signalmen were given a drill in saving equipment on supposition that the enemy was making a landing. They cut out the telegraph and telephone wires, picked up their equipment and made a record-breaking retreat, then returning and re-establishing the station, doing a creditable piece of work.

The two movements of the fleet yesterday form chapters in themselves. In theory only was Admiral Higginson's capture of the islands an easy task, but nevertheless he got them and it is to his credit. The capture of the islands having been expected, it was forestalled by the army in providing secret signal stations. But under shelter of Block island and off the entrance to New Haven harbor the fleet swung at anchor in the fog nearly all day. The converted yachts took on coal from the collier Lebanon and the marines on shore went into camp apparently for a long stay. Towards evening the small vessels of the fleet went into the harbor while the big craft moved in closer together. All this was a bluff on Admiral Higginson's part, in view of the lively time later. On board ship it was a condition of war, decks cleared for action and guns in such shape that their crews would be able to respond instantly to the order "Cast loose and provide."

At just 10:20 last night the big guns of Forts Wright, Terry and Michie belched forth almost simultaneously and there was no longer doubt that the first attack in the war game was in effect. For an hour the cannonading continued.

When the booming of the big guns signalled the beginning of the attack, for the moment all communication with the forts by telegraph and telephone was cut off, the artillerymen being engaged with the enemy, and all the wires at the forts were being utilized in the firing of the guns. Far out in the Race the ships commanded by Admiral Higginson were sighted and just as soon as they came within firing distance the fort guns opened on them. There was quick response from the enemy. first 40 minutes the firing was continuous, the aim of the soldiers being aided by the searchlights, which worked to the fullest satisfaction. The ships' lights were out and evidently the admiral honed he could get nearer the forts, within the safety line, before he was discovered, but in this he was foiled, so the army officers claim, and his ships, including the Massachusetts and Indiana, were put out of action.

He kept the army men guessing as to what he would do next, and he maneuvered the fleet in a most masterly way and hurried to the westward, out of the firing zone. Just exactly where the fleet went was not known definitely at headquarters. It was expected that there would be a second attack before the night passed, but General MacArthur said the enemy would find a hot reception awaiting its advent, warmer indeed than the one that had already been tendered.

PARTRIDGE FOR GOVERNOR

Massachusetts Prohibitionists Place a State Ticket In the Field

Boston, Sept. 2—An attendance that has seldom been surpassed in a Prohibition convention in Massachusetts, 155 delegates met here yesterday to nominate a state ticket and adopt a platform for the coming fall campaign. The ticket named follows:

For governor, W. H. Partridge, Newton; lieutenant governor, O. W. Cobb, Easthampton; secretary of state, H. B. Griffin, Winthrop; treasurer and receiver general, Daniel Parlin, Worcester; auditor, David Morrison, Fall River; attorney general, Allan Coffin, Nantucket.

The platform as adopted by the convention holds that the licensed liquor traffic, in all its branches, from the original manufacture to its final sale, is a system of corruption and robbery and belongs not with legitimate trades, but with gambling, theft and prostitution; that Massachusetts can never put herself right before God and men until she blots out the crime of 1875, which substituted license for prohibition. The platform also declares that the fatal defect of local option is that it is wrong. The two propositions that the state cannot authorize murder in certain districts, and that it cannot authorize liquor selling in certain districts, are not similar but identical, for every saloon is a potential murder step.

Soldiers' Sympathy With Strikers

Parkersburg, W. Va., Sept. 2.—An unexpected situation has resulted from the ordering out of the National Guard to preserve order in the coal fields. The soldiers have persuaded so many of the men at work to join in the strike that the detachment stationed at Rush Run had to be recalled and sent to another point to keep it from emptying the mine. It is estimated that over 1000 families have been evicted in the New river valley and most of them have no place to go.

Pleasure Shooting Became Earnest

Woonsocket, R. I., Sept. 2.—Shooting for pleasure by some parties yesterday in Blackstone started a crowd of boys at a picnic to send a volley of stones across the Blackstone river into cottages occupied by the Italian strike breakers, employed by the American Woolen company. The latter retaliated with birdshot and pistol bullets, three persons being hit by some of the shot, although not dangerously injured. An incipient riot was quelled by the police.

Substantial Aid For Miners

Philadelphia, Sept. 2.—The organized workmen of Philadelphia yesterday paid their tribute to President Mitchell. The presence of the miners' chief was made the occasion of probably the greatest demonstration that organized labor has ever held in this city. After the parade a picnic was held. Here Mr. Mitchell made two addresses. The proceeds of the picnic, about $10,000, was turned over to the Miners' union.

Trip Unexpectedly Ended

Denver, Sept. 2.—After a lapse of more than 24 hours, during which no word was received from the three aeronauts who left Denver to try for a balloon voyage to New York, a telegram last night announced that the airship had been wrecked in a storm 27 miles north of Florence, Col. The occupants were not seriously hurt.

Northern Securities Files Answer

St. Paul, Sept. 2.—The answer of the Northern Securities company and President Hill, in the suit in the United States court to prevent the consolidation of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railway companies, was filed in court in this city yesterday. It is a general denial of the complaint.

Rowing Sharps Surprised

New York, Sept. 2.—Louis Scholes, the Toronto Rowing club crack, was beaten to a standstill by Frank Vesselly of the Bohemian Boat club at the 13th annual regatta of the middle states regatta association, rowed on the Harlem river yesterday.

Released From Asylum Too Soon

Salt Lake City, Sept. 2.—William Troutman, who recently was discharged from the insane asylum, brained his two daughters yesterday, fatally wounded his wife, attempted to murder the remainder of his family, and then killed himself.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Wednesday, Sept. 3.
Sun rises—5:10; sets—6:16.
Moon sets—6:51 p. m.

There have been showers and thunderstorms from the extreme southwestern states into western New England and temperatures have fallen 6 to 18 degrees over the shower areas. In the New England states showers will be followed by fair and cooler weather.

BACK IN MASSACHUSETTS.

President Made Tour of Vermont Yesterday and Spoke at Proctor on the Munroe Doctrine.

East Northfield, Mass., Sept. 2.—President Roosevelt yesterday concluded his tour through Vermont at Brattleboro, and spent last night at Northfield. The reception accorded him at Brattleboro was among the most enthusiastic which he has received in his tour of New England. He was met by a company of infantry, headed by a band, and escorted to the common, where he delivered a brief address, in which he spoke of Abraham Lincoln as the man of the hour in the great Civil war. He feelingly referred to the venerable ex-Governor Holbrook, who was on the platform, as being one of the few men who had received the distinction of being a war governor.

The president's progress through Brattleboro was a continuous ovation. On the line of march, his carriage was stopped in front of the leading hotel, and from the balcony, men, women and children showered loose flowers and bouquets upon him. Arriving at the common, where he delivered his address, the pavilion steps were strewn with flowers by little girls, who were drawn up on both sides.

Labor day was generally celebrated throughout the state and wherever the train stopped holiday crowds were out to extend the president a welcome. His remarks on the subject of labor were confined mostly to a tribute to the people of Vermont, and he expressed his pleasure at being greeted by the representatives of organized labor, because, he said, the typical American is the man who works.

The president began the day's journey at Burlington, reaching that city from Shelburne, the home of Dr. W. S. Webb. After a drive about the city, the presidential train started southward, stops being made at Vergennes, Middlebury, Brandon, Proctor, Rutland, Ludlow, Bellows Falls, Chester and Brattleboro, and his Vermont trip was ended.

He crossed into Massachusetts in the early evening, and went to Northfield to remain last night as the guest of William R. Moody, son of Evangelist Dwight L. Moody. The president went to Round Top this morning to visit Mr. Moody's grave.

The president spoke at every stop yesterday, but most of his addresses were brief. That of greatest import was the one delivered at Proctor, wherein he defined his idea of the Monroe doctrine. He said:

We believe in the Monroe doctrine, not as a means of aggression at all. It does not mean that we are aggressive toward any power. It means merely that as the biggest power on this continent we remain steadfastly true to the principles first formulated under the presidency of Monroe, through John Quincy Adams—the principle that this continent must not be treated as a subject for political colonization by any European power. As I say, that it not an aggressive doctrine. It is a doctrine of peace; a doctrine of defense; a doctrine to secure the chance on this continent for the nations here to develop peaceably along their own lines. We have formulated that doctrine. Remember that the Monroe doctrine will be respected as long as we have a first-class, efficient navy, and not very much longer.

In private life he who asserts something, says what he is going to do and does not back it up, is always a contemptible creature, and as a nation the last thing we can afford to do is to take a position which we do not intend to try to make good. Bragging and boasting in private life are almost always the signs of a weak man, and a nation that is strong does not need to have its public men boast or brag on its account. Least of all does a self-respecting nation wish its public representatives to threaten or menace or insult another power. Our attitude toward all powers must be one of such dignified courtesy and respect as we intend that they shall show us in return. We must be willing to give the friendly regard that we exact from them. We must no more wrong them than we must submit to wrong doing by them, but when we take a position let us remember that our holding it depends upon ourselves, depends upon our showing that we have the ability to hold it.

After speaking of the part that Vermont has played in the country's history through Admirals Dewey and Clark, the president continued: Shame to us if we assert the Monroe doctrine and then if our assertion shall be called in question show that we have only made an idle boast, that we are not prepared to back up our words by deeds.

Labor Mayor For Dublin

Dublin, Sept. 2.—Alderman Patrick Dowd, the labor candidate, was yesterday elected lord mayor of Dublin. Timothy C. Harrington, the retiring lord mayor, was a candidate for a third term, but was defeated.

New Discus Throwing Record

Keokuk, Ia., Sept. 2.—Charles Henneman, in a discus-throw exhibition yesterday, beat the world's record by over six feet, throwing a 4½-pound discus 128 feet, 8 inches.

Trolley Car Fatality

Barrington, R. I., Sept. 2.—The dead body of Reggio Palmier, aged 17, was found beside the tracks of the Suburban Street railway last night. It is supposed he fell off the running board of a trolley car. The skull was fractured, the right wrist broken and hand lacerated.

Sawmill Owners' Ultimatum

Bangor, Me., Sept. 2.—The sawmill owners announce that the mills will not be opened except as non-union establishments and with 11 hours constituting a day's work. The operatives are on strike for 10 hours and the recognition of their union.

Fined For Speeding Motors

Newport, R. I., Sept. 2.—For fast motoring, William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., W. A. M. Burden, Robert Cutting and W. W. Sherman were arraigned in court yesterday and fined $10 and costs each.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. For sale by all Druggest.

A Medicine for Old People.

Rev. Geo. Gay, Greenwich, Kas., is past 83 years of age, yet he says: "I am enjoying excellent health for a man of my age, due entirely to the rejuvenating influences of Dr. Miles' Nervine. It brings sleep and rest when nothing else will, and gives strength and vitality even to one of my old age."

"I am an old soldier," writes Mr. Geo. Watson, of Newton, Ia., "and I have been a great sufferer from nervousness, vertigo and spinal trouble. Have spent considerable money for medicine and doctors, but with little benefit. I was so bad my mind showed signs of weakness. I began taking Dr. Miles' Nervine, and I know it saved my life."

Dr. Miles' Nervine

Saved me from the insane asylum," Mrs. A. M. Heifner, of Jerico Springs, Mo., writes. "I was so nervous that I could scarcely control myself, could not sleep nor rest, would even forget the names of my own children at times. I commenced using Dr. Miles' Nervine and it helped me from the first, and now I am perfectly well."

New Car Barn.

The street railroad company commenced this morning to move into the new car barn, and it is expected that by Saturday they will be comfortably settled. The barn will be connected with City Square by a private telephone line. While the new barn may seem quite a distance from City Square, Supt. Reynolds says that a car can be put in City Square in about two minutes after receiving notice. This is less time than it now takes to get a car from the present barn on to the Houghs Neck track.

Rhode Island Coat of Arms.

To those who visit Houghs Neck, an object of considerable interest is the immence coat of arms of the state of Rhode Island which occupies a prominent place above the front door of a cafe near the Quincy yacht club house. The seal is a fine piece of wood carving, and its association with the aforesaid cafe is something that casual visitor does not at first comprehend. The seal was taken from the steamer "Providence", which, when the noted "Jim Fiske" owned her, was "Queen of Long Island "sound". The Providence was broken up and burned on Nut Island, early this spring, and the owner of the cafe was fortunate to get possession of the Coat of arms, which was one of the decorative features of the famous boat. The coloring is still bright and attracts hundreds of interested people every day.

Outing at Squantum.

Camp 30 Sons of Veterans of Dorchester held an outing Monday at Squantum. With the camp were a number of members of Post 68, G. A. R. Dinner was served at 12 and supper at 5 o'clock. In the afternoon there was an interesting game of ball between nines from Camp 30 and the Lincoln club. The committee in charge of the affair were: W. L. Sellon, chairman, N. G. Davidson, George H. Monks and Messrs. Gardner, Tileston and Clann.

An open air Socialist rally was held in City Square Saturday evening addressed by Mr. Mooney of Brockton and Candidate Turner.

INCENDIARY FIRE.

North Quincy Clubhouse Damaged $1200.

Saturated Cotton Waste Found.

A Shed on Common Street Also Destroyed.

Two alarm of fire early Sunday morning kept the fire department busy and gave them the first work they have had for some time. Both fires were undoubtedly of incendiary origin. At the second fire there was unmistakable evidence that it was the work of an incendiary.

The first alarm was from Box 43, and was rung in at 1.10 for a fire in a shed on Common street, owned by Bernard Donaher. The building was destroyed causing a loss of not over $75.

The second alarm came from Box 61, and was sounded at 2.20. This was for a lively blaze in the Poland block on Billings road near the Norfolk Downs depot. On the lower floor were two rooms that have been occupied by the school department as overflow rooms for the Quincy school.

The balance of the building was occupied by the North Quincy club. In the rear of the building, and adjoining it, is a long one-story building in which is located the bowling alleys of the club. It was in this building that the fire started.

The fire worked along the alleys and had got into the main building by the time the fire department arrived. Good work on the part of the firemen prevented the flames from doing much damage to the main building.

After the fire was supposed to be all out, a crackling sound was heard, but it was some minutes before it was located. By tearing away the partition it was found that the fire had got behind the plastering and was working between the studding toward the upper floor. Once located this blaze was quickly extinguished.

The alleys and furnishings which are owned by the Downs Bowling association were damaged to the extent of $250, and the furnishings of the North Quincy club, were damaged largely by smoke and water. Their loss will not exceed $200. The building which is owned by ex-Councilman John E. Poland was damaged $750. It is said that everything was fully insured.

An examination of the building after the fire showed that the fire had started in the bowling alleys, and in the corner, where it is thought it started there was found a lot of cotton waste and old paper which had been satuated with oil. This leads Chief Williams to believe that the fire was the work of an incendiary.

Picnic Games.

At the picnic on Labor day of St Margarets parish of Dorchester, the South Quincy were defeted by the St. Margarets 6 to 5 in a five inning game. Patterson and Coughlin were the battery of the South Quincy and Powers and McLaughlin for St. Margarets. South Quincy excelled at the bat but had four errors to one for the St. Margarets. Donaher of South Quincy made a two-base and also a three-base hit.

The score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5
St. Margarets,	0	2	0	3	1	— 6
South Quincys,	4	0	1	0	0	— 5

Other Games.

Dunn, recently of the South Quincys, pitched for the Boston Dry Goods team at Braintree, and won 7 to 2. Dunn struck out six men and held the home team down to five hits. Barnstead and Balfer were the battery for Braintree.

Peptiron

(Pronounced Pept-iron.)

A Digestive
A Nerve Food
A Stomach Tonic

Strengthens the nerves, tones the stomach, perfects digestion, and cures nervousness, dyspepsia, anemia, and that long train of aches and pains attending an overworked and underfed brain.

It combines iron with the phosphates, pepsin, and other tonic and nutritive substances; does not cause constipation nor injure the teeth.

Peptiron is made in two forms: In a liquid—an aromatic cordial elixir—at $1 per bottle, also in chocolate-coated pills at 50c. or $1 per box. By C. I. HOOD CO., proprietors Hood's Sarsaparilla, Lowell, Mass., U. S. A.

PICNIC OF CLAN.

McGregor and Friends of Quincy Largely Represented.

What was without doubt the largest gathering of the Scottish people at any time in the United States took place Labor day at West Roxbury, the occasion being the thirteenth consecutive annual picnic of the Order of Scottish Clans. Early in the day the "McGregors" of Quincy to the number of four hundred or more with their wives, daughters, children and sweethearts, took trains and electrics for Boston. They joined other clans in the city an marched in a body to the South station, the Quincy City band playing "Auld Lang Syne," and eight pipers bringing up the rear with "The Campbells are coming" and other martial airs.

Special trains were in readiness to take the pleasure seekers to Spring Street station, from whence they took cars for the grove, a short distance away. It would be hard to estimate how many people entered the grove, but the number was great. The various and variegated plaids and tartans, representing so many different clans and so many different phases of Scottish life in days gone by, gave a picturesque appearance to the entire gathering.

Rowdyism was conspicuous by its absence, and so was drinking. Everybody seemed intent on rest only, on having a good time himself, and making his "brother Scot" feel good as well.

Twelve hundred dollars were distributed in prizes and the athletic contests, most of which were open to the world, were of all kinds, devised to try the strength and agility of the contestants. Tossing the caber is something with which the average Yankee is not acquainned. It is an herculean task and only an Hercules could accomplish it, as was proved by the number who failed to tip the telegraph pole over. But it was tipped over just the same by several of the braw Scots.

The tug of war, in which the Quincy team took a prominent part, was another contest which required brawn as well as brain. The dance known as "Highland fling," was tripped off fantastically to the tune of "gillie callum" by several competitors, among them a girl under fourteen in Highland garb. Throwing the hammer and the races brought out the fact that the professional life of the athlete is short.

It was almost pitiful to see Tincler the Irish runner, who a few years ago had scarcely a peer, come in third, and to see stalwart Gideon Perrie who held the world's record not very long ago, for throwing the hammer, fail to come up to the mark this time.

A boy's brigade, most of the lads being from Quincy, gave an exhibition drill at the end of the day.

Caught in Shafting.

Arthur Morrisett, employed at Hughes polishing mill, West Quincy, had a narrow escape from a serious if not fatal injury on Saturday. He was at work on a vertical polishing machine when his shirt became entangled and he was being drawn into the machinery when the clothing gave way. All of the clothing on the upper part of the body was torn off and he received several bad cuts on the head, besides being bruised about the body. He is not confined to the house.

CITY BREVITIES.

City Council this evening.

Edward Langley and family have moved from Coddington street to River street.

Miss Susie Hall of Walker street has returned from Green, where she has been spending a few weeks.

Ex-Policeman Nichol is receiving congratulations, twins having arrived to help make his home life happy.

It is proposed that the Greenleaf street school shall be a fitting institution for the best secondary schools.

H. O. Studley and a party of friends are on a ten days' gunning excursion at North Eastham.

M. A. Dill and family moved from Wollaston on Saturday to the Bates block on Saville street.

Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Langley spent Sunday and Labor day at Providence, R. I., with Mrs. Langley's parents.

Mrs. Mabel (Oxford) Bates and two daughters who have been spending a fortnight with Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Oxford of River street, have returned to Waltham.

Charles Safford and family of Botolph street have returned from Nova Scotia, where they have been spending the summer.

Mrs. Jerusha Hardwick, who lives at the corner of Foster and Washington streets, celebrated her 87th birthday last week and received a number of tokens from her neighbors and friends. She is enjoying the best of health.

John McTiernan of West Quincy was very successful in the sports of the Central Labor Union at Taunton on Labor day. He was first in the half mile run, second in the running broad jump, third in broad jump, and fourth in 135 yard handicap.

The stable which was connected with the house being altered over by Mr. Horace F. Spear, has been moved to the rear corner of the lot, which is a great improvement not only to Mr. Spear's place but to the next place owned by Mr. Charles H. Porter.

Miss Ethel Roland of Reading, Penn., has been visiting the Quincy Mansion school at Wollaston, from which she was graduated three years ago. Miss Roland is the young lady who met the author, Mr. Gilbert Parker at Ober Ammergau two years ago. He admired her so much that he introduce her as one of the characters in his novel, "Right of Way."

Evidently H. H. Eaxon is not worrying over his $50,000 libel suit for he is laying out considerable money repairing his real estate. He is painting his houses and stores and not all of a color as has been his practice. The colonial house occupied by Charles W. Garey looked so well and the next in line is the large square house opposite, occupied by Mr. Swingle, which is also to be painted. Artistic and freshly painted buildings add to the attractiveness of a city.

Amputation Necessary.

People living on the line of the railroad tracks between the Quincy Adams station and the School street bridge had their attention attracted about 7.30 Monday evening, by cries of distress. An investigation was made which resulted in the finding of a man beside the outward tracks with his left leg badly crushed below the knee. The police ambulance was called and the man removed to the City Hospital, where it was found his leg was so badly crushed that amputation was necessary.

The man proved to be Patrick Sullivan, unmarried, a stone cutter, aged about 30 years and residing on Liberty street.

From what can be learned, it appears that Sullivan and his chum were going down the tracks from Quincy street toward the Quincy Adams depot. They had reached a point near the railroad derrick when the 7.10 inward train, which was late, pulled out of the depot. This the two attemped to board. Sullivan's companion, whose name could not be learned, was successful in getting on the train, but Sullivan was not. He either fell off or was knocked down and the outward train due at Quincy Adams at 7.22 passed over his leg.

VICTIM OF THUGS

Man Shot, Beaten and Robbed In His Office at Revere, Mass

Revere, Mass., Sept. 2.—While alone in his office, which is located in a lonely section of the town, Alver E. Ives, manager of the Revere branch of the Boston Ice company, was assaulted and dangerously wounded by two masked men last evening, and is now in a serious condition at a hospital in Chelsea. Ives was engaged in counting over the day's receipts, when he was interrupted by a knock at the door, and, upon opening it, was confronted by a masked man, who, revolver in hand, commanded him to throw up his hands.

Instead of complying with the demand, Ives attacked the man and had knocked him down, and was standing over him when the fellow fired, the ball entering Ives' body directly over the heart. He fell to the floor, when he was immediately attacked by a second masked man, who rained blows upon his head with some weapon until his victim was rendered unconscious.

They then hurriedly gathered what money they could find and made their escape. It was some time before word of the affair reached the ears of the police, and Ives was then carried to the Frost hospital, where it is thought his injuries may not prove fatal, although his condition is very serious.

Accident to Excursion Steamer

Bath, Me., Sept. 2.—Steamer Kennebec, carrying the biggest crowd of the season, was unable to land at Popham last night on account of the strong tide. The boat went out into the river and made a turn and started for the wharf. It struck it in such a way that about 15 feet of the pier was knocked on and the steamer seriously damaged. The steamer proceeded down to Parker's Flats, where many of the passengers were landed by boat and proceeded to Boston by train.

Gail Hamilton Wins $10,000 Purse

Hartford, Sept. 2.—The $10,000 Futurity for 3-year-olds was the feature of the Old Glory event which opened the Charter Oak grand circuit meet here yesterday. A field of eight starters in this race was simmered down to three in the final heat. Gail Hamilton took first money. John Mc was the favorite in betting, selling for 100, with Gail Hamilton 50, Wig Wag 35 and the field 25.

Manufacturer Kills Himself

Haverhill, Mass., Sept. 2.—The body of Frank A. Goodell, one of Haverhill's prominent shoe manufacturers, was found in his office last evening, he having committed suicide by shooting. No reason is known for the suicide. The condition of the body indicated as that life had been extinct about 24 hours. Goodell was 35 years old and was prominent in social circles.

Tramp Suspected of Murder

Portland, Me., Sept. 2.—The York county authorities were notified last night by Constable Favour of Cornish, who is at Skowhegan, that a tramp answering the description of the one suspected of the murder of Miss Olive Broad is under arrest in a town nearby Skowhegan and that he will go to see him. Favour has been following this man for about a week.

Arrest In Shooting Case

Meriden, Conn., Sept. 2.—George Kane, aged 18, who shot William Bailey, aged 12, last Saturday, was placed under arrest yesterday on the charge of assault with intent to kill. Kane and Bailey were shooting at swallows with a 22-calibre rifle when Bailey received a bullet in the back. Bailey is still alive but little hope is felt for his recovery.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

PEOPLE TERROR STRICKEN

Mount Pelee In Constant Eruption For the Past Two Weeks

Castries, Island of St. Lucia, B. W. I., Sept. 2.—Mont Pelee has been in constant eruption since Aug. 15. There was an enormous fall of ashes from the volcano the night of the 25th. There was a very severe eruption the night of the 28th. The mountain burned fiercely that night and out at sea passing vessels were covered with ashes. The night of the 30th there were three separate eruptions.

It is impossibe to approach the ruined town of St. Pierre from the sea. The people of the village of Lecarbel, on the coast, are terror-stricken and flying to the interior. Hot water is pouring down on Lorrain and Basse Pointe.

At 8 o'clock in the evening of the 30th the sky was cloudless. Suddenly one-half of the horizon was obscured by a black cloud of dust. This cloud was the centre of most magnificent electric effects, the flashes of light surpassing the most elaborate fireworks. Flames and flashes continued to burst from the cloud until nearly midnight. Columns of flame shot out of the crater of Mont Pelee to explode above the cloud in showers of balls of golden fire, which fell through the darkness in myriads of sparks. Three large aureoles were seen in the sky over the opening of the crater.

A tidal wave rushed upon Fort de France and the terrified inhabitants of the port fled in large numbers to the interior. The wave did but slight damage. At midnight of the 30th Mont Pelee was quiet; shortly after this hour there came another shower of ashes, accompanied by vivid sheet lightning.

In addition to the 200 persons reported to have lost their lives at Le Carbet and Morne Rouge, many other persons are said to have been killed all over the northern districts of the island. The governor of Martinique is believed to have started for the scene of destruction.

A Nobleman's Downfall

Copenhagen, Sept. 2.—William Bartholm, who is wanted by the police of Chicago to explain the murder of his mother and his sweetheart, Minnie Mitchell, is the son of a scion of Danish nobility, William P. Bartholm, who died at the Soldiers' home, Milwaukee, some years ago. The elder Bartholm came of a distinguished family of the Danish nobility. He was a jurist. He emigrated to America in 1859 and had many vicissitudes there. At one time he worked as a scavenger.

Two Accidents and a Stabbing

Gloucester, Mass., Sept. 2.—William Lawrence and Charles Hobbs are suffering from serious injuries inflicted by electric cars at different times yesterday. Peter Donahue is suffering from a knife wound. William Dugan has been arrested, charged with being the assailant, but he denies any knowledge of it and Donahue refuses to tell the name of his assailant. Donahue will probably recover.

Sectional Feeling Buried

Minneapolis, Sept. 2.—General Torrance, commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., has issued an appeal addressed to the Grand Army veterans that they contribute funds to aid in the erection of a home for ex-Confederate veterans now being built at Mission Creek, Ala. Mr. Torrance pays a high tribute to the bravery of the men who wore the grey.

Many Marine Disasters

Capetown, Sept. 2.—Eighteen vessels, mostly sailing craft, have been driven ashore in a gale at Port Elizabeth. Five of them were dashed to pieces and all the members of their crews were lost. Two tugs are also reported to have foundered and a score of lighters are ashore.

Archbishop Corrigan's Successor

Rome, Sept. 2.—The propaganda yesterday decided to recommend the pope to appoint Rev. John M. Farley, D. D., the auxiliary bishop of New York, as archbishop of New York, in succession to the late Rev. Michael A. Corrigan.

Name Won't Soon Die Out

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 2.—David Gossard died yesterday, aged 75. He was twice married and the father of 24 children, 20 of whom are living. He is also survived by 80 grandchildren and 11 great grandchildren.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Judge Samuel Treat, former United States judge of the eastern district of Missouri, died at the residence of his daughter at Rochester. He was born in Portsmouth, N. H., in 1815.

A statue was unveiled at Watertown, N. Y., of Roswell P. Flower, who, from a poor boy, rose to be merchant, banker, congressman, governor and leader of Wall street.

The cruiser Detroit, which has been extensively rebuilt at the Portsmouth, N. H., navy yard, will be put in commission Sept. 23 and will be attached to the north Atlantic squadron for a short time.

The Italian premier, Signor Zanardelli, has been taken suddenly ill and is now confined to his bed.

The naked body of an unknown man, about 30 years old, was found in the Stillwater river at Orono, Me. It is thought that he committed suicide.

Fire damaged the plant of the Gardner (Mass.) Gas Light and Fuel company to the extent of $2500.

John McLane has issued a statement to the effect that he is not a candidate this year for the New Hampshire gubernatorial nomination.

BARGAIN BABIES.

If babies were for sale the most inveterate bargain-hunting woman in the world would not look for a bargain baby. She would want the best baby that could be bought, regardless of price.

Every woman naturally craves a healthy, handsome child, and her craving can be gratified if she will but remember that the child's health is her own gift, and to give health she must have it to give. Mothers whose babies have been weak and puny have nursed in strength their first strong child after using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is the best preparative for maternity, encouraging the appetite, quieting the nerves and inducing refreshing sleep. It gives the mother strength to give her child, and makes the baby's advent practically painless.

"My wife had been sick nearly all her life," says Mr. E. E. Fricke, of Petersburg, Menard Co., Illinois, Box 367, "and after trying everything I could think of I made up my mind to try 'Favorite Prescription.' I got six bottles, which my wife took a tablespoonful three times a day, until the baby came. She felt better after taking the first bottle, and when baby was born he weighed nine and a half pounds. To-day he is six months old and weighs twenty-two pounds. He is as good a child as any one could wish. The doctor says he is as healthy as any baby could be, and also says the use of your 'Favorite Prescription' was the cause of such a healthy baby."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the best and safest laxative for the use of delicate women.

VERMONT LIQUOR LAW

Responsible For Political Tangle In That State

THE CHANCES APPEAR EVEN

For No Election of Governor by the People, Thus Leaving It to the Legislative Body—Republican Factions Each Claim to Be Sure of Victory

Burlington, Vt., Sept. 2.—The leading supporters here of J. G. McCullough, the regular Republican nominee for governor, predict his election today by a majority of from 5000 to 10,000. The managers of the campaign for P. W. Clement, on the other hand, claim Mr. Clement's election by 3000 majority. They give only five of the 14 counties in the state to McCullough.

It is admitted by the Democrats themselves that their vote will be much smaller than usual, as many Democrats will vote for Clement.

The friends of Felix McGettrick, the Democratic standard bearer, are hoping that the people will fail to elect, in which case the contest will be thrown into the legislature.

Both factions of the Republican party are making gigantic efforts to control the legislature. Most towns have at least three candidates, and as a majority of votes is necessary to elect, it is thought many towns are likely to go unrepresented this year.

As the successful candidates are required to receive a majority over all many of the prominent politicians in the state are predicting that there will be no election by the people for governor and lieutenant governor and that the election will be carried to the legislature. The legislature consists of 30 senators and 246 representatives. The present general assembly has less than 50 Democrats. The fight will extend down through the ticket to part of the senators in each county and representatives in each of the 246 cities and towns. In the contest for members of the legislature the interest is equally as great as in that over the head of the ticket.

The vote for governor two years ago was 67,099 and a trifle larger vote is looked for today on account of the intense interest in the struggle for governor. Friends of both candidates agree that never before has it been so difficult to forecast the probable result as now. Those who predict that the election will be carried to the legislature say McCullough will get 28,000 votes and Clement 24,150, while McGettrick and Sherburne are given a combined vote of 4500. If the vote is as large as that of two years ago it will require a total of 33,500 to elect by the people.

A prominent Republican says that the division in the Republican ranks developed by the opposing views on the liquor law are responsible for such mixed political conditions, but the chances are even that there will be no election for governor by the people, and that the legislative body which meets in October will be called upon to elect a governor and a lieutenant governor.

As the result of the interest that has developed it is generally predicted that both branches will be in favor of high license, the local option liquor law with a referendum clause attached, which, when voted on, will immediately take the place of the prohibitory law which has been on the statute books for 50 years.

Conservative Republicans concede that Clement will get 20 percent of the vote that would naturally go to the Republican candidate for governor if there were no party differences. The Clement leaders look for their main strength in the cities and large towns, and should the day be rainy they say the vote for McCullough will be much smaller in the back towns than they give credit for in good weather.

Terrible Railway Smashup

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 2.—While rounding a curve on a high embankment near Berry yesterday the engine and four cars of an excursion train left the track and rolled down the incline, smashing the coaches into kindling wood and causing the instant death of 21 persons and the injury of 81 others. Physicians say that at least 29 of the injured cannot live. With the exception of two all of the dead and injured are negroes.

GOES TO LEGISLATURE

To Decide Who Shall Be Next Governor of Vermont

M'CULLOUGH LOST HEAVILY

Owing to the Large Vote Cast For Clement, the Bolting Republican Candidate—Most Interesting Election Ever Held In the State

White River Junction, Vt., Sept. 3.—The high license local option ticket, headed by Percival W. Clement, gave the regular Republican ticket, on which John G. McCullough was named for governor, a close fight yesterday, the result being that the choice of governor and lieutenant governor is thrown into the general assembly, which will meet on the first Wednesday in October. For lieutenant governor the contest was between Frank W. Agan, running mate to Mr. Clement, and Zed S. Stanton, who was on the Republican ticket.

The vote was phenomenally heavy for an "off" year, almost coming up to the figures of presidential years. Returns to complete the state are belated, and it will be some hours before the plurality of McCullough over Clement will be determined. But pluralities do not count in Vermont, a majority being needed to elect. The closeness of the vote is shown by the figures of 204 cities and towns out of 246, which are as follows:

The best idea of the change over in votes in both the Democratic and Republican parties is shown by the comparison with the vote of the same 200 cities and towns in 1900, which gave Stickney (Rep.) 39,695, Senter (Dem.) 14,339, and all others 1290. Clement showed great strength in the large cities, his home town, Rutland, giving him a majority of 1214, out of a total vote of 1859. The returns show that McCullough did not begin to hold the Republican vote. Clement getting his strength from this defection, to which was added, it is claimed, about one-half of the total Democratic strength in the state. The Prohibitionist vote was heavy for that party.

David J. Foster of Burlington (Rep.) is re-elected to congress in the First district and Kittredge Haskins of Brattleboro is re-elected in the Second district, as the contest at the head of the ticket did not affect the balance of the Republican ticket, both congressmen securing the usual normal majority.

The balance of the state ticket elected is as follows:

Treasurer, John L. Bacon of Hartford; secretary of state, Fred F. Fleetwood of Morristown; auditor, Horace F. Graham of Craftsbury.

The general assembly, which is usually made up of 246 representatives and 30 senators, will be made up as follows according to the returns thus far:

Representatives elected—Republican, 116; Democrats, 29; high license, 25; labor, 1. The senate is overwhelmingly Republican.

The Republican managers last night gave out an opinion that the Republican representatives elected will for the most part vote for McCullough, the regular Republican nominee for governor, although they will vote for high license liquor law with a referendum law attached. There is no choice for representative in the towns of Jay, Washington, Brighton, Worcester, Stowe, Warren and Montpelier.

Ira R. Allen, chairman of the Republican committee, when seen at his home at Fair Haven, conceded that there was no election of governor or lieutenant governor by popular vote. He said that by the senators and representatives elected McCullough will have a majority of 38 over all on joint ballot in the general assembly, which assures his election.

Felix McGettrick admits that the probability is that there has been no election for governor by the people. He says that if the election goes to the legislature he is still in the race.

Rutland, the home of Percival W. Clement, gave the following vote for governor: McCullough, 459; McGettrick, 177; Clement, 1858; Sherburne, 17. Two years ago the vote was Stickney (Rep.), 1504; Senter (Dem.), 897; all others, 81.

Joel O. Sherburne of St. Johnsbury polled 43 votes in his home city: Clement, 545; McGettrick, 142; McCullough, 689. The vote two years ago: Stickney, 882; Senter, 349; all others, 22.

The town of Bennington, where General McCullough resides, voted as follows: McCullough, 300; McGettrick, 18; Clement, 444. Two years ago Stickney, 1030; Senter, 576; all others, 54.

Felix McGettrick, in his home city, St. Albans, polled 205 votes; McCullough, 363; Clement, 692. Two years ago the vote was: Stickney, 630; Senter, 494; all others, 17.

The election will go down in history as the most interesting ever known in the Green Mountain state, there having been a spirited contest from the time the conventions were held until the last ballots were deposited. The tickets voted on were as follows:

Republican—Governor, John G. McCullough; lieutenant governor, Zed S. Stanton; treasurer, John L. Bacon; secretary of state, Fred F. Fleetwood; auditor, Horace F. Graham.

Democratic—Governor, Felix McGettrick; lieutenant governor, Elisha May; treasurer, Don C. Polland; secretary of state, James M. Burke; auditor, James E. Byrne.

Prohibitionist—Governor, Joel O. Sherburne; lieutenant governor, Noble Hall; treasurer, Eugene M. Campbell; secretary of state, Clarence B. Wilson; auditor, Edmund H. Field.

Local Option High License—Governor, Percival W. Clement; lieutenant governor, Frank W. Agan; treasurer, John L. Bacon; secretary of state, Fred F. Fleetwood; auditor, Horace F. Graham.

Congress—First district representative, David J. Foster, (Rep.); J. W. Lyons, (Dem.); Henry M. Selly, (Pro.)

The polls closed at 3 o'clock for the representatives, but in a few towns additional ballots were required, there being such a contest for representation in the general assembly that the first ballot failed to make a choice. It is an unusual occurrence for any particular interest to be shown by the voters of the state in an off-year election, but this year has been an exception to the rule, and no presidential election could have created a greater interest, and on account of the mixed political conditions, the fight between different factions of the Republican party has been intensely bitter. The fight was precipitated when the high license and local option adherents, led by Clement, who was a candidate for the nomination of governor, bolted the regular Republican convention in Montpelier at the time McCullough was placed in nomination for governor, and Stanton for lieutenant governor. An effort was made by a large number of delegates to that convention to have a plank favoring high license local option inserted in the platform, but the convention wished a somewhat milder plank drafted by John W. Stewart, chairman of the committee on resolutions, which had a referendum clause providing that the law shall take the place of the present prohibitory law that has been on the statute books for 50 years upon its receiving a majority vote when presented to the people.

The Clement leaders accepted the plank as submitted by ex-Governor Stewart, and were on the point of calling the attention of the convention to the alleged claim of bribery in the election of certain delegates, but this movement was stifled in an exciting scene, and, claiming that they could not be given a hearing, the high license local option leaders bolted that convention. Clement was the choice of the bolting Republicans for governor, and at a subsequent convention of the high license local option adherents he was unanimously chosen to lead the ticket, while Agan was nominated as the candidate for lieutenant governor.

The convention was an enthusiastic one, and as a result of its deliberations a movement was started that had never before been seriously considered in the state. The Clement men worked early and late in their endeavor to defeat the regular Republican ticket, while but little attention was paid to the Democratic ticket except to ask the voters of that party to assist them in electing representatives who would vote for a high license local option liquor law, with a referendum clause attached.

Spellbinders covered the state in the interest of the various candidates, and in not a few instances there were sensational scenes hitherto unheard of in Vermont politics. The Clement men asked the voters to reconstruct the Republican party in the interests of better government, while McCullough appealed to the Republicans to stand together and roll up the usual majority for the regular ticket so as to encourage the Republican party in national politics. He repudiated the idea that there had been any extravagance, but that the increased state expenses had been incurred for the best interests of the state.

Enthusiasm prevailed to quite an extent for the candidates. The regular Republican candidates for state treasurer, secretary of state, and auditor of accounts were endorsed by the Clement forces, and their opposition consisted only of the candidates of the Democratic and Prohibition ticket. As the campaign came to an end the party leaders declared never before had it been so difficult to forecast the probable result of the vote for governor and lieutenant, while it was a question as to the choice of representatives.

New York, Sept. 2.—M. F. Sweeny, champion high jumper of the world, broke the world's best mark in the hitch and kick by touching the ball at 9 feet, 4 inches yesterday at the games of the New York Caledonian club. Sweeny broke the record by 1½ inches.

Of President's Speeches on the Trust Question

CONGRESS HAS NO POWER

To Deal With the Matter According to Present Constitution—Warm Words In Defense of Our Soldiers Fighting In the Tropical Jungle

Dalton, Mass., Sept. 3.—President Roosevelt yesterday took notice of his return visit to Massachusetts by delivering at Fitchburg another speech on the trust question in order that he might fully answer his critics and in order to more define his attitude on that subject. He also launched into a defense of the army in the Philippines during his speech at Springfield.

Frequent stops again were made yesterday and at each place the president delivered a speech. Fitchburg's reception was notable for the size of the crowd and the enthusiasm which the people displayed. At Springfield another hearty greeting was given the president. The address there followed a brief visit to the Springfield armory.

Governor Crane last night had the president as his guest here. The town was beautifully illuminated. Early this morning the president and his party were given a drive from Dalton to Stockbridge, passing through Pittsfield and Lenox.

Foreign and some domestic criticism of the president's utterances upon the trusts, notably in his Boston speech, has moved him to an exceptional course, and yesterday he devoted his remarks in Fitchburg chiefly to an explicit statement of his position. The president reiterated the sentiments of his Boston address and then, as if in reply to some of the comment it provoked, went on to say that if some of the persons that had expressed surprise at his statements regarding the trusts had taken the trouble to read what he had said when governor of New York and in his first annual message to congress, they would have been less astonished.

The president concluded with an expression of belief, hitherto only a suggestion of possibility, that an amendment to the constitution would be necessary to afford congress the power to deal with corporations or monopolies ding an interstate business.

President Roosevelt was greeted by more than 75,000 people in Springfield, fully a third of whom heard him deliver an address on Court square. Directly in front of the stand stood three companies of the Second Massachusetts regiment, which camped beside the Rough Riders at Santiago. To these the president spoke directly many times. He said in part:

Last night I spent at Northfield. Two centuries and over ago Northfield was the frontier and we have Massachusetts now because we were not afraid to expand then and we are not afraid to expand now. Our destiny unexpectedly took us to the Philippines. I don't suppose any of us when you and I, my comrades, went down to Cuba thought much of the Philippines and did not know much about them. I did not. We got there. We found that we had a job to do and we did it, and did it well, and we have no apologies to make for it.

Our soldiers in the Philippines have been attacked because occasionally one of them did something wrong. Wherever it has been possible to find them out the offender has been punished and I ask you when they blame overmuch Uncle Sam's men in blue fighting for their lives against a treacherous foe in the heart-breaking work of jungle warfare if our critics remembered in speaking of the occasional shortcomings of the men who did wrong under the stress of such terrible temptation that we are not altogether immaculate at home.

I think, however, that troops of ours warred under greater difficulties than those in the Philippines, troops of ours have warred against more dangerous foes, but never in a climate under the conditions which called for such resolute perseverance on the part of the men. In the steaming heat of the tropic jungles, starving, foot-sore, so weary that they dropped to sleep in the mud wherever they happened to fall, at every step fearing ambush for a foe who was felt before he was seen, and among a population that greeted with friendliness the oncoming troops and seized the stragglers and put them to death by treachery, those men had indeed a heavy burden to bear and I think that the men who sat at home in case could have afforded to be more lenient in bearing judgment against them.

NEWS IN BRIEF

It is reported from St. Petersburg that the Czarina has had a miscarriage, but that her condition is not alarming.

The navy bureau of construction has performed very fast work with the plans for the two new armored cruisers, and has them now practically completed. The specifications for these big ships are now in the hands of the printer.

The Republican club of Massachusetts elected Eben S. Draper of Hopedale president to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Curtis Guild, Jr.

The corner stone of Needham's (Mass.) new town hall was laid with Masonic ceremonies, the day being observed as a general holiday.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. For sale by all Druggest.

SPECIAL.

The Daily Ledger is published this week under considerable stress, as we are moving our presses from the second to the first floor. Considerable local news is unavoidably crowded out today.

Good Afternoon.

The demands of Quincy Point for a school building, land etc., to cost over $80,000 is unreasonable when the margin of the city debt is so small, and the needs of the city so numerous, and the City Council is to be commended for voting down the $15,000 additional, which might and might not be sufficent to complete, furnish and grade. The city has already voted $6,500 for an addition to the Washington school lot, and $55,000 for the erection of a building, but $15,000 more was wanted for the building and later an appropriation for heating and ventilating plant and furnishing and also for grading the grounds.

The Cranch school house of nine rooms cost only $40,000 and it has generally been held up as a model building. It could be duplicated today for less than $50,000 Abington has this year erected a brick High school building with eight rooms, a hall and modern improvements for less than $45,000, and a parochial school of eight rooms and hall was dedicated in Lynn last week which cost but $35,000.

Quincy Point should have a new schoolhouse; it should have a good one; it should have had one last year; but it should not exhaust the debt limit, so that it will be impossible to enlarge the High school building next year. Many believe the needs of the High are more urgent than those of Quincy Point, and considerable dissatisfaction is heard because many of the High pupils have to go to the old High school buildings which were deemed unfit before vacated many years ago.

The School Committee have had very little indeed to say relative to plans for the proposed schoolhouse, and they are not strenuous for a hall. They were asked if the Wright plans were satisfactory and they passed approval. Others much less expensive would also have been approved had they been submitted.

If Vermont wants high license instead of prohibition why don't the Legislature change the law. To elect a high license man Governor to enforce prohibition laws will result only in a farce.

Drift of Opinion.

☞President Roosevelt's hold upon the people can scarcely be overestimated. No president in our time has been criticised in so friendly a spirit, and none has had in anything like so large measure the pleasure of seeing his enemies fairly compelled to praise him. He has, in fact, eliminated from our politics the excuse for mugwumpery, and at the present rate of progress the practise of mugwumpery will itself soon cease to exist, so far as national politics is concerned.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

CITY COUNCIL.

Against Increase of Schoolhouse Appropriation.

$70,000 to $80,000 Is Too Much.

Steps Taken to Provide a Small Pox Hospital.

Councilmen Hadlock and Alden were the absent members at Monday night's meeting of the City Council. Councilman Smith called the meeting to order and upon roll call Councilman Freeman was elected chairman pro tem. The vote for chairman was: Freeman 8, Newcomb 0, Smith, Nichols and Adams 1 each.

SMALLPOX HOSPITAL.

The Mayor in a communication stated that a notice from the State Board of Health had been received stating that there would be an increase in smallpox this winter. The facilities in Quincy were inadequate and he recommended the appropriation of $1500 to move the French house so that it could be used as a smallpox hospital. Laid on the table until later when an order was offered by Councilman Nickerson and read once.

The Republican City Committee asked for polling places for its caucuses Sept. 24. Laid on the table until later when an order was adopted.

PETITIONS.

A petition was received asking for the relocation of Sea street at its southeasterly end. To Committee on Streets.

The New England Telephone Co. petitioned for a location of polls on Cottage street. To Street Committee.

Several petitions for minor licenses were received and referred.

REPORT OF COMMITTEES.

The License Committee reported favorable upon several petitions which were granted.

The Committee on Police reported favorable on the order for $400 for two Police signal boxes. To Finance Committee. Later the reference was withdrawn, the rules suspended and the order passed.

The Committee on Finance reported a slight amendment to the order refunding $347.03 to Harlow H. Rogers for taxes paid. Read twice.

PUBLIC HEARING.

A public hearing was held on the petition to lay out Rock Island road.

J. Walter Bradlee represented the colony on Rock Island. He had been a resident there for a number of years. The residents have never petitioned or made any request for the expenditure of money. We built and have maintained this road but felt the time had now come to make it a public way. Property at Rock Island is assessed for $50,000. The people live there but two or three months a year but pay taxes and for water on the same basis as those who live in the city all the year. The road can be put in fair condition and maintained at a small cost. The section on the island the residents will care for as before.

In reply to questions, Mr. Bradlee said the street needed some repairs. There were two sections that have been impassable at times on account of puddles.

Charles E. French thought it unnecessary to make a long argument. It speaks for itself. In rainy weather some places are flooded. We then have to go over private land. Now this land is occupied and the owners object. It seems from the tax we pay, something should be done.

In reply to questions Mr. French said he thought the street was now 33 feet wide. He understood that the city could accept a street less than 40 feet wide if it had been used before a certain time. The insurance rates had gone up on account of the bridge. He thought $500 would put the street in good condition. Any move to have abutters release damages he thought should be done by the city. The present bridge was wide enough.

Robert W. Pond said: Many insurance companies have the idea that the bridge is unsafe for the fire apparatus to pass over and they will not take risks there. All the bridge needs is a little strengthening. We have hydrants, but nothing to use with them. A loaded team going over the street was liable to sprain an axle. The street could be made passable for a small sum.

Dr. F. D. Leslie said he was a summer resident at Rock Island. The expense of caring for this street has been quite an item for us. Rock Island is restricted as to the kind of buildings and there can be no store or business located there. It does not cost anything for police protection. He disliked to use the road for driving as it was the worst piece of road between Milton and Rock Island, although Adams street was torn up by the sewer.

There was no opposition and the hearing was closed. The order was recommitted.

A TRANSFER.

The committee on Finance reported an order transfering $300 from advertising and printing for the commission to advertising and printing for the City Council.

The Committee on Finance offered a substitute order locating street lights on Highland avenue, Crescent, Washington, Sumner, Sagamore, Squantum, Albertine and Redman streets and on Rawson road, if there was funds.

A motion was made to suspend the rules.

Mayor Bryant—I should like more definite instructions. The council should decide the order in which the lights should go in, as funds may not hold out.

Councilman Newcomb—On account of delay in ordering lights and rebates, $300 was available in the appropriation, and he thought $100 would cover cost of all these lights.

In reply to questions, Commissioner Knowlton said the budget contained a certain amount for street lights. It seemed to him this money was in charge of the executive. Something may come up so there may be no balance the first of the year.

Mayor Bryant, in reply to a question if the lights could not be put in, replied he could not say. Rebates come in and you pass orders to pay money from unexpended receipts. The council should say which should be put in first.

City Auditor Sidelinger, in reply to a question, said there was a balance in the appropriation, but he could not state how much would be required for balance of 1902.

The order was then referred to the Committee on Streets.

NEW LOANS.

The Committee on Finance reported favorable on the order for $1,300 for bath room and water closets at the almshouse. Took second reading.

The Committee on Finance reported an order for $2500 for expenses of small pox cases.

QUINCY POINT SCHOOLHOUSE.

Councilman Newcomb moved to take order for an additional $15,000 for the Washington school from the Committee. Voted.

He then moved the order ought to pass.

Ruled out of order.

He then moved that order take second reading.

Councilman Nichols—The Council is entitled to a report from the committee. What the object is in taking from the committee I can only conjecture. He hoped it would not take its second reading until reported by the committee. He did not believe the city was ready to build a $70,000 building. He did not begrudge Ward Two a school building, but was surprised that the gentlemen, knowing the financial condition of the city should persist in attempting to force an order through. He hoped it would be recommitted and so moved.

Councilman Fallon. The idea of a member trying to force an order for the schoolhouse in Ward Two. In the first place if the committee had acted FISHER SUES BETTS.

Asks for Receiver to Wind up Firm of J. M. Fisher & Co.

Boston papers report that John M. Fisher has brought a bill in equity against Frederick E. Betts of Quincy in the superior court asking that a receiver be appointed to wind up the partnership between them, under the firm and style of J. M. Fisher & Co., in the business of buying and selling stock, and an order of notice has been issued by the court upon the respondent, returnable Sept. 4. Fisher also asks that Betts be restrained from collecting any money due to the firm, from selling any of its property or from incurring any debts.

The partnership is alleged to have been entered into in February, 1900, and the business to have been carried on until October, 1901, when it was interrupted by the postal authorities. Fisher says that Betts has the partnership articles, and he is unable to secure them or to state their contents. He alleges, however, that the tenor of the articles was that each partner should receive 10 per cent. of the profits, and that the remaining 80 per cent. should be held as a fund for the firm's business.

Betts is alleged by Fisher to have withdrawn funds from the firm at various times for his own personal use, the amount of which Fisher is unable to state; to have prevented Fisher from taking part in the control of the business, and to have refused to consult with Fisher as to closing up the business, and distributing whatever funds might be standing among the firm's creditor's. Fisher alleges that Betts refuses to consult or talk with him about that.

An accounting between them as partners, a receiver to take charge of the firm's property, pay its debts and distribute its assets, if any remain, and an injunction against Betts disposing of its property, or collecting money for it or incurring any indebtedness, are what the bill seeks.

CITY COUNCIL.

wisely it would have reported. Is this a put up job to slide it through. The building would be a boilershop inside of ten years. He did not believe it right for two or three to impose something that is not right. He did not think it necessary for such an expensive building.

Councilman Nickerson was surprised. He hoped order would be recommitted. It seemed an unusual course to take. The reason no report was made, was no vote was taken to report.

Councilman Whiton—There seems to be a misunderstanding in the committee. There is nothing unfair. Everybody knows we have got to have more money. The only thing elaborate is a hall which we do not ask to have finished now. The Ward Four gentleman will never live long enough to see that place a boiler shop.

Councilman Adams asked the clerk of the joint committee what the report was.

City Auditor Sidelinger replied, ought not to pass.

Councilman Adams. If the clerk has drawn up the report why is it not reported. Under the circumstances Councilman Newcomb was justified in asking that order take second reading. The additional sum is on account of rise in cost of material. The more delay the more chance for material to go up.

Councilman Stewart thought every member should know about the building. He knew nothing about it and had been refused a request to see plans. He had found out, however, that several thousand dollars could be saved.

Councilman Adams asked who refused to show him the plans, to which Councilman Stewart replied the chairman of the Finance Committee.

Councilman Freeman, who had called Councilman Nickerson to the chair, said: There seems to be a difference of opinion as to what took place in the committee. There were ten members present and he was chairman. After an hour's discussion, Councilman Newcomb moved the committee report ought to pass. The vote was six against and two in favor. I started to say something when someone moved to adjourn.

Councilmen Elcock, Langelier and Faxon understood the situation as stated by Councilman Freeman.

Councilman Fallon: I thought there was some funny business here. Why did not the joint committee have the courage to state the facts. He did not believe in such hoodooing.

Councilman Freeman opposed recommitting. It is just as well to decide tonight whether we will appropriate $15,000 additional or not.

Councilman Thompson favored order taking second reading. We have waited long enough. Now was the time to do it. It was a question of vital importance to these children.

Councilman Whiton—I challenge the members from Ward Four to prove I have used any unfair means. As for the City Auditor, I have known him all my life and knew he would not do anything but what he thought right. I would believe him before the gentleman of Ward Four. It will cost the city $10,000 to wait another year.

Councilman Freeman — The clerk brought me a report and I refused to sign it. There was no underhanded work.

Councilman Nichols—No one meets the issues I raised. The city cannot afford to build such an expensive building at the present time. The extra cost was not on account of rise in material but the plans. He thought it a good scheme to adopt the plans of the Cranch school as they seemed to be exactly what was wanted.

The motion to recommitt was withdrawn by Councilman Nichols. The question now was on ordering to a second reading.

Councilman Newcomb—The Cranch building today would cost $55,000. It is nothing unusual to have a hall. Fourteen school superintendents who have been questioned, say no building should be used without an assembly hall. There is nothing unusual here. Bricks have gone up $2 per $1,000. We can save $4400 by cutting out the hall, bath and some copper. A hall is no more exceptional than a bath room in a modern house. If we had come with a duely decorated building that would be different. The opposition comes from those who brought in an order for a lot for another building in Ward Six.

Councilman Whiton—This is not an extravagant building. There was nothing elaborate about it. It was a late day to talk economy.

Councilman Langelies denied that the opposition came from Ward Six. The delay came from the two Ward Two men on the committee last year who could not agree on a plan. In conversation with the architect he had been informed that the building could be cut $14,000 and not injured by dropping hall.

Councilman Nickerson opposed. What is there to show that it can be built for the additional amount? Let us not go ahead until we know. It is an elaborate building. Let us have a genuine bid, then I am ready to vote for all the city can afford.

Councilman Gassett—The Ward Six members are not opposed to this building for the reason stated.

Councilman Whiton—Mr. Harkins, whose bid was $66,000, told me tonight he would build it for that amount.

The motion to take second reading was then put to vote. Upon request of Councilmen Newcomb, Thompson and Adams it was by roll call.

The motion was lost by the following vote:

YEAS—Adams, Bass, Diack, Newcomb, Piper, Smith, Thompson, Whiton—8.

NAYS—Elcock, Fallon, Faxon, Gassett, Hughes, Langelier, Nichols, Nickerson, Polk, Stewart—10.

Absent—Alden, Hadlock, Meyer—3.

Not voting,—Freeman.

ALL NIGHT.

Councilman Whiton offered an order requesting the Mayor to have the street lighting contract changed so that electric lights shall burn all night and every night. To Committee on Streets.

APPROPRIATION EXCEEDED.

The order appropriating $400 additional for police signal boxes, one near the Willard school and one near Presidents bridge, came up for passage.

An inquiry disclosed the fact that the box near the Willard school had been installed but there was no money to pay for same.

The order was passed.

Upon motion of Councilman Faxon the soldier's relief of Adolp Gustafson was discontinued.

Location for polls were granted on Elm avenue, East Elm avenue, Copeland street, Quincy avenue and Hancock street, and the petition of the Electric Light Company on Deldorf street was voted down.

Adjourned at 10 10 until Sept. 15.

HOUGHS NECK.

Rev. Mr. Hardy of Bethany church, Quincy, will preach at Houghs Neck on Sunday, at 3.30 P. M.

Dr. Clark of Great Hill returns to Washington, D. C., on Thursday, to fill a pulpit engagement in that city.

Rev. A. A. Ellsworth will conclude his engagement with the Presbyterian church at South Framingham next Sunday.

The property owners and summer residents of Rock Island were out in large numbers at the hearing given by the City Council, Tuesday evening, on the acceptance of Rock Island road, and no stronger plea has recently been made at a Council hearing. The request was a modest one, only a few hundred dollars to make the bridge safe and the road passable. No boulevard is wanted, but a 33-foot street will be satisfactory. The request is a reasonable one.

Rivals Boston.

Five million dollars will be expended in terminal improvements by the railroads entering St. Louis in anticipation of World's Fair business. All the roads entering the city use the one great passenger station which covers eleven acres and stretches from 18th to 20th streets. The extension will carry it at least another block to the westward and in place of the 32 terminal tracks, as at present, there will be about fifty. Twenty-two great railways now use the station, and the need for more room has long been apparent. The present station cost $6,500,000.

Leg Broken.

Jeremiah Hanlon, employed at the polishing mill at the Granite Railway Co., was struck in the right leg by a piece of iron Thursday afternoon, the force being sufficient to break the bone just above the ankle. He was removed to the City Hospital in the police ambulance.

CITY BREVITIES.

George L. Cole was the winner of the cup offered by the Merrymount Golf club in the 27-hole tournament. Walter Clark, James E. McLaughlin and Charles Erswell were tied for second place.

A party consisting of Dr. T. J. Dion, John J. Barry, J. Francis Merrill of West Quincy; S. Paolucci, A. Paolucci, of East Milton and Mr. Coxey of Randolph had a very successful fox hunt labor Day morning, killing two large sized foxes, before half past seven. The first two had the honor of bringing home the skins.

The degree team of Maple lodge, K. and L. of R., will perform the work on several candidates at their regular meeting in Wilson's hall this evening. District Deputy Nellie E. Hallett of Charlestown and other visitors will be present. Maple continues to blossom and makes Capt. Lizzie happy and very prond of her team.

Coming to Quincy.

A despatch to the Herald from Exeter, N. H., says Hector J. Lemieux, a prominent Brookline (Mass.) business man, and Miss Aurore Lavigne of Exeter were married Tuesday at the residence of the brides parents by the Rev. Fr. Kannon, pastor of St. Michael's Church. The bride was attended by Miss Georgina Proulx of Exeter, and the best man was David J. Connell of Brookline. There was a largely attended reception immediately after the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Lemieux will live at Quincy, Mass.

AN IMPORTANT CAPTURE

Boston Slugger of Women Believed to Be Under Arrest

Boston, Sept. 3.—By the arrest yesterday afternoon of John L. Soderquest, a Swede, janitor of the Natural History rooms on Berkley street, the police believe they have at last captured the man known as "Jack the Slugger," who has assaulted several women in different localities in and about Boston within the past few months.

The arrest was due to a complaint made to the police by Miss Eva F. Crockett of Brookline that she had been assaulted at the Natural History rooms on Saturday night and it is said that Soderquest has been identified by Miss Jeanette Marshall of Brookline as the man who made a savage assault upon her in that town on the night of Aug. 2.

Soderquest, who is married, complains of trouble with his head and denies all knowledge of the crimes which are laid to him.

Policeman's Nose Split

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 3.—Joseph Murphy became engaged in a fight with an unknown man here last night and after knocking him down kicked him in the stomach. A crowd chased Murphy to Mulberry street, where Officer Leonard Hall attempted to arrest him. Murphy threw a stone, striking the officer in the face, splitting his nose, but was soon subdued by the vigorous use of Hall's club. Apparently lifeless, Murphy was started for the hospital, but as he revived before reaching there he was locked up for assault. Several stitches were found necessary to close Hall's wound.

Run Amuck With Axe

Newton, Mass., Sept. 3.—Isabella Waite, a domestic in the employ of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Eustis, was seized with a supposed fit of insanity yesterday and for an hour or more kept the Eustis household in a state of terror. After a struggle she was removed to police headquarters. Before she had been restrained she did considerable damage to furniture and the woodwork of the house with an axe, and attempted to reach the inmates, who had taken refuge behind locked doors.

Pick and Dynamite Met

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 3.—While four Italian members of the night shift were working on the new government drydock at the Portsmouth navy yard about 2 o'clock this morning one of them struck with his pick a stick of dynamite that had been left unexploded from the day. A terrific explosion followed, instantly killing the Italian and badly injuring his three companions, one of whim it is thought will die.

Work of Professionals

Boston, Sept. 3.—Albert E. Ives, the manager of the Boston Ice company at Revere, who was clubbed and shot at the office of the company in that town, is still at the Frost hospital in Chelsea, but he is resting comfortably and will recover. None of his injuries are considered dangerous. That the robbery was the work of professionals is unquestioned by the police.

Ansella an Easy Winner

Hartford, Sept. 3.—Ansella trotted two slow heats in the Charter Oak $10,000 event yesterday and then went in and won in three straight heats. In the last heat Idolita and Hawthorne came together, both horses going down. The horses and drivers were uninjured. The fault was found to lie with Driver Tozier fouling the wheel guard of Hudson's sulky.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

PEOPLE TERRORIZED

West Indian Islands Stirred Up by Remarkable Volcanic Phenomena

Kingston, St. Vincent, Aug. 31.—A volcanic phenomenon occurred here Saturday night. There was a startling series of detonations from La Soufriere, louder than any since the terrible eruption of May 11. Each explosion shook the buildings of this town. The noises were terrific and gave the impression in every town and village of the island that the scene of disturbance was only about two miles away.

During the period of intense anxiety which attended the detonations, two luminous circles, like rainbows, appeared in the cloudless sky to the northwest. They were presumably the reflection of the flames in the crater of La Soufriere. Subsequently a dense cloud of steam arose from the crater, but this soon dispersed.

Telegraphic reports from the islands of Grenada, Trinidad and Barbados say loud detonations were heard at these places Saturday night. The explosions were similar to those heard when Mont Pelee and La Soufriere were previously in eruption. The people of Grenada were greatly alarmed at the detonations. This phenomenon was not attended by serious results on St. Vincent, but fears are entertained here for people on the island of Martinique, as Mont Pelee is known to be still terribly agitated.

Telegraphic communication with the islands north of here has been interrupted since July 18. The cable repair steamer Newington is working to repair the cable, but owing to bad weather and the great depth of water, her efforts have not been successful.

Over a Thousand Victims

Basse Terre, Sept. 3.—It has been learned from the gendarmes of the island of Martinique that 1060 persons were killed and 1500 injured during the last eruptions of Mont Pelee. The atmosphere in Martinique is reported to be almost unbearable.

Democratic Campaign Material

Washington, Sept. 3.—The Democratic congressional campaign book, which made its appearance yesterday, is a volume of 384 pages, the major portion of which is devoted to the discussion of imperialism and trusts, 115 pages being given to the former and 125 to the latter. The volume arraigns the Republican party for failure to give relief to Cuba and to enact proper anti-trust legislation. Then follows an extended criticism of the Republican campaign book, many of the statements contained therein being challenged as to accuracy, especially those dealing with the trust question.

Miners Resort to Violence

Bramwell, W. Va., Sept. 3.—The skirmish between the strikers and the guards at the Pocahontas Collieries company's mines, after the firing of the mine by the strikers yesterday, has greatly enraged the miners in the Flat Top coal field from the fact that several of their side were severely injured. It is thought here that before tonight troops will be either in the Flat Top region or on their way there. Many shots have been fired from ambush in the direction of non-union miners going to and from work in the Flat Top field.

All Johnson's Way

Sandusky, O., Sept. 3.—Mayor Tom L. Johnson of Cleveland won a decisive victory yesterday in the preliminary meetings of the Democratic state convention. No Ohio candidate for the presidency ever had more upanimity of sentiment in his favor among the delegates at a state convention than was shown at the meetings last night. Committees of the convention are almost unanimously with him for anything he wants.

German Grain Restrictions

Hamburg, Sept. 3.—A letter published by the general customs administration says that hereafter with all consignments of grain shipped from ports north of Philadelphia, including the great lakes, proof must be furnished that Canada is not the place of origin. Wheat, rye, oats, barley and peas come within the terms of the new regulation.

Platt's View of Coal Situation

New York, Sept. 3.—The Evening Post has the following: "Senator Platt refused to give any further information about his statement of several days ago that the coal strike would be ended in two weeks. 'I stand by the statement and I know what I was talking about,' he said, 'but I can't satisfy your curiosity any further just now.'"

Progress Toward Reconstruction

Bloemfontein, Sept. 3.—Reconstruction is proceeding much quicker and more easily in the Orange River colony than in the Transvaal. The difficulties of amalgamating the Dutch and English elements have been nearly overcome and everybody is apparently determined to settle down and obliterate, as far as possible, the recent bitterness.

Lipton Not Discouraged

Belfast, Sept. 3.—Mr. Carmichael, private secretary to Sir Thomas Lipton, is authority for the statement that Lipton will immediately issue a challenge for the America cup. The challenge will be made through the Royal Ulster Yacht club.

AN ATTACK ON NEWPORT

Looked For by Defenders of Long Island Sound

EVERY PRECAUTION TAKEN

To Guard Against a Surprise by Higginson's Warships—Fort Adams Claims Destruction of Two Large Vessel—Some False Alarms

New London, Conn., Sept. 3.—The defending forces in the New London district are on the alert and awaiting an attack by the navy. At midnight last night no decisive move had been made by the fleet under Admiral Higginson. At that hour General MacArthur left his headquarters and boarded his yacht, Kanawha, for the night, leaving Major Harrison in charge.

At 2 o'clock this morning Major Rogers announced that "everything was quiet all along the line," but that he expected to hear that the big guns were booming to the eastward before daybreak.

The impression prevails here that Newport is the point which will be next attacked, although the presence of three vessels, supposed to be battleships, at Gardiner's bay, causes considerable uneasiness. They can be seen plainly from Fort Wright and the searchlights are kept on them continually.

The defending force is all at sea in regard to the next move to be made by Admiral Higginson and every possible precaution has been taken to guard against a surprise. Early last evening it was feared that an attack would be made on headquarters. This is hardly to be expected, however, for the weather conditions are against the navy, and it is believed to be impossible for them to safely reach a point without being observed, at which they could land enough men to overpower the defenders.

From the time the enemy's ships disappeared off Brenton's Reef lightship yesterday morning until shortly before dark last night there was little disturbance of a warlike nature at the land defenses in the vicinity of Newport. The fog which shut in thick before daybreak continued to cut off observations off shore until about 5 o'clock, when the wind swung into the west and brought clear weather, the first since the hostilities began. Just before daybreak observers at the searchlight station at Price's Neck picked up a mysterious craft coming in and the gatling gun detachment was called out. The vessel proved a porgie boat and the detachment was dismissed.

During the day a claim was made at Fort Adams that two of the large vessels sighted yesterday morning were destroyed technically by the mortar battery fire.

Last evening the observers at Price's Neck saw a government vessel headed into Narragansett bay and at once gave the ranges to Fort Adams and 16 shots were fired. The government boat bravely sailed through an imaginary storm of bombs and bullets and finally anchored under the shore of the fort. Fort Adams claims that it destroyed the vessel before it passed Brenton's Reef lightship and it claimed a victory in this respect under supposition that the craft was the naval tug Leyden of Admiral Higginson's fleet. The craft proved to be the revenue cutter Dexter, which is not taking part in the conflict.

Fatality at Fort Fisher

Fort Wright, Fisher's Island, N. Y., Sept. 3.—While the fort was firing on the fleet yesterday Edward Roy was instantly killed by the premature explosion of a 12-inch gun; Harry A. Davis was perhaps fatally injured, and Samuel Clevenger was severely wounded. Several others suffered slight injuries. All the men were privates of the Second company, coast artillery, of the regular army. Roy was No. 2 man at the gun and was handling the powder. He had put a 30-pound charge into the gun and had just pushed the breech-block into place without locking it when the explosion occurred. It is supposed that a piece of burning rag had been left in the gun.

Criticism Unmerited

Washington, Sept. 3.—The officials of the navy department are surprised at the amount of criticism which has been aroused by the visit of the Duchess of Marlborough, Assistant Secretary of War Sanger and a party, to Rear Admiral Higginson aboard his flagship, the Kearsarge, as the visit was made during the "period of preparation" and not during the time when the attacking movement of the fleet had begun. There is not ape to be any inquiry of Admiral Higginson concerning the matter.

To Winter In Norway

Tromsoe, Sept. 3.—Evelyn B. Baldwin of the Baldwin-Zeigler Arctic expedition is constructing winter quarters for the ponies and dogs near this city. Part of the crew of the America will remain here to take care of the animals.

Villages Destroyed By Landslips

Bombay, Sept. 3.—Landslips have occurred in the native state of Nepal. Several villages and many bridges were destroyed and 62 people were killed.

STRUCK BY TROLLEY CAR

President Roosevelt's Carriage Wrecked at Pittsfield

AGENT CRAIG IS KILLED

Chief Executive Sustained but Slight Injuries, While Secretary Cortelyou Is Cut and Bruised—Governor Crane Escaped Without Being Hurt

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 4.—The President of the United States escaped a tragic death by only a few feet in a collision between his carriage and an electric street car in this city yesterday, while one of his most trusted guards, Secret Service Agent William Craig, was instantly killed and David J. Pratt of Dalton, who was guiding the horses attached to the vehicle, was seriously injured.

President Roosevelt himself was badly shaken up, but received only a slight facial bruise. Secretary Cortelyou, who occupied a seat directly opposite the chief executive in the landau, sustained a minor wound in the back of the head, and Governor Crane, who sat beside the president, extricated himself from the wreck practically without a scratch. The carriage was demolished by the impact of the rapidly moving car and the wheel horse on the side nearest the car was killed outright. The crew and passengers of the street car escaped injury.

The president and party were driving from this city to Lenox through South street, which was lined with cheering people, and the catastrophe occurred in the plain view of hundreds whose happiness at the advent of the nation's chief was suddenly turned to poignant grief.

Thousands had poured into the city in the early morning from the nearby country to see and hear the president, and his address at the city park had been loudly cheered. At the conclusion of the exercises he made a brief call on former United States Senator Henry L. Dawes.

President Roosevelt's call was a short one and then the carriages returned to the city square and the journey towards Lenox was begun.

Meanwhile the mounted escort of police officers and the carriages containing newspaper correspondents had started off ahead on the road to Lenox and were some distance in advance of the president's equipage. Three or four other open carriages fell in line immediately behind the landau in which the president rode with Secretary Cortelyou and Governor Crane.

Secret service Agent Craig, who throughout the New England tour has been almost constantly at the president's elbow, was on the driver's box beside Coachman Pratt. Out through South street, a broad, smooth highway, the tracks of the Pittsfield electric street railway are laid in the centre of the road with ample room for teams on each side and scores of vehicles of every description followed along this road behind the president's party.

Shortly after he left the park an electric car filled with passengers started towards Lenox well behind the procession. About a mile and a half out from the city, at the beginning of Howard Hill, it was nearly up to the president's carriage, which was travelling on the west side of the highway. Just at the foot of Howard Hill the road bends a little and teams are compelled to cross the street railway tracks to the east side. The railroad then continues at one side of the street instead of in the centre. Just at this point the upgrade of the hill begins and but a short distance beyond the crossing there is a narrow bridge spanning a small brook.

The trolley car approached the road crossing under a good head of speed with gong clanging just as the driver of the president's carriage turned his leaders to cross the track. On each side of the chief executive's carriage rode two mounted troopers of the local cavalry company and the horseman on the left of the landau had turned onto the track, with the trolley car immediately behind, then though some yards distant. Alarmed by the clanging gong they both turned in their saddles and waved vigorously to the motorman to stop his car. Almost at the same instant Governor Crane rose to his feet and likewise motioned to the motorman.

The latter desperately tried to stop his car, but it was too late. It crashed into the carriage as a loud moan went up from the frenzied onlookers who thronged the roadside, and who but a moment before were cheering the president. The horsemen managed to get their frightened animals out of the way just in time and the car struck the rear wheel of the carriage on the left side and ploughed through to the front wheel of the vehicle, which received the full force of the blow.

The carriage was upset in the twinkling of an eye and one horse fell dead on the tracks. The other three powerful grays attached to the vehicle started to run and dragged by them and pushed by the force of the car the wrecked carriage was moved 30 or 40 feet. Agent Craig fell from his seat immediately in front of the car and it passed completely over his body. Driver Pratt, in falling, struck the dead horse immediately in front of him and rolled off clear of the car, thus escaping a similar fate. President Roosevelt, Governor Crane and Secretary Cortelyou were thrown together in the bottom of their carriage.

Almost instantly a score of men jumped to the heads of the frightened horses and stopped their further progress. Governor Crane was the first to get to his feet, escaping entirely unhurt. He turned immediately to the president, helped the latter to arise and together they assisted Secretary Cortelyou. The president's lip was cut and blood was flowing from the wound. His clothing was much disarranged and he was severely shaken up. Secretary Cortelyou had a severe wound in the back of his head from which blood was flowing freely. The president quickly regained his composure and the three soon after repaired to the residence of Charles R. Stevens, near the scene of the accident.

Craig's body was found just behind the car. His shoulders and chest were crushed and the body frightfully mangled. Driver Pratt was found unconscious in the road; his shoulder was dislocated, his ankle sprained, and his face badly cut and bruised. He was immediately taken to the House of Mercy, where the doctors say that he will recover.

But a few moments after the collision three doctors arrived and attended the president and his secretary. Half an hour later the party resumed the journey to Lenox.

Chief Nicholson of the Pittsfield police and Daniel Ryan, an officer of the New York city department who is on his vacation in this city, were driving about 100 yards ahead of the president's carriage. They immediately placed under arrest the motorman of the car, Euclid Madden, and Conductor James Kelly, and they were later taken to headquarters in this city.

No one on the car seems to be able to explain how the accident happened. Even the motorman and persons on the front seat are apparently unable to tell why it was not avoided. It is claimed that Driver Pratt turned to cross the track sooner than teams ordinarily make the turn, but this he was forced to do because of the fact that his team of four horses required more room and the two troopers on the right of the carriage also needed space to get through.

Motorman Madden and Conductor Kelly remained in the station house from 10 o'clock in the morning, when they were placed under arrest, until 6:20 last evening, when bail was furnished. The charge against them is manslaughter. Bail for the motorman of $5000 was furnished and Kelly was bailed in the sum of $2500. Kelly is 25 years old, single, and has been employed on the railway for three years. Motorman Madden is 32 years old, and has a wife and five children.

President at Oyster Bay

Oyster Bay, L. I., Sept. 4.—President Roosevelt returned to Oyster Bay at 8:20 o'clock last night but little the worse for his thrilling experience of the morning. His right cheek is swollen, there is a black bruise under his right eye and his mouth is slightly swollen. Otherwise he shows no effects of the accident. He will go south the latter part of the week, according to the original schedule and will be accompanied by Secretary Cortelyou. Mr. Cortelyou's nose is badly bruised, there is a lump on the back of his head and bruises behind his left ear and on his body. The president says he may have to make his first public appearance with a black eye and a swelled face, but the accident has not interrupted his work for 10 minutes. The president was sincerely attached to William Craig because of Craig's personal loyalty and because of the great attachment the children felt for him and he is sincerely grieved at his death. Apart from that event the president is not affected by his experience.

Craig's Fine Record

Washington, Sept. 4.—William Craig was considered one of the best officers in the secret service. Since last October he had been stationed at the White House and had accompanied President Roosevelt on all his journeys out of Washington. During the president's vacation at Oyster Bay he had charge of the secret service detectives stationed there. He faithfully carried out his instructions in this capacity, keeping near the president night and day. Craig was 48 years old and was a noted athlete. He came to this country 25 years ago from Scotland, where he was born. He was a giant in physique, weighing 208 pounds and for a number of years was an instructor in athletics. He entered the secret service four years ago. He was unmarried, but has a mother and two sisters in Chicago. Craig was for several years the champion broadswordsman of this country. He was an expert horseman, a fine pistol and gun shot, a boxer of no mean ability and a wrestler of note.

NAVY'S FIERCE ATTACK

Upon Fort Rodman Believed to Have Been Repulsed

PICKED SHIPS ENGAGED

Flagship Brooklyn and the Gloucester Disabled by Running Upon Ledges and the Tug Peoria a Prisoner—Assault Was a Terrific One

Fort Rodman, New Bedford, Mass., Sept. 4.—Four hundred volunteer artillerymen of the First Massachusetts coast artillery, under command of militia officers and entrenched in an incompleted fortification, met some of the picked ships of Admiral Higginson's fleet, under command of Admiral Coghlan, yesterday, in the hottest naval assault yet made in the current maneuvers, and, if the claims at this post are sustained by the court of arbitration, completely put it out of action.

Certain it is that the crack flagship of the admiral, the Brooklyn, is anchored under the fort, wrecked literally, for in the attack she ran on the rocky ledges of the bay and is making considerable water through a ragged hole in her hull. The Gloucester of Santiago fame, is also a victim of Buzzards bay ledges and is said to be leaking, while the tug Peoria is a prisoner in port.

Colonel Frye, the post commander, claims that the rest of the fleet was either sunk or so disabled that it will be disqualified from further effect in the war game, when the battle of the score cards is fought out by the arbitrators. It was certainly a great victory for the Massachusetts boys and they are being commended on every hand for their gallant defense of the post, even if it should prove that Frye's claims are not sustained. For if those claims are not sustained it may turn out that even now the fort is captured and all hands are prisoners. The uncertainty arises out of the way the navy has of making effective attacks with ships which are supposed to be sunk or disabled.

The assault and bombardment of yesterday fell, barring two days, on the date of the 124th anniversary of the capture and destruction of New Bedford by the British during the revolution. But it is significant of the changed status of the republic that in yesterday's attack a tremendous onslaught by some of Uncle Sam's choicest ships was met by an infinitely more effective defense than faced the British and, in all probability, the enemy was beaten back with serious loss.

There can be no doubt that the assault was a terrific one and if all the ships engaged were fairly qualified to be in action, under the rules of the "war," the fort was simply overwhelmed. But whether the ships were is a question which will be up to the board of arbitrators for settlement and their decision will not be known for weeks perhaps.

The ships engaged were the Brooklyn and the Olympia, the monitor Puritan, the gunboats Montgomery and Mayflower, the converted yachts Gloucester, the speedy Aileen and the two large tugs Peoria and Leyden.

The fire ceased at noon, both sides having fired about all the ammunition allowed them. Neither knew whether it was a victory or a victim, but there seems good reason to think that Colonel Frye's claims are good.

Duchess Didn't Go Aboard

Washington, Sept. 4.—Naval officers who have returned to Washington from Newport contradict the story that the Duchess of Marlborough went aboard Admiral Higginson's flagship last Saturday. Assistant Secretary Sanger, with a party of friends, asked permission to go aboard, which Admiral Higginson granted, but the duchess was not of the party.

Firminists Got War Munitions

Cape Haytien, Sept. 4.—The German steamer Markomannia, having on board arms and ammunition sent by the provisional government to Cape Haytien, was stopped yesterday by the Firminist gunboat Crete-a-Pierrot. An armed force took possession of the war munitions in spite of the protestations of the German consul.

Coroner Finds Double Murder

Bridgeton, N. J., Sept. 4.—The coroner's inquiry into the death of John S. Holmes and Catherine Shute, whose bodies were found in the ruins of the former's barn, resulted in a verdict charging Job M. Williams, the negro farmhand, with murder.

No Habeas Corpus For Rogers

Boston, Sept. 4.—The petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the case of Munroe Rogers, the negro wanted in North Carolina for arson, was denied by Judge Hammond of the supreme court yesterday. Rogers was ordered sent back to North Carolina, according to the extradition papers signed by Governor Crane last week.

Auto Speeder Comes to Grief

Newton, Mass., Sept. 4.—While speeding his automobile on Commonwealth avenue boulevard, P. C. Lewis of Boston lost control of his machine and collided with a tree, Lewis fracturing his thigh and receiving a number of severe cuts on the head and body. The automobile was completely wrecked.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. Good Afternoon

Today for the first time, on the anniversary of the birth of the city editor, the Daily Ledger is printed on the first floor of the building and by electricity. It is an important move in the history of the Quincy Patriot and Daily Ledger, as it will give the papers a "chance to grow." Some time ago we reached the limit of the quarters on the second floor, and have been handicapped in the execution of our increasing newspaper and job printing work. Several contemplated improvements have been delayed, and also the introduction of new presses, machinery, and labor saving devices.

Our new quarters are not yet on exhibition, as the whole building is yet in a chaotic condition. It is with difficulty that we are able to do our necessary work, but by the first of October we hope to be settled in quarters of which we will be proud. It is said that a local newspaper reflects the progress of a city or town, and it will be the aim of the publishers to keep the Patriot and Daily Ledger a little in advance. Please be indulgent for a week or two longer.

We are indebted to our contemporary for printing the issue of Wednesday.

Without a large appropriation the Mayor would be powerless to proceed under the order of Councilman Whiton, which proposes that the street lights shall be burned all night and every night of the year. Such a move would be appreciated by some, and would be a protection against burglars and crime, but the appropriation for street lighting is already large. For 1902 it was $20,300, requiring over $1 of the tax rate. To continue the lights all night and every night would require an appropriation twice as large. It is already difficult for the city to confine current expenses within the $12 limit.

It is unfortunate New England's ovation to President Roosevelt should have been marred on the last day by the electric car accident at Pittsfield, but it is fortunate that the accident was no worse. It might have robbed Massachusetts of a Governor as well as the United States of a President. Where extra precaution is taken for the safety of the President, it is difficult to understand how the electric car could have crashed into the landau as it did.

The narrow escape of President Roosevelt, recalls the shooting of President McKinley which took place Friday, Sept. 6, last year.

Drift of Opinion.

☞One of the evidences of insanity cited in the case of the suicide of the late Robert R. Remington is that recently he was noticed walking in Newport on the side of the street which is not frequented by society usually. Newport guide-books in future editions should inform the stranger which is the 50-cent side and which the 25-cent side of the city's streets.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞North Adams reports native beef coming into its markets in greater quantities than for many years before. The high prices are likely to cause an important resuscitation of cattle raising throughout New York and New England and may prove a blessing to thousands of eastern farmers. Abandoned farms will be pretty sure to find tenants in prospective agricultural conditions.—Troy Press.

☞The business agencies all agree in reporting good business conditions and bright prospects for the future, and the reason for it all may be found in the conditions that mark the farming lands of the country, which, as summarized last week by James H. Eckles of Chicaco, show a prosperity that has not been equalled in the past history of the nation. Not only are the crops all promising well for the coming harvest, but money is plenty in the private treasuries of the western farmers and in the banks of that country so that the crops can be moved without the usnal heavy drain upon the eastern financial centres.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞If men were more intent upon making themselves masters of their work and less intent on getting the most they can in the way of wages, and giving the least they can in the way of labor and devotion, there would be a great addition to the ranks of those workers who are both successful and happy. The man who works simply for the wages at the end of the week, and only does what is necessary to get it, keeps himself down. The man who, in skill and devotion, is always ahead of the demands of his work, is on the highway to independence. He who would succeed must not only work, but educate himself as he works.—Hamilton Wright Mabie in Success.

☞Comparative statistics of murder should teach us some lessons of national humility, because, blink at it as we may, crime, and especially that of homicide, is a pretty accurate measure of the attainment of civilization. There are about 10,000 murders a year in the United States. In a sermon on crime a clergyman of one of our smaller American cities recently stated that in his city (of about 200,000 inhabitants) there were in the last five years an average of nearly thirty homicides a years. But worse is yet to come: Out of the 145 murders in five years there were only twenty-three convictions, and the very worst is the fact that not one of these convicted murderers suffered the death penalty! Upon one side, surely, the report no longer holds that the doctors put their bad work beneath the ground and the lawyers hang it up above it.—American Medicine.

☞With the increased study of the subject of physical culture there has came to women, as well as to men, a greater respect for a sound body and much clearer knowledge as to how far muscular strenth is to be regarded as an indication of robust health. There has been a mad rush into the realm of physical development. Fifteen years ago it was the gymnasium and its apparatus which attacted the greatest attention. Men exercised various muscles, and sometimes developed themselves into startling freaks. Then came a reaction in favor of outdoor sports, and it is to this reaction that much good may be attributed. The process was similar with the physical development of girls, and today the planning of both is for a more satisfactory effect. Fresh air, moderation, pleasure and interest are fundamental alike for men and women in the promotion of health through physical development. One cannot but be impressed with the greater proportion of fine, healthy girls and women one now meets at school and college. The day of the pale, fragile girl, subject to faints, who was once the type, has given place to the reign of the out-of-door beauty, whose attraction comes from health and the high spirits incident to its enjoyment. The evolution of such women can easily be measured from the methods of sport now in vogue in many of our large colleges for women. —September Women's Home Companion.

C. H. Flowers Dead.

Charles H. Flowers, a well known South Quincy young man, died at his home on Quincy street early this morning, aged 21 years. Mr. Flowers was a stone worker by trade, but his health has been poor for several years. He went to California for his health at one time, and while there met with an accident, and then came home. Since then he has gradually failed in health. He leaves a widow.

Firebug or Humbug.

The Quincy police, we are informed, think that there is a firebug at work in their city. It must be either a firebug or a humbug; but the evidence favors the police theory. It could not be that these mysterious fires have started from spontaneous combustion, although it must be admitted that Quincy has lately been made pretty warm, especially for the board of health, by H. H. Faxon.—Boston Advertiser.

Two ballots will be necessary for the caucuses this fall,—one for the election of delegates and one for the nomination of candidates for the Legislature.

The notices for the Republican caucuses of Sept. 24 appears in this issue. Nomination papers for delegates may be filed after 7.30 P. M. next Monday, until Thursday evening, Sept. 11 at 7.30 o'clock.

Gov. Cummins and staff of Iowa and city officials of Des Moines, and Miss Elsie Macomber, the sponsor, start two weeks from today to attend the launching of the cruiser Des Moines at Quincy.

WHEN LIFE'S AT STAKE

The most timid man will take any chance of escape. The slender rope dropped down the precipice, the slippery log over the abyss, anything that offers a chance of life, is eagerly snatched at. The end the man seeks is safety. He cares nothing for the means to that end.

There are thousands of men and women whose lives are at stake, who are hindered from accepting the one means of safety by foolish prejudice.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has been the means of restoring health to many men and women whose hollow cough, bleeding lungs, emaciation and weakness seemed to warrant the statement of local physicians—"There is no cure possible." Why should prejudice against a put-up medicine hinder you from trying what has cured thousands of suffering men and women?

"Only for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I think I would be in my grave to-day," writes Mr. Moses Miles, of Hilliard, Uinta Co., Wyoming. "I had asthma so bad I could not sleep at night and was compelled to give up work. It affected my lungs so that I coughed all the time, both day and night. My friends all thought I had consumption. My wife had taken Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it had helped her so much she insisted on my trying his 'Golden Medical Discovery'—which I did. I have taken four bottles and am now a well man, weighing 185 pounds, thanks to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery."

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains; you lose.

NO "FURNITURE TRUSTS."

Under the veil of trust prices, unscrupulous merchants today are charging the buying public exhorbitant prices for all kinds of merchandise.

Not so in this Furniture Business. In face of all these wrongs, this store is doing a tremendous business; selling Furniture, Carpets and Glenwood Ranges at the same old prices, and giving the working man a full round dollar's worth for every dollar invested.

Don't be mislead. Don't pay advance prices to big department stores and encourage trusts. Trade here and buy your furniture cheaper than at any other store in New England.

GET THE BOYS READY FOR SCHOOL.

Hardly possible that after a Summer's Siege of hard knocks the boys' wardrobe is in fit shape for school. We invite parents to some extremely good clothing bargains. Low Prices on the kind that will give great service. Give your Boy the benefit of the sort that is built to stand wear and tear.

$2.50 will buy the Boy a good looking suit of durable material that will surprise you on account of it being such a good suit for so little money.

$3.00 and $3.50 will buy a splendid suit, made right and made well in every way and good enough for anybody's Boy.

$5.00 will buy a fine suit of more expensive material. A little more fineness and a little more elegance thrown in--that's all.

Every Suit is a good one. Money back if want it. Bring the Boy here for his School Suit.

An Old English Fashion.

James I. of England introduced a fashion of turning up the brim of the hat at the side and holding it in place with a group of feathers and a diamond star.

An Awful Earthquake.

The greatest number of people ever killed by an earthquake since the dawn of history was 190,000. The date of the terrible disaster was 1703 and the scene of the most violent disturbance at Yeddo, Japan, and vicinity.

The Persian Era.

The Persians have an era of their own, the "era of Yezdegird," which began June 16, A. D. 632, and commemorates his accession to the throne of Persia.

The Gulf Stream.

The gulf stream north of Florida strait forms a liquid mass 55 miles wide and 450 fathoms deep, moving at the rate of two to six miles an hour, and is thus equivalent to as many as 300,000 rivers as copious as the Mississippi.

Long Lived Fish.

Carp are said to live hundreds of years, and pike are also hardy old fellows.

Paid For Burying Cables.

One curious post in connection with ocean cables is that of "cable burier." At different places certain men are paid a small sum to keep the cable buried by the sand on the shore from the cable station to as far out at sea as it is possible to work. This is to preserve the cable from injury by exposure to land influences.

Sing on the Wing.

Besides the skylark, a number of other birds sing as they fly. Among these are the titlark, wood lark, water pipit, sedge warbler, willow warbler and whinchat.

Beetle Strength.

A beetle one-third the size of a horse would be able to pull against more than a dozen horses.

Plucking Fowls.

If you are hurried in the plucking of a fowl, place the bird in a bucket of boiling water and let it remain there a couple of minutes. Then you will find that the feathers will come off quite easily.

Forest Fires.

Fires caused by lightning are frequent in the immense forest belt stretching across northern Canada from the Atlantic to Alaska. The abundant pitch feeds the flames, and these fires have been known to travel at the rate of fifteen miles an hour.

Ancestors.

Ten generations back the ancestors of each person now alive numbered 1,024; twenty generations back, or 600 years, they numbered 1,048,576.

Fashion.

Fashion was the old name for a certain disease of the horse. It is alluded to in "The Taming of the Shrew," where Petruchio's horse is said to be "infected with the fashions." The complaint is a common one now, but not among horses.

The Largest Insect.

The stick insect of Borneo, the largest insect known, is sometimes thirteen inches long. It is wingless, but some species of stick insects have beautiful colored wings that fold like fans.

To Soften Water.

A simple expedient for softening the water one washes in as well as giving it a pleasant and most refreshing scent is to drop the rind of an orange or lemon (the latter is best) into the bedroom jug over night. It acts as a splendid skin tonic.

Earth's Interior Heat.

If we could penetrate the earth's surface to a distance of two miles, we would find the place where water could not exist except in the state of steam.

Potted Ham.

Potted ham is made by chopping a cupful of cold boiled ham fine, using some of the fat. Mix a tablespoonful of flour in cold water; add to this one-quarter of a cupful of boiling water. Then stir in the ham and a tablespoonful of mustard and pack in a mold.

Flower Temperature.

Flowers are in general 1½ degrees warmer than the surrounding air.

Sea Birds as Fog Signals.

The cries of sea birds, especially sea gulls, are very valuable as fog signals. The birds cluster together on the cliffs and coast, and their cries warn boatmen that they are near the land. Some years ago in the Isle of Man there was a fine for shooting them.

Men and Horses.

The strength of two horses equals that of fifteen men.

Diphtheria.

Emphasis is laid upon the necessity of watching closely for the first fluttering of the pulse in diphtheria. Such a fluttering predicts dangerous heart failure.

Heavy Wedding Rings.

On the upper Kongo wedding rings are made of brass and worn round the neck. They sometimes weigh thirty pounds.

Prune Pudding.

For a prune pudding beat two eggs until thick; add a pint of milk and flour to make thick batter; flour a dozen prunes, stir them into the batter and beat in a teaspoonful of baking powder; steam two and one-half hours in a buttered mold and serve with sauce.

No Public Bequests.

The Hunnewell estate of $9,000,000 in Wellesley will be divided among the heirs. Judge Flint allowed the will on Wednesday at the session of Norfolk County probate court at Dedham. The executors of the will, F. W. Hunnewell, Walter Hunnewell, and Arthur Hunnewell, all of Wellesley, and H. S. Hunnewell of Natick, sons of the deceased, give a bond for $8,000,000, and declare that to the best of their knowledge and belief, the estate and effects of the testator do not exceed in value $2,778,000 real estate and $6,157,000 personal estate.

Higher Prices For Milk

Boston, Sept. 4.—After considering the crop conditions and other factors, the farmers supplying the Boston milk contractors with that commodity, at a meeting yesterday, voted to demand 40 cents a can from the Boston contractors during the coming winter. Last winter's card price was 36 cents a can, but the actual price paid went as high as 37½ cents. Every can contains 8½ quarts.

Champion Keeps on Winning

Providence, Sept. 4.—Albert Champion gave Will Stinson the worst trouncing of the bicycle racing season here last night and lowered the world's record from 21 miles up, making the 25 miles in 34:53, a cut of 32 1-5 seconds from the previous best record. Incidentally he lowered the record of the local track for one mile, riding his fifth mile in 1:20 4-5.

To Consider Nurses' Grievances

Boston, Sept. 4.—A special meeting of the state board of insanity had been called for yesterday to consider the Worcester asylum trouble, where a number of nurses recently refused to remain on duty on account of grievances against the management, but a quorum could not be obtained. Another meeting will be called to consider the matter.

Austin---Carter.

The morning service, on Friday at the Washington Street Congregational church, Quincy Point, will probably be largely attended. Rev. Leon H. Austin, who last October was ordained and installed as the pastor of the church, and Miss Bessie C. Carter, of this place, will be joined in marriage, by Rev. E. N. Hardy, of the Bethany church. A cordial invitation has been extended to the members of the parish to be present and witness the ceremony.

TODAY'S COURT.

Frank Dinsmore was fined $5 for drunkenness at Milton.

Sympathy From England

London, Sept. 4.—The escape of President Roosevelt has universally called out in the London dailies congratulatory and eulogistic editorials and unanimous expressions of England's thankfulness that the president was spared to his country. This occasion is seized as an opportunity for the publication of general reviews of the president's personality and the critical political period facing the United States.

HELD IN $2500 BONDS

Interesting Features Surround Personality of "Jack the Slugger"

Boston, Sept. 4.—J. L. Soderquest. who is charged with assaulting Miss Eva Crockett in the Natural History rooms last Saturday afternoon, was arraigned in the municipal court yesterday. He was held in the sum of $2500 for his appearance on Sept. 9. He has been positively identified as the man who committed the assault on Miss Jeanette Marshall at Brookline the first of last month. He claimed that his mind was a blank concerning things that happened since Saturday.

While admitting that he is 31 years of age, he looks considerably older. This may be due to the fact that he has had considerable of a sea-faring existence, as for a number of years he was a stoker on board several vessels. His arrest, coupled with the peculiar phases of the assaults alleged to have been committed by him, naturally brings to mind the murderous and brutal assaults made upon women some years ago in the Whitechapel district of London. It will be remembered. too, that it was the current opinion at that time that they were committed by a sailor. In this connection it is interesting to note that the protograph of Soderquest which served as the first means of associating him with the Brookline assault bears the mark of a London photographer, and it is said that he admits having been in London at various times.

Chief Cloyes of the Cambridge police department says that he has every reason to believe that Soderquest is the man who committed the Cambridge assaults.

Wild Disorder at Convention

Philadelphia, Sept. 4.—The state convention of the Union party yesterday resulted in a split and the nolding of two conventions. One faction of the party favored the indorsement of Pattison for governor, while the other faction favored the ticket headed by Pennypacker. Each side tried to get control of the convention machinery. In the mix-up pistols and knives were flourished, some men were struck by blackjacks and others by chairs. The Pennypacker adherents stormed the platform and endorsed the Republican ticket. The Pattison faction retired and assembled at a hotel, where Pattison was endorsed for governor.

Legislature to Act

Pittsburg, Sept. 4.—"An extra session of the legislature would cost the state less money than it is costing the state to maintain the militia in the anthracite region to prevent and suppress riots." In these words Governor Stone indicated to some friends here his purpose to call an extra session of the Pennsylvania legislature and try to end the anthracite strike.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The 33rd annual meeting of the Unique Old Folks' association was held at Charlemont, Mass., several hundred people being in attendance, most of them between 90 and 97 years old.

The first consignment of parcels under the new parcels post arrangement with the United States has been dispatched for New York from Liverpool on board the steamer Teutonic.

Captain John A. G. McField, the oldest pilot in point of service in the vicinity of Boston, died at that city after a long illness, aged 61.

The semi-centennial anniversary of the Methodist Episcopal church at South Yarmouth, Mass., was marked by a large attendance of former pastors and parishioners.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

BAER MAKES A REPLY

To Senators' Request For Adjustment of Coal Strike

NOT FIGHTING LABOR UNION

Operators Claim That It Is Impossible to Accede to Miners' Demands and Produce Coal Profitably—Coal Companies' Books Open For Inspection

Philadelphia, Sept. 4.—President Baer of the Reading company and United States Senators Quay and Penrose held a long conference yesterday afternoon in the executive offices of the Reading company in this city, at which the anthracite coal miners' strike was thoroughly discussed. At the conclusion of the conference President Baer issued a lengthy reply to the two senators. Among other things he said:

"The coal operators say that they cannot mine coal because the miners make demands which render it impossible to mine coal profitably, and that the state has enacted laws prohibiting the employment of men in the mines unless they have worked two years in anthracite mines, and therefore, they cannot for the time being mine coal. If we yield to the extravagant demands of the miners we will lose money. If we attempt to increase the price of coal, we will destroy the industries depending upon anthracite fuel. If we increase the price on the domestic sizes we will be called robber barons, oppressors of the poor, monopolists and enemies of mankind. We have concluded, therefore, that our duty to ourselves and to the public will best be served by standing firmly on these propositions:

"1—That the wages paid in the anthracite coal regions are, compared with the wages paid in like employment, fair and just, and that men willing to work honestly can earn more money on the present basis of wages than in any other industry engaged in producing common articles of necessity in the United States.

"2—That wages cannot be increased without increasing the price of coal and to increase the price of coal will restrict the market and drive the public to use bituminous coal, and that a restricted market will curtail production and result in depriving the miners of regular employment.

"3—That we are not fighting labor organizations. We fully recognize the right of men to organize to protect themselves from oppression and to benefit themselves in any legitimate way. But we do oppose their unreasonable interference with the discipline and ordinary management of our business. We will not permit them to select our employes. Neither politics, religion, nationality or membership in labor organizations shall debar any competent men from working for us.

"4—That it is by reason of varying conditions at each mine impracticable to adopt a uniform scale of wages for the whole region. But that at each colliery every complaint and grievance will be taken up and investigated by the superintendents and adjusted whenever it is just. I personally offered to Mitchell and his district presidents to go with them and investigate any grievance.

"We cannot arbitrate a question as to whether mining operation and business generally shall be managed under the common sense rule of law and equity, by the owners and the servants they have selected, or by a labor organization.

"The operators were compelled to employ police at their own expense to guard the new men employed to man the pumps to save their mines. The guards and the law authorizing them are denounced, and when private citizens like Beddall are murdered the state authorities are denounced for sending troops to preserve the peace."

President Baer devotes considerable space to the efforts at arbitration, made by the Civic Federation. He says that every phase of the situation was fully and fairly discussed and that the coal companies offered to produce all books that would throw any light on the subject; showed them the balance sheet of the different companies; pointed out that the three anthracite coal-carrying companies, the Reading, Lehigh Valley and Erie, had not paid dividends on their stock for years; produced the records showing coal sales and showed how 40 percent of the anthracite coal is sold in the market below the cost of mining.

Commissioner Wright's Report

Washington, Sept. 4.—The report of Commissioner of Labor Wright on the anthracite coal strike was made public yesterday. Commissioner Wright finds that there is no confidence existing between the employes and their employers. This he believes is one of the chief causes of the difficulties between the operators and miners. Commissioner Wright suggests that it would be reasonable and just for the operators to concede at once a nine-hour day for a period of six months as an experiment. He suggests that there should be organized a joint committee on conciliation, composed of representatives of the operators and of a new union of anthracite employes, to which all grievances should be referred for investigation, and their decision should be final and binding upon all parties, and that there should be no interference with non-union men.

MAJORITY OF FIFTEEN

Expected by Friends of McCullough When Legislature Ballots

White River Junction, Vt., Sept. 4.—With complete returns from the 246 cities and towns of the state the result of Tuesday's gubernatorial vote is figured as follows:

John G. McCullough, 31,778; Felix W. McGetirick, 7260; Percival W. Clement, 28,117; Joel O. Sherburne, 2525.

Since a majority over all is necessary to elect, there has been no choice of governor and lieutenant governor by the people, and the election will be thrown into the general assembly, which meets in October next, and in this body the friends of General McCullough claim that he will have at least a majority of at least 15 over all the other candidates.

The total vote cast, 69,622, as against 67,099 in 1900, showing a gain in an off year of 2523 over the total vote in a presidential year, indicates the unprecedented interest manifested in the issues of the election, chief of which is the question changing the present prohibitory law.

The Republicans have elected Frederick F. Fleetwood, secretary of state; John L. Bacon, treasurer; Horace F. Graham, auditor, and also re-elected Congressmen David J. Foster and Kittredge Haskins.

The county tickets elected are all Republican, with the exception of Rutland, Grand Isle, Washington and Chittenden counties, where fusion or Democratic tickets were successful.

While the senate of 1900 was wholly Republican, the upper branch of the next general assembly will comprise five Democrats, and 25 Republicans, a majority of whom will favor high license and several of whom will favor the election of Clement as governor.

From the returns of 233 out of 246 representatives elected 144 are straight Republicans, 41 high license, 47 Democrats, one labor and three not indicated. It is generally supposed that all the license representatives will support Clement, and it is claimed also that not all of the regular Republicans will support McCullough.

"JOHNSON IN 1904"

Boom by Ohio Democrats, Who Nominate a Minister For Governor

Cedar Point, O., Sept. 4.—The Democratic state convention here yesterday was principally the occasion of booming its presiding officer, Mayor Tom L. Johnson of Cleveland, for the presidency and of introducing into Ohio politics Rev. Herbert S. Bigelow, pastor of the Vine Street Congregational church at Cincinnati, who was nominated for governor. The session lasted less than three hours and had only one ballot, most of the time being devoted to speeches.

It was a Johnson convention throughout. The platform was adopted as it came from him through the committee. All the proceedings were conducted with dispatch in accordance with what was known as the Johnson program and the chairman was made the hero of the day in every possible form of demonstration. Men passed through the audience and the commodious grounds of the summer resort with valises full of buttons bearing the picture of the chairman of the convention and the inscription "Tom L. Johnson in 1904." There were bushels of these prospective souvenirs given away.

The only contest for a nomination in the convention was for food commissioner. Ex-Mayor Bruck of Columbus was nominated over Senator Krause of Cleveland, the personal friend of Johnson. Bruck got the support of all the Germans and ex-soldiers.

Mayor Johnson, in his speech as chairman of the convention, said the principles of Democracy were old, but never obsolete. He declared that trusts was one of the leading national questions and that the money issue also is still alive.

Receivers For Bicycle Concern

Trenton, Sept. 4.—Judge Kirkpatrick has appointed A. A. Pope, H. L. Colemen and J. A. Miller receivers for the American Bicycle company. Pope and Coleman are officers of the company. The company has defaulted the payment of interest on outstanding bonds amounting to $225,000. The company is said to also owe $258,000, besides other debts. The company also owes $9,500,000 as principal on outstanding bonds. The assets are given as $7,751,000, a portion of which, however, is considered of uncertain value.

Czar and Wife Disappointed

Pistol Used on Publisher

San Francisco, Sept. 4.—Thomas H. Williams, Jr., the well known horseman, shot Frederick Mariott, publisher of the San Francisco News-Letter, last night at Mariott's home. Mariott's recovery is doubtful. The shooting is supposed to have grown out of articles printed by Mariott reflecting on Williams.

TWO THOUSAND KILLED

Another Disaster Overtakes Island of Martinique

FULL DETAILS ARE LACKING

Population of Guadeloupe Apprehensive of Tidal Wave In the Event of the Collapse of Martinique—Fort de France Hospitals Crowded

Castries, Island of St. Lucia, B. W. I., Sept. 5.—Steamer Yare arrived here last evening from the island of Martinique. She brings the report that a violent volcanic eruption occurred there Wednesday night, and that about 2000 people are said to have perished. Large numbers of people are leaving the island.

The British steamer Savan arrived here yesterday from the island of Trinidad. She was covered with dust and reports that she ran into a dense cloud of dust while 20 miles south of St. Vincent.

Paris, Sept. 5.—The Paris edition of the New York Herald publishes a dispatch from Point-a-Pitre, Island of Guadeloupe, dated Sept. 4, which says that constant detonations heard there Wednesday night indicate a terrific volcanic eruption on the island of Martinique. Thick, black clouds were seen to the southward of Guadeloupe, and the heat at Pointe-a-Pitre was intense. The population was said to be greatly alarmed and apprehensive of a tidal wave in the event of the collapse of Martinique.

Roseau, Island of Dominica, B. W. I., Sept. 5.—A copy of L'Opinion of Fort de France, Martinique, dated Sept. 3, says that over 1500 persons were killed during the volcanic eruption of Mont Pelee of last Saturday, and that a still greater number of persons have been brought to Fort de France by French cruisers and by coasting craft. The hospitals of Fort de France are filled with the sick and wounded.

Hard Feelings Continue

Posen, Sept. 5.—Emperor William made a speech here yesterday designed to conciliate the Poles, in so far as this could be done, by phraseology that did not imply weakness, and to reaffirm the continuance of the present policy, including making German the only language of the schools and the administration. Inquiries made among the Poles and Germans of this city indicate that both elements consider the race quarrel in the province as likely to continue.

Sails Direct to Iquitos

New York, Sept. 5.—The first vessel to leave this port for Iquitos, Peru, direct, sailed yesterday afternoon. The vessel is the steamship Alps of the Hamburg-American service. Iquitos is about 3000 miles up the Amazon. The port is on the Peruvian line, near the base of the Andes mountains. Cargo from there has been brought down the river in the past, but the Alps, which carries a general cargo, will go there direct and there will be no reshipment of goods.

Pool to Thwart Combine

Kingston, Ja., Sept. 5.—At a meeting of fruit growers yesterday it was decided to form a pool for the regulation of the quality, quantity and price of fruit sold to shippers for export. The step is the result of the formation of the recent Anglo-American combine, it being taken in order to protect the growers against the lowering of prices by the combine, which completely maintaining nuisances.

Boer Generals' Wishes

London, Sept. 5.—At the conference today between the Boer generals and Joseph Chamberlain, it is believed, according to The Daily Mail, the generals will ask that full civil rights and autonomy be granted within two years from the signature of peace, on the plea that otherwise the pastoral Boers would find themselves swamped by the industrial and mining population.

Hunter Accidentally Killed

New York, Sept. 5.—Charles A. Smylie, president of the National Licorice company, was accidentally shot and killed near Blue Mountain lake, in the Adirondacks, while hunting. At the outbreak of the Spanish war Smylie secured a staff appointment with the rank of major. Previous to that he commanded a company of the Twelfth regiment. He was 42 years old.

Brookfield Loses Town Hall

Brookfield, Mass., Sept. 5.—Fire yesterday destroyed the town hall, which was valued at $60.000. An engine house was burned, besides the town hall, and other property was damaged. The loss on all is about $70.000.

THE PITTSFIELD SMASHUP

New Facts by Newspaper Man Who Was With the Presidential Party

Boston, Sept. 5.—Some new facts of interest bearing upon the accident to the president's party at Pittsfield are given by John B. Smith, secretary to Governor Crane, who was in the third carriage behind that occupied by the president, and who saw the accident. Mr. Smith is a veteran newspaper man, accustomed to making close observations of incidents. He says that in his judgment the car was going about 20 miles an hour. He said that there were no shrieks or yells at the moment of the collision; as a matter of fact the silence was awful and appalling.

About the place where the accident happened, Mr. Smith explains that the thoroughfares bears a little to the left. About 200 feet beyond where Driver Pratt attempted to cross the tracks the side roadway on which the president's carriage had been going terminated. A greensward at the further point came flush with the street car tracks. The railway continued straight on up Howard's hill.

Driver Pratt's object was of course to strike the carriage road on the other side. Accordingly, the carriage could have kept to the side it was on for almost 200 feet. "I am of the opinion that if it had kept there 100 feet, the car would undoubtedly have swept by it," Mr. Smith said. "The motorman, I think, must have thought that the carriage would remain on the right of the tracks for a little distance further, and therefore he increased his speed to rush by before the crossing, which had to be made shortly, should be attempted."

Craig's Body Sent to Chicago

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 5.—The body of William Craig, who was killed in Wednesday's accident to the president's carriage, was taken to Chicago yesterday. A delegation of citizens appeared at the undertaking rooms, and later followed the casket to the depot. There were a number of beautiful floral tokens. As the body left the undertaking rooms, the bells of the various churches were tolled, this continuing during the passage of the procession to the depot.

Mind Affected by Privation

Washington, Sept. 5.—An example of the mental havoc wrought by extreme exposure and privation is furnished by the case of Captain Maxfield of the signal corps, who has been in charge of the army's signal work in Alaska. In the early spring Maxfield left Valdes and travelled 300 miles to the north for the purpose of looking over the ground and outlining work to be performed by the signal corps during the summer. Then, with but a single Indian guide for a companion, he started back by boat. He endured terrible privations before he finally arrived. The war department has received a telegram stating that Maxfield is beset with a hallucination that there is a conspiracy directed against his life.

Color and Unionism

Boston, Sept. 5.—At the convention of the National Association of Stationary Engineers yesterday, while proposed amendments to the constitution were being discussed, a delegate moved that the word "white" be included in the text. Instantly there was a storm. Delegate Grant of Louisiana described the negroes of the south and declared white men should not be asked to work with them. Delegate Cronley of New Jersey declared that he did not think the southern members of the association should be sacrificed for the sake of a few colored engineers. Finally the convention decided to let the constitution stand as it was.

Boris Pays His Respects

Oyster Bay, Sept. 5.—The president yesterday entertained Grand Duke Boris at luncheon. The grand duke caled simply to pay his respects and at 3:30 the party left on the Felicia for Newport. President Roosevelt and Secretary Cortelyou have recovered from the effects of their accident of Wednesday, but still bear outward marks of the catastrophe. The marks in the president's face will probably disappear in about four days.

Wray Challenges Towns

Boston, Sept. 5.—The Globe announces that James Wray, the professional sculler and coach of the Weld (Harvard) Boat club, is out with a challenge to George Towns of England to row a match race for the professional championship of the world, and has posted a forfeit with The Globe to show his earnestness to meet the conqueror of Jake Gaudaur.

Savings of Lifetime Stolen

Boston, Sept. 5.—The habit of carrying the savings of a lifetime in one's clothing instead of confiding them to the care of a bank proved a bad one to Thomas T. Burns yesterday. He was in a saloon and showed his roll containing $1900, the fruit of hard labor for 30 years. Later he lost the roll, which appears to have been stolen from him.

Shot and Robbed

Newport, Vt., Sept. 5.—George Buchanan, a young man of this town, was attacked by a highwayman in a lonely place between Newport and Batesville, shot through the arm and left unconscious by the roadside. When he recovered his senses he found that $80 which he had in his pocket had been taken. The robber escaped.

TACKLED FORT WRIGHT

Excellent Night Maneuver by the Naval Fleet

OPENED A DEADLY FIRE

Which Was Ably Responded to by Artillerymen—Report of Damage to Brooklyn May Have Been Exaggerated to Mislead Defenders

Fisher's Island, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Fort Wright was again attacked last night, and it would appear that Admiral Higginson and Admiral Coghlan have brought their fleets together for the purpose of silencing, if possible, the guns of the fort, which is admitted to be the most strongly fortified on Long Island sound.

While the entire fleet was not engaged in the battle the fact that the Brooklyn, Admiral Coughlan's flagship, and the Kearsarge, Admiral Higginson's flagship, were engaged, leads to the belief that the rest of the fleet is not far away. The Montgomery is at Mantauk point, and her lights could be seen from here. The Indiana, which was known to be with the others yesterday afternoon, could not be located.

Admiral Higginson's maneuver last night was an excellent one and brought out the finest points of the game of war. He came down upon the forts in two sections. The cruisers were sent ahead with the apparent purpose of having the fire concentrated upon them.

He then crept up with his battleships and opened a deady fire for the purpose of crumbling the fort to pieces. The maneuvering of the ships was excellent, as was also the manner in which the defenders picked up the battleships and covered them with their big guns.

At five minutes after 10 o'clock a general alarm rang out over Fort Wright last night and all the troops were called to arms. At that hour searchlight No. 5 picked up the cruiser Brooklyn as she was speeding to the westward toward the Race. At first it was supposed that the cruiser was on her way to New York for repairs, but she came so close to the island that a warning shot was fired, and to the surprise of the officers she replied vigorously.

This leads to the belief that the reported accident to the Brooklyn has been exaggerated by the navy officials for the purpose of throwing the defenders of the fort off their guard.

The firing had been on but a few moments when the Olympia was sighted closely following the Brooklyn, and she too passed up with every available gun on the forts. After these two vessels passed through the Race three battleships were picked up by the searchlighs and fears that a landing would be made caused the officers to send the second relief, with a gatling gun, down to the dock, the only safe place at which a landing could be made.

The battleships were soon recognized as the Kearsarge, Massachusetts and Alabama, and they were proceeding toward the Race in the order named. As they passed the forts they opened fire. Every gun at Fort Wright was now blazing away and Forts Terry and Michie were also making a valiant attempt to put the ships out of business. The range was about 4000 yards. The defenders, both from the guns of the battleships and forts, now enveloped the former. The ships soon took advantage of this and scudded away through the Race. At 11:15 the 10-inch emplacement announced that the ships had anchored five miles off the island to the westward.

The second relief was hurriedly recalled five minutes later. It is the belief here that the maneuvers of the five ships was for the purpose of keeping the attention of the defenders to the west end of the island while an attempt will be made to land a party on the east end. It is confidently expected that an attempt will be made to land and every precaution has been taken to repel the invaders.

At midnight Forts Terry and Michie were firing an occasional shot with their long range guns. The first shot was fired at 10:10 from a 10-inch gun, and the order to cease firing was given at 11:15. The ships were, therefore, under an incessant fire for 65 minutes. The six-inch battery fired 116 shots all told. The 10-inch battery fired 31 shots at the Brooklyn and seven at the Olympia. The mortars were brought into play on the battleships.

The Olympia turned her searchlight on the range finders' station and for some time made it impossible for the men stationed there to use their telescopes.

The men on duty are ready at a moment's notice to man the guns.

Challenger to Be of Steel

London, Sept. 5.—In planning Sir Thomas Lipton's new challenger, Mr. Fife has introduced many unexpected features. His experiences with recent challengers have made him distrustful of new metals and alloys. The contract which the Dennys have in hand provides for the building of a cup racer wholly of steel.

Boxers Would Kill Foreigners

Hong Kong, Sept. 5.—A Boxer proclamation has been posted at Canton, inciting the slaughter of foreigners. It is ascribed to the commencement of work on the Canton-Hankow railroad and to the collection of funds for the payment of the foreign indemnity.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Mgr. Guidi, the apostolic delegate to the Philippine islands, will sail from Marseilles Oct. 19 and is due to arrive at Manila Nov. 14.

Lieutenant General Miles intends to make an inspection of the artillery defenses along the Pacific coast before embarking for the Philippines.

The century jubilee commemoration of the birth of Niels Henrik Abel, the Norwegian mathematician, has begun at Christiana. One hundred representatives of leading universities and scientific societies are present.

The Empress Dowager of China has ordered that decorations of the Order of the Precious Star, which is limited to foreigners, be destowed upon the ministers and secretaries who were concerned in the tariff protocol negotiations.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. Good Afternoon

Our city government might be improved and would be more economical, if there were more such letters as that of Mr. John L. Miller which appears in this issue. It is a straightforward, manly, open letter, which criticises Councilmen for whom the writer probably voted at the last election. Mr. Miller is not the only citizen who was surprised at the votes of the Ward Three Councilmen. Their record of 1902 has been rather on economical side, but in this instance they went to the other extreme. The same is true of Councilman Bass of Ward One. To erect a schoolhouse at Quincy Point to cost over $80,000 is generally regarded as an extravagant measure. The vote by wards, on the order to add $15,000 to the sum of $55,000 already voted was as follows:

	In Favor.	Against.	Not Voting.
At Large,	1	2	1
Ward One,	1	1	1
Ward Two,	3	0	0
Ward Three,	3	0	0
Ward Four,	0	3	0
Ward Five,	0	2	1
Ward Six,	0	2	1

Philadelphia will import anthracite coal from England for its school buildings. A remarkable condition of affairs for Pennsylvania.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Very few people believe with Abram Hewitt that arbitration is out of the question.—Chicago Record-Herald.

☞An American Express Company driver was fined $75 Tuesday, for the illegal transportation of liquor, a tag of which had been conveyed in a box marked "matches." Prohibitory laws would come much nearer prohibiting than they do now if such penalties as that were oftener inflicted.—Lynn Item.

☞Governor Stone of Pennsylvania says that he has got through with politics and that he has found that it doesn't pay. Something depends upon what is meant by the word "pay." If the governor intends to complain that politics does not pay financially to the extent that a man can get as rich in it as he may in some other occupation, then we are glad of it. If he means that there is not sufficient return of satisfaction, then there is probably something wrong with the governor's point of view. It will be a bad day for this country when nobody goes into politics except to make it pay in money. As a contemporary well says, "In politics it is impossible honestly to make a fortune." It is just as impossible as it is to make a fortune at school teaching, or preaching the gospel, or studying the stars. But if recompense can be found in the satisfaction of having done a good job, and having done it faithfully and honestly, then we do not know why a man cannot find politics to pay. We have never yet seen a man who engaged in political life for the sake of the money he might get out of it, who was satisfied with what he had done, even when he was envied by many who believed him to be fortunate in that respect. And we never expect to.—New Bedford Standard.

FAXON'S NEW MOVE.

Causes Prominent Citizens to be Summoned Before Grand Jury.

A number of prominent citizens who during the past few weeks accepted invitations from Henry H. Faxon to visit the dump of the City Scavenger, off Quincy avenue, were summoned Wednesday night to appear before the grand jury at Dedham on Thursday, to give their opinion of the dump. It was somewhat of a surprise to many to receive summons and they did not feel any too much pleased.

The case was not reached Thursday, but came up today.

The witnesses do not seem to know just what Mr. Faxon is after before the grand jury, whether it is an indictment against the city or Charles L. Prescott, the City Scavenger.

Woodward Improvements.

Teachers and pupils of the Woodward Institute will find upon returning this month that a number of changes have been made during the summer months, which will doubtless be appreciated.

The sanitaries have been changed from the southerly to the northerly end of the building and connected with the public sewer. A system of shower baths have been put in near the gymnasium, and next to the bathroom a dressing room has been fitted up, in which are a number of lockers.

The walls of the building have been kalsomined and tinted, the floors oiled, the ceiling of the engine room plastered and some minor changes made. The outside of the building has been repaired.

Aside from this twenty new desks and chairs have been added to the equipment.

Assault Alleged.

Patrick Malcolm was arrested at midnight on Thursday for assault with a knife on John Reiley. According to Reiley's story he came from Neponset on a late car and got off near the corner of Saville street. While standing there Malcolm approached him and wanted him to take a drink. Reiley replied that he wanted none of his liquor. At this he alleges that Malcolm struck him in the side with his fist and struck him on the left arm with a knife, the blow severing an artery. Reiley's wound was dressed by a physician and officer Bradley notified.

Officer Bradley found Malcolm at Magann's stable, where he is employed, and placed him under arrest. Malcolm denies all knowledge of the affair.

He was arraigned in court this morning. The case was continued until Saturday for a hearing.

Dec. 25—Invitation tournament.

Grocery Burglarized.

The grocery store of Rogers Bros., at the corner of Hancock street and Merrymount road, was entered by burglars sometime during Thursday night. Entrance was made to the basement by breaking a window in the rear of the building, thence to the main store by forcing the cellar door. What little change there was in the money drawer was taken, also a box of cigarettes and a few cigars. The parties were evidently hungry, for they took a piece of bologna sausage and a box of Uneeda crackers. It is thought that the break was the work of boys.

Lawson to Sail.

It is expected that the great new seven-masted schooner, Thomas W. Lawson will be ready to clear for Baltimore next Monday. She will be commanded by Capt. Arthur Crowley. Her gross tonnage is 5,218, net, 4,914 tons, and length 375.65 feet.

Fisher vs. Betts.

The suit of John M. Fisher against F. E. Betts for dissolution of partnership was up before Judge Hardy on Thursday and was continued until Oct. 1 because of the pendency in the Federal court of criminal proceedings.

Houghs Neck Raid.

Inspector McKay and Special Officer McAloon visited the premises of J. L. Harvey on Thursday night, armed with a search warrant, and seized four cases of ale.

—The famous mosque of Sultan Hassen at Cairo, is to be completely repaired. The sum of $200,000 necessary for the purpose has been furnished, and a first instalment has been paid to the committee for the preservation of the monument in Cairo.

AUSTIN---CARTER.

An Estimable Young Lady at Quincy Point

Becomes Wife of Rev. L. H. Austin.

Ceremony Took Place This Morning at Eleven o'clock.

Just before noon today the pretty little church at the Point was filled with people to witness the marriage of the pastor of the church, Rev. Leon Hudson Austin, and one of his fair parishioners, Miss Bessie Carter, daughter of Mrs. Mary W. Carter.

It was a golden rod wedding the church being elaborately and artistically trimmed. Large bunches were caught in the chandeliers and at the head of each pew was a bunch. The pulpit was banked with golden rod with ferns as a background, while here and there were bunches of August lilies. The church never looked prettier than in its yellow garlands and seldom has a larger audience gathered.

Miss Sara M. Kelley of Braintree presided at the organ. The bride was unattended by maid of honor or bridesmaids, and came down the aisle with her brother, Mr. Charles W. Carter, preceeded by four ushers, and a little ring girl. The ushers were: Miss Elizabeth Scouler, Miss Gertrude Foster, Miss Theo Crane and Miss Mary Gray. Zayma L. Heath was ring girl.

The bride was in pure white, her gown being of Swiss muslin very beautifully trimmed. Her veil was caught up with flowers and she carried a bouquet of white pinks.

The ushers were also in white with bows of white in their hair. The little ring girl was in fluffy white and carried the two rings on a white tray.

Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy of Bethany Congregational church solemnized the marriage and the bride was given in marriage by her brother. After the ceremony Rev. and Mrs. Austin received informally at the church, leaving later for Stockbridge, Mass., where they are to spend the month of September. On their return they are to reside on Thompson street, Quincy Point.

West Quincys vs. Dorchesters.

The West Quincys and Dorchesters play the third game of their series on the Huntington avenue grounds Saturday. The West Quincys, not being satisfied with the result of Monday's game are determined to win the last one and have arranged a side bet of $150.00. They have secured the crack battery of the Lowell New England league team and the third base man from Lawrener. Varney will pitch for Dorchester. West Quincy will line up as follows: Logan, l. f.; Duffy, r. f.; Tate, c. f.; Spiller, s. s.; Kiley, 2 b.; Park, 1 b.; Colporse, 3 b.; Merritt, c.; Bressler, p.

Today's Court.

The liquor seized from William Hanrahan at Quincy were forfeited.

Patrick Malcolm was arraigned for assault with a knife on John Reiley at Quincy. Case continued until Saturday.

CITY BREVITIES.

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

Warmer Saturday.

Rather cool today.

Dog days end today.

High tide Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The weather was quite "fallish" this morning.

The public library is now open daily from 1 to 8 P. M.

The new grocery in Sagamore block has closed its doors.

The man sick with the smallpox is reported as doing well.

September 5 and 7 were the warmest September days of 1901.

City Treasurer Gray returned this morning from his trip to Saratoga.

M. O'Keefe, the School street grocer, is offering special prices every day.

Lists of nominations for delegates are all ready to file for the Republican caucuses.

Councilman Chas. Hadlock and family of Webster street, have returned from Maine.

Miss Sadie Melzard of Botolph street returned this week from a visit in New Haven.

Commissioner Knowlton has completed the repairs on Beale street and Rawson road.

There will be a male quartette from Boston at the Sunday evening service at the East Milton Baptist church.

Only two hours time on one date, Sept. 12, are offered this year for filing Representative nominations for the Republican caucuses.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rogers of West Quincy returned Thursday from visiting relatives in Southbridge, Manchester and Concord, N. H.

Mr. Plummer, the principal of the Woodard Institute, may be consulted by young ladies intending to enter the school at the institute building Sept. 12 and 13.

The preparatory gun for the Quincy open race will be fired at 1.30 P. M., Saturday, and Class D will start ten minutes later. Five other classes will follow at five minute intervals.

Rev. J. H. Whitaker of Atlantic has returned to his parish after a five weeks' vacation spent partly at Amsterdam and Saratoga, N. Y., and partly at Lake Winola, Penn., and will again occupy his pulpit Sunday morning,

One of the questions asked by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, at a recent meeting was: How much more ice could be harvested from the reservoir if a thin saw was used to separate the cakes of ice instead of a thick one?

There is work for the official field driver on Hancock street near the Woodward Institute. For the past few nights two cows have fed upon the lawn and upon the apples in several yards in that vicinity. No one seems to know who owns the milkers.

The accident which happened to one of the men working on the sewer this week has made others more cautious. The necessity of taking care to place the planks carefully around the deep trenches, to prevent sand from burying the men who are obliged to work below, is at last recognized as important for safety.

Importance of the Naval Engineer.

I have taken pains for many years to keep in close touch with the question of the position of engineers and their aspirations in both the American and British navies, and, speaking broadly, these aspirations have been the same. Beginning at the representatives of a department which was small and of secondary importance, they have seen their work grow until in the minds of unprejudiced persons it has become the most important in the navy, meaning, of course, that the growth of the modern warship has been along such lines as to make it what it has been so often and so aptly designated "a floating machine shop." With this growth in the importance of machinery there has been the accompanying growth in the number of men necessary to take care of it, thereby greatly increasing the executive side of the engineer's duties; and the necessity of having the legal right to exercise this executive authority has been the motive impelling engineers to demand full recognition for their position as military officers in a military organization. — W. M. McFarland, in The Engineering Magazine for September.

—A new material for table pads has recently been placed upon the market. It is made of asbestor cloth, woven so soft that it cannot injure the most highly polished table, and is absolutely heat proof.

—Casts of the heads of some of the notorious criminals executed in Newgate have been added to the collection of criminal records at New Scotland Yard.

A QUERY.

Ward Three Voter After the Ward Three Councilman.

Editors of the Ledger:

What is the matter with Ward Three Councilmen?

As a taxpayer I would ask the above question in all sincerity when I read in your issue of the 3d, your report of the vote in the City Council on the order for an additional $15,000 for the Ward Two schoolhouse that had already been voted $55,000. Yet we find all three of our Ward Three councilmen voting for this wanton waste of the people's money.

I am in favor of the very best of schools, those that will turn out scholars that will make the most useful men and women, but I do not believe that the building makes the scholar. Webster, Sumner, Lincoln and Garfield and very many of our most illustrious men and women did not receive their education in even a $50,000 school building, to say nothing of a $70,000 building.

Again why this waste of money in Ward Two? The present building does not seem to be overcrowded, and I am sure that it looks 50 per cent better than the Coddington school right in the center of our city. Wollaston, which is our chief residential ward, has a wooden school building, and the Adams is also of wood, and no more decorative than the Washington school building.

If we were rich and could afford such buildings, that would be another thing. But with the high tax rate and valuation, more in many cases than the property would bring, and with our debt limit about reached, an urgent demand for a large addition to our High school, is it not time that every councilman carefully investigated every order before voting such large sums of money?

It is time the taxpayers called a halt, by refusing to vote for councilmen who would vote for such extravagance, and our members in the present Council if they present themselves for reelection, should be given a sharp rebuke by being left at home.

If Ward Two is not satisfied with $50,000 building, then they should wait until their ideas get down in harmony with our purse. That amount will put up a good building and complete it. It may not have all the decorative art of a school in the rich town of Brookline, but there are very many people in our city that can't afford thirty-five cent beefsteak, so they take something more moderate in price.

Just so, Mr. Editor, I think that it should be with our city. Buy what we can afford, without burdening our taxpayers with a load that in many cases is unbearable, and is making real estate a very unprofitable investment, and makes them long for such men as were in the first three City Councils.

We should indeed be thankful that our Ward Two and Three members were in the minority and for the present at least, we are free from this additional load by the wiser votes of the members from other wards. All honor to them, and I hope that they may so continue on all appropriations that are not absolutely necessary.

J. L. Miller.

Atlantic Services.

There will be an after-vacation regathering of pastor and people at the Atlantic Methodist Episcopal church on Sunday. In the morning Rev. Arthur Wright, the pastor, will preach, taking as a subject: "Some Vacation Lessons." Workingmen are especially invited to attend the evening service, at which the pastor, who has spent several years at the lathe and bench, will speak on "Labor's Day and Labor's Way." Song service at 7 o'clock, with Miss Mabel F. Burr as soloist.

The Morning Fire.

The alarm from Box 61 at 10.25 this morning, was for a fire in a bed lounge, in the house at 472 Hancock street, occupied by Harry W. Eastman. The fire was extinguished before the fire department arrived.

M'MILLAN'S GENEROSITY.

The Senator's Kindness to a Brakeman and a Woman Employee.

The late Senator James McMillan of Michigan was princely in his liberality, says the Detroit Tribune. In public and private charity, in support of his party and in encouragement of many deserving objects and persons he annually donated a respectable fortune. His beneficence was systematic and unceasing. He contributed annually to every charitable institution in Detroit and made a special donation of $5,000 to the poor fund during the year 1894. Whenever he encountered any striking example of the world's misery he always sought to relieve it. Into his office came one day a brakeman who had been employed on his Lake Superior railroad. The man's leg had been injured by the cars, and he had been sent to a hospital. He frankly told Mr. McMillan that the road was not to blame for the accident; that it was caused by his own carelessness. Mr. McMillan defrayed his expenses and before he returned to Lake Superior gave him an artificial leg, an outfit of clothing and an order for steady employment.

A few years ago a Texas clergyman came to Detroit. He was agent for the Mary Allen seminary at Crockett, Tex., an institution for the education and industrial training of colored girls. The lady who founded the institution had succeeded in erecting the educational building and had then died, and a dormitory was needed to make the seminary a success. Mr. McMillan heard the appeal, invited the clergyman to call upon him, and when he heard a full description of the institution said: "My dear sir, you can return home. I will be happy to carry the matter to a conclusion." The result was a fine dormitory building close to the seminary for which the senator paid $16,000.

As Senator McMillan's fortune increased so did his charitable works, says the New York Times. When first chosen a senator, he was known as a systematic giver to private and public philanthropic undertakings, and no other man in Michigan, it is stated, ever gave away so much money or gave it more ungrudgingly than he. As an instance of his generosity and his regard for those who were dependent upon him for their livelihood it is related that once he advised an employee to invest $1,000 in a company he was incorporating. The employee, a woman, replied that she did not have $1,000.

"Well," said Mr. McMillan, "I'll invest it for you, and you can repay me out of the dividends."

There are in Michigan—and elsewhere, for that matter—hundreds of young men whom he aided. He helped many of them to get an education. To others he gave situations in connection with the enterprises he controlled.

TARANTULA PEST IN SPAIN.

Guitar Players, Believed Able to Cure Bites, Reap Rich Harvest.

Andalusia is suffering from a plague of tarantula spiders which have overrun the fields and have in some instances attacked the peasant farmers in their homes, says a special cable dispatch from Madrid, Spain, to the Chicago News. Local relief societies have revived the old Andalusian tradition that guitar music is the best method for curing the tarantula bite.

It is said that the tarantula poison produces a racking nervous disturbance, which induces the bitten person to begin dancing when he hears the hum of the spider and to keep on dancing until profuse perspiration is induced, when he falls down exhausted, but cured.

In consequence of the revival of this belief hundreds of guitar players have flocked into Andalusia to ply their art in the homes of the victims of the spiders, encouraging the dancing and stimulating the healing process. The musicians are reaping a rich harvest.

LUZON RICH IN GOLD.

John Robinson Tells of the Island's Deposits.

John Robinson, former swimming master of the Chicago Athletic association, has returned from a three and a half years' stay in the Philippines and is enthusiastic over the future of the islands.

"There is gold in quantities in the province of Benquet, in northern Luzon," said Mr. Robinson to a reporter of the Chicago Tribune. "When good mining laws are passed and the use of powder and dynamite is allowed, it will not be long before the mines are opened up. Thousands of men have secured claims and are waiting for a chance to develop them.

"In the southeastern peninsula of Luzon and in the islands of Mindanao, Masbate, Mindora and Panay there also are rich gold and copper deposits. There are coalfields at hand for fuel and power."

Boers Like Sumatra.

After his visit to Antwerp and possibly a short stay in London Mr. Reitz, it is understood, will not return to South Africa, but intends going out to Sumatra to settle down, says the London Chronicle. Of late years Sumatra has been making rapid strides ahead, owing to the great success of the tobacco growing industry along the coast opposite Penang, and Deli and Langkat have grown into important places. They are not far as the crow flies from the disturbed district of Acheen, where one of the longest wars in history is still going on, the Dutch government having started the suppression of the Acheenese revolt over thirty years ago. Dr. Leyds is also said to have some idea of going to the Dutch east. He is a native of Java and has many relatives and friends in and about Batavia.

SCHOOL REPAIRS.

New Sanitary Systems Installed at Two Buildings.

All of the school buildings throughout the city are ready for use next Monday with the exception of the John Hancock. The repairs there will probably be completed by the end of this week.

No general changes have been made this summer at the school buildings other than at the Willard, John Hancock and Lincoln buildings.

At the Willard a separate sanitary room has been put in for the teachers.

At the John Hancock and Lincoln buildings entirely new sanitaries have been established.

At the John Hancock the old building on the Water street side, in which the sanitaries were located, has been torn down, and the new system installed in the basement of the building, which has been connected with the public sewer. The change is one that will be appreciated by the teachers and pupils.

At the Lincoln school the new sanitary system has been installed in place of the Fuller & Warren system, and this building now has the best system of any building of the city. It is what is called the local vent system, the hot air stack of the old system being used as a vent.

The contract for installing the sanitary systems at these two buildings, was awarded to J. E. McCurdy & Co., of this city, and they have good reason to feel proud of their work, for they have given the city a first-class job in every way.

The only other changes at the school buildings have been miner repairs on the premises and steam boilers, whitewashing, basements, etc.

Foresters Reunion.

The M. C. O. F. club of Houghs neck held its second annual reunion and dance Thursday evening at the Fensmere. Large delegations were present from Erin, Mt. Pleasant, St. Clare, St. Gregory and St. Stephens courts were present.

Among the guests were: Daniel A. Currier of Boston, T. B. Reardon of Lynn, Major J. J. Ceonard of Springfield and D. D. Driscoll of Boston. They were received by G. T. J. Murphy. Dr. John H. Ash and Daniel F. Cotter.

Charles L. Shea was Marshal; Edward F. Kennelly, floor director; Mrs. Julia C. Murphy and Daniel F. Cotter, assistants.

—Walter Moors of Boston has been added by the New England Education league to the list of free lecturers which now number 150; his subject will be "Night School Work in Theory and Practice." The league has called attention to the important and varied work in agricultural instruction given in New York state by Cornell university as a central agency; it also calls attention to the Rhode Island college of Mechanic Arts and Agriculture which offers special courses in farm practice, poultry keeping, courses for teachers as well as regular four years courses for a degree.

—Charles N. Buchell of New Bedford was on Thursday elected grand master of Massachusetts Odd Fellows. Charles G. Whitcomb of Braintree was appointed grand marshal.

BOER A BRITISH MASCOT.

Young Willie Fisher Is the Pet of Tommy Atkins In London.

Willie Fisher, who is just fourteen years old, is the pet of the colonial camp at Kensington gardens, and the men of Driscoll's scouts love to tell you why their baby was recommended for the distinguished conduct medal, says a London dispatch to the Philadelphia Press. On his father's farm at Boomplaats he was Schalk Willie Visser, but he has been Anglicized since then. He is a bronzed, sturdy little fellow, with dark eyes that look out brightly from under still darker eyebrows and tell of any amount of boyish daring.

When the Boers took his father's horses and cattle because he would not fight for them, Willie Fisher joined Damant's horse as a guide. That was in March, 1901. In December of the same year he was transferred to Driscoll's scouts, and it was then that he won distinction.

Though only thirteen, he was intrusted with a dispatch to Colonel Hamilton, who was ten miles away, in the neighborhod of Fauresmith. At nightfall he left the camp, but had gone only four miles when a party of Boers opened fire upon him, killing his horse and shooting him through the leg.

He crept away among the rocks and lay there until the Boers had gone. Then, after walking a distance, he found an old Boer pony, which he mounted and rode without further mishap to Colonel Hamilton's force. Sergeant J. W. Stiglingh, who takes a paternal interest in the young scout, tells you with pride that he is a teetotaler and nonsmoker. "He is a fine shot, too," said the sergeant, "and has accounted for many a springbok with his rifle."

In London he is having a happy time seeing the sights. He was deeply interested the other evening in the antics of a bucking mule which was being exhibited at one of the halls. The animal succeeded in throwing everybody who attempted to ride him. Fisher could not resist the temptation, and, slipping away from his friends, he mounted the animal and clung on tenaciously. But the mule proved the victor. A specially vigorous buck shook Fisher clean off, and a smart kick sent him back to his friends rubbing himself, but laughing.

A NEW SCHOOL FUND.

Walnut Logs a Source of Revenue In Oklahoma.

The territorial school land department announced the other day the creation of a new fund of $5,000, on deposit with the territorial treasurer, known as the walnut log fund, says a Guthrie (Okla.) dispatch to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The money is derived from the sale of dead and dying walnut timber on school lands and from territorial lands.

The log business has recently become one of the most important in the department on account of the great value of walnut timber found in southwestern Oklahoma. A posse of special agents and detectives are kept there by the territory to guard the forest and prevent poaching by outside parties, who make a big profit by shipping the timber to Germany. The federal government also has a force of special agents guarding walnut timber on Indian, military and government lands.

STABBED HER HUSBAND

Boston Negress Inflicts Injuries Which May Result In Death

Boston, Sept. 5.—At their home at No. 1 Wilkes street, Mrs. Helen Harris (colored) stabbed her husband, Timothy, in the neck last night, inflicting a wound two inches deep which may prove fatal, as the man is suffering from internal hemorrhages. Mrs. Harris declared that the cutting was done while they were fooling. The police, however, claim that Harris was chasing his wife with a knife when she turned upon him and stabbed him. The police have been trying for some time to obtain a warrant against him for assaults upon his wife.

Found Human Hand on Lawn

Dover, N. H., Sept. 5.—A severed human hand which was found by L. K. Ross of this city on the lawn in front of his house yesterday set the police to investigating. The hand proved to be the one amputated from John O'Brien three weeks ago. After amputation, the member was thrown into a furnace, in which there was no fire. On the furnace being cleaned out later, the hand, together with the other contents, was thrown into the back yard, and it is thought that some dog carried the member to where it was found.

Stabbed In the Throat

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 5.—Joseph H. Moses, a negro, who attended a ball given last night as the concluding feature of the colored Odd Fellows' convention, was stabbed in the throat by another negro, James Merrill, and six stitches were necessary to close the wound. Moses was talking with Merrill's wife on the sidewalk in front of the hall, and this fact, together with a remark by Moses that Merrill was wanted in Providence for larceny, infuriated the latter. Merrill is under arrest.

Steamship Officers Exonerated

Providence, Sept. 5.—The officers of steamers Powhatan and Priscilla, which on Aug. 14 were in collision during a fog, were yesterday exonerated from all blame by the United States inspectors, as the testimony showed no lack of vigilance on either craft. One of the Priscilla's crew was killed and the lives of over 500 people were endangered by the collision, which damaged the Powhatan badly and nearly cut the big sound steamer in two.

Sheriff Living Up to Statutes

Portland, Me., Sept. 5.—Sheriff Dunn caused a sensation yesterday when he served notice on the owners of four hotel buildings in this city against which there are records of previous conviction for liquor selling, that if there were further violations of law in these places he should hold them responsible under the statutes which provide that owners of buildings where liquors are sold may be indicted for maintaining nuisances.

To Be Tried For Arson

Boston, Sept. 5.—James M. Rogers, the negro wanted in North Carolina on a charge of arson, is beyond the jurisdiction of any court in this state. After Judge Hammond of the supreme court had denied a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, having for its object the release of the prisoner, an officer from North Carolina hustled Rogers out of the state, while his lawyer was applying to the federal court for a writ of habeas corpus.

What Anti-Imperialists Will Do

Boston, Sept. 5.—Aftter a meeting of the executive committee of the New England Anti-Imperialist league yesterday a declaration was issued that "the anti-imperialists will aid in the election of members of congress who are opposed to continued occupation of the Philippines and who are in favor of the establishment of an independent government without delay."

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

ANNEXATION OF HAYTI

Has Been Under Consideration by the President

WILL BECOME PLAGUE SPOT

Unless Some Strong Nation Undertakes to Create Permanent Order—Interference by This Country Only a Matter of a Short Time

Washington, Sept. 5.—The relations of Hayti to the United States are liable to become of importance in the near future. Certain considerable American interests would like annexation, but whether this will be brought out as a definite policy will have to depend upon the reception which the American public gives to the newspaper rumblings now in evidence. The fact that it is a black republic and that we have an unsettled negro question on our own hands complicates the situation. The subject has been discussed by President Roosevelt with some of his advisers.

For some time past the conditions in Hayti have been such as to seriously disturb that island. Revolutions have of late grown more frequent, and the presence of American men-of-war has been required not only to protect American interests, but also to see that other foreigners in the island were not personally ill-treated or robbed of their property.

Reports from the island make it very plain that the people have no government in the ordinary sense of the word, and that neither life nor property is safe. In fact, the conditions have grown so serious, it is alleged, that unless there is interference by a stronger power the island will become a plague spot on the Caribbean sea.

No other nation than the United States could undertake the work of restoring order in the island. When interference becomes necessary, it will be the United States that will do it, and that such interference is only a matter of a short time is believed by certain persons with whom the president has discussed the matter.

The island of Hayti is really occupied by two republics, San Domingo and Hayti. It lies directly between Cuba and Porto Rico, and is the largest island in the West Indies, except Cuba. There is very little civilization upon the island, the negroes having relapsed into an almost barbarous state, with voodoo worship. Its people are in constant warfare, one president suceeding another as soon as the new aspirant can secure the necessary following and ammunition to make his position certain. Many years ago there was a large export trade from the island, but this has dwindled down to almost nothing, while the purchases are confined to a small amount of linen and cotton goods.

Pointers For Cotton Manufacturers

Washington, Sept. 5.—American manufacturers are overlooking certain indispensable requirements for the capture and retention of the cotton goods trade in Cuba, according to a port from Minister Squiers at Havana. He declares that the American houses should send Spanish speaking representatives to Cuba to work up their trade. He also points out a number of details in the packing and invoicing of goods destined for Cuba which are not taken into account in the United States.

A Broad Murder Suspect

Cornish, Me., Sept. 5.—The tramp arrested at West Athens by Deputy Sheriff Favor of this town was brought here last night, and was closely examined by representatives of the state. He gave his name as Isaac Douglass. Several people identified him as having been seen not far from the scene of the murder on the day that Miss Broad was murdered. The details of Douglass' story are disconnected and he is being held for further examination.

Appeal For Famine Fund

Boston, Sept. 5.—The foreign department of the American board has received a letter from Rev. I. J. Atwood, the only missionary of the Shansi mission, North China, who survived the Boxer uprising, appealing for a famine fund of $10,000.

President Going South

Washington, Sept. 5.—President Roosevelt and party will reach Washington at 6:45 this evening and leave for the brief southern southern tour at 7:30 p. m. He will return to Washington next Wednesday.

On the Diamond

Eighteen innings of baseball were played at Boston between the Bostons and Pittsburgs and only one run was scored. Boston got that run in the first game. In the second game, after nine innings of sensational playing, darkness stopped the game.

BREAK IN COAL STRIKE

Miners In West Virginia Fields Vote to Return to Work

Huntington, W. Va., Sept. 5.—It is now believed the coal strike in West Virginia is practically at an end. At a mass meeting of miners from all the coal fields along the Norfolk and Western railroad here yesterday it was almost unanimously agreed to end the strike provided the operators will take back all the old miners, and the latter have signified their intention of doing this. The miners have agreed to return to work next Monday morning.

It is reported that President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers advised the strikers to return to work, as he realized that winter is near at hand and the miners in this field could not hold out much longer, as almost everyone is dependent upon the union for food and clothing. It is thought the strikers in the New River and Kanawha fields will soon follow the action of the strikers on the Norfolk and Western.

The strike of the coal miners has been on in the Pocahontas and other bituminous coal fields of the Virginias since June 6 last.

Says Concessions Were Granted

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 5.—President Mitchell confirms The Associated Press dispatch stating that the strike of miners in the Pocahontas region has been declared off. He said the strikers were granted some concessions, but he could not say at present just what they were.

Officers May Shoot and Kill

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 5.—The grand jury yesterday ignored the cases against Kinney, Reynolds and Watkins. The three men were employed as special officers at the Warnke colliery, and during a riot which occurred there they were arrested on the charge of manslaughter and inciting to riot. The action of the grand jury establishes a precedent in that men employed to protect life and property about the coal mines and who may, in the discharge of their duty, shoot and kill, cannot be held for the crime of murder or manslaughter. The four men who were arrested for the killing of Daniel Sweeney, a night watchman at a mine in Nanticoke, were indicted for murder yesterday.

To Buy Coal Abroad

Philadelphia, Sept. 5.—The Board of Education of this city has completed arrangements by which anthracite coal will be imported from England to furnish fuel for the public schools during the winter. Owing to the mine workers' strike the proposals of the board brought no bids. The average price heretofore paid for coal for the city schools has been $5.50 a ton, but under the new arrangement the cost of importation will be about $6.50. The work of transferring the fuel from the wharves to the schools will involve an additional expenditure.

Bridegroom Overruled Objections

Danville, Ky., Sept. 5.—A protracted meeting was in progress at Bethany church yesterday and a large crowd was in attendance. Rev. J. C. Milliam announced that the marriage of Richard League and Lily Pelley was to take place and that he would perform the ceremony before the congregation was dismissed Two brothers of the prospective bride objected to the marriage and made an attack upon the groom. League threw both of them out of a window. Before they could come back League returned to the altar and the ceremony had been performed.

Anarchist McQueen at Barre

Barre, Vt., Sept. 5.—The police attended the meeting of anarchists last night to hear William McQueen of Paterson, N. J., talk, in view of previous incendiary statements. McQueen confined himself to mild words. He is billed for another talk tonight under the title of "The Meaning of Anarchism." McQueen is under $5000 bonds on the charge of inciting a riot during the big strike at Paterson.

Fell Two Hundred Feet

Rye, N. Y., Sept. 5.—N. E. Donnelly of Boston, a balloonist, lost his hold on the trapeze after he had cut loose the parachute yesterday and fell a distance of 200 feet into Long Island sound. He was taken from the water in an unconscious condition and it is feared he is internally injured.

Without a Representative

Barre, Vt., Sept. 5.—After taking many ballots without an election for representative, the freeman's meeting at Washington has adjourned. Three candidates ran so close together that no one could secure a majority. That town will not be represented in the legislature.

Prince Shy on Funds

London, Sept. 5.—Prince Victor Duleep Singh, eldest son of the late Maharajah Duleep Singh of Lahore, has been declared bankrupt. Prince Duleep Singh is an officer of the First royal dragoons. He married a daughter of the Earl of Coventry.

Rose For Governor

OPEN RACE TODAY.

Rendezvous of the Massachusetts Association.

Illumination of Yachts Tonight.

Two Fine Orchestral Concerts on the Program.

With the rendezvous of the yachts of the Massachusetts Yacht Racing Association off Houghs Neck this afternoon comes the close of the yacht racing sesaon.

With fair weather, visitors to Houghs Neck will witness a rare and grand sight, such a sight as the oldest visitor to this resort has never seen.

This afternoon the last open race of the association will be held under the auspices of the Quincy Yacht club and the yachts that participate with others of the association will rendezvous off the club house tonight.

There will be a concert this afternoon, and tonight a concert and fireworks, at the club house, and an illumination of the yachts. It will be Quincy's first attempt at yacht illumination, but other places have had very successful ones. The house committee of the Quincy club, will do everything in its power to make it pleasant for all visiting yachtsmen, to whom the privileges of the house and floats have been extended.

Sunday the fleet will be in gala dress, National colors, the code signals and the little blue and red pennants, which tell of the prizes won, and the long "cock-of-the-walk" streamers, which tell of championships won during the season's racing, will be flying proudly.

The fleet will dress ships at 8 o'clock A. M. following which there will be visiting among the yachts, always one of the most enjoyable treats of a rendezvous. Then there may be a little pleasure cruising until 2.45 P. M. when the yachts will return to the club house for the parade to Boston.

The parade will start at 2.45 Sunday afternoon. One long whistle from the flagship will be the preparatory signal. Fifteen minutes later two whistles will be the signal to pass in review between the flagship and the club house, the yachts dipping their colors as they cross the line.

At 3.15 three whistles will be sounded. This will be a signal for the flagships to pass in review, dipping their colors as they cross the line. By this time the entire fleet will be on its way and if the attendance is anything like that of other years, the sight will be one well worth travelling a long distance to witness.

The fleet will proceed to City Point, Boston, where it will again pass in review, after which it will disband.

The rendezvous at the end of the racing season has become a popular institution, as it creates a closer relationship between all yachtsmen, and is enjoyed by cruising and racing yachtsmen alike.

The crews of the yachts are generally amateurs, who have been battling throughout the season to beat the other fellow. As they gather together at the end and with laughter tell how it was done, it makes a happy and fitting closing, and the Quincy club is fortunate in being selected for the closing scene.

QUARRYMEN OUT.

Were Requested by Field & Wild to Work Nine Hours.

The twenty quarrymen employed at the quarry of Field & Wild went out this morning. Why, Mr. Field says he does not know, unless it was because he requested his men to work nine hours this month.

When the agreement with the quarryman was signed, one of the clauses provided that the men should work nine hours during certain months, if so requested. September was one of these months. Another clause provided that in case of a disagreement between a manufacturer and his men, there should be no strike, lockout or suspension of business, but that the matter should be referred to a board of arbitration, each interested party to appoint one of the arbitrators and they to select a third.

Under this clause Mr. Field thinks the agreement has been broken. None of the men could be found this noon.

$60 FOR ASSAULT.

Patrick Malcolm Uses a Knife on John Reiley.

Patrick Malcolm, who it is alleged assaulted John Reilly with a knife in City Square shortly before midnight, Thursday night, was given a hearing before Judge Cook in the district court this morning.

Reiley testified that he had been in Boston all day Thursday and came out to Quincy late in the evening, and arrived in City Square shortly before midnight. Malcolm was on the car and had a bottle and after getting off the car Reilly asked him for a drink which Malcolm refused. Afterward Reiley was approached by Malcolm who struck him with a knife in the wrist.

Malcolm, in his own behalf, testified that he did not remember anything about the affair.

The court found him guilty and imposed a fine of $60, from which Malcolm appealed.

Betts and Fisher.

The cases of Fred E. Betts, John M. Fisher and Ella E. Bailey, charged by the federal courts with using the United States mails in a conspiracy to defraud, were to have come up for a hearing before Commissioner Fiske yesterday, but, on account of the illness of Asst.-Dist.-Atty. Casey, a continuance was ordered until next Tuesday.

SOUTH AFRICA'S FUTURE

Dr. Joseph C. Hartzell Tells of Its Needs.

UNION OF COLONIES PREDICTED.

Missionary Bishop Says Orange Colony, the Transvaal and Rhodesia Strongly Favor Confederation With a Central Parliament—Johannesburg to Be World's Gold Center For Fifty Years.

Bishop Joseph C. Hartzell of the Methodist Episcopal church, who recently returned from his sixth episcopal tour as missionary bishop for Africa, talked to a representative of the New York Tribune the other day at the Methodist headquarters in Fifth avenue concerning his travels and general affairs in Africa.

On the question of the South African war the bishop has had positive convictions from the beginning. His first visit to South Africa was in 1897, two years before the war. He warned President Kruger and Dr. Leyds that they were leading their people into anarchy and war, in which case they would lose their country. Last January in Cape Town he delivered a sermon on the moral aspects of the war and made a direct and earnest plea to the Dutch ministry in the south to use their influence to end it.

"I consider the terms of surrender honorable to both sides," said Bishop Hartzell. "The Boers could have kept up the struggle longer, as their women were being fed in concentration camps and their children were in schools in these camps, and they had no lack of arms or ammunition. They had a scattered army of fifteen or twenty thousand. But their military power had been broken, all the cities were in possession of the English, and, in view of the enormous resources of the empire, to prolong the struggle would only have been to insure a more complete defeat and to reduce the chances for favorable terms.

"The course of the leaders who conducted the negotiations with the English has been thoroughly manly. The cordial reception in England of these men and the manifest purpose of the empire in every way to treat the Boers as honorable and reliable are certainly very creditable."

"Do you think that there will be harmony between the masses of the English and the Dutch people?"

"Yes; but it will take time and patience and careful administration. Just now the crucial point is in Cape Colony, where Sir Gordon Sprigg, the premier, has called together the parliament, seeking to have certain necessary laws passed, including a treason bill and a redistribution bill. The importance of the latter lies in the fact that the rural districts, where the Dutch predominate, have an overshare of representation. The English in Cape Colony clamored for the suspension of the constitution for a year or two, but this would require the action of the imperial parliament, and Mr. Chamberlain, the colonial secretary, very wisely refused to ask for suspension without first giving the people of the colony an opportunity to manifest their loyalty to the empire and the best interests of South Africa.

"England fought in South Africa for the just representation in the government which the Dutch in the Transvaal refused, and it would now be unwise for her to refuse to give the same privilege to English and Dutch alike in Cape Colony.

"I think confederation of the different colonies in South Africa will come, because it ought to come. Cape Colony will probably move slowly in the matter. Natal may also move slowly, but Orange Colony, the Transvaal and Rhodesia are very much in favor of confederation, with a central parliament. The population in this territory south of Zambezi, not counting the Portuguese of East Africa and German Southwest Africa, is more than 800,000 white people and perhaps 7,000,000 of blacks. The increase in population among both races will be rapid from this time forward, and the sooner these colonies, which correspond to states in America, are brought into perfect unity as to trade relations, system of railways, educational interests and policies affecting mining, agriculture and manufactures and the native population the better it will be for all. The most difficult problem will center in questions affecting the civilization and elevation of the native millions of the dark continent.

"I would not go quite so far as Lord Kitchener has gone and say that South Africa will be another America, because so large a part of this territory is within the torrid zone and made up practically of arid lands, where there is no rain during half the year. But that South Africa has a great future is manifest. Johannesburg alone will be the gold center of the world for at least fifty years and has more gold in sight than there is now in circulation in the world. Kimberley will continue for generations to yield from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 a year in diamonds. The railway systems will soon meet, to become a continental system.

"At Victoria falls, which are more than twice as high as those of Niagara, the right to utilize the water power was given to 1895 to a company which purposes to develop electric power for the copper mines, coal mines and gold mines."

"Are you encouraged over your missionary work?"

"Very much indeed. In each of our missionary centers on both coasts we are developing industrial schools and churches among the natives, mastering their languages and developing efficient teachers and preachers. In Umtali, in east Rhodesia, we are making a special effort to found on a large scale industrial missions among the natives.

"Cecil Rhodes was a very much better and greater man than multitudes of people believed him to be. He once told me that his highest ambition was to do the greatest possible thing for barbarous humanity and to promote the unity of the English speaking world. He was essentially a man of the people. He believed in God and the Christian religion, but had doubts on many points of dogma. His philanthropies were phenomenal, both as to the numbers of those he helped and the sums given year after year. He had a wonderful respect for America. I wish he had provided for English students to come to America as well as for those of America to go to England."

Bishop Hartzell expects to remain in America for several months. He will seek to have the Methodists take Africa, and especially its missionary interests, more seriously into their thoughts.

TWO HAT MEN IN TREASURY

Scheme of Washington Clerks to Absent Themselves From Duty.

The reform crusade inaugurated by Secretary Shaw against malingerers, gamblers and other discreditable employees of the treasury department has resulted, among other things, in unearthing a description of malingerer known as "two hat men," writes the Washington correspondent of the Public Ledger and Philadelphia Times. The two hat man is, as his name indicates, a man who wears two hats—not both at once, but separately.

When the "two hat man" arrives in the office in the morning, he apparently has only one hat, which he removes and hangs upon a peg. Later in the day he becomes possessed of a desire to drop the business of the treasury department for awhile in favor of encouraging the liquor traffic or of going out on business to a bucket shop. He leaves his hat on the peg, walks out of the office, pulls a soft hat out of his pocket, puts it on and stays out as long as he pleases. If his chief notices his absence, a glance at the hat hanging on the peg is sufficient to assure anybody that the clerk is still in the department building and presumably attending to business of some kind.

The two hat scheme has only been discovered within the last few days, and as a result the officials have become so exacting that it is dangerous for a person known to be a "two hatter" to leave his room even on business of the office. It necessitates an explanation.

ROOSEVELT GUARDS ALERT

How Secret Service Men Shielded the President In a Crisis.

Solid rest was the keynote of President Roosevelt's recent Sunday on the shores of Lake Champlain, says a dispatch from Burlington, Vt., to the New York World. Ten days of speechmaking had tired him out.

Burlington's enthusiastic greeting to the president the other night had one thrilling moment. The reception at the home of ex-Governor Woodbury was in full swing and a great crowd was pressing close around the president to shake his outstretched hand when out went the lights, and the house was in total darkness.

Instantly the vigilant secret service men cleared a space around the president. They took no chances. In a moment the electric lights flared up again, showing the alert officers shoulder to shoulder in front of the president, a human barrier against possible harm. It was a bit of rapid action showing the trained readiness of the men selected as guardians of the president's safety. A few Vermont notables had been roughly pushed back and rumpled, but they enjoyed the impromptu exhibition of vigilance as much as any one else.

New George Washington Monument.

The people of Alexandria, Va., propose to erect a monument to commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the death of George Washington. The first president in his youth was one of those who helped to survey the old city of Alexandria, in 1749.

In the Fall.

There is music that entrances, bells dingdongin' in the glades,
An' a sweet song in the rattle of the dryin' fodder blades;
Ef the world has aught of worry, you're not carin' overmuch
As you pull the watermilons might nigh bustin' at your touch,
Fer ef there's one perfect season it is autumn, as a rule,
When the days is gittin' shorter an' the nights a little cool.

At such times your memory rises an' brings back past dreams to you,
Like the scents of lavender stealin' from the keepsakes hid from view;
You recall the sweetheart faces in the quaint old fashioned days,
With the cheeks that held pink roses makin' fair the country ways,
An' you feel the early raptures 'fore your heart had wound er scar—
Say, when Sallie played the dulcimer an' Jennie the guitar.

Why, you think of Lijey Dunlap, 'Zekel Jinkins an' the boys
Somehow mixed in fadeless colors with the pictur's of old joys,
An' half listen to their laughter an' half see 'em raise again
Them 'ere towers poets give the name of castles built in Spain,
Till your eyes git sorter watery spite of sneer an' ridercule,
When the days is gittin' shorter an' the nights a little cool.

Heighho! Them old times is over an' the old songs no more sung,
Fer this ragtime drivel shames the strains we heard when we wuz young!
Still there's one old fogy yearnin' fer the sentimental airs
An' the friendships that wuz holier than he's since found anywheres,
An' he sends across the distance sighs fer autumn's lyin' far—
Say, when Sallie played the dulcimer and Jennie the guitar.

Woman's World

A FAMOUS SCULPTOR.

Mrs. Theo Ruggles Kitson of Boston Has a Worldwide Reputation.

However unusual her endowments and training may have been, it is hard to believe that any young woman twenty-seven years of age could have attained a permanent position in one of the most difficult branches of art and achieved a worldwide fame as a sculptor. Nevertheless this is what Mrs. Theo Ruggles Kitson of Boston has accomplished, and an examination of the large number of works of surpassing artistic merit which Mrs. Kitson has created during a period of life when less accomplished artists are learning the technique of their vocation furnishes sufficient evidence that the future holds for her even greater successes than those which have already filled a brief past.

Mrs. Kitson's most recent work, a bronze statue of heroic size of the

MRS. THEO RUGGLES KITSON.

"Volunteer of '61," is a departure from the symbolic and decorative work with which most of her admirers are familiar. A notable exception, however, is the bronze statue of Admiral Esek Hopkins of American navy fame, now standing in the Hopkins park, Providence.

Mrs. Kitson was born in Brookline and began the actual study of modeling when fifteen years of age, though long before that time she had given promise of artistic ability. Her first instructor was Henry Hudson Kitson, the well known sculptor, whom she afterward married.

A little later Mrs. Kitson, then Theo Ruggles, studied drawing in Paris under Dagnan-Bouveret and Coutois. At the same time, alone and without any realization that she was developing her real vocation, she continued modeling in clay and during this period produced her first statue, "Young Orpheus." This was exhibited at the Salon, and its youthful creator, seventeen years of age, still in short dresses and wearing her hair in long braids down her back, received honorable mention. Indeed, she was the youngest person who ever received honors from the famous institution.

From this time on she devoted herself entirely to sculpture. In 1889 one of her first busts made from life was accepted by the Salon committee as the standard of sculpture in the American section of the Paris exposition.

Mrs. Kitson was represented at the World's fair by two statues symbolic of the forests of Michigan, "Pines" and "Oaks." These figures in bronze are now in the Museum of Fine Arts, Detroit.—Boston Herald.

Furnishing the Bedroom.

The bedroom, though primarily a place where one may get refreshing sleep—"sleep that knits up the raveled sleeve of care"—is also a place to dream in by day as well as by night, a place to rest in when one has an hour of leisure, a place, in short, sacred to oneself, where one may go, "the world forgetting, by the world forgot." Its requisites, therefore, are comfort, a restful atmosphere and such beauty as may be.

Very handsome or elaborate furniture would seem out of place in a bedroom, and in no room are inharmonious combinations unbearable.

The most successful bedrooms are often found in unpretentious homes because there simplicity and taste must be used instead of expense.

The Japanese believe in banishing from the bedroom everything which is not really necessary to comfort.

All things useful they make as decorative as possible, but for mere ornament nothing is added, unless it be a vase containing flowers, arranged as only the Japanese can do.

Their custom will bear consideration by the housewife of our western world, for by this method the utmost neatness, simplicity and repose are possible.

Add beauty and daintiness, and little is left to be desired.

Bedrooms so appointed may be easily kept in order and free from dust, that foe to comfort and health.

A Suggestion For Parents.

What will be to many a new thought in regard to children is the suggestion made in Good Housekeeping that elders could add much to the happiness of children if, instead of painting the future very bright, the effort should be to lay stress on the joys that are theirs alone. It is suggested that if, instead of saying, "You may not do that now; wait until you are older," we would say, "You may do that now, while you are young; later you cannot do it," we could give our children a certain valued sense of prerogative and take away much of the envy they feel toward adults. It is surprising how many times in a day a mother finds occasion for saying, "Wait until you are older," or, "When you are older, you will understand." To continually talk in this strain gives the child the impression that he is of little importance until he has become a grownup. If we had been warned, "Ride your pony now, while you are small; by and by your legs will drag on the ground," every canter would have been precious. It is surely worth while to impress upon children the beauty and the privileges of their golden days. There is a deal of common sense in this criticism, says Vogue. As the writer later in her article says, very truly, a habit of anticipation is developed in the child which it is apt to carry through life and which forever interferes with its finding the day's happiness sufficient.

Save Your Trimmings.

It is an excellent plan to have a box for hat trimmings, in which all the millinery odds and ends left over from season to season may be kept. Fashion rotates with such unerring regularity that good bits passe one season are quite likely to be in demand after two or three have passed. Steel ornaments, for example, are in and out of vogue at intervals. If at all handsome, they are expensive and well worth keeping. They may be cleaned from rust and discoloration by rubbing them with a brush dipped in paraffin oil and then in emery powder, afterward polishing with a piece of flannel or chamois. Bits of handsome lace—and this does not mean expensive real laces, but the good trimming laces whose service for one season on a hat by no means exhausts their usefulness—should be carefully looked after and preserved.

Furnishing a Small Room.

In furnishing a small room two necessary points must be considered—first, that space is gained by making things as flat as possible against the wall, and, second, that stiffness is prevented then by introducing plants and breaking the lines by pulling out a table a little or turning a chair. A low seat sixteen inches in height running around a corner and along one side of the room to some break of door or window saves space and furniture and adds a charming effect. It should be upholstered and have only an occasionally rather small and carefully selected pillow. Low bookshelves, too, built against the wall furnish without furniture, but care must be taken that they are not extended in too continuous a straight line. A carpet of a solid color greatly increases the effect of space.

The Upright Piano.

Covers of oriental weave come for the backs of upright pianos, but they are by no means inexpensive. An experimenting housekeeper who wished but could not afford one of these bought as a substitute and at much less cost one Japanese portiere. This was too long and too narrow, but a piece taken from the bottom was fitted at the side, and a second piece was added at the top to go over the lid of the piano. A pattern in shades of gold in a striped effect was chosen, which lent itself readily to the piercing scheme, and the new cover is extremely effective.

Rugs.

The average American housewife wears out her rugs by continual sweeping and beating. The plan of putting them upon a line every two weeks or even once a month and there having them whipped is not to be commended if the rugs are of any value. They should be cleaned with a carpet sweeper, occasionally put upon a line and brushed and once a year sent away to be cleaned in a proper manner or else washed at home.

Stair Carpet.

When buying a stair carpet, get an extra yard and fold in a piece at each end. If you do this, you will be able to shift the carpet sometimes higher, sometimes lower, and by this means you will get it worn evenly all over and will not have the edges of the stairs looking frayed and shabby while parts of the carpet remain untrodden and fresh.

When Children Begin to Walk.

Experiments upon 1,220 children show that 95½ per cent begin to walk under the age of twenty-four months, a little over half begin under fourteen months, one-third begin under twelve months, and 10 per cent begin under ten months. Three babies out of the whole number began to walk under eight months.

To Clean Pewter.

To clean pewter make a strong solution of soda and water; add a few drops of oil of tartar and thicken with sand. With this scour the pewter thoroughly, and then, after wiping dry, finish by polishing it with a chamois leather dipped in whiting.

Many people think it a waste of time to iron stockings, but if they once find out the difference between darning ironed and unironed stockings they will speedily change their ideas.

If a chimney catches fire, throw a handful of sulphur into the grate. As the sulphurous fumes ascend the fire in the chimney will die out.

Don't moisten your food with the idea of saving your teeth. It spoils the teeth, and you will soon lose them.

Scrubbing brushes should be turned bristle side down to dry.

Perhaps It's Worms

The worried mother often wonders what ails a child who is cross and languid. She generally treats it for everything but the most probable cause—worms. Over 75 per cent. of the ailments of children can be traced directly or indirectly to worms. You can see the result in the languid looks, irritable disposition, restless sleep, variable appetite. What the child needs is

True's PIN WORM Elixir

If worms are present, they will be expelled. If there are no worms, it will act as a tonic—clean out the stomach and bowels through its gentle laxative properties. Given at regular intervals it will guard against worms. It has been in use over 50 years. It is purely vegetable. Harmless under any conditions for children or adults.

THE DEATH OF VIRCHOW

Removes one of the World's Greatest Scientists

HE WAS OF HUMBLE ORIGIN

Established Cellular System of Pathology and Figured Largely In Many Medical Discoveries—Also Became a Leader In German Politics

Berlin, Sept. 6.—The papers here print glowing eulogies of Professor Virchow, who died yesterday afternoon, classing him as the world's great medical and scientific reformer and saying that no other man had so deeply influenced modern medicine and that no other had such a world-wide reputation and so many followers in all lands.

PROFESSOR VIRCHOW.

The life of Professor Rudolph Virchow has always been intimately identified with the University of Berlin, which has given fame to a number of notable savants. In October of last year Professor Virchow's 80th birthday was made the occasion of a memorable celebration in Berlin, where representatives of the world's science met to do honor to one of the veterans of the medical profession.

On this occasion the German emperor presented Professor Virchow with the great gold medal of science, accompanied by a letter of gracious appreciation of his labors; and the king of Italy sent his own portrait on a gold medallion, together with a picture showing Virchow himself and Morgagni, the founder of pathological anatomy, as men whose discoveries, although separated by nearly two centuries of time, entitled them to be placed side by side as masters of medicine.

Like many other men of great genius and of superabundant vitality, Virchow was of humble origin. He was born in 1821 and was the son of a small shopkeeper and farmer in the village of Schievelbein, in Pomerania. Up to the age of 13 he was educated at the volkschule of his native village; at 17 he passed his "leaving examination" at the Gymnasium of Koslin, and immediately afterwards proceeded to Berlin to study medicine. He graduated as doctor in 1843, and became assistant professor at the Berlin Charity hospital. In the spring of 1848 he was the junior member of a government commission sent to investigate an epidemic of typhus caused by famine among the hand-loom weavers of the Silesian highlands, and the result of his studies, which he embodied in a brilliant and impassioned report, gave a permanent direction both to his scientific and to his political career. He became a lifelong student of pathology and an ardent German Democrat.

His political attitude in 1848-49 led to his expulsion from his Berlin chair. He accepted a call to the University of Wurzburg, and there he did some of the most brilliant work of his whole life, gathered round him a coterie of gifted fellow-workers, and raised the little university into the front rank of medical schools. It was during his sojourn at Wurzburg that he laid the foundations of his cellular system of pathology, by which he speedily supplanted the previous orthodox theory of haemato-pathology.

After his triumphant recall to the Berlin university in 1856 Professor Virchow continued the demonstration and application of his theory by innumerable practical experiments, and he entirely revolutionized the study of anthropology.

The great pathologist, too, was a politician of no mean order. He entered the chamber in 1862, and served there till 1878. His work as a politician was devoted to the cause of liberty and truth, and even those who did not agree with his doctrines were unanimous in their respect of his motives. He did much to ameliorate the governmental conditions of his own country.

Virchow's manifold duties took him daily to various parts of the town, and made him a familiar sight in the streets of the capital. In appearance he was short and slight. His eyes, which gazed through a pair of gold-rimmed spectacles, were brown; his head was covered with a heavy shock of hair, and his beard worn full and long. He dressed in an old-fashioned way, and had few qualities of the "lion of the salon." A stranger would seldom recognize him as a professor. Despite his duties he was always easy of access, and was ever ready to respond to a tale of distress.

Bryan and Silver Endorsed

Pocatello, Ida., Sept. 6.—The Democratic state convention yesterday nominated Joseph H. Hutchison for congress. The convention adopted a platform which endorses the Kansas City platform and William J. Bryan.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Conditions Continue to Be In a Generally Satisfactory State

New York, Sept. 6.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Steady progress is reported in trade and industry. Distribution of merchandise is heavy and a healthy tone is evident. Prices are well maintained by liberal consumption, which more than neutralizes the effect of enlarged facilities for production. Domestic conditions continue much better than those existing abroad and home trade receives more attention than foreign commerce. Farm products have appreciated in value, owing to less favorable weather, and producers will be fully compensated for any decrease in quantity by the higher quotations.

Better deliveries of coke and liberal receipts of foreign material have lessened the pressure in the iron and steel industry.

Quotations of footwear are fully maintained at the recent advance. New England shops are well engaged on fall goods and deliveries are not sufficiently prompt to suit purchasers. It is noteworthy that buying has been heaviest in the finer grades, and sample lines of spring styles are most sought in the good qualities. Western wholesalers are sending mail orders to the Boston market.

Last week's unexpectedly good bank statement was due to shifting of accounts and firm rates for money will prevail unless speculation is checked. Transfers to the interior continue and, despite heavy pension payments, subtreasury operations are against the banks.

A Timely Warning

London, Sept. 6.—The American embassy has been so deluged with letters from the United States relative to imaginary fortunes awaiting claimants that it has issued a memorandum on the subject saying that credulous people will avoid disappointment and save money by having nothing whatever to do with persons advertising as agents of unclaimed estates and as having in their possession the family names of persons entitled thereto, nor with sensational telegrams regarding English estates or money in the Bank of England awaiting claimants, as such publications are apt to be all fraudulent.

McCrea's Work Appreciated

Washington, Sept. 6.—The German government has expressed officially its appreciation of Commander McCrea's efforts in behalf of the empire's interests in Haytien waters. Count Von Quadt, secretary of the German legation, in a letter to Secretary Hay, says: "I have received instructions from the imperial government to express to the United States government its warmest thanks for Captain McCrea's prompt and efficient actions in behalf of German citizens whose interests were at stake."

Cuba's Congratulations

Havana, Sept. 6.—The house of representatives has sent the following telegraphic message to President Roosevelt: "The house expresses the satisfaction which it feels that the life of the illustrious combatant of the hills of Santiago and the generous defender of reciprocity and the prosperity of Cuba has been saved from the great danger which threatened it."

A General Disappointment

St. Petersburg, Sept. 6.—The czarina's misfortune will cause a speedy dispersal of the court and diplomatic society, which assembled only for the prospective christening and for the recent marriage of Prince Nicholas of Greece and the Grand Duchess Helen. The czar is going to Valta and the diplomats are going abroad.

Negotiations Kept Secret

London, Sept. 6.—The secret of yesterday's conference at the colonial office between Joseph Chamberlain and the Boer generals has been well kept, and no word has been allowed to reach the public of what then occurred, the generals themselves being as reticent in the matter as the colonial authorities.

Anxious to Begin Work

Bramwell, W. Va., Sept. 6.—Many of the miners who have been on strike in the Flat Top and Elkhorn coal fields appeared at the mines yesterday ready for work, stating that they did not care to wait until Monday, the day agreed upon to begin. Probably 1000 men went to work yesterday.

No Statement From Judge

New York Sept. 6.—The body of Major Charles A. Smylie, who was accidentally killed while hunting in the Adirondacks by a shot fired by Judge Charles B. Storrs of Orange, N. J., reached this city yesterday. Judge Storrs declined to make any statement to reporters.

Court Dockets Are Filled

Boston, Sept. 6.—Another delay has occurred in the trial of Wilfred Blondin, the alleged wife murderer. The trial was to have been begun next week, but the trial dockets are in such shape that not until December can the services of two judges be secured.

Gotham Carpenters Resume Work

New York, Sept. 6.—Eight thousand carpenters of this city won their strike for an advance of 50 cents a day, when the Master Carpenters' association late last night granted the demands. The men went to work all over the city and neighborhood this morning.

Temperatures continue below the seasonal average east of the Rocky mountains. The weather will be generally fair and warmer in New England.

USED OIL AS FUEL

Remarkable Run of Steamship From San Francisco to Tahiti

Washington, Sept. 6.—The report of Lieutenant Winchell, U. S. N., the expert detailed by the navy department to observe the installation and efficiency of the oil fuel system as fitted on the steamship Mariposa, has been received at the navy department.

The Mariposa's gross displacement was 3160 tons and her average horse power with oil about 2481, giving her a daily average of 254 knots and a mean speed of 13.58 with 278 barrels of oil a day.

This was 50 percent less in weight than would be required of coal, for 1½ pounds of oil sufficed to produce a horse power. An important advantage in the oil fuel was the reduction of the engine room force from 26 to 20 men. The ship used only 12 of her 18 furnaces, burning crude oil in two burners in each furnace by means of an air compressor. The entire refuse, after a run of 2428 miles from San Francisco to Tahiti, barely filled two ash buckets, and the flames did not affect the boilers unfavorably.

Lieutenant Winchell says that if fewer men are needed in the firerooms with oil it is necessary to secure men of higher intelligence, with mechanical aptitude and nerve, closely to watch the furnaces. The essentials are that there shall be a constant air pressure for atomizing, that provision shall be made to maintain regular temperature of oil, and that the oil strainers be watched steadily.

The report concludes that the Mariposa's trip was remarkable in many respects and was not only a tribute to the skill of the Pacific coast mechanics but to the enterprise of the Oceanic Steamship company, which first installed the oil burners in lieu of coal.

Battle With Rios' Band

Manila, Sept. 6.—Rios, a fanatical leader of the irreconcilable natives in the province of Tayabas, Luzon, attacked the town of Laguimanoc Sept. 3 at the head of 30 riflemen and 150 men armed with bolos. The band killed two women and one girl and wounded several other persons. A detachment of the native constabulary routed the bandits, killing several of Rios' followers and rounding up 700 suspects. The guilty ones among the 700 men will be picked out and the remainder set at liberty. Rios' followers thought he was a direct descendant of God and that it was beyond the power of man to injure him. The constabulary have also captured one of Rios' mountain strongholds. Four detachments of constabulary are now following the main band of the outlaws.

Darkness Followed Eruption

Castries, Island of St. Lucia, Sept. 6.—The eruption of Mont Pelee on Sept. 3 was not remarkable, but there was a terrific explosion from the Soufriere, on the island of St. Vincent, Sept. 3. The captain of the steamer Savan, now here, says that absolute darkness prevailed soon after the eruption and that he changed his course to due west in order to avoid the ashes which were falling. The first officer could not see the captain two feet away and only knew him by voice.

Expect to Be Bludgeoned

Dublin, Sept. 6.—At a public meeting held here yesterday to protest against the recent proclamation of the crimes act in five Irish counties, it was resolved to hold a demonstration in hoenix Park Sept. 14. The voting of this resolution was received with shouts of "We shall be bludgeoned as in 1891." John Redmond denounced this proclamation of the crimes act as a gross and wicked outrage, issued at the whim of a despot and a gang of absentee landlords.

Short Stop at Washington

Washington, Sept. 6.—Smilingly bowing in acknowledgment of the enthusiastic and prolonged cheering of an assemblage that fairly crowded the Baltimore and Ohio station here, President Roosevelt last night began his southern tour with Chattanooga as the objective point. The president was in the city an hour and a half. He appeared a little disfigured as a result of the Pittsfield accident, but apparently had quite recovered from the shock.

Lottery For Raising Loan

Havana, Sept. 6.—The house of representatives is daily holding secret sessions to discuss the question of the $35,000,000 loan and the matter of providing means to meet it. The idea of establishing a lottery to this end has many supporters, while other members of the house advocate an internal revenue tax.

One Agency For Sixty Mills

Huntsville, Ala., Sept. 6.—A report is current here that 60 southern cotton mills have been pledged by their controlling interests to enter a merger, providing only for the selling of the mill products through a common agency, each mill in the organization to be operated independently.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Rev. Horace F. Barnes died at his home at Somerville, Mass., after an extended illness. He was associate pastor of Tremont Temple, Boston. He was born in Newark, N. J., in 1842.

John E. Madden has purchased from J. W. Schorr the 2-year-olds Onatas and Judith Campbell and the 4-year-old filly Lady Schorr, paying $30,000.

The navy department has decided to send one of the small cruisers or gunboats, which are now engaged in the maneuvers, to Hayti next week to relieve the cruiser Cincinnati.

The Berbers have again attacked Mekines, a town 35 miles from Fez, Morocco, with the result that Mohammed, brother of the sultan of Morocco, Moulai Abd-El-Azis, and pretender to his throne, has been released. Mohammed was imprisoned in Mekines.

REPUBLICANS' BAND

Offset by Whistling Solo and Red Fire of Prohibitionists and Democrats

Biddeford, Me., Sept. 6.—Rival rallies for the county and state tickets were held here last night, that of the Republicans being held in the Opera house, while the Prohibitionists and Democrats united in a mass gathering in City square. Judge Andrews of Augusta and Walter Emerson of Portland talked to the Republicans. They were assisted by the Biddeford band.

The Democrats and Prohibitionists used red fire and rockets to enliven things, and their speakers were Rev. J. J. Hull of Wisconsin and Georg F. Haley of this city for the Prohibitionists, and Daniel Cote and Henry I. Lord for the Democrats. The band of the Republicans was playing at the Opera house while Rev. Mr. Hull tried to speak to the crowd in the square. When he could make himself heard, Mr. Hull said that the mass meeting failed to get a band, but he would furnish the only music available, and forthwith whistled "The Star Spangled Banner," amid a shower of rockets.

The Republican speakers gave consideration to national issues only, while those at the open air meeting devoted attention entirely to local politics, chiefly on the non-enforcement of the prohibitory law in the county. The reason the Prohibitionists joined with the Democrats was because they have united forces for sheriff and county attorney.

Grand Jury Indictments

Dedham, Mass., Sept. 6.—The Norfolk grand jury yesterday found bills against F. M. Galucia, F. T. Cullen, and C. A. Mawn for manslaughter in causing the death of Patrick Duffy at Medway. H. E. Smith, "Jack, the Hugger," was indicted on four charges, two alleging felonious assault and two for simple assaults. Charles Carlson, who was charged with attempting to blow up the house of George K. Ellis, was indicted. Four counts for arson were brought in against Francis Coughlin.

Dead Burglar Identified

Boston, Sept. 6.—The negro burglar who was killed by Patrolman Graham yesterday has been identified by a pawnbroker as a man for whom the police had been looking under the name of Henry Primrose. Later the officers became convinced that he had been better known here of late as "Governor Suede." They are of the opinion that he, with others, has been responsible for many of the recent breaks in the city.

Street Murder at Boston

Boston, Sept. 6.—Because his wife Mary, 25 years old, had a liking for Bohemian life and would not remain at home, Charles W. Himmerman, aged 27, fired five shots and fatally wounded her on Bulfinch street yesterday afternoon. Four bullets took effect and resulted in the woman's death half an hour after she had been taken to a hospital. Himmerman is under arrest.

Three Days of Life Left Best

Boston, Sept. 6.—Only three days more of life remain for John C. Best, murderer of George E. Bailey at Saugus. At midnight Monday night the warden will read the death warrant and conduct Best on his last little journey—to the chair of death. All the plans are made and the chair is ready for its victim even now. There will be no final interposition of legal measures.

To Defend America Cup

Bristol, R. I., Sept. 6.—The members of the New York Yacht club have opened negotiations with the Herreshoffs with the purpose in view of placing an order for a 90-foot sloop to be used in defense of the America cup. One conference between John B. Herreshoff and representatives of the syndicate being formed has been held, and another meeting is planned in a few days.

Maya Outrode Competitors

Boston, Sept. 6.—No better 25-mile motor-paced race has been seen at Charles River park this season than that which Otta Maya won from Will Stinson, Basil DeGuichard and Joe Nelson last night. Most of the distance the fight was between Stinson and Maya, as the Frenchman's chain broke in the fourth mile, setting him back. Maya's time was 35:07 4-5.

Charged With Manslaughter

Providence, Sept. 6.—Thomas A. Malone was yesterday arraigned and bound over to the grand jury under bonds of $6000 on a charge of manslaughter in causing the death of Daniel McGrath, who died from a fracture of the skull. A street row resulted in a knockout blow for McGrath and his head struck the pavement with great force.

Rung Fire Alarm For Doctor

Chelsea, Mass., Sept. 6.—The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Quinn of 178 Spruce street went into spasms yesterday, and Mrs. Quinn told her husband to go for a doctor. He rushed out of the house and pulled in an alarm from box 24. Quinn was locked up on a charge of sending in a false alarm of fire.

Singular Yachting Accident

Block Island, R. I., Sept. 6.—John H. Girdner, Jr., son of a New York physician, was on his catboat last night and in making a landing was caught across the chest between the mast and the cap log of the wharf. He was terribly crushed and lived but a short time.

Iron Workers Get Advance

Nashua, N. H., Sept. 6.—The strike at the Nashua Co-operative Iron foundry was settled yesterday, the employers granting the advance of 25 cents demanded by the union. This advance brings the wages up to $2.50, the union schedule.

Mother's Girl.
There exists often a very beautiful companionship between the mother and her daughter. The intimacy is frank, free and sympathetic. But some day the mother feels as if something had chilled this intimacy. The child is silent and sad, and seems to shun her mother instead of seeking her.

This change very often occurs when the young girl is crossing the border line of womanhood. She is morbid, nervous, fearful, as she enters upon this new experience.
The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription at such a time will do more than restore the normal balance of mind and body. It will establish the womanly function upon a basis of sound health, as well as improve the appetite, nourish the nerves, and promote the general physical health.
"Two years ago my daughter's health began to fail," writes Mrs. Dan Hall, of Brodhead, Green Co., Wis. "Everything that could be thought of was done to help her but it was of no use. When she began to complain she was quite stout; weighed 170—the picture of good health, until about the age of fourteen; then in six months she was so run down her weight was but 120. I felt I could not give her up as she was the only child I had, and I must say, Doctor, that only for your 'Favorite Prescription,' my daughter would have been in her grave today. When she had taken one-half bottle the natural function was established and we bought another one, making only two bottles in all, and she completely recovered. Since then she is as well as can be."

Good Afternoon

Before another Saturday all nominations for the Republican caucuses must be filed. There does not promise to be any contests at the State and Councillor conventions, so that delegates to these conventions will probably have a walk-over.

It is very uncertain who will be the nominee at the Congressional convention, so nobody appears to be making a fight. Ex-Mayor Hall of Quincy is mentioned by Boston papers as a candidate, and he is one of the ablest gentlemen mentioned. If the nomination should come to him, it will be without any campaign work by him personally. The district is not so hopelessly Democratic as many believe.

For Senator there will be a contest between Hyde Park and Milton and possibly other towns. The support given the Quincy candidate at the conventions of 1900 and 1901 should not be forgotten. Hon. Wilbur H. Powers of Hyde Park is worthy of Quincy support.

The County convention will be the most interesting of the year. Two gentlemen from Quincy will be before the convention for the nomination for County Commissioner for three years, and there will probably be two or three from other parts of the county. Commissioner Wright, who was so handsomely elected last year, has the endorsements of hundreds of Republicans, and will receive their votes on election day whether he is the Republican candidate or not. The party managers probably want an out-and-out Republican and there is where the contest will come. William E. Badger of Quincy, who almost secured the nomination last year, will probably be one of the leading candidates this year, and his friends are working diligently to secure the nomination for him. He has the qualifications for the position.

Direct nominations of two candidates for the Legislature will be made in Quincy for the first time. Thirty or more names will place any candidate before all wards of the city, and names will be printed on the Australian ballot in alphabetical order, and the two receiving the most votes will be declared the Republican nominees. Frank E. Badger of Ward Six, who has served two years, and John McKnight of Ward One, who has served one year, are candidates for renomination. Of late it has been the Quincy custom to give a Representative three years, and there is no good reason why Representative Badger should not be a candidate this year. His work during the Legislature of 1902 was an improvement over 1901, and generally satisfactory. To turn down a Representative after one year is almost unprecedented in Quincy, so that Mr. McKnight's chances would seem good. But his record is assailed by labor, and he will have to fight.

The City Hall ring are said to have selected McKnight and R. R. Freeman as their candidates. In a large field they might be successful, but it is said the opposition may unite before the caucuses on two from the following list: F. E. Badger, Harry S. Nicoll, E. F. DeNormandie, E. J. Sandberg and George E. Adams.

For a legal document, the latest sale of Tax Collector Cleaves is to say the least crude, and should some of the owners of property make a fight, the sale might be invalidated. There is not a dollar sign or the word "dollars" or "cents" in the long notice. There are numerous abbreviations without even a period. Punctuation is lacking and it would not do to take it literally. There is a great lack of uniformity, as some estates are sold for "particular sewer assessment," some for "particular sewer assess," some for "particular sewer," and still others for "sewer." On one estate the year of the unpaid tax is not given, and on another the tax is printed as "728," leaving one to guess whether it is $728 or $7.28. In only a few cases are the year of the sewer or the street sprinkling assessments given. If more care was taken in selling property for taxes it might not be necessary for the City Council to vote to refund so often on property sold.

On Monday, with shining faces, and with books tucked under an arm, our army of school children will turn towards the school room. During the summer we have noted many little signs of the advantage our schools are to those not favored by fortune. Pleasant manners on the street, and respectful replies are met to-day, where once one was not sure of a civil answer when accosting a street urchin.

The blessing of these halcyon days go with our children, our future public citizens. All can not be at the head of the class, but all can do their best old and young and Monday will see all bending to their wonted tasks.

In Her 99th Year.

Mrs. Zilpah A. Brocklebank one of the oldest residents of the town, died late Friday night Aug. 29, at the home of her son-in-law, Col. A. C. Drinkwater at the advanced age of 98 years and 3 months. Her death was not wholly unexpected about two months ago she had sustained a fall from which she never recovered and her end came peacefully.

Mrs. Brocklebank was born in New Brunswick, May 25, 1804, and at that time was a subject of King George III.

In Miramichi her native place, Zilpah Ann Rogers met her fate in the person of young Brocklebank who had come from Bridgeton, Maine, to engage in lumbering.

A few years after their marriage they returned to Bridgton settling on the farm of his father, Joseph Brocklebank a bay state soldier of the Revolution.

Five sons and six daughters were born to them; of this number five daughters survive: they are, Mrs. Zilpha A. Putnam, Mrs. George H. Hale and Mrs. A. C. Drinkwater of Braintree, Mrs. Charles H. McKenney of Lawrence, and Mrs. Walter S. Hasen of Bridgeton, Me.

Mrs. Brocklebank was a member of the Congregational church all her life and was the oldest both in age and membership of any of the members of the Congregational church in Bridgton.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon from the residence of Col. Drinkwater on Elm street, Rev. A. A. Ellsworth, a relative, officating. The body was taken Tuesday morning to Maine for interment. Mrs. Drinkwater, Mrs. Hale and Mrs. McKenney accompanying it.

CITY BREVITIES.

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

Adams academy opens Wednesday morning, Sept. 10.

The Merrymount Golf club is having a handicap stroke competition today.

The First church Sunday school resumes its sessions on September 14th.

Just a year ago today the assassin's hand shot down President McKinley at Buffalo.

Dr. Francis Abele, Jr. is in the west attending the convention of the veterinaries.

The lawns are suffering for rain and have not looked so dry and brown anytime this summer as now.

On account of the repairs being made at the John Hancock school building this school will not open until Wednesday, Sept. 10.

Bethany Bible school will have sports and games at its annual picnic today at Merrymount park. Barges will run between the church and park.

Peter T. Fallon announces that he is a candidate for the Democratic nomintion as representative to the General Court from this district.

During the summer months the ladies of the First church have been busy preparing for a fair which is to be held in the chapel in October.

Never have the hydrangeas bushes looked so dry and yellow, with a few exceptions. Hose and water do not seem to take the place of frequent showers.

Several Quincy people attended the Agricultural fair at Worcester the first of the week, taking advantage of the reduced rates offered by the B. & A. railroad.

The remains of Mrs. J. H. Perkins, of Milton, who died in London, Sunday, after an operation for peritonitis, were cremated on Thursday. Her ashes will be sent home.

The Norfolk Superior criminal court will convene at Dedham on Monday. The Quincy jurors will be Edward S. Ago, Charles Crane, Charles H. Dawson. John Hall Jr., and Peter M. Carlson.

The bed of red salvias at the residence of James Nicol on Coddington street are just in their prime and are a mass of color. He also has a large bed of cholce cannas with blossoms of several colors; the finest in town we think.

First church which has been closed during the month of August has been freshened up this week and will be open for services on Sunday, when Mr. Butler will resume preaching after a few weeks' rest.

During the summer many have been learning the new song "The Angel's Recall," by our townsman James C. Dunn and it bids fair to become a very popular piece this winter. The music is catchy and especially adapted for church or sacred concerts.

Supt. Nicol of Mount Wollaston cemetery takes great pride and pleasure in the flower plots at the cemetery and has a bed of cannas which just now is attracting considerable attention of account of the beauty and variety of coloring of the blossoms.

The Thomas Crane Public library commenced Tuesday to keep open from one until eight. The evening hours are appreciated by the public for the patronage has been good this week and will doubtless increase as more become aware of the longer hours.

Redden Your Cheeks

Give Your Skin a Good, Healthy Color by Taking

Pept-iron

This entirely new and thoroughly scientific preparation is a specific for paleness, curing all forms of anemia, from which so many women and girls and not a few men and boys suffer, and which is so commonly a result of nervous weakness affecting the digestive and nutritive processes.

In Pill or Liquid Form

Agreeable to the taste, acceptable to the stomach, readily assimilated, and non-astringent, Peptiron has many advantages over other iron preparations, and highly commends itself to invalids, convalescents and others whose digestive organs and systems generally are in a delicate and sensitive condition. It does not cause constipation, nor injure the teeth, nor leave any inky or metallic flavor in the mouth. Peptiron combines iron aud manganese—the great red-blood-corpuscle makers—with digestives, tonics and nutrients, including pepsin, celery, and the phosphates which enter so largely into the composition of all the bodily tissues. It strengthens and quiets the nerves and the brain, for which it is both medicine and food, tones the stomach and other digestive organs, prevents tissue waste, which is part of the pathology of anemia, and establishes the conditions of rosy, robust health.

A Lowell Lady, who had been an anemic sufferer for years before taking Peptiron, writes: "I have just finished the second bottle of Peptiron and it has done me much good. It has relieved that shortness of breath which troubled me so much in walking and going upstairs. It has had no bad effect on the teeth, neither has it caused constipation."

Peptiron Is made in two forms: In a liquid—an aromatic cordial elixir—at $1 per bottle, also in chocolate-coated pills at 50 cents or $1 per box. By

NO "FURNITURE TRUSTS."

Under the veil of trust prices, unscrupulous merchants today are charging the buying public exhorbitant prices for all kinds of merchandise.

Not so in this Furniture Business. In face of all these wrongs, this store is doing a tremendous business; selling Furniture, Carpets and Glenwood Ranges at the same old prices, and giving the working man a full round dollar's worth for every dollar invested.

Don't be mislead. Don't pay advance prices to big department stores and encourage trusts. Trade here and buy your furniture cheaper than at any other store in New England.

William E. Badger for County Commissioner.

At the coming Norfolk county convention, the name of William E. Badger of Quincy will be presented as a candidate for the Republican nomination of County Commissioner. At a meeting of the Republican City Committee, held recently, it was voted to send an unanimous delegation, representing all parts of the city, which will present Mr. Badger's name to the consideration of the convention.

With the exception of the past year when Marshall P. Wright served to fill out the unexpired term of the late E. D. Wadsworth of Milton, the city of Quincy has not had a representative on the board of commissioners of Norfolk county since 1889.

Quincy is the only city in Norfolk county; it has far more population than any town in the county and it is, at present, one of the most wide awake and important of the smaller cities of the commonwealth. Not only is it the home of one of the largest industrial plants along the Atlantic seaboard but it is also the scene of one of the most important engineering feats undertaken by Norfolk county in recent years. This is the construction of a steel bridge across Fore River at Quincy Point.

As a matter of justice, therefore, it seems proper that the city of Quincy should have the honor of being represented on the board of County Commissioners. The candidate which the Republicans of Quincy have chosen as their representative for this honor, is a man who is well and most favorably known throughout the entire length and breadth of Quincy.

He is a member of a family which has been prominently connected with the public affairs of Quincy for many years before Quincy was incorporated as a city. The firm of Badger Brothers, of which the subject of this sketch is a member, has a long established reputation in Quincy for honest and honorable business dealings, and these characteristics have always stood out preeminently in the life of the man whom the Quincy Republicans have selected as their choice for a candidate for County Commissioner. Besides being a successful business man, Mr. Badger has had valuable experience in public life, although he has never personally sought a political office.

For three years Mr. Badger served the city of Quincy as Councilman-at-large and during that time he was a member of the Finance committee, the most important of the many committees of the Quincy City Council. While a member of that committee, Mr. Badger exhibited rare financial and business-like abilities and his services were rewarded by two re-elections and each succeeding year his vote was greatly increased. For two years he has served the city as a member of the Board of Health during which time he has rendered valuable service to the city, especially during two seiges of smallpox. In this connection it may not be amiss to record the fact that of the many cities around Boston which was afflicted with smallpox epidemics last winter, Quincy was one of the first and few to effectually eradicate the dread disease.

The county of Norfolk, which guards its honor with a jealous care, will be honored with William E. Badger as a member of her board of County Commissioners. If honesty, integrity and business ability are factors which should enter into the character and qualifications of a public official, the citizens of Quincy are sure that they have a candidate in whom all these essentials are combined. If elected, the citizens of Norfolk County can rest assured that the interests of all parts of the county will be rigorously looked after by Mr. Badger. We feel certain that he will not be a commissioner of any particular part or section, but will be an official who will be alive to the necessities of all the citizens of Norfolk county.

Closed to All Travel.

The Fore River Ship and Engine Company, the contractors for the new highway bridge between Quincy Point and North Weymouth, give notice that the bridge will be closed to all travel from midnight Sunday to midnight Monday. If the contractors do the work contemplated in these twenty-four hours they will be doing remarkably well.

The Old Colony street railway has continued to run cars across the bridge since it was closed to carriages, but on Monday they do not guarantee to get passengers across in any way. While the bridge is closed to cars a new timetable will be in effect on the Quincy and East Weymouth route.

The cars will leave the Quincy depot at the usual time, 10 and 50 minutes past the hour, but cars will leave East and North Weymouth to return 15 minutes earlier, at 15 and 45 minutes past the hour. Cars will leave Quincy Point for Quincy at 20 and 50 minutes past the hour.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

IN NARRAGANSETT BAY

Mimic Warfare Ends With Brilliant Maneuvers

VESSELS' GUNS SILENT

But a Terrific Fire Poured From Forts Adams and Wetherill—Army Claims Victory, but Unofficial Observers Say Honors Are With Navy

New London, Conn., Sept. 6.—With the night attack on Fort Adams closed the maneuvers in the war game which has been played in the New London and Narragansett districts. The grand finale will be held this afternoon, when the ships will pass in review before the forts which have been attacked, beginning at Fort Rodman and ending at Fort Terry. The review will end off New London harbor and it is quite likely that most of the vessels will remain in this vicinity for several days.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 6.—Two cruisers and three battleships of Admiral Higginson's fleet ran the gauntlet of Forts Adams and Wetherill last night, getting within broadside range for all their guns before they were picked up by the searchlights of the forts.

The racket woke up Newport as it was never aroused before. The gunners in the forts, after working the big guns for a few minutes, quickly manned the secondary batteries, for the ships were then in point blank range. The rapid firing guns made as great a din as the big ones and, if anything, made the picture a livelier one.

The five vessels kept in almost under Fort Adams until within short range of the torpedo station, and then they appeared to anchor. The firing stopped and it was supposed the great battle was ended. In half an hour the ships suddenly steamed out of the harbor, in the same order as coming in, the Brooklyn leading. The ships all used their searchlights, but did not fire a gun. Fort Adams gave them a few broadsides, and when the Brooklyn and Olympia were abreast of Beaver Tail light Fort Greble opened for the first time last night. The fleet escaped, if such was the idea, towards Block island, and was all outside by 11:45.

During the battle the smaller craft were in squadron formation to seaward and did not attempt to enter the harbor. The Puritan and Indiana were not seen. As there was not time for communication between the shore and the ships the maneuver of the fleet was mystifying.

The army claims that not only would its guns have swept the ships, but its mines would have wrecked some of them in the narrow channel, so that escape would have been impossible for any that reached the harbor.

The battle is considered by unofficial observers here to be a decided victory for the navy. The chief point is that the Brooklyn was able to reach the mouth of the harbor before it was picked up by a fort searchlight. It is claimed that with the fleet within such close range that it had the two forts at its mercy, and to emphasize this fact it is pointed out that the gunners on Fort Adams were obliged to desert their big guns within a few minutes after the battle opened.

The fleet was signalled from Point Judith by rockets and later Beaver Tail station sent up a signal, but strange to say the fort did not fire, although it must have had sufficient warning. That the searchlights did not pick up the vessels is not strange, as they are not powerful enough to sweep a wide area. The searchlights on the Narragansett shore were not able to pick up the fleet in its maneuvers last night.

The fleet undoubtedly steamed to its naval base off Block island and will not be heard from again.

During the afternoon nearly the entire fleet made a demonstration against the army defenses on Narragansett bay, but did not attempt to come to close quarters with any of the forts. A landing was affected, however, at Price's Neck, where the searcalight and range station on which the mortars at Fort Adams are sighted and fired were put out of action for an hour. During that time the battleships Kearsarge and Alabama engaged Fort Wetherill, the cruisers Olympia and Brooklyn hammered Fort Greble in the west channel, while the battleships Massachusetts and Indiana and the monitor Puritan destroyed a signal station at the entrance of Seekonet river. After two hours of fighting the fleet drew off shore where it assembled just before sunset for what proved to be the night attack.

A TWILIGHT GAME.

You Mention a Thing and Count Ten For the Next Player.

It had been raining all day. It was almost dark, and the children were getting dangerously tired of each other when Miss Lambert came up into the nursery. She lighted the fire on the hearth and drew up an easy chair; then she settled back in it and looked over at Alice and smiled.

"What is it?" questioned Alice, feeling very happy all at once.

"The world is so full of a number of things. I think we should all be as happy as kings," quoted Miss Lambert.

"Tell us the rest," exclaimed Alice eagerly.

"That's all," replied Miss Lambert, still smiling.

But the children, sure that something nice was coming, settled themselves, each on an arm of Miss Lambert's chair, and waited.

"Well, we'll play a game," said Miss Lambert. "I'll mention one of the 'things' and then commence to count ten. Before I have finished Alice must mention one, and so we'll go round and round. The one who fails to think of a thing (a beautiful thing, of course) must pay a forfeit. She must learn Mr. Stevenson's 'Nest Eggs' and recite it Sunday morning at breakfast. Now I'll begin: A road winding through the woods; one, two, three, four"—

"Red lilies growing along the road," shouted Alice; "one, two, three, four, five, six"—

"Candy! Pink and white twisted sticks," said Elizabeth solemnly.

"Count, dear," reminded Miss Lambert, for Elizabeth had forgotten present duties.

"One, two, three"—

"An old farmhouse with children inside and an apple orchard near; one, two"—

"A nice big fire," cried Alice, stretching her feet out toward the blaze. "One, two, three, four, five, six, seven"—

"Kittens," said Elizabeth, gazing lovingly at a stuffed cat lying upside down on the hearth.

"Aren't you going to count?" asked Miss Lambert.

"One, two, three," commenced Elizabeth.

"A field of grass with the wind sweeping over it; one, two, three, four"—

"A stone wall," shouted Alice, "with all the things growing side of it—wild roses, hardback, grapevines; one, two, three, four, five"—

"Babies," said Elizabeth, beginning at once to think up for next time and forgetting to count, as usual.

"Mammas that sing softly to the babies," said Miss Lambert, following Elizabeth's lead.

"Uncles that tell stories," shouted Alice, springing into the arms of a big man who suddenly appeared in the doorway.

"Oh, Uncle Jack, you play, too!" cried both the children at once, and then such fun as followed!

Uncle Jack had to pay a forfeit because he couldn't think quickly enough, and then after that he thought of lots of jolly things—gulls' eggs and full rigged ships and big waves that dash over boats and the American flag and everything.—Outlook.

The Straw and Coin Trick.

Show five pieces of straw or five thin sticks of wood and a coin and ask the audience to try to lift them together in such a way that the performer holds only one of the pieces of straw or wood in his hand.

The illustration shows how it is done. —New York Tribune.

Betty Botter's Batter.

Betty Botter bought some butter.
"But," she said, "this butter's bitter.
If I put it in my batter,
It will make the batter bitter,
But a bit of better butter
Will make my batter better."
So she bought a bit of butter
Better than the bitter butter
And made her bitter batter better.
So 'twas better Betty Botter
Bought a bit of better butter.

OBEYING THE RULES.

That Was How Mayor Johnson Got His Start In the World.

The mayor of Cleveland, familiarly known as Tom Johnson, when at the age of fourteen lived in Louisville, Ky., and secured employment as an office boy at $2 a week in a foundry. His duties consisted of keeping the office clean, running errands and picking up odd scraps.

B. Du Pont, who was part owner of the foundry, saw the industrious office boy rush one day into the street, pick up a bit of iron and, returning, throw it on the scrap heap inside. When the boy re-entered the office, Mr. Du Pont said to him:

"Why did you do that, my son?"

"Why, sir," said Tom, a bit embarrassed, "there was no use wasting it. They can put it in the furnace and use it over again."

"Well, I just think I can use you, young man, in the street car business. How would you like to come at $7 a week?"

Young Johnson accepted the $5 raise with alacrity. Mr. Du Pont controlled the Fourth avenue and Walnut street lines. One barn was at Eighteenth and Walnut streets and at Fourth avenue and Main street was the drawing station. All the cars of the system had to pass there, and it was there that the money was drawn from the big clumsy boxes into which the fares were dropped.

One of the rules of the company was that as each bag of money was drawn the drawer must carry it into the office, put it into the safe and close the door.

Mr. Du Pont was seldom at the drawing station during the day, and in time the drawers grew careless. No one had access to the room but the drawers, and knowing one another to be honest they formed the habit of carelessly throwing the bags of money on the floor and piling them all into the safe in a heap at the end of the day or when they thought Mr. Du Pont might be around.

One day the chief drawer was ill, and young Johnson, the office boy, was sent by Mr. Du Pont from Eighteenth and Walnut streets to Fourth and Main to help out. Johnson read the rules, and in drawing the bag of money from the first car he bounded up the steps to the room, opened the safe, threw in the money and slammed the door.

"What did you do that for?" demanded the bookkeeper.

"The rules say so," answered the subdrawer over his shoulder as he ran down the steps to meet another car.

The same thing was repeated a dozen times. Then the bookkeeper wheeled around and demanded:

"Don't you think I'm honest? Do you think I want to steal any of that money?"

"Dunno," answered Johnson, "but the rule says, 'Put the bag in the safe and shut the door,' and that's what I'm going to do whether you like it or not."

The bookkeeper jumped off his stool just as Mr. Du Pont stepped in.

"What's all this row about?" he asked.

"This young fool is acting as if he thought I was trying to steal your money," the bookkeeper replied.

"I was just obeying the rule, Mr. Du Pont," spoke up young Johnson. "Here it is." And he showed the president of the company the rule.

"All right, my boy," said Mr. Du Pont. "Since you obey the rules so well I'll make you chief drawer right now."

Two years later, when he was seventeen, Johnson was superintendent of the road.

More For the Money.

A gentleman, accompanied by his son, has just selected a picture representing a group of four peaches and a cut melon.

"How much?" he inquires.

"Fifty pounds."

Here the youngster whispers to his parent: "Oh, father, don't buy it. I saw a much finer one at another shop for £40."

"Yes; but how do you know it was better?"

"Why, there were at least twelve peaches, and the melon wasn't cut."

Often Mistaken.

In a public park at Calcutta are several birds of the adjutant species. They are the storks of the East Indies and average about six feet in height. These birds parade in a stately way and at a distance look so much like soldiers that strangers often mistake them for grenadiers.

MARY MURPHY'S DREAM

By ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER

Copyright, 1901, by
Eliza Archard Conner

IT was only 9 o'clock, but Mary Murphy was tired, Thanksgiving morning though it was. She had not done much work, nothing more than usual. She had only milked the cows and dressed four of the children—Maud, the eldest, was nine and could dress herself—and fed the chickens and got breakfast and washed the dishes. She had indeed not done so much work as usual for Thursday morning, for her husband was at home that day, and he had done the churning for her, and the butter was now waiting to be gathered and salted.

That was the next task that awaited her, but she was so tired she sat down to rest a minute in the low wooden rocking chair that belonged to the kitchen.

Ten years ago blue eyed Mary Farrington was a pretty country schoolmistress, full of life and fire and ambition. She would go to college, she would study English literature, she would go to Europe and study literature again, she would return to America and be a college professor herself and have a career. It was a pretty dream of a girl's ambition, too pretty in truth. At least Mary Farrington was too pretty for it to be realized. Lovers followed her footsteps, among them John Murphy, and John Murphy decided that Mary Farrington's education was finished. He was only a farmer, and one of her other lovers was a schoolmaster and the third one a lawyer, while John Murphy did not speak quite grammatically. But he had a forty-three inch chest, and he could pick her up under one arm and run half a mile with her. It seemed somehow that just so he caught her up and ran away with her from both the schoolmaster, who had dyspepsia, and the lawyer, who had a cold, clammy handshake, like the wagging of a seal's flippers.

And now! She moved feebly back and forth in the kitchen rocking chair. She was so weak and nervous she could have wept. She breathed long drawn breaths like the dying, and the past came back to her as it does to the dying. Oh, that silly marriage! If she could only get out of it, only go back ten years and live her life as she had planned it! She saw herself the handsome, brilliant young woman college professor, honored and loved, with white hands and pretty gowns and literary and artistic people around her.

Now, now! There was the rugged little farm with a mortgage on it; there were the five white headed, short nosed, freckled children that looked like John Murphy, all except the fourth, the one who was always whining. That one resembled her. There they were, there was she, with not a dollar to spare for anything but bald necessities, and Mary Farrington so loved grace and beautiful things. It seemed as if she had to buy a new pair of shoes for one of that pile of young ones every week. Would anybody think now she had ever been pretty, the hopeless, bowed, broken down farm wife of thirty-two?

During the late autumn and winter John Murphy had work as a teamster at a dollar a day, and that was almost the only money they saw. He was off duty today because it was Thanksgiving.

Miss Bookman, the children's teacher, just such a live, pretty girl as Mary Farrington had been, was going to tell her pupils at the schoolhouse of the first Thanksgiving day in America and show them pictures of Indians.

But now Mary was too tired to dress the young ones, too tired to get dinner, too tired for anything, so she just lopped down in the kitchen rocking chair.

Thanksgiving? The only Thanksgiving to her would be death—sweet death—which comes not to the life weary. If John or the children had come near her at that moment, she would have spoken crossly to them, which was unusual, for Mary was gentle and sweet tempered even in her weariness and all through those clouded years.

But nobody came, not a soul. On the contrary, the children's voices in the yard grew fainter. She no longer heard even the whining one, who was the fourth. The low brown wooden kitchen raised its ceiling, widened its walls, then disappeared altogether. Mary Murphy was outdoors in space.

A procession that seemed to be as long as the universe was passing. Living creatures started out of darkness and grayness millions of billions of miles away, and they were all going somewhere and never getting there. When they emerged from the clouded beginning place, to which it would have taken Mary Murphy millions of years to travel, these creatures, great and small, male and female, were hairy, apelike beings. They were a strange, animal people folk. The males were ferocious monsters that snatched a young one from its mother and dashed it to death if it annoyed them by crying or impeded the ape folk on their march toward the place to which they were hurrying, but never reached.

At the starting point of grayness and darkness these animals were dark, too, but as they went on their road she saw them becoming fairer, she saw more light about them, then colors beginning to play around them, only a deep dark red and dull brown at first, then as the tremendous stream of animal folk flowed on there came more and more light and more varied tints till many hues appeared, and there were blue sky and white cloud, with the colors mingling, blending, parting and changing like dancing rainbows.

A strange thing! As it grew lighter Mary Murphy thought—yes, she knew—that the same animal folk, men and women, reappeared in the procession, repeated themselves in different places. Back where the colors were just beginning to show around them she saw a hairy ape man seize a weak, crippled little female that could not keep up with the rest and fling it out to perish by the trail side. It howled at this treatment like a forsaken monkey. Immediately a gigantic man animal who had a lighter color about him than the rest, grinning grotesquely, but not unkindly, picked up the abandoned female child animal and carried it upon his shoulder, so that it was not left to die. Mary Murphy's heart gave a great leap, then almost stopped, when she saw in the face of the big man animal the look of John Murphy and in the crippled little woman animal her own self.

On they went, the colors growing brighter and more luminous, the light stronger, the animal people handsomer, cleaner, more erect, gentler in their ways and habits. Yet they did not go steadily on. Many a time one dropped out, weak and discouraged, and let the procession go past him; but, then, he never stayed where he fell. The trail was a little up hill all the way, and the one who gave up and stopped always rolled down slightly and joined the procession where the ape folk were darker and more animal-like than the ones he had left.

One slim, white, tired woman animal could hardly drag herself along. She was finer, prettier, than those around her, but so ill, weary and disappointed looking, so heartbroken seemingly, that Mary Murphy's heart ached for her. She was even on the point of going down and sliding back among the darker, duller, more swinish creatures behind.

Then Mary Murphy saw a strange thing which at first she had not observed. Joined to the wan, white woman animal by tiny silken cords were a whole family of ape folk, all of them a little behind her. It was about the middle of the great procession, where the animal folk joined together by silken threads stood. One of the group behind the white woman was a very large, kind looking, but rather dull faced man animal, moving along slowly and lumberingly, head downward, as though pondering in his stupid way what it all meant. He studied and thought, looking now heavily perplexed, now in a sort of sulky despair, again in a daze, but going on all the time—going steadily on after the woman animal—never stopping, never losing his place in the procession or letting it drift past him. With him were five little animals. Some of the threads that held them to the woman were blue, others yellow or violet, but mostly pink. If she stopped, they stopped, and all fell back together into the lower herd. Mary Murphy wanted to shout to the woman animal:

"Don't stop! For the love of God and man, go on! Save yourself and them!"

Then she saw that these animal people at the middle of the procession were herself, John Murphy and the five young ones.

Yet again she looked on and on through a vista of measureless distance. The procession passed upward to a shining tableland, but the animal people had become beautiful and happy. There were no crippled or despairing ones, not even any stupid ones, and of starving or hungry none at all. No hawk beak of avarice peered among them now, no fierce aspect of cruelty, no swinish selfishness. Rainbows of indescribable beauty played about them. Those nearest the top of the hill were more glorious than any angel Mary Murphy ever pictured, human beings perfect in health, in feature, in form, perfect, too, in godlike expression of countenance. Power, the splendid, unspeakable power of developed manhood and womanhood, was in and around them all. The noble thoughts of men and women played entrancing music that could be heard.

And again—was it? Yes, and no mistake. Among those near the top of the hill and upon the border of the beautiful country there they were once more—Mary Murphy, John and the young ones. The children were a little below the father and mother and were scattered along the path, but all bravely moving upward and nearest the top. Closest alongside the parents was the fourth, the whining one. And, look you, among all the men creatures at the top there was none so fine or great or beautiful as good old John Murphy! Commanding power and majesty fitting Jove upon Olympus showed in his face, with a gentleness, a great lovingness and helpfulness that no heathen deity's countenance ever expressed. Comely and strong as all the men creatures were, they yet looked up to him as the strongest, bravest, comeliest of them all.

Above the tableland where they stood rose yet other and higher heights, mountains towering and yet more shining, with god men and god women climbing, climbing still and never wearying heights and people more and more radiant till all was lost in brightness.

A voice which was the Spirit of Eternal Truth spoke to Mary Murphy:

"You have lived many lives, you will live many more. Whatever worthy thing the soul craves that it will gain in one life or another. Whatever trouble you are in power is given you to come out of it. There are no mistakes. The things miscalled mistakes are lessons whereby you learn. Toil depends on how you take it. Work done in the spirit of grudging and complaining is drudgery. Work done with courage and aspiration is health and joy and ever growing power. You behold the origin and destiny of man unrolled in a picture before you, lost in darkness at one end, lost in light at the other. The shining ones have traveled the very road you are treading. There is none other.

"Nothing to be thankful for? O woman, bend and kiss the earth for thankfulness—thankfulness for life itself, with its eternal love, eternal striving, eternal triumph! Thanksgiving? What else should all human existence be than one glorious song of thanksgiving the year round?"

Mary Murphy laughed for gladness.

* * * * * * *

Suddenly again the low brown kitchen, the unfinished work, Mary Murphy in the rocking chair! The four eldest children, all but the baby, stood around her with frightened faces, clasping one another's hands and crying. John Murphy was holding her hands, rubbing them, stroking her hair, calling her. The tears were rolling down his cheeks. As she looked up he let go one of her hands, drew out a great blue cotton handkerchief and wiped his eyes.

Mary Murphy laughed again.

"I was dreaming," she said. "John, dear"—she had not called him "John, dear," since the fourth child, the whining one, was born—"John, dear, I will dress Maud and Johnny and Tom, and you take them to see Miss Bookman's show. I will make a potpie of old Pickie hen and bake some potatoes and make a bread pudding, and we'll have a nice Thanksgiving dinner. In the afternoon we'll make some popcorn balls and molasses candy for the children."

A CHECK ON TROLLEYS

To Be Applied by Berkshire Town Authorities

THE REGULATION OF SPEED

Will Be One of the Results of the Accident to the Presidential Party —Pittsfield Officially Expresses Sorrow Over the Occurrence

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 6.—The accident of Wednesday has resulted in the board of aldermen of Pittsfield and the selectmen of the several towns connected with this city by trolley coming together to discuss the matter of the rate of speed at which trolley cars shall be run to the various places.

It has developed that in the entire system of street railways now in operation and in course of construction in central and southern Berkshire there is but one, the Pontoosuc line of the Pittsfield company, which has a speed regulation. Under the original franchise granted the company, cars can be run no faster than 12 miles an hour. The Pittsfield ordinances provide that no person shall ride in a vehicle faster than 12 miles an hour. This, however, does not prevent the running of cars at a greater rate of speed.

The Pittsfield aldermen last night took the first step by adopting an order regulating the rate of speed at which cars may be run in the streets of the city. The selectmen of the several towns in the vicinity also have announced their intention of taking immediate action in the matter.

The Pittsfield city council last night adopted a resolution regarding the recent accident, officially voicing its sorrow. The resolution follows:

"With profound sorrow, the city council of the city of Pittsfield deplores the accident which befell the President of the United States and his party on Wednesday morning, Sept. 3. The impression of the happy incidents of the morning, including the president's felicitous address to his fellow citizens at the park, were instantly dissipated by the shocking news of the imminent personal danger which had threatened the president, the governor of the commonwealth, and their party, and of the awful death of the secret service officer, William Craig, the president's body-guard.

"The council desires to place on record its sincere thankfulness that the president and the governor were spared serious injury, and that with so little delay they were able to resume their journey. The council further desires to record its heartfelt sympathy for the relatives of Officer Craig, whose tragic death while in line of duty has saddened this community. The clerk is instructed to forward an attested copy of the resolution to the president, the governor, and the near relatives of the late Officer Craig."

Real Tragedy on the Stage

Vienna, Sept. 6.—An Austrian actor and actress at Samos-Ujvar, Julia Hakey and Julius Hardos, had been engaged, but the latter had broken off the engagement. The two were acting the part of lovers in a performance during which Julia was supposed to fire at Bardos. She charged her pistol with bullets and shot him dead. The curtain was lowered immediately, when Julia committed suicide by opening her veins.

Boies Against Henderson

Waterloo, Ia., Sept. 6.—Members of the congressional committee announce that former Governor Boies will be nominated for congress against Speaker Henderson at the Third district Democratic convention next Thursday. It had been expected that Boies' son would be named, but the latter declined.

An Electric Car Victim

Brockton, Mass., Sept. 6.—Chester R. Smith died last night as a result of injuries received from being struck by an electric car last evening near Porter's turnout. Smith sustained a fracture of the skull and severe bruises about the head and body. He was a shoemaker and married.

Governors Get Surtax Funds

Shanghai, Sept. 6.—James L. Mackay, the British tariff commissioner, and the Chinese commissioners signed the commercial treaty between China and Great Britain last night, a new edict having been issued specifically allocating the surtax funds to provincial governors.

Slump In Real Estate

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 6.—Another settling of the surface of the Tripp park section of the city occurred yesterday. About 25 acres went down from one to five feet. The settling results from the caving in of an abandoned mine working in the old Tripp slope.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 7—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Ready for His coming.—Luke xii, 31-40.

The coming referred to in the topic is the second coming of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in this passage from Luke Christ sets forth the importance and necessity of being ready for His coming. "Blessed are those servants whom the lord when he cometh shall find watching. Verily I say unto you he shall gird himself and make them to sit down to meat and will come forth and serve them. * * * Be ye ready therefore also, for the Son of Man cometh at an hour when ye think not." Nor is this the only place where Christ emphasized the importance of being ready for His coming. It was a familiar topic with Him and was set forth both in precept and in parable.

Readiness for Christ's second coming is necessary and important because Christ is coming again. Skeptics may doubt this doctrine, but Christians cannot. It is a conspicuous and deliberate teaching of the New Testament. "I will come again" was the declaration of Christ. "This same Jesus which is taken up into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven" was the testimony of the angels in Acts i, 11, and in the epistles Paul, James, Peter and John all emphasized the fact of Christ's coming and its important bearing upon the life of the Christian. Christ will come again. Therefore we should be ready for His coming.

But we should not only be ready, but always ready, for the reason that no man knows the day or the hour when Christ will come. The fact is revealed, but the time is unrevealed. Nor is it to be revealed. Christ is to come as a thief in the night. In the parable of the virgins it was midnight, the most unexpected hour, when the cry arose, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh!" This is to be a characteristic of the second coming of Christ. He is to come suddenly and unexpectedly; hence the necessity of being prepared at all times for His coming.

Whether we are ready for Christ's coming is an important matter. Upon our readiness depends our entrance with Him into the glories and joys of heaven. The wise virgins entered; the foolish virgins, being unprepared, were left out and were kept out. "The door was shut" and never reopened! Are we ready in faith and life for His coming?

BIBLE READINGS.

Matt. xxiv, 44-46; xxv, 1-13; Luke xxi, 9-36; John ix, 4; I Thess. v, 1-6; II Tim. iv, 1-8; II Pet. iii, 1-10; Rev. iii, 1-3; xvi, 15.

Secretary Baer's Resignation.

In resigning his Christian Endeavor office, John Willis Baer, who, beginning Oct. 1, will act as assistant secretary of the Presbyterian board of home missions, said: "I believe today in the underlying principles of Christian Endeavor as sincerely as I have these twelve years, and as a missionary and evangelistic force in the church Christian Endeavor is only beginning to appreciate its power. As a worldwide bond of union to bring denominations and nations into practical co-operation and fellowship it is to continue to be an ever increasing Christian agency. Its many sided and many tongued testimony for Christ is to win to it a greater number of the young in the days of their youth, as they live honest, consistent lives in the home, in the church and in the state. It is not because I love Christian Endeavor less that I ask to be relieved of my trust, but because I believe another can bring to my office new ideas, new methods, new enthusiasm, and carry the Christian Endeavor banner ever onward and upward, and at the same time that I may be able, with God's help, to address myself with fresh enthusiasm and consecration to the work of home missions and help to win America for Christ, and I turn to this new field believing it to be my life work."

One Way of Treating a Rogue.

It does not change a man's nature or spirit to have another think better of him than he is. At the same time it is an appeal to the better side of a man's or a boy's nature when you show confidence in him. No person wants to be found worse than he is counted, and even if one is surprised at your being ready to trust him without any knowledge of the facts he does not want to disappoint your good opinion of him. Many a rough boy has been inspired to a higher standard of conduct by being trusted with a special mission or assigned to the care of others by one who was willing to believe that there was a good side to his nature. On the other hand, a good way of making a rogue is to show a person that you think he is such. Our shown estimates of others have a good deal to do with helping them up or down in life.—Sunday School Times.

Fellowship With God.

Fellowship with God is not to be sought only as a means to an end, for it is itself the end to which all means must contribute, but when it is so sought and cultivated for its own sake he who enjoys fellowship becomes the fountain of untold blessing to the church and to the world.—Rev. A. T. Pierson, D. D.

Trust In God.

It is a wise providence that we cannot see the future. We can see through one pane of glass easily, but through ten placed together we cannot see, yet each is transparent. By living a day at a time we get along well, and all is clear, although we cannot see through all the purposes of God concerning us. —Churchman.

Today's Concerts.

The Braintree Orchestral will furnish the music this afternoon and evening at the Quincy Yacht Club, the program, already published in the Ledger, shows a wide range of selections. The march, "Cochato Club," was written by F. Stuart Mason of Weymouth, and received its initial rendition last Saturday evening at the Cochato Club, Braintree.

Especial attention is called to Brahms Hungarian Dance No. 7, which is perhaps the best known of the set of dances written by this composer; The Suite de Ballet by Gruenwald, typifies a scene in the life of Antony.

It deals with four moods, each mood calling for a rendition of a different tempo, first commencing with a dainty solemn movement and gradually working up until the march "Antony's Victory" is reached. The whole work is a musical gem and never fails to call forth praise when performed.

In the evening the program includes a clarinet solo by Mr. Geo. H. Rowe, first clarinetist of Martland's Brockton band, who is now a member of the Braintree Orchestral Club.

—The entering class at Tufts college promises to be larger than any which has yet entered, especially in the engineering department which has in recent years become one of the most important branches of study.

Don't forget the Weymouth fair at South Weymouth Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Sept. 25, 26 and 27.

BRAINTREE.

Only eight degrees above freezing point this morning.

Mr. Charles G. Sheppard of East Braintree is to enter the representative fight, and without doubt will receive the Republican nomination. Mr. Horace R. Drinkwater will receive the Democratic nomination.

A very pleasing program was rendered before an appreciative audience in Grand Army hall on Wednesday evening that being ladies' night of Blue Hill lodge of A. O. U. W.

The first anniversary of the Ladies' Aid society connected with the Antietam Camp S. of V. took place in the G. A. R. hall last evening.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Chick welcomed an eight pound boy into their family upon Labor day.

Rev. Mr. Norton of Quincy will preach at the South Congregational church Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Dr. Burleigh has rented the house on Washington street known as the "Mansfield homestead." Mr. Linnehan, the present occupant, will move to Dorchester,

At the Sunday evening service at 7 o'clock in the South M. E. Church the speaker will be Hon. M. J. Fanning, state superintendent of the Massachusetts department of the American Anti-Saloon League. Mr. Fanning comes with excellent recommendations from places where he has lectured and represents an Inter-denominational society which promises to do much toward the solution of the liquor problem.

The King's Daughters will meet next Thursday with Miss Alice Holbrook.

Weymouth Fair, Sept. 25, 26 and 27.

Miss Edith Hart celebrated her seventh birthday Thursday afternoon, by inviting a number of her little friends to her home on Lisle street, from 4 to 6 o'clock. The afternoon was enjoyed hugely by the little folks and after an hour or more indulgence in games dainty refreshments were served. Little Miss Hart was the recipient of many little tokens as remembrances of the occasion.

The All Souls' Ladies' Aid Society will meet next Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 10, with Mrs. J. F. Perry, Lowell street.

Mrs. Sarah A. Pratt is quite ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. L. O. Crocker.

Two more new houses are to be started immediately on Elm Knoll road. One by Arthur L. Hobart and the other by W. F. Sanborn.

The Jonas Perkins School association spent a delightful afternoon and evening at Nantasket Point Thursday. At 6.30 the party sat down to one of Mr. Wade's famous shore dinners to which they did full justice. All felt well pleased with the success of the outing, which was under the management of the Pres. and Vice Pres. of the association, and hoped this would only be the beginning of yearly ones.

Rev. George Hathaway of Porter will occupy the pulpit of the Methodist church on next Sunday morning. In the evening the service will be in charge of the Epworth League and at 7 o'clock Miss Clara L. Cushman of Newton, who has been engaged in missionary work in China, will give an address upon her work. Miss Cushman spoke at the church last spring and will be remembered as an interesting and attractive speaker. All are cordially invited to this service.

To Play Next Saturday.

The ball game between the old Braintrees and the present Braintree team which was to have been played today has been postponed until next Saturday. The game no doubt will be of interest to the old time fans who attend the ball games of today. All the old timers have agreed to be present. The following lineup of the "old fellows" will be Frank Burrell catcher, "Billy" Coughal D. B. Chamberlain pitchers, "Mose" Woodsum 1st Base, "Jack" Condon 2d Base, "Jack" Rudderham 3d Base, Ex-Senator B. H. Woodsum short stop, "Wiss" Woodsum, left field, "Tom" Downey centre field, "Jim" Maguiness right field, spare infielders "Luke" Mulligan, spare outfielders Al F. Hollis, manager, Thomas Mulligan, Scorer, Louis W. Thayer. Umpire Edwin F. Porter.

All the above are out to win and there will be something doing all the time, so be present.

Rose Cliff Kindergarten.

The closing exercises of the Rose Cliff summer kindergarten were held on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock.

This new, but already flourishing institution, was started about a month ago by three young misses who were spending the summer at Rose Cliff, Weymouth, and the school has been composed of the wee tots from the cottages on the hill.

The enjoyment of both teachers and pupils has been marked, and the parents who attended the closing exercises; voted the little school a great success. The school has been held every morning at the cottage of Mrs. Horace F. Spear, and the young teachers were Miss Grace Spear of Quincy, Miss Amy Wright of Randolph, and Miss Bertha Bartlett of Malden.

It is a common practice in Berlin for the wife to stay at home when the husband and family go to the seaside. In this way she enjoys her own holiday, usually taking her meals at restaurants.

INDICTMENTS.

Found Against Charles Carlson and City Scavenger Prescott.

The Norfolk grand jury reported yesterday and there are two important Quincy cases.

Charles Carlson, who was tried in Quincy court for unlawfully using an explosive on the house of Stephen K. Ellis at Quincy on July 3, was indicted.

Charles L. Prescott, the city scavenger of Quincy, was also indicted for maintaining a nuisance.

Other indictments were:

Howard E. Smith of Hyde Park, on two charges of assault, and two charges of attemting felonious assault.

Frank M. Galucia, Frank T. Cullen and Charles A. Mawn, all of Medway, with manslaughter in causing the death of Patrick Duffy at Medway May 30.

Frank H. Cram, charged with uttering and forging a check at Hyde Park. Plea of guilty.

John C. Davis of Boston, charged with breaking and entering at Stoughton.

Henry N. Blanchard charged with larceny at Stoughton.

Pasquale Salvati alias Patsy Salvati, charged with an assault on Florence Palladini at Weymouth, April 1, 1361.

James H. Heyslop, charged with adultery at Hyde Park.

Mabel Chiovelli, charged with adultery at Hyde Park.

Frank H. Shipley of Reading, charged with adultery at Wellesley. Plea of guilty. Defendant put on probation.

Florence J. Phillips, alias Florence J. Gray, of Reacing, charged with adultery at Wellesley. Defendant put on probation.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The management of the Castle Square Theatre has secured the rights of production of Clyde Fitch's fascinating drama, "Barbara Frietchie," as given by Julia Marlow and her company, two years ago, will be pleasantly recalled and a further opportunity of enjoying its interesting scenes and story will be eagerly anticipated. A very elaborate production is promised by the Castle Square management and some realistic stage pictures will be shown. Without claiming historical accuracy the author of "Barbara Frietchie" has made this character the central figure in an imaginary story that is full of intense dramatic interest. The cast announced is as follows: Barbara Frietchie, Lillian Lawrence; Sue Royce, Mary Sanders; Laura Royce, Alexia Durant; Mammy Lu, Leonora Bradley; Capt. Trumbell, John Craig; Mr. Frietchie, James L. Seeley; Arthur Frietchie, Thomas MacLarnie; Col. Negly, Lindsay Morison; Jack Negly, John Sainpolis; Fred Gelwex, John T. Craven; Stonewall Jackson, Edward Wade; Dr. Hal Boyd, George E. Mack. The usual distribution of boxes of choice chocolate bon bons will be make at the Monday matinee.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

The new policy which has been inaugurated by Messrs. E. D. Stair and A. L. Wilbur, the new lessees and proprietors of the theatre, is meeting with the approval of the theatre-going public and large audiences have been the rule this week. The daily matinees with their prices of 15 and 25 cents are attracting many ladies and children. The evening prices are 15, 25 and 50 cents, and these prices will never be increased. The next attraction, which will open a two weeks' engagement next Monday afternoon, is Weber and Field's most successful extravaganze, "Fiddle Dee Dee," and this will be followed by Williams and Walker in their new colored comedy, "In Dahomey," Joseph Murphy in the "Kerry Gow," and Shaun Rue," "The sign of the Cross," and other notable attractions. "Fiddle Dee Dee" has an enviable record for long runs, both in New York, where it entertained for nine months at Weber and Field's Music Hall, and at Buffalo, where it had a run of twenty consecutive weeks at Shea's Theatre. The girls are prettier and can dance better than those of last season, and the entire show is much better in every way. Among the specialties introduced will be the Cardownie Sisters, in their national dances, and the original News Boys Quintette.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Ten Ichi has proven the biggest card played at Keith's this season, and has certainly made good for all the advance notices that were made in regard to his prowess as a magician. He is indisputably a wonderful fellow, in many of his tricks excelling that other noted Oriental, Ching Ling Foo. Ten Ichi will continue the leading feature for the week commencing Sept. 8, but will be surrounded by a notable gathering of well known vaudevillians, including Albert Guille, the popular French tenor; Milton and Dollie Nobles, in the actor-author's amusing farce, "A Blue Grass Widow;" the Four Cuttys, a clever quartet of musical comedians; Aurie Dagwell, soprano vocalist; Ford and Cantwell, dancing specialists; and the Garganys, an imported team of comedy acrobats. In the biograph there will be a capital lot of home and foreign motion pictures. Lillian Burkhart, the favorite society comedianne, is underlined for the week of Sept. 15.

There are four different state swords belonging to the city of London. The black sword is used on fast days and during the mourning for the Royal family.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. Cleaning Carpets

Isn't pleasant work, no one cares to do it at home, and even if they do try, it's almost impossible to beat out all of the dirt.

Now, cleaning carpets is part of our business, we like to do it, not by hand though, for our steam carpet beating does the work neater and better than the hands of any man can do.

Carpets taken up, cleaned and relaid.

TONS OF POWDER EXPLODE.

One Killed and Several Injured at Governor's Island---Concussion Heard in Quincy.

Boston, Sept. 8.—One of the government powder magazines at old Fort Winthrop, on Governor's island, Boston harbor, blew up shortly before 5 o'clock last evening with a detonation that was very forcibly apparent all over the city and which was heard at points 20 miles away. One dead man and five injured were brought to the city by the police boat and three men are missing. The dead man's name is Albert H. Cotton of Somerville.

Negotiations have been pending some time for the release of the island by the government to the city as a part of the latter's park system, and although the transfer has not been formally completed the guard over the island has been somewhat relaxed, and as a result numerous clubs and pleasure parties have made use of it, especially on Sundays, the government's only representative there being an ordnance sergeant who has to maintain a watch over the entire island. The fort itself, only a little of which is visible above ground, is of stone, some of the granite blocks being of immense size.

The tremendous force of the explosion is shown by the fact that some of these great blocks were hurled several hundred yards, while one of the largest was sent into the air and came down through the citadel in the centre of the fort, making a hole large enough to drive a team of horses through. All over the island the effects of the explosion are visible, while in East Boston, South Boston and in the city proper the concussion was severe enough to break windows and shake buildings to their foundations.

The powder that exploded consisted of about six tons and was stored in one of the numerous casements that were built under ground around the citadel and which had of late been used as a powder magazine. The other casemates were empty. Each of these apartments was built with granite walls 25 feet thick and covered with earth and masonry to the depth of 35 feet, so that in view of later knowledge as to their position it is difficult to see how the first theory as to the cause of the explosion can be correct, for it would apparently be impossible for fire to have reached the powder by accident from the outside. This leaves the cause of the explosion entirely unexplained.

It is estimated that during the afternoon there were 300 or 400 pleasure seekers on the island and of that number fully 150 were within a radius of 200 yards of the fort. All were covered with dirt and other debris and many were thrown to the ground by the terrific concussion, and that all of them were not killed is considered almost miraculous. Many of those at the farther end of the island were also greatly shocked and several were knocked down but escaped unhurt.

Sergeant Shaw, in charge of the premises, is believed to have been at his quarters at the other end of the island when the explosion occurred, and sustained no injury.

The police boat was returning from its patrol of the harbor at the time and immediately made all speed for the island, where everything possible was done for the dead and injured, bringing all to the city early in the evening.

Sergeant Shaw says he had no idea what caused the explosion. He saw the blast and found Cotton's body with the clothing afire. He said that about 160 persons were on the island at the time. He said that he had had trouble in keeping visitors from meddling with things on the island, and only a week ago a party built a fire close to the magazine.

Governor's island has a varied and interesting history. Though it has been occupied by fortifications more or less for over two centuries, a more violent event than yesterday's never occurred there before.

Through Niagara Rapids

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Charles A. Percy of this city made a trip through the rapids of the lower Niagara river from the Maid of the Mist landing to the Whirlpool yesterday in the air-tight compartment of a boat of his own construction. Cross-currents swung the boat around toward the Canadian shore and for a greater part of the journey the boat swept down the river sideways. Percy was uninjured.

Negro Sold Into Slavery

Shelbyville, Ky., Sept. 8.—Fisher Milton, a negro convicted of vagrancy, was sold into servitude for 12 months Saturday at public auction to David Murphy, a negro farmer. Murphy bid $20 for the prisoner and stated that he was not governed by sentiment in making the purchase, but that he thought he was getting the worth of his money and that he intended to force Milton to work hard.

Lawson Leaves Builders' Hands

Quincy, Mass., Sept. 8.—The seven-masted schooner Thomas W. Lawson sailed from the Fore River Ship and Engine company's works today. Her sails have been fitted, but tugs towed her through the channel to deep water. Outside she will take a trial spin, and then be towed to Boson, where she will be fitted out for coasting.

Bartholin Killed Himself

Chicago, Sept. 8.—The dead body of William Bartholin, murderer of his mother and sweetheart in Chicago, six weeks ago, was found Saturday in a field near Lowther, Ia., 290 miles from Chicago. The hunted fugitive had committed suicide. In the pocket of the man's coat was a letter confessing to the murder of the two women in Chicago.

Major Gardner Returns

San Francisco, Sept. 8.—Major Gardener, who reported that the "water cure" and other forms of torture were used by American soldiers against rebellious natives in the Philippines, has arrived here on the transport Buford. The report was made in December, 1901, while the major was civil governor of the province of Tayabas.

An Unpleasant Situation

Posen, Sept. 8.—The emperor's personal inquiries into the circumstances that aggravate social feeling here will probably result in some measures designed to lessen the local tension. The Poles refuse to transact business with the Germans, and the Germans buy of German shopkeepers only. This boycott of race by race is relentlessly enforced.

Hartford, Sept. 8.—A cablegram was received in this city last night announcing the death in Paris of Miss Bertha M. Waters of Glastonbury, one of the foremost women painters of the American school in Paris. Miss Waters had been ill with typhoid fever. She was 23 years old and was a daughter of Rev. G. F. Waters of Glastonbury.

President Enjoys Southern Hospitality and Visits Battlefields

Chattanooga, Sept. 8.—President Roosevelt was the guest yesterday of the citizens of Chattanooga and right royally they entertained him. He came to Chattanooga primarily to attend the national convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and today he is the guest of the railroad men. From early morning yesterday until late last evening he was taken from one historic place to another and the details of the battles that have made this city famous were explained to him by men who were participants in the struggles.

Unlucky Day For Railroad

Altoona, Pa., Sept. 8.—Five freight wrecks occurred yesterday between Johnstown and Harrisburg on the Pennsylvania road. The first was caused by a runaway freight train crashing into another freight train. Ten cars and the locomotive of the runaway train were broken. A short time later a freight train parted and several cars were wrecked and two men were killed. Later there was a wreck caused by a burned journal and nine cars were destroyed. Shortly afterwards five loaded cars were broken to pieces, the result of a broken wheel. Another wreck occurred at Ryde, and several cars were broken up.

Killed by Trolley Car

Lee, Mass., Sept. 8.—Mrs. Frank Beaudrow, aged 22, was instantly killed Saturday night by being struck by a trolley car, while her mother, Mrs. Michael Bradley, was seriously hurt, yet her injuries are not likely to prove fatal. The women were between Pittsfield and Lee, and in leaving the track of the steam road when a train was near them, they stepped in front of an electric car, which struck them with terrific force. Mrs. Beaudraw died almost instantly. She had been married only one year.

Death of Ex-Senator Roach

New York, Sept. 8.—William N. Roach, who was United States senator from North Dakota from 1893 to 1899, died here yesterday. He had been ill from cancer almost from his coming to this city, where he had made his home after retiring from the senate. Mr. Roach was born in Washington in 1840. He removed to Dakota territory in 1879 and was twice the Democratic nominee for governor, but was defeated on both occasions. Mr. Roach was married for the second time in 1899.

Rioting In Barbadoes

Kingston, Ja., Sept. 8.—There is an epidemic of smallpox at Bridgetown, Barbadoes, and a crowd of 500 persons refused to permit the authorities to remove a smallpox patient from isolation. The police were attacked and stoned and several of them were injured. The riot act was read to the crowd, and the police charged it, when the people fell back cowed. The British cruiser Retribution has left Kingston for Bridgetown.

The Adams reports 49 new D primary pupils; the Coddington, 42; the Quincy, 44; and it is expected that the new D primary pupils in the eleven buildings will aggregate nearly 500. In some cases children were sent home to be vaccinated

IN MEMORIAM.

Beautiful Window Placed in Bethany Church.

Subject for Pastor's Sermon.

Church Doing a Progressive and Uplifting Work.

Last week there was placed in Bethany Congregational church in this city a beautiful memorial window. The donors desire to be unknown, but that is almost impossible. Rev. E. N. Hardy took the window for his theme on Sunday morning and we give his description, and also an abstract of the sermon:

Deut. 4: 9—Only take heed to thyself, and keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life: but teach them thy sons and thy sons' sons.

Ps. 145: 4—One generation shall praise thy works to another, and shall declare thy mighty acts.

On the 16th day of August, seventy years ago, this church was legally organized and officially recognized. It has seemed wise to postpone the formal exercises of an historical nature to the seventy-fifth anniversary. Fortunately, however, this septuagestimal birthday of the church is suitably marked on this communion Sunday by the dedication of a handsome and worthy memorial window. In behalf of the church we accept this suggestive and generous gift, and express our most hearty appreciation for this latest token of sincere affection for this church so repeatedly shown by two members of this household of faith, who abound in good works and would not have the left hand know what the right hand doeth.

Literary exercises and historical celebrations are usually a transitory character. This window is a dignified, worthy and perpetual reminder of the past; a positive encouragement for the present; and by its suggestiveness, a definite and wholesome stimulus for the future. The inscription upon this window, which you will study with delight and with profit memorize, reads as follows: "Remember the days of old—they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth."

Then follow five of the great Christian symbols with well selected scriptural quotations, "The cross, the crown, the hour-glass, the sheaf of wheat, and the anchor."

Following the symbols is the appeal: "Speak unto the children that they go forward."

At the foot of the window in the beautiful panel is the dedication, "In this vineyard are clustered precious memories of faithful ones, who in pulpit, class, choir and pew honored the Master and made this church a power for good in their day and generation."

Beneath this is the final inscription, "In grateful remembrance."

At the top of the window is the date of the church's organization, 1832. No other date is inscribed, consequently the window while fittingly marking the seventieth birthday will be a progressive memorial, comprehending as the years pass those who are now active in the work of the Lord's vineyard. The beauty and significance of this memorial window will be increasingly recognized and appreciated.

The preacher then reminded his hearers of the great danger of forgetting the past with the labors, sacrifices and consecrations of those who have bequeathed to us so rich an heritage. Reference was made to the marble slab in St. Paul's Cathedral with the inscription, "Beneath is buried Christopher Wren, architect of this church and city who lived for more than ninety years, not for himself, but for the public good. Reader if thou seekest his monument, look around."

This edifice is the monument of the self sacrificing gifts of a people small in number and of very modest means. Had they not given with exceeding generosity this commodious building, with its superior equipment would not exist today. For two and more years the place of worship was a small and dingy hall over the old Post office. In 1834 the first church edifice was erected and still stands as Hancock hill.

After repeated enlargements this edifice was abandoned and the present building erected and dedicated in 1871. Many permanent improvements have since been made, the chapel has been rebuilt and enlarged, till few churches outside of our large cities are better equiped for aggressive Christian work. These existing organizations are also monuments of sincerity of purpose, intelligence in service, and longings for the coming of the Kingdom.

The material, though more concrete and tangible, is only one of the many evidences of faithfulness in former workers. The great work of this church has ever been the building of character. It has accepted the Biblical plan and the divine ideal, and throughout the years this church has striven to attain to the fullness of the plan and to realize the ideal. The preacher then enumerated the various forces employed to build character, spoke modestly of the successes of the work, noted the wide catholicity of the church in its fellowship, the staunch adherence to the high standard of the fathers respecting temperance and good citizenship, and the loyalty of the church to the fundamental truths of the spiritual life.

From the work and its character the speaker turned to the workers who have made possible that which we see and enjoy. A fitting tribute was paid to the humble and inconspicuous workers who were "fervent in prayer, faithful in service, lovers of the santuary, leal-hearted to the brethren and loyal to Christ the head of the church." Reference was worthily made to the larger gifts and the generous givers: to the efficient teachers in the Bible school and home circle: to those who have led in the songs of praise: and a final reference to the Rev. Edward Norton, pastor emeritus of the church, "But I am sure that we are all agreed that one name crowns the list of worthies, I need not mention the name of him who for nearly one-third of this period was God's under shepherd here. Whose service has been a blessing to countless worshippers in this house of God and whose presence in the hour of gladness, in the chamber of sickness, in the place of sorrow has been a true benediction from God.

In conclusion the speaker referred to the first sermon preached by Dr. Lyman Beecher from the text, "God is Love," and also from the text of the dedicatory sermon "Be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. The union of the love of God and faithful service has made possible the work of the past and insures the greater work to come.

Found Dead.

Michael Milan, a laborer, was found dead in the boarding house of Mrs. Brown on Washington street this morning. The last time Milan was seen alive was about 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. This morning one of the boarders went to call him. He could not be aroused and further examination showed that he was dead. Heart trouble and excessive use of alcohol is given as the cause of his death.

Milan came into prominence in December, 1898, at which time he was arrested and arraigned in court upon the charged of murdering his wife. Mrs. Milan was found in the front hall of her home off Hancock street, burned to a crisp. At this time it was suspected that the fire, which caused her death, had been started by her husband. A rigid investigation was made, and while the police believed that he had something to do with the affair they were unable to prove conclusively that he was conected with it. He was, however, held for the grand jury which discharged him.

The remains were viewed by Medical Examiner Howe of Cohasset, and then given in charge of Undertaker Hall.

Reception.

One of the swellest of the Wollaston summer functions was the reception given by Mrs. Henry L. Estabrooks, at her beautiful home on Fenno street, Saturday, from 3 until 7. The occasion was partly in honor of Mr. and Mrs. John Estabrooks. Delicious ices were served by McDonald of Boston, on the spacious lawn so well adapted for parties.

Nearly all the society people of Quincy were present. A stringed orchestra rendered delightful music during the fete and the young people participated in a game of archery.

Over 200 attended the picnic of Bethany Bible school at Merrymount park on Saturday. The sports included base ball, tug of war, races, etc. Refreshments were served, and there were amusing peanut scrambles and a general good time.

That John Hancock Lodge of Odd Fellows has a ball team of merit was fully demonstrated Saturday at Merry Mount Park, when it met the team of Standish lodge of Rockland and took them into camp by a large score. The features of the game were the hard hitting of the Wollastonians, the catching of Stevens, and Bean's first base work. For the visitors Shores work at centre, Johnson's hitting, Baker's glove and Capt. Wheeler's work at third base are all worthy of notice. After the game was called on account of supper-time and darkness, line was formed and both teams marched to music to Odd Fellows hall where supper was served to a hundred visiting and local brothers. Cigars and music with graphaphone selections filled out the early part of the evening until leaving time of the visitors train. A royal good time was enjoyed. Next year John Hancock intends to enter the field early in the season and will meet all Odd Fellows who have base ball aspirations.

YACHTING.

The Season of 1902 Closes at Quincy.

An Open Race and Parade.

Quincy Yacht Club Entertain the Association.

The yacht racing season of 1902 came to an end Saturday afternoon with the open race under the auspices of the Quincy Yacht club. Owing to races elsewhere, there were not as many participants, in the several classes as anticipated. Aside from this it was a most successful race. There was all the wind that could be desired and reefs were in order for all of the classes. The wind was from the northeast, and was strong and steady. There were plenty of white caps in the bay and the sea was choppy, yet the conditions were perfect for racing.

The clubhouse piazzas were thronged with visiting yachtsmen and ladies who watched the race with interest, although the chilly wind made overcoats and heavy wraps seem not uncomfortable. Down in the smoking room some thoughtful person built a rousing wood fire in the open fireplace and not a few found this a most comfortable spot.

Up stairs in the hall was the Braintree Orchestral club which gave a concert during the race, and again in the evening. There were fifteen yachts to participate in the four classes that started. Although there were several of the 18-footers and the special one-design class at the float, none of the boats of these two classes started on account of the wind.

Anchored a short distance from the club float was the yacht "Folly", flying the commodore's flag, and on her were the judges and newspaper men. She also displayed all the flags of the international signal code.

Shortly before 1.30 the course numbers 2 and 3 were displayed. The former for the 25-footers, 21-footers and handicap classes, and the latter for the knockabouts. Course 2 gave the boats a beat to the first mark, a broad reach to the second, and a beam reach home. Course 3 gave the boats a beat, a run and a reach home.

The preparatory gun sounded at 1.30, and ten minutes later the 25-footers were sent away. There were but two starters in this class: Sally VI and Chewink. Both did some fine manouvering for the advantage, with the result that when the gun sounded the Chewink was over the line and had to return, thus giving the Sally VI a good lead. After crossing, the Chewink took a berth on the weather quarter of the Sally, but before fairly under way she came about. The Sally followed and the Chewink went under the Sally's stern. Both now took a long tack toward the mouth of Black river. The Sally was the first to tack with the Chewink quite a distance behind. On the next leg to Sheep island, the Sally improved her lead, but turned the red buoy instead of the brush buoy. The Sally went some distance before she discovered her mistake. This gave the Chewink the advantage and she turned the mark with quite a lead. The Sally, however, kept narrowing the lead, so that she was but about 56 seconds behind in crossing the line for the second round. On the second round the Sally again took first place and this time did not make any mistake in turning the buoys. Once in the lead she had things her own way and finished with a good lead.

In the 21-footers the Chloris was the first to cross with the Mildred II second. The Perhaps did not get into line when the gun was fired and she therefore did not go.

The Mildred seemed to have the best of the race at first and kept increasing her lead all the way to the first mark. Then the reaches proved to be just what the Chloris desired, for she kept gaining on the Mildred and when between Peddock's Island and the line she took the lead. The Chloris crossed the line with a slight lead. On the second round the Chloris managed to keep her lead and although the Mildred hung to her in good shape she was 53 seconds behind at the finish.

There were six starters in the knockabout class and they crossed the line in a bunch. The order was Malillian, Kittiwake, Biza, Tokalon, Caprice and Gertrude. Tokalon got a good move on after the start, and began to crawl up near the Malillian. The latter tacked and the others kept the starboard tack which was the better for they caught the tide. The Kittiwake pulled out with a good lead and held it to Jackknife ledge. After rounding she took the proper course and headed for the line, while the balance of the bunch turned Bass rock buoy. This mistake made the lead of the Kittiwake all the more secure and she had things all her own way. On the second round she again followed the sailing directions while the other boats made the same mistake again which carried them quite a distance farther than was necessary.

The handicap class had seven starters and the Marvel won out, although it looked at first as though the Stay King was a sure winner for she had a good lead and was going like a race horse, but she met with an accident which put her out of the race. The race for second place between the Hustler and Argestes was a close and interesting one, but the Hustler managed to win out.

The race of Saturday makes it a close thing between the Sally and Calypso for M. R. A. championship in the 25-footers. Both yachts were in the Marblehead race in the morning and the Sally stole a march by being towed to Quincy for the afternoon race.

The choice for first place in the 21-footers is between the Rooster II and Chloris. The Mililian wins the championship in the knockabouts and the Tunipoo in the raceabout class.

The following is the summary:

The Rendezvous.

Saturday evening sixty-five yachts gathered before dark at the rendezvous off the clubhouse of the Quincy club, and others came in the night, and the bay was full of small craft on Sunday. Not as many as there would have been had Sunday morning been pleasant.

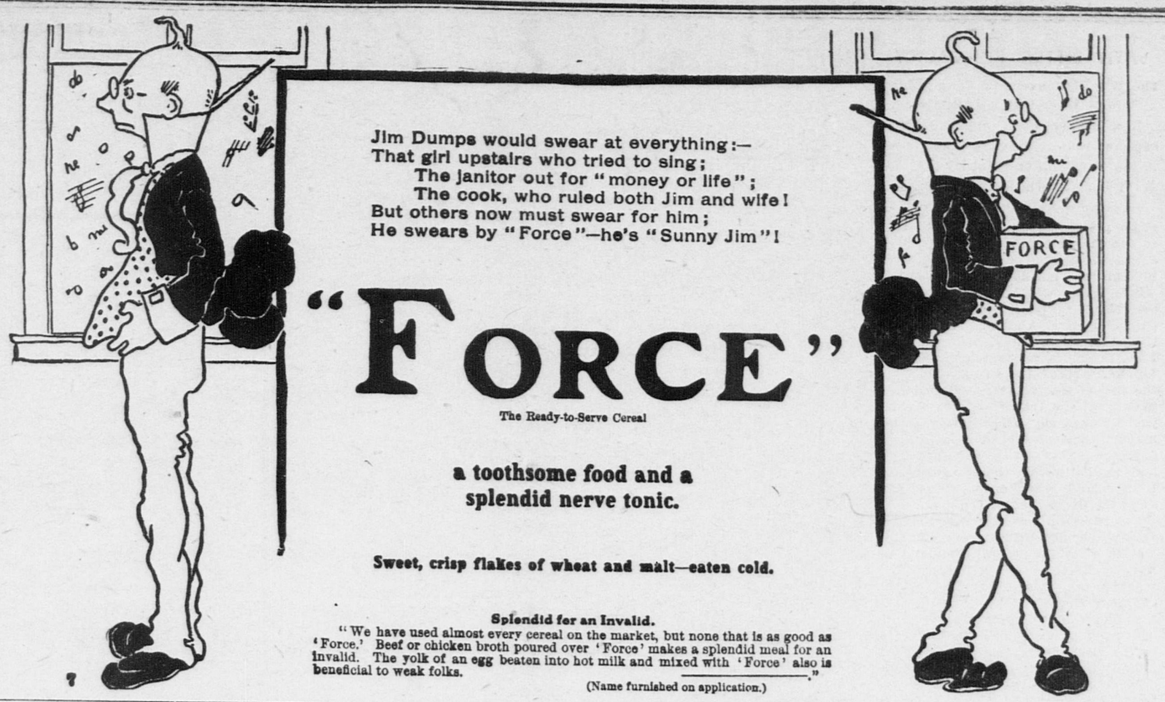
The Quincy club entertained Saturday evening with a concert by the Braintree Orchestral club, which was much enjoyed by a large attendance which included many ladies. Dancing followed the concert, and continued until after 10 o'clock. The commodious hall of the club was not large enough for the large number who desired to dance.

Visiting was general during the morning among the yachts. About noon, the weather cleared and it was almost a perfect afternoon, but rather too breezy for some of the small yachts.

Ship was dressed and a fleet of nearly 100 were ready for the review and parade. The preparatory gun was fired at 2.45 and the boats began to pass in review at 3 o'clock, dipping their ensigns as they passed.

The parade to Boston was a pretty sight, especially from Great Hill, where many people gathered.

The yachtmen were enthusiastic over the hospitalities extended by Commodore Sheppard and members of the Quincy club.



NOT A CONTEST.

Nominations Filed for the Democratic Caucuses.

Nominations of candidates for Representatives to the General Court and delegates to the several conventions to be voted for at the Democratic caucuses, were opened Saturday night. The names of Peter T. Fallon of West Quincy and William J. Collagan of Wollaston are the only two whose names will appear on the ballot for Representatives, and as but two are to be nominated the honor will doubtless fall to them. There is no contest on any of the delegations, but one set of names being in nomination for any of the conventions.

THE LAWSON OFF.

Crowds Along the Fore River to Wish Her God Speed.

For the first time in years the bridge between Quincy Point and North Weymouth is closed to all travel. Work was commenced at midnight Sunday night tearing away on the Weymouth side so that the seven masted schooner Thomas W. Lawson could pass through this afternoon. The place where the bridge is torn away is where the new drawer is to be located. It is expected that by tomorrow morning a foot bridge will have been built so that it will be possible for people to walk across.

The electric cars will not be able to cross for some time. In the mean time passengers will have to walk across.

Today passage from one side to the other is being made by boats. Several young men and women who were fortunate enough to obtain boats are using them as ferry boats. People are taken across for five cents, and a harvest is being reaped.

When a car arrives at the bridge from either Quincy or Weymouth the boatsmen make a rush for the people, and there is quite a lively scene as people are urged to take this or that particular boat. It reminds one of a walk through Salem street, Boston, where passers by are button holed by Hebrews who endeavor to get them into their particular place of business.

At 2 o'clock, with Capt. Cleverly as pilot, the Lawson passed through the Quincy Point bridge. There was a large party aboard, and crowds along the shores of the river.

TODAY'S COURT.

Nicholas Sprunk was fined $5. John Hanson, John T. Haley, Jeremiah Kelley and John J. Feehan $3 each for drunkenness at Quincy.

Thomas H. Hayes was arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy. Case continued until Tuesday.

Andrew F. White was fined $25 for larceny of a piece of canvas at Weymouth.

James McPhee was arraigned for assault on Oscar E. Horte at Quincy and was fined $5.

Frank Capoucha and Frank Dinallo were arraigned for violation of the liquor law at Milton. They were fined $50 each.

Morris L. Cleary and Walter E. Stetson were arraigned for disturbing the peace at Weymouth. They were fined $10 each.

Sunday Fire.

The alarm from Box 28 at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon was for a fire in a small building on the corner of Greenleaf and Valley streets, that had been used by the Metropolitan sewer contractors for a stable. The building which was undoubtedly set on fire was completely destroyed before the department arrived. The loss will not be over $50.

DACKERS—In Quincy, Sept. 6, Mr. Peter W. Dackers, aged 59 years.
Funeral from First Presbyterian Church, Water Street, Tuesday, Sept. 9, at 2.30 P. M. Relatives and friends invited to attend.

BERNI—In Quincy, Sept. 7, Louisa, daughter of Mr. John and Mrs. Antonia Berni of Quarry street, aged 6 years and 2 months.

Prominent at South Quincy.

Peter W. Dackers, a well known resident of Quincy, died Saturday at his residence No. 355 Water street of consumption. For the past three years Mr. Dackers has been employed as a foreman in the Street department, and although in poor health he has been able to be at work up to within a few days. Previous to entering the employ of the city he worked at his trade, that of a stone cutter.

Mr. Dackers had been prominently identified with the Republican party for a number of years, and has served on the Ward Three committee. He was also prominently identified with the affairs of the Water street Presbyterian church. He was a member of Rural lodge of Masons and Clan McGregor, O. S. C. He was 59 years of age and leaves a widow, three sons and a daughter. Funeral services will be held Tuesday from the Water street Presbyterian church.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

CRETE-A-PIERROT SUNK

Haytian Gunboat's Surrender Demanded by Germans

KILLICK ASKED FOR TIME

Then Fired the Vessel, Which Was Later Bombarded Until She Was Immersed—Sequel to the Seizure of a Merchantman's Cargo

Port au Prince, Sept. 8.—The German gunboat Panther arrived here Sept. 5 and received instructions from the German government to capture the Firminist gunboat Crete-a-Pierrot. She left immediately for Gonaives, the seat of the Firminist government. The Panther found the Crete-a-Pierrot in the harbor of Gonaives and the commander of the German gunboat informed Admiral Killick, on the Crete-a-Pierrot, that he must remove his crew and surrender his vessel in five minutes' time. Admiral Killick asked that this time be extended to 15 minutes. This request was granted on the condition that the arms and ammunition on board the Crete-a-Pierrot should be abandoned when her crew left her.

The crew of the Crete-a-Pierrot left that vessel amid great disorder. At the end of 15 minutes the Panther sent a small boat carrying an officer and 20 sailors who were to take possession of the Firminist gunboat. When these men had arrived at a point about 80 yards from the Crete-a-Pierrot, flames were seen to break out on board of her. She had been fired by her crew before they left her. The Panther then fired on the Crete-a-Pierrot until she was immersed. Thirty shots all told were fired.

There is much feeling here against the Firminists, and their cause is considered to be a bad one.

The Crete-a-Pierrot was a steel screw vessel of 950 tons' displacement. She was armed with one 6.2-inch gun; one 4.7-inch, four 3.9-inch, two Maxim machine guns and four Hordenfeld machine guns.

The Crete-a-Pierrot was formerly in the service of the Haytien government and Admiral Killick was commander of the Haytien fleet. Since June 27 the Crete-a-Pierrot has been operating in the interests of General Firmin.

The Panther is a steel cruising vessel of 977 tons' displacement. She is armed with eight 3.4-inch quick firing guns, six 1.4-inch and two machine guns. The Panther left Germany July 29 for the Caribbean sea. Captain Scheder, the newly appointed German commodore on the American station, had an audience with Emperor William to receive special instructions before starting for his post on the Panther.

Admiral Killick recently declared Cape Haytien to be blockaded, but this blockade was admitted to be inefficient and was abandoned by the admiral after Commander McCrea of the U. S. S. Machias had made certain representations to him concerning it. In a letter to the Firminist admiral Commander McCrea informed him that he was charged with the protection of British, French, German, Italian, Spanish, Russian and Cuban interests, as well as those of the United States, and that he would prevent a second bombardment of Cape Haytien without due notice.

When it became apparent that the blockade was ineffectual Commander McCrea proceeded to Cagnette, found the Crete-a-Pierrot in that port and sent Admiral Killick a letter, in which he said that the government of the United States considered the blockade of Cape Haytien not effective even as a "de facto" blockade, and that the United States denied him (Admiral Killick) the right to search or visit any American or foreign vessel attempting entrance to the harbor of Cape Haytien.

To this communication Admiral Killick replied that he appreciated the conditions and admitted the inefficiency of the blockade, which he abandoned. The blockade incident was thus closed, and the Machias sailed Aug. 30 from Gonaives for Boston.

The Crete-a-Pierrot later stopped the German steamer Marcommannia, sent an armed force on board and took possession of the war munitions she carried.

Nothing Official at Washington

Washington, Sept. 8.—So far as can be learned no official news has been received in Washington of the German action with reference to the Crete-a-Pierrot. All the more important officials of the state department are out of the city, so that it is not possible to secure an expression of the probable course of this government in the matter from any one in a position to influence the government's policy. The German embassy is closed and headquarters of the secretaries who have charge of the diplomatic interests of Germany are at Manchester, Mass.

No International Complications

Manchester, Mass., Sept. 8.—Count Isny of the German embassy was seen last night in relation to the sinking of the Crete-a-Pierrot by the Panther. He said that he had not heard of the incident until so informed by The Associated Press, and for this reason he said he was not prepared to make any statement. He did say, however: "While I do not care to make any prediction as to the outcome, I feel perfectly safe in saying that no international complications will arise with this country. This is all I care to say in regard to the affair."

WITH LITTLE FORMALITY

The War Maneuvers In Long Island Sound Were Officially Ended

New London, Conn., Sept. 8.—It was expected that at the close of hostilities in the war game on Saturday that Admiral Higginson's fleet would rendezvous at Newport, the eastern extremity of the prescribed fighting territory, and sail to the western extremity, passing all the forts that had been attacked, but this was not done. Instead of the whole fleet came Admiral Higginson and his flagship Kearsarge, accompanied by the Alabama, Massacausetts and the Indiana. After passing Fort Terry, the fleet ran towards New London harbor. In passing that point the flag of the Kearsarge was dipped to General MacArthur, who was on the yacht Kanawha. The army commander's flag was dipped to the admiral in return. This was the only formality and the battleships then proceeded to Block island, where orders were given as to the disposition of the fleet.

The practical result of the manauvers will be decided by a court of arbitration after the several commanders have made their detailed reports of what has taken place during the periods of preparation and hostilities. The real object of the game was not the gaining of a victory by either the army or the navy, but rather to test to the limit all the appurtenances of war both on land and on sea, and especially to test the strength of the coast defenses against any possible enemy.

Manchester Wins Pennant

Manchester, N. H., Sept. 8.—Manchester wins the New England league pennant this year and Saturday night the team was tendered a banquet by the Manchester Baseball association. The standing for 1902 follows:

Operatives Show Good Faith

North Brookfield, Mass., Sept. 8.—The operatives formerly employed in the E. & A. H. Batcheller Shoe company, which closed last March, met yesterday and signed a petition stating that if the company would start up business again in this town the operatives would cause no labor troubles and would work for reasonable wages. This is to offset reports that the company could not do business owing to labor troubles in the town, and the operatives wish to show the company their good faith.

Explosion In Fruit Store

Salem, Mass., Sept. 8.—Gas coming in contact with a lighted match caused an explosion in a fruit store here last night and Murial Fossa and John Carboni were badly burned about the head and face and the entire front of the building was blown out. Fossa and Carboni had been away all day, and when they got back went into the store where one of them lighted a match and the explosion followed. It is thought that one of the gas jets leaked.

Family Jar Ends In Shooting

Brookline, Mass., Sept. 8.—Family troubles, it is said, led to the probably fatal shooting of John C. Lehnemann, aged 50, by his son-in-law, James C. Duane, last night at 30 Bowker street, where both resided. Duane, who is 26 years old, was arrested. It is understood that there was some trouble at the house earlier in the evening. An officer was sent there at that time, but he was not needed.

No Concessions to Weavers

Woonsocket, R. I., Sept. 8.—The striking weavers of the Saranac mills of the American Woolen company at Blackstone held a meeting yesterday to receive a report of the committee which recently waited upon Agent Merrill. Merrill said that he had places for 40 weavers, but would make no concessions as to wages or time. The weavers then voted to remain out.

Shot by Companion

Seabrook, N. H., Sept. 8.—Fred Bragg was accidentally shot by Fred Brown and the physician fears that Bragg cannot survive his injuries. The two men were engaged in shooting at objects thrown into the air, when Brown's gun prematurely discharged. Brown will not be arrested, as the wounded man stated that the shooting was unintentional.

Little One Burned to Death

Fall River, Mass., Sept. 8.—As a result of the overturning of a lighted kerosene lamp at the home of Joseph LaFleur his 6-year-old daughter Regina was so badly burned that she died. Her mother and older sister were also very seriously burned, resulting from an attempt to save the child's life.

Held on Vagrancy Charge

Cornish, Me., Sept. 8.—Isaac Douglass, the tramp, was given 30 days in the county jail for vagrancy. He was taken to Saco to be photographed and then removed to Alfred. The authorities are holding Douglass while looking up evidence in the Olive Broad murder case.

Best's End Approaches

Boston, Sept. 8.—John C. Best will be electrocuted at the Charlestown state prison during this week. Best was convicted of killing his employer, George E. Bailey, at Saugus on Oct. 8, 1900. Physically Best is in as good condition as can be expected.

Determined to Hold Out

Providence, Sept. 8.—By a vote of 100 to 27 the striking weavers of the American Woolen company decided to continue their battle against the two loom system at a meeting held yesterday.

CHOICE OF SHERIFFS

The Chief Feature of Today's Elections In Maine

LODGE SPEAKS AT PORTLAND

Declares That Trusts Are a Necessity In Economies—Advises Supervision by the Government as the First Step, to Be Followed by Publicity

Portland, Me., Sept. 8.—After one of the most peculiar political campaigns in the history of the state, the battle of ballots begun with the opening of the polls today. The campaign officially closed Saturday night with a series of rallies in various sections of the state, but in reality it was late last night before the last gun was fired. In counties where the main issue is the enforcement of the prohibitory law many clergymen yesterday took advantage of the opportunity afforded them to speak from their pulpits upon that subject, and the professional politicians continued their work with unabated vigor, but in a quiet way.

The real interest centered in the choice of sheriffs in the counties of Cumberland, York, Androscoggin and Hancock.

In all four of these counties the real issue is the liquor law. In three of the four clergymen are among the leading candidates.

There is little to indicate what the outcome will be. The supporters of the several candidates seem as confident as ever that their man will be successful, but in nearly every case it is admitted on all sides that theresult will be close.

There was a big rally at Portland Saturday night and Senator Lodge was the principal speaker.

He said that the subject most in the minds of men was popularly known as the question of trusts. He said that the technical term of trust did not apply today to any of the great corporations or combinations that pass under that name. He said that corporations in this country for the most part perform a useful part in our business life, and that to 95 percent of them there was not the least objection. To undertake to destroy them by rash legislation, he said, would bring on at the present time the most disastrous panic throughout the business world and throughout the country that could be imagined.

He said that undoubtedly the great combinations present certain dangers and certain evils and that the difficulty is to distinguish among the corporations. Senator Lodge described the competition on the ocean and in railroad transportation, and how it has led to great development, resulting in making the United States the cheapest and most efficient and most economic nation in the world in these great problems.

He said that the evils of the trust can be easily numerated. First, and most serious, is that there is a great popular suspicion about them, and another is that a corporation incorporated in one state and doing business somewhere else has escaped the control of its creator. Great privileges are conferred upon corporations and these oftentimes relieve from personal liability their directors and stockholders. He said that somewhere there ought to be some means of controlling what it creates. He said this was an evil because under this government he did not believe that anything, a creature of the government, should be beyond the government's control. He said that another evil is demonstrated by the doctrines of political economy, and that is the interest of the trust in decreasing prices so far as they can and operate at the least margin of profit, and the result oftentimes has been that in seeking to secure complete control they have raised prices artificially.

He said that there had been schemes proposed to solve the trust question, and chief of these has been the idea of legislation. Reckless legislation would be destructive to prosperity. Another solution proposed is that of sweeping away the tariff duties on any articles that any trust makes. He said that sounds simple, and would be punitive, no doubt. The utmost it could do would be to reduce profit. Some trusts would suffer and Senator Lodge said that he would like to see the meat trust punished that way. He said that the steel trust is organized to compete in every market in the world, while many other companies, having been built up under the protective tariff, would be dealt a death blow should the tariff be removed. You may reduce the profits of the steel trust, he said, but you leave it master of the field. If you took off the duty on woolen, the woolen trust probably would close every one of its mills in the country.

He thought that the method of regulating trusts by putting them into the control of the public through the government is the silliest remedy ever suggested. He thought the first remedy is supervision and publicity, and the latter is the first thing to seek. In this connection, Senator Lodge referred to the suits against the railroad merger, and the injunction against the beef trust.

In conclusion he said that this country wants to retain prosperity, and at the same time meet the question of trusts. He said that some means must be found to bring them within the law not to ruin them, but to regulate them, to make the public understand them, to remove the mystery and the discontent.

AUDIENCE APPLAUDED

Noted Minister's Denunciation of Baptismal Regeneration

New York, Sept. 8.—Rev. Dr. R. S. MacArthur, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, at the 100th meeting in the "Evangel" tent yesterday assailed the doctrine of baptism. He declared that the dropping of water on an infant at birth was heathenism and that the idea that God would forever condemn an innocent but unbaptised babe makes Him a tyrant, a monster and a demon. Dr. MacArthur's utterance had a wonderful effect on the audience. They rose to their feet and applauded wildly.

"Baptism," he declared, "never saved a human soul. The doctrine of baptismal regeneration is both unreasonable and unscriptural. The superstitions that have gathered about infant baptism form one of the saddest chapters in church history. Thousands through all the ages have believed that a child dying without being baptised was eternally lost. This dark and dreary superstition has cast a gloom over the history of the church for centuries.

"This doctrine is heathenism pure and simple. The idea that God would forever condemn an innocent babe because someone had not put a few drops of water on its head and face makes God a tyrant, a monster and a demon.

"This doctrine of baptismal regeneration makes the minister of religion a worker of magic, a fakir, a performer of ecclesiastical miracles. Such teaching is a violation of all sound reason and true scripture teaching."

Bodies Came In Special Chapel

New York, Sept. 8.—In a specially constructed mortuary chapel, on the upper deck of the steamship St. Louis, which reached her dock yesterday, were the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Fair, victims of an automobile accident in France. The chapel was draped heavily in black, and rare floral offerings were banked around the bier in great profusion. The caskets were consigned to Hermann Oelrichs. They left for the west in a palace car, which was attached to the Chicago special that left at 6 p. m. It was not known to the passengers of the ship that the bodies were on board until noon on Friday.

Policeman's Eye and Teeth Gone

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 8.—At Edwardville, last night, Hiram Fisher, a coal and iron policeman, was on his way home when he was held up by some striking miners. It is alleged that the strikers threatened Fisher's life, when he fired two shots, one of which slightly injured a Polish woman. Fisher was then knocked to the ground and beaten in a terrible manner. All his teeth were knocked out and one eye was gouged out. Some English-speaking miners finally came to the man's rescue.

Minister's Side Got Worst of It

Durant, I. T., Sept. 8.—A battle was fought about 10 miles east of here last night between Rev. W. F. Whaley and his two sons on one side, and J. H. and J. A. Richardson and their brother-in-law, Mr. Wattenberger, on the other, in which the elder Whaley was killed, one son had both arms torn to pieces, and J. A. Richardson received a severe wound. Trouble between the two families culminated when the parties met on the highway.

Maneuvers on Large Scale

Frankfort-on-Oder, Sept. 8.—In preparation for the autumn maneuvers, which begin tomorrow, 92,000 troops are spreading over the countryside in two armies. One is marching to the eastward from here by various parallel roads, while the other is marching westward from Posen. The operations now beginning will be extended over a territory which is 30 miles wide and 50 miles long.

Russia Intimidates Turkey

Constantinople, Sept. 8.—Russia has refused to accept the declination of the porte to allow four unarmed Russian torpedo boats to pass through the Dardanelles under a commercial flag, and has addressed a note to the Turkish authorities insisting that the boats be allowed to go through. The porte, it is expected, will appeal to the powers in the matter.

Crisis Near In Mindanao

Manila, Sept. 8.—Captain Pershing, who is in command of the American force at Camp Vicars, Mindanao, reports that several of the Moro chiefs whose followers have attacked American soldiers have rejected all friendly overtures. This will probably bring on a crisis in the Moro situation.

Arrow's Fast Time

New York, Sept. 8.—The steam yacht Arrow, owned by Charles R. Flint, in a speed test at Irvington-on-the-Hudson, covered a knot in 1 minute, 32 seconds, beating all previous records. This is equal to a land mile in 1 minute, 19 seconds.

Old Vesuvius Wakes Up

London, Sept. 8.—A special dispatch from Naples says large volumes of flame were issuing from the crater of Mount Vesuvius Saturday evening.

Cleaning Carpets

Isn't pleasant work, no one cares to do it at home, and even if they do try, it's almost impossible to beat out all of the dirt.

Now, cleaning carpets is part of our business, we like to do it, not by hand though, for our steam carpet beating does the work neater and better than the hands of any man can do.

Carpets taken up, cleaned and relaid.

WITH AIR OF COOLNESS

Best Went to His Doom In the Electric Chair

EVEN ASSISTED GUARDS

In the Work of Confining His Hands and Legs—Left Long Letter to Relatives, the Contents of Which Are Not Known—Story of His Crime

Boston, Sept. 9.—John C. Best was put to death by electricity this morning at Charlestown state prison at 12:22 o'clock, paying the supreme penalty of the law for the murder of George E. Bailey of Saugus on Oct. 8, 1900. He maintained the air of coolness, and even indifference, which has marked his conduct since his arrest, to the last. He walked to the chair unassisted and without even being held by the guards in attendance; sat down as composedly as one would wait for a train at a station; assisted the guards even in the operation of confining his hands and legs, and awaited the shock of the current in perfect composure. He had no word to say at the end, uttered no groan during his trying ordeal, and was pronounced dead by the attending physicians at 12:27 a. m.

Rev. Mr. Mellish, Best's advisor, has a long letter to Best's relatives, entrusted to him, the contents of which he was not at liberty to divulge in anticipation of its delivery, and would not say whether or not it contained a confession of the crime.

The clergyman says that he believes Best died a good Christian. He was courageous to the last, spoke cheerfully and hopefully of his future, hoped to be forgiven for any wrongs he had done, and appeared to be as well prepared for death as a man could be.

He was notified late in the afternoon that the time had come for him to prepare for the final execution of the death sentence. This announcement was received as he has received all the announcements whatever of tragic import during his imprisonment, with perfect composure. He talked with the prison officials cheerfully during the day, among whom had grown a certain amount of liking for the prisoner, who had impressed them as being a man of unusual intelligence for a man in his position. His health was of the best to the very last, and his step as springy as could have been desired under any circumstances, as he walked to the lethal chair.

The application of the electric current made less physical disturbance than usual, according to the statements of the prison officials, all of whom agreed that the execution was a remarkable success from a professional point of view.

The electrician explained that his current used 120 alternations to the second, and he firmly believed that death ensued after one alternation—a period of 1-120th of a second after the first turn of the current. There was no mark on Best's body after the execution.

The crime for which John C. Best suffered death was the particularly atrocious murder on Oct. 8, 1900, of his employer and supposed rival, George E. Bailey, manager of a Saugus farm, and whose dismembered body was found in two separate sacks, floating in a nearby pond, about 10 days later.

A searching investigation disclosed the fact that Best had had a quarrel with Bailey over a woman, who left the farm two weeks before the disappearance of Bailey. The arrest and conviction of Best followed, although the evidence in the case was in a great measure circumstantial. A strong effort was made to have the verdict set aside on the ground that one of the jurors was deaf, but the supreme court and subsequently the governor refused to entertain the claim.

The discovery of a portion of Bailey's remains in Floating Bridge pond caused tremendous excitement in the nearby cities of Lynn and Salem, and a large crowd watched the search and recovery of the remaining portion of the body, a few days later. So far as known Best never confessed to the crime, and during his last days was particularly bitter and resentful. It is believed that he waylaid Bailey, while the latter was returning home late at night, and that the murder was committed on the farm, Best subsequently cutting up the body and sinking it in the pond.

Cargo of Mutton Condemned

London, Sept. 9.—The carcasses of 38,000 New Zealand sheep brought by steamer have been consigned to the sea as unfit for human food. On the arrival of the vessel at London the mutton was in such a shocking condition that the authorities ordered the ship to go to sea and throw overboard her entire cargo.

BRIBERY CONFESSED

St Louis City Officials Had a Pot of $75,000 to Divide Up

St. Louis, Sept. 9.—J. K. Murrell, formerly a member of the lower house of the municipal assembly of this city, and who fled to Mexico last spring after being indicted for bribery in connection with the alleged boodling operations of that body in relation to the granting of street railway franchises, has returned to the city and was taken before the grand jury yesterday. Warrants have been issued for the arrest of 18 former and present members of the house of delegates, all of whom are charged with bribery, and 15 of them are charged with perjury in having given false testimony before the grand jury several months ago.

In a statement made by Murrell for publication, he says: "I have surrendered unconditionally to the circuit attorney and have made a full confession to him. I held the key to the box in the Lincoln Trust company containing the $75,000 bribe money to go to the house of delegates upon the passage of the suburban bill. This money was put up as the purchase price for the votes of the combine.

"The combine of the house of delegates was composed of 19 men. When the suburban matter came up before the combination I was selected to negotiate with the representative of the suburban railway as to the best price we could get for our votes upon the passage of the bill. The purpose of the combine was to control legislation and sell legislation for the benefit of the members. Shortly before the suburban bill came up, the combine sold their votes on the lighting bills for $47,500. Each member of the combine received $2500. These are only two instances, but there are others."

A sensation was caused by the issuance of bench warrants for the arrest of 18 members and former members of the house of delegates on the confession of Murrell.

A Mystery of the Deep

Baltimore, Sept. 9.—Captain Delano of the steamer Chesapeake, which arrived here yesterday from New York, reports that on Sunday, when 10 miles southeast of Fenwick's Island lightship, the Chesapeake ran into water that was blood-red. A layer of what appeared to be lead-colored dust covered the surface of the water for 25 miles. Several bucketfuls were drawn up and each was as deeply colored as the sea had appeared. Bottles were filled with the water. What then puzzled the captain was that the leaden-like dust that covered the sea and apparently floated on the wine-colored water did not float, but mixed with the water and formed a sediment at the bottom of the bottle.

New Cause For Uneasiness

London, Sept. 9.—The Swazis are threatening trouble in South Africa. They are unable to understand that, as a consequence of the conquest of the Transvaal, the administration of Swaizland has passed to the British crown. The Swazis are not to have their independence and there may be some fighting necessary before they recognize British sovereignty. The population of Swaziland is about 70,000.

Chicago Strikers Win

Chicago, Sept. 9.—Eight hundred cement finishers and helpers who have been on strike here because of a disagreement over the wage scale called the strike off yesterday and went back to work. The Employers' association met the demands of the workmen.

Get Only Good Will

London, Sept. 9.—Brussels telegrams state that the demands of the Boer generals have been rejected by Mr. Chamberlain, and that on Saturday General Botha received merely polite assurances of the colonial secretary's good will.

Czarina Out of Danger

St. Petersburg, Sept. 9.—It is officially announced that the czarina has passed the critical period of her recent miscarriage. Her case is without complications, and she is progressing towards complete recovery.

NEWS IN BRIEF

John W. Baer, who has been secretary of the Christian Endeavor society for the last 12 years, has left Boston on his last official trip, and will be present at farewell meetings in the west.

"Pedlar" Palmer, English, defeated George Dixon, American, in a 15-round bout at London for $500 a side and a purse of $500.

Daniel Waggoner, the "cattle king" of Texas, whose fortune is said to be from $6,000,000 to $8,000,000, is dead. He was a native of Tennessee, was 76 years old, and had lived in Texas since 1854, when he started as a farmhand.

Frank Tousey, a well known publisher, founder of Judge, died in New York from pleurisy. He was born in Brooklyn in 1853, and started in the publishing business in 1872.

George P. Prentiss, pitcher for the Boston American league baseball team, died at his home at Wilmington, Del., of typhoid fever. He was 26 years old.

General O'Reilly, who succeeds General Forwood as surgeon general of the army, has entered formally on the discharge of the duties of his new office.

The National Candy company, with an authorized capital stock of $9,000,000, has been incorporated in New Jersey and has filed its articles of incorporation.

THE ELECTION IN MAINE.

Handsome Pluralities for Republican Candidates for Governor and Congressmen---Pennell Elected Sheriff.

Portland, Me., Sept. 9.—The election in Maine yesterday resulted in general as follows:

For governor, John F. Hill of Augusta was elected with a plurality of 29,000, as estimated upon returns from 250 towns, a loss of 15 percent from his last vote. The four congressmen, Amos L. Allen, Charles E. Littlefield, Edwin C. Burleigh and Llewellyn Powers were re-elected, with a tendency to decreased pluralities, which was most marked in the case of Congressman Allen, where the Democrats, led by Seth C. Gordon, made heavy inroads into the Republican strength.

The legislature, while as usual preponderantly Republican, will have an uncommon number of Democratic members, some of the strongest Republican towns of the state electing representatives of the Democracy.

The senate will have one Democrat in 31 members, L. M. Staples of Knox county, but in the house there will be a division of rather greater proportions than usual, the complexion of this body being almost invariably Republican. It is believed, from nearly complete returns, that the house will have 20 to 25 Democrats out of a total of about 140 members. Portland breaks a long record by electing one Democrat out of her seven representatives, one Republican being heavily cut by his party.

A feature is the election of Pennell, the Democratic nominee, as sheriff of Cumberland county, to succeed the late Rev. Samuel F. Pearson.

Where Sheriff Pearson's plurality was only 463 two years ago, that of Sheriff-elect Pennell is about 1000 in the city and 2000 in the whole county.

In Knox county the Democrats made practically a clean sweep, electing their candidate for senator and five out of seven representatives to the legislature.

In Waterville also the Democrats carried their ticket to victory, turning a Republican plurality of 120 two years ago into a Democratic plurality of 85 this year. At Lewiston, where Governor Hill had a plurality of 537 two years ago, Gould yesterday had a plurality of 74. South Thomaston, which gave a small plurality for Hill two years ago, gave neither candidate for governor the advantage yesterday, the vote being 128 each for Hill and Gould. Among the other turnovers were South Berwick and Warren, which went for Hill yesterday. Each gave Lord a slight plurality in 1900.

A feature of the election was the strong showing made by the Socialists at Bath, where that party registered more than 300 votes.

The general election was marked by good weather, quietude at the polls and an uncommonly large number of irregular ballots. The latter was the leading feature of the day. Never before in the history of the Australian ballot system in Maine has so much cutting been done.

In at least four of the big counties of the state—Cumberland, Androscoggin, York and Hancock—there were contests for the sheriff election based on local differences relative to the enforcement of the prohibitory law, but in other sections there was little to bring out a full party vote.

Devery Refuses to Withdraw

New York, Sept. 9.—The Times says that John F. Carroll and John B. Sexton, the Tammany leaders, Frank Farrell, a personal representative of ex-Governor Hill, and other influential Democrats, had a long conference with Devery, in which they urged him to withdraw from the contest for the Tammany leadership in the Ninth district. Devery ignored the requests and said he was in the race to stay. "There ain't no Democratic party in the ninth," he is reported as saying. "I represent the Bill Devery party, and that party don't quit for no one. No, not for me own mother."

South Carolina Elections

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 9.—The second primary election being held today will decide who will be the United States senator to succeed McLaurin and the next governor. Evans and Latimer, who make the final contest for the senate, have been going a tremendous amount of work, and it is generally conceded the vote will be close. Heyward and Talbert make the race for governor. Odds appear to be in Heyward's favor.

Seeks Congressional Honors

Cincinnati, Sept. 9.—The Times-Star announces that Murat Halsted, the veteran editor and author, is a candidate for the Republican nomination for congress in the district represented in the last three congresses by Jacob H. Bromwell.

Bryan In the Harness

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 9.—W. J. Bryan began yesterday a speech-making tour which will continue with little interruption until the November elections.

Snow on Lake Superior

Duluth, Sept. 9.—Masters of incoming vessels at this port report flurries of snow on Lake Superior yesterday, the first of the season.

Insurgent Attack Imminent

Colon, Sept. 9.—Over 1000 government troops were hurriedly sent to Colon from Panama Sunday afternoon and additional intrenchments are being erected at Monkey Hill, a mile from Colon on the railroad, and other points, in expectation of an insurgent attack. The gunboat Boyaca, which was captured by the insurgents from the government, has been seen mobilizing troops under the command of the insurgent general, Herrera, in the direction of Panama.

Lipton Challenge Coming Soon

New York, Sept. 9.—Members of the New York Yacht club are not surprised at the receipt of the news that Sir Thomas Lipton is almost ready to challenge again. They say they expect a challenge soon and think it likely that Lipton will not be long in making it, owing to his known desire for early racing.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. For sale by all Druggest.

Good Afternoon

Maine has been heard from and will not afford the Democrats much foundation for great hopes. While the Republican pluralities are slightly reduced, it should be remembered that 1900 was Presidential year.

Wonder if the navy could help Quincy any in "downing" the school army. Over one-fifth of the population of the city are in the public schools and some strategic financiering is necessary to give them all a good education. However, Quincy provides buildings for all who apply for entrance to her schools which is more than many cities do. Up to the present time the city cannot be charged with erecting extravagant buildings.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ "By engaging in joint debate, just once, for money, Messrs. Theodore Roosevelt and William Jennings Bryan could raise enough money to rescue Major Pond from the perilous financial plight into which the proceedings subsequent to the ransom of Miss Ellen M. Stone have placed him. Just once, boys, for the gallant Major!" appeals the Providence Telegram.

☞ If it is true that a simple word from Mr. Morgan would end this strike, then we have a dangerous demonstration of the one-man power If these corporations continue the policy employed in the coal controversy, they will work more damage to capitalistic enterprise than the socialistic and Bryanite propaganda could accomplish in a generation. Nothing has happened in the last quarter of a century calculated to inspire the conservative public with the idea of public ownership as the short sighted, uneconomic policy and anti-public spirit shown by the corporations in this coal strike. By their arrogant folly, they are laying the foundation for their own destruction—Gunton's Magazine.

Merrymount Golf.

The Merrymount golf course was the scene Saturday of two tournaments, the qualifying event for the caddies in the morning and a stroke competition for club members in the afternoon. Although none of the best players entered, some very good scores were made, H. N. Raymond led with best gross and net scores as will be seen by summary:

	Gross.	Handicap.	Net.
H. N. Raymond,	83	11	72
J. H. Symonds,	85	10	75
W. G. Clark,	88	12	76
C. F. Moore,	91	14	77
G. L. Cole,	90	9	81
J. E. McLaughlin,	95	8	87
J. H. Brown,	103	15	88

For the caddies Hoxie and Cox led as both equalled 89 while 122 qualified. Those to qualify were: Albert Hoxie 89, Willie Cox 89, Clarence Loud 92, Ralph Thomas 95, Charlie Campbell 96, Chester Barlow 97, Frank Hoyt 99, John Hamilton 100, H. E. Kingsley 100, Clifford Farrington 103, Harry Campbell 104, John Dineen 106, Charles Kolstadt 109, Harold Tuck 113, Frank Synder 115, W. W. Osborn 116, Eugene Saunders 118, B. S. Lupton 122.

FORMER RECTOR.

Invited to Return to This City.

Call to Rev. H. Evan Cotton.

Unanimously Extended by the Christ Church Parish.

The parish of Christ church held a largely attended meeting Monday and extended a unanimous call to Rev. H. Evan Cotton of Hagerstown, Md., to become rector.

Rev. Mr. Cotton was rector of this church for several years, and during the past summer has supplied the pulpit a few Sundays, during the sojourn of his family on the South Shore.

Mr. Cotton became rector of Christ church in 1881 and continued until 1893, when he went to the large and influential church at Hagerstown. While in this city he was not only a successful rector but took an interest in city affairs, and was particularly prominent in the organization of the Woodward Institute,

Since leaving Quincy his wife who was with him here has died and he has married again. In 1898 Mr. Cotton presented Christ church with a memorial litany desk to Mrs. Cotton, who was held in high esteem here.

Many Quincy people outside of Christ church have been interested in having Rev. Mr. Cotton return, and the parish is unanimous as was shown by the vote.

The New Bridge.

The new Quincy Point bridge, says the Globe, with a length of about 660 feet, will be one of the longest in Massachusetts, and the draw openings will be equalled only by that of the bridge at New London. The draw span will be 258 feet long and 40 feet high, and when swung at right angles will have two openings of 100 feet each. It will rest on a turntable designed to be operated either by hand or electric power.

There will be six approach spans each 68 feet long, two spans being on the Quincy side of the draw and four on the Weymouth side. The bridge will be wide enough for a 30-foot roadway and a five-foot sidewalk, the street railroad track running along the south side of the bridge.

Masonary will be used in the construction of the centre pier, but for the other span large steel cylinders, seven feet in diameter, will be placed on sunken piles and filled with concrete, which in a few days will be as hard as granite, so that in effect the bridge will rest upon monoliths of enormous strength.

Some of the oak piles which, according to tradition, date back to the original bridge erected nearly 100 years ago, were found to be perfectly sound below the water level, while more recent piling was almost rotted away.

The seven-master Thomas W. Lawson was successfully piloted to Nantasket roads yesterday and took a trial spin today.

Very little interest is being taken in putting in nominations for the Republican caucuses. In some words last night, the opening date, no papers were filed.

DANGEROUS GANG.

Terrorize Neighbors and Assault Officer, but Come to Grief.

Officer Patrick J. Bradley had a tussle with two men on Gass place shortly after 1 o'clock this morning, and before it ended he had his head split open with a rock and he had put two shots into the body of John Bjornson. One passed near his left lung and the second buried itself in his stomach.

Bjornson is now at the City Hospital and August Peterson who was with him is locked up on the charge of assault on an officer.

Officer Bradley received a ragged and deep cut on the head and while considerably used up, was able to appear in court this morning.

The officer's story of the affair is: About 12.45 this morning Joseph McLaughlin and John Clare came to City Square and told him two men had attacked him on Granite street under the railroad bridge. McLaughlin said the men punched him and threw him into the street and that he was afraid to go home alone. The officer told them that it was probably all right then and to go home, and that after he had gone to the doctor's with a woman he would come up.

Shortly after the men met the officer again and said that their assailants were at the corner of Granite and Whitwell streets waiting for them. The officer then started home with McLaughlin. They went up Whitwell street and crossed over to Gass place. They were now near McLaughlin's home and the officer left them. He had not gone far before he heard McLaughlin cry for help. It was very dark and as the officer ran back he shouted that if they did not keep quiet he would arrest them. McLaughlin said the two men were under a tree waiting for him. Just then the rocks began to fly and directly upon that officer Bradley received a savage blow on the head which cut him to the bone. The officer was dazed for a minute. Then he drew his revolver and fired four shots, two of them entered Bjornson. The offices was weak from the loss of blood and was taken into a house. Dr. Dion was called and dressed the wound.

McLaughlin's brother then went to the police station for aid. While he was telling Capt. Hanson the story the ambulance call came in. Bjornson and Peterson were found in a house on Parker street. Jorbson was taken to the Hospital and Peterson to the police station.

This morning upon searching the locality of this morning's affair a handerchief covered with blood was found, and it was evident that this had enclosed the rock with which Officer Bradley was cut.

At the City Hospital this noon Bjornson was pronounced out of danger and would recover.

Both Bjornson and Peterson are about 25 years of age, unmarried, and are employed as stonecutters. They board at 3 Gothland street.

Street Railway Has Moved.

The street railway has moved its office from City Square to the new car barn on Hancock street, where they will be located. The last of the office furniture of the company was moved on Monday.

The buildings in City Square, which have been sold to the Quincy Real Estate Trust, will be fitted up for business purposes. It is understood that the office part of the building will be occupied by the Y. M. C. A.

The car barn part of the building will be built out flush with the street and altered over into a large store which will be occupied by W. G. Shaw as a furniture store.

A Good Endorsement.

The Beacon says: "One of the most promising of the young men who are candidates for re-election to the Massachusetts legislature is Mr. John McKnight, of Quincy. Mr. McKnight, a lawyer by profession, gave an excellent account of himself in the house last year, when he was clerk of the insurance committee. He is very progressive in his ideas, a good speaker, and in the two or three times that he addressed the house made an excellent impression. Mr. McKnight is evidently of the stuff of which good legislators are made, and his re-election should be a foregone conclusion.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

CITY BREVITIES.

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Doble are at Poland Springs.

W. H. Gould is at South Hiram, Maine, for two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert F. Doble have returned from Maine.

Miss Carrie Heald of Miller street has gone to Athens, Maine.

The Quincy Point bridge was opened to foot passengers again this morning.

Frank Goldthwait and family of Copeland street have gone to Athens, Me.

Mrs. E. C. Bellows has returned to work after enjoying a two weeks' vacation.

The Unity Circle of King's Daughters will meet this evening at 7.30 o'clock at Bethany Chapel.

Miller Bros. of Quincy are winning all in sight with their White Crested Black Polish Hens, having won three firsts and one second at Worcester fair, also two firsts and two seconds at Marshfield in the hottest of competition.

After a two months' absence Rev. Frank W. Pratt welcomed his congregation at Wollaston, Sunday, it being the opening service of a new season of worship. Although it was stormy it was gratifying to the pastor to see the cheerful faces again.

Because of the absence from town this week of William T. Isaac, the secretary of Ward One Republican Committee, Archie F. MacLeod of 56 Spear street has been elected secretary protem, and all nomination papers for the caucuses should be filed with him.

Long Felt Want Supplied.

The street railway has established a waiting room in City Square. It is located in the large hall at the Hancock street entrance to the Hancock house. The room has been provided with seats, and adjoining it is a room with sanitaries for men and women. In one corner of the main room is the office of the starter which is connected by telephone with the new car barn. The providing of this room fills a long felt want.

Woodward Corps.

The Woodward Institute will reopen on Monday next with the following teachers:

Nellie H. Swift, natural science.

Gertrude C. Schmidt, French and history.

Georgiana C. Lane, art.

Mary C. Fish, physical training, physiology and hygiene.

John D. Buckingham, vocal music.

The Poor Toads.

A not altogether innocent looking snake held an interesting audience on Walker street, Sunday afternoon, by its endeavor to swallow a toad of goodly size. The toad stayed for a half hour partly down the snake's throat, its legs kicking wildly in the air. By degrees those legs were drawn down, until the toad was where Jonah was in the whale. The snake was over two feet long, and had curious markings of yellow on his dark skin. The day being Sunday, his life was spared, and by the aid of a pole, the snake and his toad-dinner were dropped in a neighboring field.

OIL HEATERS FOR COOL EVENINGS.

It's the easiest thing in the world to catch cold while sitting in a chilly room during the early fall months,—before the furnace and other fires are lighted—and a cold often brings on sickness that may take months to get rid of. It's better to be prepared to take care of your health.

Own one of our Oil Heaters and in a twinkling you can take the chill from your room and be comfortable. These heaters are absolutely safe, and a child can take them from one room to another.

PRICES, $2.75 to $5.00.

THE SCHOOL ARMY

Over Five Hundred New D Primary Pupils.

New Class of 250 at the High.

A Remarkable Increase at the Coddington School.

All of the public schools of the city, with the exception of the John Hancock opened Monday. As was anticipated some of the schools are very crowded.

The school that was the worst off is the Quincy school. There are overflow rooms from this building in the Poland block near the Norfolk Downs depot, and it has been necessary to send some of the seventh grade pupils to the Massachusetts Fields school.

At the Wollaston building the first grade is crowded but other than this it is practically the same as last year.

At the Coddington school the fourth grade is very large but the buildings will be able to handle them all without securing more room.

The Washington school has a larger number of pupils this year and it has been found necessary to put in more seats.

The Lincoln and Willard buildings are crowded but they will be able to accommodate all who have reported.

The Gridley Bryant, Cranch and Massachusetts Fields buildings have ample accommodations.

The High school will be very much crowded, and it will be necessary as last year to use the old High building for the business course pupils. There is some doubt whether the two buildings will accommodate all the pupils; they certainly will not do it satisfactorily to superintendent and teachers.

The number of new D primary pupils on the opening day was 407, with some buildings to here from. They were divided as follows:

	1900.	1901.	1902.
Adams,	46	52	49
Coddington,	22	30	50
Cranch,	—	43	26
Gridley Bryant,	20	29	28
John Hancock,	39	42	—
Lincoln,	27	50	—
Mass. Fields,	21	49	41
Quincy,	23	53	44
Washington,	17	32	43
Willard,	49	110	99
Wollaston,	15	38	35
	279	528	407

PARK THEATRE.

The performances of Rosedale given by Corse Payton and his stock company every afternoon and evening at the Park Theatre last week drew large and appreciative audiences. The attraction for the coming week, the fourth at the Park Theatre under Mr. Payton's management, is "The Banker's Daughter," the celebrated drama by Bronson Howard which is always sure of a hearty welcome by theatregoers who are fond of a play wherein emotional episodes and humorous incidents are cleverly woven. Mr. Howard's play is among the most popular in Mr. Payton's repertory, and it will be acted by all the leading members of his company. The scenery and costuming have been specially prepared under Mr. Payton's direct supervision, and a production complete in every respect is promised. It should be remembered that two performancos are given every day in the week at the Park Theatre in the afternoon at two o'clock and in the evening at eight.

TODAY'S COURT.

Thomas H. Hayes was fined $15 for throwing a stone at an electric car, and $5 for drunkenness at Quincy.

August Peterson was arraigned for assault on Officer Patrick J. Bradley. Case continued until Wednesday.

Augustus S. Reynolds, Frank R. Morrison and George Callahan were arraigned for attempting the larceny of a horse at Milton. Case continued until Thursday.

The Chase Cup.

The Neptune was an easy winner of the decisive leg for the Chase cup in the race of the Wollaston Yacht club on Saturday, as will be seen by the summary:

Braintree Man Grand Marshal.

Grand Marshal Mr. Charles G. Whitcomb of South Braintree, who is general manager of the Boston Jewelry Co., has the honor of being appointed grand marshal of the grand lodge of Odd Fellows of Massachusetts. It is the highest office that can be appointed by the grand master. The appointment was made in Boston, Thursday, and a special telephone message to the Observer was immediately bulletined.

At this annual convention there were several members of Puritan lodge, among them Mr. Whitcomb. He was installed into office by Past Grand Sire Pinkington of the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the U. S. We should feel proud to know that Puritan Lodge has a representative of the lodge holding so high a station.

Mr. Whitcomb joined Puritan Lodge, No. 179, I. O. O. F., on or about 1892. Shortly after his initiation he was appointed warden of the lodge and then conductor. He was then elected vice-grand and after serving that term successfully, was promoted one more step in oddfellowship and made noble grand of Puritan lodge.

The last three years he has served as district deputy grand master over the Brockton lodges, which are second to none in this state.

The position of grand marshal is one that is sought for by hundreds each and every year.

Enthusiastic Golf Player.

Among his recent successes very little has been heard of Abner Tabb of Wollaston who is more generally known when associated with the Worcester Tatnuck club, where he was employed for two years as golf instructor, playing many exciting matches. Since his connection with this superb golf course, he has devoted his attention to exhibition matches in and about Massachusetts, many of which have been very successful.

Ever since 1898 he has been ranked a remarkable golfer. His opponents have not always been supernumeraries, but some hard propositions well up in the professional ranks. Before he advanced to the "Tatnuck" he had distinguished himself on the different Cape links, and even in Rhode Island and Connecticut he held up his fame. But aside from these minor clubs he has been deemed a crack player whenever he has visited the Brookline, Springfield, Brockton, Providence, Oakley, Myopia, Montclair Agawaum, Cohasset, and Hull links.

His principal matches have been with Cronin & Leitch of the Worcester and Springfield clubs respectively. Both champions succumbed to him twice. Buxton and Davis prominent in golfing circles suffered a defeat to Tabb in a best half match. He is such a skilful player that he now holds records for the following clubs: Cohasset, Tatnuck, Worcester County club, Brockton and recently Franklin Park and he has even equalled scores on other courses where Vardon, the Nichols brothers, Findlay and Lowe and all the high classed golfers have traversed. His latest match on Aug. 26 was a victory over Dan Leith of Worcester at Providence. At the professional championship this fall, his scores will surely rank among the highest.

AT THE LAUNCH.

Massachusetts Woman to Set the Cruiser Des Moines Free.

As the United States cruiser Des Moines, which is to be sent overboard at the Fore River shipyard on Sept. 20, is the most important war vessel completed in a Massachusetts shipyard since the days of the early American navy, Secretary Moody has designated Miss Clara Carleton of Haverhill to represent the state at the launching ceremonies.

As previously announced, the cruiser will be christened by Miss Elsie Macomber of Des Moines, leaving to Miss Carelton the part of severing the cord which will release the vessel from the block that retains her on the ways.

Miss Carleton is the daughter of G. H. Carleton, formerly mayor of Haverhill, and at present a member of the state legislature, and now a well known official in several Haverhill banks.

Miss Carelton is a graduate of Bradford Academy, and is prominent in society.

END OF WOOLEN STRIKE

Now Thought to Be a Question of but a Short Time

Woonsocket, R. I., Sept. 9.—The weavers of the American Woolen company's Saranac mills at Blackstone, Mass., who went out on strike against the two-loom system in sympathy with the Olneyville weavers, have given up the struggle, and when the mill gates opened this morning there was a stampede for their old places.

This action was decided upon last night, at a meeting of the weavers in Blackstone, when it was voted to return at the best terms Agent Merrill would offer. It is understood that the old weavers will be put to work on light-weights and that they will not be asked to weave heavy-weights.

The action of the Saranac weavers is deemed highly important in mill circles, and is believed to presage the early termination of the strikes that have been in progress for several months past in the mills of the American Woolen company at Plymouth and Fitchburg, Mass., and Olneyville, R. I.

Bay State Socialists' Ticket

Boston, Sept. 9.—For the first time in their political experience the Socialists of Massachusetts held a state convention yesterday as an officially recognized Socialist party, for the purpose of nominating a state ticket to be voted on in November. The ticket: For governor, John C. Chase, Haverhill; lieutenant governor, John Q. Adams, Amesbury; secretary of state, Edward A. Buckland, Holyoke; state treasurer, David Taylor, Boston; state auditor, S. F. Packard, Brockton; attorney general, Charles E. Fenner, Worcester.

A Peculiar Fatality

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 9.—William Hallissey, 20 years old, was killed yesterday while painting the inside of a boiler in one of the dormitories of Harvard university. It is not known exactly how the accident occurred, but it is thought to have been the result of the breaking of the bulb of an incandescent light which he carried inside the boiler with him, thus igniting the paint which he was using.

Hinneman Held For Murder

Boston, Sept. 9.—Charles W. Himmerman, the alleged wife murderer, was arraigned before Judge Dewey yesterday on the charge of murder, and was bound over to await the action of the October grand jury. Himmerman was without counsel and regarded the situation humorously. Himmerman, who had been living apart from his wife, shot her on the street here last Friday.

Pleads Not Guilty of Murder

Brookline, Mass., Sept. 9.—Murder was the charge against James C. Duane when he appeared in court yesterday. John Lehnemann, his father-in-law, whom he shot, died yesterday morning. The prisoner, however, did not learn this fact until the case was called in court and he found the charge against him. He pleaded not guilty, was held without bail, and the case was continued.

Palma Not a Politician

Havana, Sept. 9.—President Palma, speaking yesterday of the movement on foot to have him declare himself for either the Republican or the National party and the leadership of the party with which he identifies himself, said: "It is not my intention to make any arrangement with the political parties represented in congress with the view of obtaining a majority of votes for any measure. I am here to work in the interest of the entire country and not as a leader of political parties."

GUNBOAT WAS A PIRATE

According to Haytien Provisional Government

INTERESTS OF THE ISLAND

Not Disturbed by Germany's Action—England Looks For Controversy—United States Considers It an Incident Not Concerning Us

Berlin, Sept. 9.—The German foreign office reports that the Haytien provisional government has communicated to Germany that Hayti regarded the Firminist gunboat Crete-a-Pierrot as a pirate, and that the interests of Hayti were untouched by the action of the German gunboat Panther in sinking the Crete-a-Pierrot at the entrance of the harbor of Gonaives.

British Press Comment

London, Sept. 9.—A few of the newspapers in commenting on the subject seem to anticipate that the sinking of the Firminist gunboat Crete-a-Pierrot by the German gunboat Panther may prove controversial.

The Daily Telegraph says there is no doubt that Germany was perfectly within the legal rights in sinking the Crete-a-Pierrot, but it is impossible to overlook the danger that some similar incident in the future may drop the spark into the magazine of the Monroe doctrine.

The Telegraph holds that the precedent established by this vigorous application of the "mailed fist," if followed, cannot fail to bring about a situation of perilous tension. The strict principles, the paper says, with which American statesmen regard Monroeism is one thing; the susceptibilities of the American people is another. The latter might become excited where the former were not technically contravened by an incident such as the sinking of the Crete-a-Pierrot.

The Standard says: "Germany has resented interference with her commerce by the anarchical West Indian blacks and has performed a very regular and commonplace action with the maximum of emphasis, and that is all."

The Morning Post says the incident is particularly valuable as introducing some necessary limitations to Monroeism, as set forth by President Roosevelt, and asks: "If the punitive process should involve the occupation of territory for its purposes, what would be the attitude of the United States?"

So summary a revenge for a breach of international courtesy, says the St. James Gazette, is like breaking the frailest butterfly on the largest wheel. Supposing the butterfly's big neighbor takes a hand in the game, matters may become almost serious.

The Westminster Gazette holds that "nothing in Monroeism prevents a big continental power from boxing the ears of a troublesome boy on the other hemisphere, so long as the big boy does not proceed to eat or otherwise annex the small one."

United States Not Interested

Washington, Sept. 9.—Mr. Powell, the United States minister to Hayti, reported promptly to the state department the sinking of the Haytien gunboat Crete-a-Pierrot by the German gunboat Panther. The navy department also was informed of the event in a dispatch received from Commander McLean in command of the United States cruiser Cincinnati at Port au Prince. As matters stand, there is nothing to be done by the state department at this juncture. The officials have not changed their view that the incident was one between the German and Haytien governments, and that it was not our business. On the whole it is felt that the termination of Killick's career in summary fashion may have a salutatory effect, not only in Hayti, but also in South and Central American countries where heretofore the slightest revolutionary disturbance has been made the pretext for vexatious and expensive interference with foreign merchant vessels.

Raking In Firminites

Port au Prince, Sept. 9.—The government began yesterday to arrest the partisans of General Firmin, the revolutionary candidate for the presidency of Hayti.

Albanians Inviting Trouble

Belgrade, Sept. 9.—A quantity of household goods sent by the councillor of the Russian embassy from Constantinople for the purpose of establishing a Russian consulate at Mitrovitza has been seized outside of Mitrovitza by Albanians. The Russian officers in charge of the goods were conducted to Uskub after their effects had been confiscated. The Albanians of Mitrovitza declare they will not allow the consulate to be opened.

Trying to Influence Guidi

Rome, Sept. 9.—Strenuous efforts are being made by the generals of the religious orders, supported by several cardinals, to influence Mgr. Guidi, the newly appointed apostolic delegate to the Philippines, before his departure for his post, so that when he arrives in the islands he will be as much in favor of the friars as Mgr. Sbaretti, his predecessor, would have been.

Boer Generals to Visit Us

London, Sept. 9.—General Botha's secretary, Brebner, says the Boer generals expect their lecture tour of the United States to occupy six months. The generals left for The Hague today to attend the gathering of the Boer leaders and prepare a program for the future.

THE AX of toughest steel becomes dulled by constant use and must have a new edge if it is to do good work. Constant work dulls a man as it does an ax, makes him sluggish of body and dull of mind. He needs a tonic, something that will restore the keenness of mind and activity of body.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery puts new life into weak, worn-out, run-down men and women. It strengthens the weak stomach, purifies the blood, and effectively stimulates the liver. The whole body is built up with sound, solid flesh by the use of "Golden Medical Discovery."

"I was confined to my bed for four months from January 1st, 1899, and commenced to take your medicine January 26th, 1899," writes Mrs. Sallie L. Sheppard, of Poplarbluff, Mo. "I took eight bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, four of 'Favorite Prescription,' two vials of 'Pleasant Pellets,' and one bottle of Doctor Pierce's Compound Extract of Smartweed, as a liniment. Indigestion, obstinate constipation, and hardening of the liver was my trouble. I am at this time able to do almost any kind of house work. Your medicine saved me from my grave. Thanks to you for the benefit. My case was hopeless when I began taking your medicine."

Don't be fooled into trading a substance for a shadow. Any substitute offered as "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery," is a shadow of that medicine. There are cures behind every claim made for the "Discovery," which no "just as good" medicine can show.

Biliousness is cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

SOCIALISTIC SPIRIT

Evident In Mass Meeting to Protest Against Coal Strike

Boston, Sept. 9.—A meeting that was announced to be non-partisan in its character, called for the purpose of protesting against the continuance of the coal strike, was held in Faneuil hall last night, and was addressed by speakers of different political faiths, but the Socialist element was so strongly in evidence that the meeting took more of the nature of a Socialist gathering than that of a more conservative element.

The speakers included James F. Carey, Charles S. Hamlin, Senator Fitzgerald, Frederick O. McCartney, Rev. Dr. A. H. Plumb, A. E. Winship, Ira Lloyd and Martha Moore Avery. Resolutions which had been prepared to express the sentiment of the meeting were read recommending that the coal strike be settled by arbitration, and urging that the good offices of President Roosevelt be secured to that end; also that copies of the resolution be sent to the president and to the United Mine Workers

It was evident that these resolutions were not radical enough to suit the Socialists who were present, but they were adopted, though in a half-hearted sort of way.

Thereupon David Taylor of Boston, the Socialist party's candidate for state treasurer, offered the following, which was carried with a rush by almost a unanimous vote:

"That the people of Massachusetts demand that the government own and operate the coal mines as the best and surest means of ending the strike in the anthracite region, and as a means of securing justice for the miners, and preventing such deplorable conditions in the future."

The meeting soon after adjourned.

Bituminous Miners Returning

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 9.—While the strike on the Kanawha and the New river has not been officially declared at an end yet, it is undoubtedly about over. Three hundred union men returned to work in New river field yesterday and the number will be greatly augmented today, as this was the first break made in their ranks.

Porto Ricans to Aid Miners

San Juan, P. R., Sept. 9.—The Federacion Libre branch of the American Federation of Labor has passed a resolution expressing sympathy with the striking Pennsylvania miners. The members will be assessed 5 cents weekly while the strike lasts, which will probably net the strikers about $150 monthly.

To See Coal Presidents

New York, Sept. 9.—Governor Stone of Pennsylvania arrived in this city last night. It is understood that his visit here is connected with the coal strike. A belief is expressed that Governor Stone will make an attempt to get the coal presidents to come to an agreement tending to end the strike.

Fatal Strike Riot

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 9.—Martin and John Mahonie were arrested last night, charged with being the ringleaders of the miners' riot at Maltby yesterday, which resulted in the killing of one Italian and the fatal wounding of another. The prisoners were committed to jail without bail.

Ministers Want Strike Ended

Philadelphia, Sept. 9.—At a meeting yesterday of the Methodist ministers of this city a resolution was adopted calling upon Governor Stone, President Baer of the Reading company and President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers to end the strike in the coal regions.

Morgan Alleges Persecution

Williamsport, Pa., Sept. 9.—Ensign Morgan, U. S. N., whose promotion from chief gunner was opposed by the late Admiral Sampson, who wrote that Morgan's early training had not given him the social polish necessary for a commissioned officer, has left to report for duty at League Island. He has prepared a letter to the secretary of the navy, which may result in the court martial of several officers. Morgan charges that several naval officers are trying to drive him out of the service. He intimates that he has been the victim of studied persecution, the purpose being to force him on the retired list.

Shortage of Over $150,000

New York, Sept. 9.—Lawyer Ryan reports that new defalcations are daily coming to light in the case of William Malcolm, the treasurer of the Passaic Mutual Building and Loan association, who has disappeared. The shortage was at first thought to be $60,000. Ryan says that an examination has shown that it is over $150,000 and there are still 38 pass-books to be examined.

Alleged Misuse of Money

New York, Sept. 9.—A petition was filed yesterday in court asking that Maurice B. Quincy, a stock broker of Kingston, be declared a bankrupt. According to he petition sums of money were paid to Quincy for the purpose of buying and selling stocks, and it was charged that he wrongfully converted the money to his own use.

Disaster to Military Balloon

Rome, Sept. 9.—During the maneuvers near Tivoli yesterday a military balloon burst and 16 soldiers were badly injured in consequence. Two of the men were fatally hurt. The explosion of the balloon is attributed to intense heat.

STONE'S EFFORTS FAIL

Urged Financiers to End Anthracite Coal Strike

MORGAN REJECTS PROPOSAL

To Use His Influence In the Matter—Railroad Presidents Decide That Nothing but Unconditional Surrender of Miners Can End the Strike

New York, Sept. 10.—Governor Stone of Pennsylvania, who came to this city and made an effort during yesterday to see what could be done towards settling the anthracite coal strike, returned to Harrisburg last night without apparently having been able to accomplish a settlement.

There were rumors afloat that the governor's visit had results, but George W. Perkins of J. P. Morgan & Co. denied last night that there was any change in the situation. Word to the same effect was received by long-distance telephone from President Truesdale of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad, who is out of town.

Governor Stone was accompanied to the city by Attorney General Elkin of Pennsylvania and Senator Flinn. The three held a conference of several hours' duration with P. A. B. Widener of Philadelphia in the offices of the United States Steel corporation.

After the conference had lasted an hour Widener went to see Morgan at the latter's office and asked him to use his influence to end the strike. Ten minutes later he returned to his fellow conferees and told them that Morgan had declined to interfere.

Before leaving the city Governor Stone gave out the following statement: "Attorney General Elkin, Senator Flinn and myself have been in consultation for several hours today with P. A. B. Widener of Philadelphia, who is a director of the United States Steel corporation and associated with Mr. Morgan in many business interests. Mr. Widener is very anxious to see the strike settled and today took the matter up with Mr. Morgan. We are doing what we can."

Governor Stone was asked what progress toward a settlement had been made during the conference and whether any direct communication had been had from Morgan. To those questions he answered that he had nothing to say beyond what was contained in his statement and that the other parties to the conference had also been pledged to silence.

George W. Perkins, speaking for J. P. Morgan & Co., said last night: "We have no comment to make on Governor Stone's statement. We have received no official statement as to what occurred at the conference nor have we heard from Governor Stone since the conference was closed. Nor have we anything to say on the strike situation."

President Baer of the Philadelphia and Reading and Jersey Central, President Truesdale of the Lackawanna and President Fowler of the New York, Ontario and Western had an informal conference. After it was over President Fowler said that the situation had been gone over thoroughly in an informal way. He emphatically declared that there was no change in the attitude of the operators and that nothing could end the strike but the unconditional surrender of the striking anthracite miners.

Governor Stone's Proposal

Philadelphia, Sept. 10.—The North American this morning says that J. P. Morgan has assented to a plan proposed by Governor Stone for ending the coal miners' strike. The plan, according to The North American, is for the mine workers to return to work without a signed agreement; that the operators, by concessions, adjust the differences existing between the men and the companies; that if, after waiting a reasonable time, the operators fail to do this, an arbitrator be appointed, and that if the men deem the decision of the arbitrator as unjust, then the men can again go on strike. The paper also says that Governor Stone immediately telegraphed President Mitchell for a conference and that the meeting between the governor and the miners' chief will take place probably today.

"Up to the Operators"

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 10.—President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers last night said: "You can quote me in the strongest terms that the strike is still on. I have received no proposition from the other side and I have made none to the operators. The strike is still on and will remain so until declared off by the mine workers in convention. It is up to the operators."

SHRIEVALTY CONTESTS

Have Not Yet Been Decided In Two Counties In Maine

Portland, Me., Sept. 10.—Votes continue to come in slowly from the back towns, especially from the extreme eastern section of the state. Towns thus far reported give Hill a plurality of 23,617 votes. The indications are that the 160 towns yet to report will increase the Republican plurality to 26,000.

The shrievalty contest in York county has not ended. The fusionists claim that their nominee, Edward H. Emery, would have been elected but for defective stickers issued which caused the ballots to which they were attached to be thrown out of the count, and a recount of the vote is to be had. When the number of so-called defective ballots is learned the vote will be protested and the matter is likely to find its way into the courts.

The voters in Hancock county are yet to learn the name of their next sheriff. The plurality is so close that it is necessary to wait for the returns of two distant towns.

May Give Roosevelt Endorsement

Washington, Sept. 10.—In political circles here considerable interest attaches to the question of whether the New York Republican state convention two weeks hence will accede to the plan of Senator Platt and fail to go on record as favoring President Roosevelt's nomination in 1904. There are reports, on apparently good authority, of a movement to break away from the Platt leadership in this particular and to have New York join with other Republican conventions in a declaration in favor of the president's nomination.

Will Tackle Corruption

Dummerston, Vt., Sept. 10.—Rudyard Kipling's brother-in-law, Beattie S. Balestier, who ran for the legislature on a high license and reform ticket and was defeated at the election last week by a single vote, will contest the result. Balestier says that at least one non-resident voter cast a ballot against him and that the board of civil authority refused to add to the voters' list legal names which he furnished. He is ready to spend his fortune if necessary to reveal the corruption which he avers infests Vermont politics.

Republicans Drop Wilcox

Honolulu, Sept. 10.—The Republican territorial convention has nominated Prince Cupid for delegate to congress. The Democrats and the home rule party have formed a fusion. The Democrats agreed to endorse R. W. Wilcox for reelection to congress and the home rulers are to give a number of Democrats places on their legislative ticket. It is said Prince Cupid will have the support of ex-Queen Liliuokalani against Wilcox.

Bryan Talks on Tariff

Joplin, Mo., Sept. 10.—The Democratic campaign in Missouri was opened here last evening. William J. Bryan talked at length on the tariff, saying that it was time to take the tariff off at least all kinds of trust made goods. The country, he said, could not look to the Republicans for reforms in tariff matters.

Nominated on First Ballot

Denver, Sept. 10.—Judge Edward C. Stimson of Cripple Creek was yesterday nominated for governor by the Democratic state convention on the first ballot. The ballot was only three-fourths complete when it was seen that Stimson had gained enough votes to elect him and his nomination was made by acclamation.

Durand Still In the Race

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 10.—Despite the paralytic stroke which he suffered a week ago, and from which he is now slowly recovering, Judge Durand will remain the Democratic candidate for governor and will head his party's ticket in the fall campaign.

Latimer and Heyward Win

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 10.—Reports from the primaries received so far show Asberry C. Latimer leading Evans for the senate by 10,000, and D. C. Heyward leading Talbert for governor by 7000. Both certainly are elected.

A Railroad Deal

Chicago, Sept. 10.—The Denver gateway of the Union Pacific, which has remained closed since 1896, has been thrown open to the Rock Island both for freight and passenger traffic, and to the Burlington for freight traffic. This radical change in the policy of the Union Pacific has led to much speculation as to the cause. The new agreement regarding traffic was entered into early in August, but has been kept a fairly close secret until yesterday.

President Roosevelt's View

Cincinnati, Sept. 10.—A guest of President Roosevelt during a portion of his trip through Ohio, when asked yesterday if the subject of the settlement of the Pennsylvania coal strike was discussed, said it was. The guest of the president said that no man deplores the present condition more than the president does, but he does not see clearly how he could take any part in adjusting the difference. Any interference on his part except by request of both parties would be construed into a threat to use the great power of his office to coerce one side or the other. If that were really so, the action would be interference and not arbitration. Unless both sides shall make the request, voluntarily, he will not feel at liberty to interfere in the matter.

THEIR CAUSE HOPELESS

Government Forces at Agua Dulce Surrender

CAPITULATION TO REBELS

Only When Compelled to by Absolute Lack of Food—Victors Recognize Heroism Displayed by the Vanquished In Defending the City

Panama, Sept. 10.—The surrender to the Colombian insurgents of the government general, Morales Berti, and the troops of his command at Agua Dulce has been confirmed. This news reached Panama through some former conservative prisoners of the insurgents who were liberated yesterday at San Carlos as a result of the landing there of an expedition from the government fleet of gunboats.

General Berti, who had been besieged at Agua Dulce by the insurgents since July 28, only surrendered when his cause was hopeless. In the act of surrender the insurgent general, Benjamin Herrera, declares he recognizes the abnegation of General Berti and his men, whom he succeeded in dominating because of the superiority of his forces and the quantity of munitions of war of all kinds at his disposition. He promises to hold inviolate the lives and honor of his prisoners, and he allows General Berti to retain his sword as a mark of honor in recognition of his heroic defense of Agua Dulce.

The surrendered generals and officers have been paroled. The act of surrender also sets forth that in consideration of General Herrera's respect for the bravery of the men who withstood his siege, they will not be compelled personally to surrender their arms. The insurgent general deplores the fact that he is unable to accord more generous terms to General Berti and his men. He says the necessities of war compel him to keep them as prisoners, but that he may exchange them for some of the thousands of liberal prisoners now in possession of the government.

In the last article of the act of surrender General Berti makes it known that he only capitulated to the enemy when compelled to do so by absolute lack of food of any kind for his men, and the conviction that the government could not send him timely help.

General Berti was one of the most popular of the government leaders and he has the sympathy of everybody in his present reverse. It is recognized that he could not have done otherwise than he did.

It is believed in government circles that the surrender of Berti simplifies the situation for General Salazar, governor of Panama, who can now devote the forces of his command to the defense of Panama and Colon. That the national government has confidence in Salazar is proved by the fact that his appointment as supreme commander of all the government forces on the isthmus has been received by telegraph from Bogota.

There is great uneasiness here, now that the details of the Agua Dulce affair have become known. The strong entrenchments which have been erected in and around Panama are defended by 2500 men, and there are over 1000 government soldiers at Colon. A dispatch was received yesterday from the minister of war at Bogota saying that a large number of reinforcements had left for the isthmus, and 3000 more men are expected to come in this week.

As Viewed at Washington

Washington, Sept. 10.—The officials of the Colombian legation profess not to be seriously alarmed over the surrender of the government forces at Agua Dulce. The number of government soldiers there is estimated to have been somewhat less than 300 men and while their loss is admittedly a setback, Colombia's representatives declare the effect will be to stimulate the government to greater activity to crush out the rebellion. The general understanding here has been that the government had about 7000 men under arms on the isthmus. While this may be an over-estimate, legation officials say there are sufficient men left to offer strong resistance to any efforts the revolutionists may take to take the interoceanic railroad or the cities of Colon or Panama.

Important Posts to Be Filled

Washington, Sept. 10.—One result of President Roosevelt's tours is a delay in filling the offices of his gift, and when he bets back to Washington a considerable number of important places will be awaiting his disposal. Locally the district commissionership and two judgeships are the most notable examples. But in the diplomatic world it is thought likely that the fall months will see a number of important changes.

Half a Million to Charity

Philadelphia, Sept. 10.—The will of Miss Harriet S. Benson, who in life was prominent as a philanthropist, was admitted to probate yesterday. The testament disposes of an estate estimated to be worth upwards of $2,000,000. The testatrix made charitable bequests amounting to $500,000.

Grieved Over Wife's Death

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Sept. 10.—Dr. M. T. Pultz, a practicing physician, 58 years old, a member of three medical societies, committed suicide at his home in Standfordville yesterday by shooting. Dr. Pultz's wife died last March and it is thought that grief over her loss led him to commit the deed.

Rumor of Millick's Death

Port au Prince, Sept. 10.—Rumors are in circulation here that Admiral Killick, a doctor and two sailors were killed on board the Crete-a-Pierrot when she was sunk by the German gunboat Panther, but the news lacks confirmation.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Henry W. Grady Jr., of Atlanta has disappeared and his friends and relatives are much concerned over his fate. He is the only son of the late Henry W. Grady, editor of the Atlanta Constitution.

A. F. Welch, treasurer of the Danvers (Mass.) Savings bank and town auditor for many years, is dead. He was a 33d degree Mason and a man of considerable means.

The government has decided against the sale of intoxicating liquor of any description in our Samoan possessions.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. Printer in Bankruptcy.

Carl H. Heintzemann, printer, with a place of business at 65 Atlantic avenue, Boston, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy on Tuesday, showing liabilities amounting to $75,043.96. Of the total indebtedness, $54,359.99 is unsecured, $14,828.82 is secured, and $5,330.15 is on notes and bills. Employes hold wage claims aggregating $525. The petitioner has assets valued at $61,755.42, made up of real estate, $2,250; bills, promissory notes, etc., $374; stock in trade, $1,500; machinery, tools, etc., $15,000; debts due, $3,730.34, and insurance, $38,500. Wollaston men are interested in the business.

Fisher and Betts.

John M. Fisher, Frederick E. Betts and Ella Bailey E. appeared again before United States Commissioner Fiske in the Federal Building, on Tuesday and the case against them was again continued, this time until Saturday, Sept. 27, at 10 A. M. The continuance was made at the request of Assistant United States Attorney Casey, whose recent sickness has put him back his work. All three of the defendants were present and represented by counsel. The charge against each is the same—that of using the mails in aid of a conspiracy to defraud.

During the interim the trial of Fisher and Betts on the original charge against them—that of fraudulent use of the mails—will be tried before a jury.

California Scenery.

Some excellent photographs of picturesque California scenery are on exhibition for a short time at the Thomas Crane public library. They were photographed by Mr. Henry G. Peabody, and are loaned the Library Art club by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry., and include the Yosemite valley, missions, seashore and cities.

—The foxes are appearing on the South Shore six weeks earlier than is their custom, the migratory birds are going South before their time, winter's chilling breeze has touched the hills with frost and sung the dirge for summer in the early autumn nights, and all signs indicate that we are about to experience a cold Fall and a hard Winter. Will the gentlemen in Pennsylvania please hurry up with the anthracite!—Transcript.

ANOTHER CHARGE.

Peterson Arraigned for Assault on McLaughlin.

Bjorbson on the Road to Recovery.

McLaughlin's Story of the Assault of Monday Night.

From evidence obtained by the police Tuesday, it is believed that the blow which nearly finished Officer Bradley was intended for Joseph McLaughlin, and had the latter been alone at the time the chances are that he would have been killed.

It was very dark where the assault took place and it is thought that had Bjornson and Peterson known that Officer Bradley was about, there would have been no assault.

According to McLaughlin, all four met under the railroad bridge on Granite street and there was no trouble until they were about to separate, when Peterson hit him and knocked him under the railing into the street.

Tuesday afternoon McLaughlin called at the police station and identified Peterson as the man who was with Bjornson. A new warrant was then sworn out against Peterson charging him with an assault on McLaughlin and he was arraigned in court upon that complaint this morning.

Owing to the condition of Bjornson it is probable that the cases will not be heard until he is able to appear in court.

After court, Tuesday, officer Bradley visited the City Hospital and had a talk with Bjornson. The latter shook hands with the officer and asked his forgiveness. He identified the blood-covered handkerchief as his property and said he bid not know that it was an officer he was fighting.

Bjornson has been known to the officer for a number of years and has always been a quiet peaceable man. The officers also know McLaughlin, but they do not speak any too well of him.

It is said that Bjornson intended to leave town for Hardwick, Vt., Tuesday and the police believe that having an old grudge against McLaughlin he started in to square accounts, and that but for the officers he would had done up McLaughlin.

Bjornson is resting comfortably at the City Hospital and will probably recover. What appeared to be two bullet holes, the physicians think were made by one bullet. This struck on the breast bone and was deflected, coming out a little to the left of the heart.

Had the bullet taken an inward course it is probable that Bjornson would have been instantly killed.

The general sentiment is that officer Bradley did just right, under the circumstances. When he was struck the blow on the head, his helmet was knocked off, and as he reeled to the centre of the street, his club dropped from his hand. Before he could recover it he received a second blow. He tried to seize the man nearest to him but was unable to do so, and the stones were flying dangerously near him.

Then it was that he shouted if they did not stop he would shot. The only reply was another blow. Then it was that he drew his revolver and fired. At this the men ran and the officer starting after them fired three more shots.

The officer then went to the home of McLaughlin where his wounds were dressed by Dr. Ash. A messenger was dispatched to the police station. He soon returned saying that he had met some people who told him that there was a man at Mrs. Nelson's on Parker street who had been shot and was dying. Officer Bradley went to Mrs. Nelson's and found Bjornson lying on the floor with two bullet wounds. While there the police ambulance arrived and Bjornson was carried to the hospital, and Peterson to the police station.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

GRANITE FREIGHT.

The New Classification by Railroad to Western Points.

The Monumental News for September prints the new "Western Freight Classification" on granite and marble which ex-Mayor Sears of this city was so successful it securing. It went into effect Aug. 15 last:

Item No. 1.—Marble, granite, jasper, slate and onyx blocks, rough quarried, less than carload, 4th class; carloads, class "E."

Item No. 2.—Marble, granite, jasper, onyx and slate blocks or slabs, plumbers' marble, imposing stones, broken marble, sawed, dressed, boxed or not boxed, chiseled, traced, or polished, (polished surfaces being completely protected,) no carrier's liability; shippers to give a general release constituting a contract, less than carloads, 4th class; carloads, class "C."

Item No. 3.—Marble, granite, jasper and onyx, lettered, figured or carved; lettered figured or carved surfaces fully protected by boxing, no carrier's liability, shippers to give a general release constituting a contract, less than carloads, 3d class; carloads, 5th class.

Item No. 4.—Marble broken, less than carload, 4th class; carloads, "E."

Item No. 5.—Item 2 and 3 when not released by contract, as above, less than carloads, 1st class; carload 3d class.

Item No. 6.—Marble or granite statuary, prepaid, double 1st class.

A comprehensive idea of just what this new classification means to western dealers may be had from a comparison of the old and new rates, taking Omaha, Neb., rates as an illustration. Prior to 1900, rough or finished granite less than carload lots was shipped from Chicago, 4th class, at 32 cents per 100 pounds. Carloads, class "D" at 18 1-2 cents. From 1900, to August 15, 1902, the rates on rough granite were L. C. L., 32 cents, carloads 22 cents; on finished granite, L. C. L., 45 cents, C. L., 27 cents.

The present rate on rough and finished granite unlettered or carved is 32 cents and 22 cents. The rate on lettered or carved granite remains unchanged, while the rate on marble or granite statuary is higher than it has ever been. Considering the fact that the great volume of shipments from the quarries are finished monuments unlettered it will be observed that the new rates are very materially reduced.

The Law of Trespass.

It will be well for lawless individuals who seem to think that under cover of darkness they are privileged to injure and destroy the property of others, to know that the Legislature has passed certain laws in regard to wilful and malicious acts of destruction of property, also for tresspassers or an accessory and that "whoever wilfully commits a tresspass by entering npon the the garden, orchard, or other improved land of another, without permission of the owner, and with intent to cut, take away, destroy, or injure the trees, grain, grass, hay, fruit, or vegetables there growing, shall be punished by imprisommeut in the jail not exceeding thirty days, or by fine not exceeding twenty dollars.

In Chap. 161 of Mass. Gen. Statutes there are ninety other sections relating to offenses against property, which might be read with advantage by those who use their freedom in breaking windows and removing fences, etc.—Framingham Tribune.

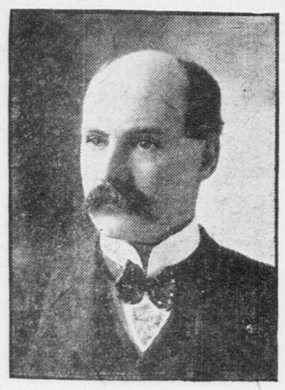
New Superintendent.

Mr. J. A. MacDougall, Braintree's new superintendent of schools, assumed his position this week, coming with the best of recommendations. A brief sketch of his life, previous to his acceptance of the superintendency of the schools of Braintree, will be of interest to Braintree people.



Mr. MacDougall is of Scotch and Scotch-Irish stock and was born in Oxford, Nova Scotia, spending his early life on a farm, attending the district school and later the village schools. After attending the Provincial Normal school at Truro, he taught school for two years in the Provinces and then entered Mt. Allison college, Sackville, N. B., in 1886. He dropped out of college one year to teach and was not graduated until 1891.

The first year after graduating was spent as general secretary to the Young Men's Christian Association at St. Stephens, N. B. He came to Boston and later in April 1892, was elected principal of the High school at Goffstown, N. H., resigning in 1896 to become principal of the Centre Grammar school at Northampton, Mass. This position he filled until 1901 when he was appointed superintendent of schools in the district of Monson and Brimfield from which field of labor he was called to Braintree on July 7th.

Ancient Ships.

As a general rule, the lifetime of a ship built of the very best material scarcely exceeds 120 years, says the Chicago News. To be sure, there are exceptions. Perhaps the most remarkable of these is the case of the whaler True Love, of Hull, England. It was a bark of 248 tons, and was built in Philadelphia in 1748. After it had sailed for a few years under the American flag it was purchased by an Englishman and converted into a whaler. When it was 97 years old, old enough to be retired, it still voyaged to the Arctic Ocean. After changing hands once again it was still in active commission for forty-four years as a carrier of wood in the Baltic Sea. Finally, after an active life of 139 years it succumbed to the inevitable axe.

Still another hory ship was the sailing vessel Betsy Cains. The exact date of its launching is not known. But it is definitely recorded that in 1688 it bore the name Princess Marie, and had the honor of carrying Prince William of Orange to England when he became King William III. It was then used for a time as a pleasure yacht by Queen Anne. After this period of Royal usefulness had passed it was sold and rechristened Getsy Cains. Its end was pathetic. It was shipwrecked at Tynemouth in 1827, after it had carried the English flag uninterruptedly for 139 years.

Investigations recently made show beyond a doubt that the oldest warship extant is the Victory, Admiral Nelson's flagship at the battle of Trafalgar. The Victory was launched in 1765, and is now 137 years old. It has passed many a year tied up to the dock at Portsmouth, and the tooth of time has left its distructive mark upon it. Not long ago the British Admiralty spent a considerable sum of money in saving the old ship from ruin.

Married Life.

"Married Life Can Be Made Supremely Happy" is the optimistic title of an article by Mrs. Mary A. Livermore in Success. In conclusion Mrs. Livermore says:

Before all forms of government, all types of civilization, all social institutions and all advance in education the relations of the husband and the wife make the everlasting foundation on which the social structure of the whole world rests. Just so fast and just so far as these relations become what they ought to be just so fast and just so far will society be uplifted, but no faster and no farther. It is the family and the home that lay the foundations of country, and these depend on the relations of husband and wife. The greatness of a nation is made by its true men and women, who have been well born in good homes, where they have been carefully fashioned into a lofty type of manhood and womanhood. This is the large intent of marriage, which is not alone the cradle of the human race, but its crown as well, and should be the symbol of a marriage that shall be immortal.

Children's Hair.

If at six months or one year of age the child's hair is thin, dry and lifeless, it should be treated with systematic massage, using the egg shampoo. A well beaten egg in about an ounce of water should be rubbed thoroughly into the scalp. This will cleanse the scalp and act as a tonic upon the roots of the hair. It should be rubbed in with a rotary motion, beginning in front at the forehead and going back to the crown, then forward to the temples and back and forth till the fingers of the two hands meet at the nape of the neck. The child's hair must then be thoroughly rinsed in warm water and dried with warm towels or in the sunlight. Finish the operation with a dry massage, and when every particle of moisture has evaporated, if the tendency of the scalp is to dryness, rub into it a little olive oil or a simple formation of whose freshness and purity there is not the least suspicion. Exceeding nicety must be observed in this, for rancid oils act as a corrosive irritant and will themselves cause excessive dandruff.

Doll Pincushion.

An attractive pincushion can be made by taking a small china doll with a flaxen wig and making a pink satin waist for it and a skirt of pink satin ribbon about four inches wide. Cut two long slips of the ribbon to simulate an infant's long robe. Fasten one slip at the back of the doll and the other in front, leaving the sides open. On lifting the front slip several pin pads of pink flannel will appear, one on top of the other. The one is for black and white bead headed pins, the next pad is for small safety pins, the next for large sized ordinary white and black pins and the innermost pad for small sized white and black ones. This doll pincushion is to be suspended by a ribbon from the side of the dressing table or bureau.

Double Tracks in Randolph.

The Old Colony street railway is having a hot time in getting its donble track location in Randolph, between the Milton line and the Avon line, because the town insists on certain concessions.

At the town meeting Aug. 5, the following committee was appointed to act with the selectmen: Arion Roberts, Patrick Dean, 2d, Michael J. Daly, J. K. Willard, and James E. Foley.

Now the above committee and Town Clerk and Treasurer J. T. Lealhy have been summoned to attend the Superior court at Dedham, Oct. 6, when they will be required to answer to the bill of complaint exhibited against them by John T. Flood, John J. Crawford, Andrew J. Gove, John H. Field, William H. Leavitt, J. White Belcher, George H. Nichols, Charles H. Howard, Wellington Lewis, George W. French, Hugh F. McDonnell, W. Ray Spear, E. A. Allen, William F. Keith, William F. Pettee, Henry J. Wales, James H. Wales, S. B. Corliss, George W. Holbrook and Elisha Mann, all of Randolph.

The committee is also notified to appear before a justice of the court at a special session at the Boston court house this morning. To show cause why an injunction should not be issued to restrain it from acting as a committee in the matters for which it was appointed by the town.

The committee is represented by counsel.

Has Made Her Speed.

The torpedo-boat destroyer Lawrence had a builder's trial over the Provincetown course Tuesday, and developed a speed of 28.02 knots. As the government requires only 28 knots it is evident that with hand picked coal she will exceed that speed.

—The parents of primary school children in Waltham have voted 448 to 224 against one session of school during June and September.

MURRELL'S DISCLOSURES

Result In Additional Indictments Against St Louis Boodlers

St. Louis, Sept. 10.—When Judge Douglass adjourned court last night seven of the 19 members of the alleged boodle combine of the house of delegates were still at large, and the police and deputy sheriffs are using their best efforts to find them.

The most important feature of the day's developments was the finding of new indictments against 18 members of the combine. In addition to the charges of bribery and perjury in connection with the Suburban street deal the members of the alleged combine now rest under additional indictments charging bribery. These were found by the grand jury before which J. K. Murrell testified yesterday as to the city lighting scandal of 1900, in which each member of the combine is said to have received $2500 in payment for his services in securing the passage of the bill.

Bonds were fixed at $15,000 for each indictment, making a total of $45,000 necessary to be secured for the release of each of the accused. Former Delegates Schnettler, Helms, Schumacher and Gutke, and Delegate Hannigan, who spent Monday night at their respective homes in the custody of deputy sheriffs, are in jail because of their failure to secure bonds.

Ex-Speaker Murrell, Delegate Murrell and former Delegate Robertson have turned state's evidence and are where Circuit Attorney Folk can find them when wanted.

Best Maintained Innocence

Sackville, N. B., Sept. 10.—Thomas E. Best, the aged father of John C. Best, who was electrocuted at Charlestown, Mass., yesterday, said last night: "I was in Salem, where he was confined, and had several conversations with him. I visited him at Charlestown a few days after his removal there and on each occasion he said he was innocent. I told my son that if he was in any way mixed up with the murder of Bailey he had better make a confession, but he replied he had no confession to make and that his conscience was clear before God and man."

Hungary Disclaims Flag

Vienna, Sept. 10—An official note announces that the Hungarian government disclaims any connection with the recent presentation of a Hungarian flag to the United Hungarian societies of New York. It is pointed out that the flag was provided by the National union, a private society, and that its cost was raised by public subscription. The flag is to be taken to Bridgeport, Conn., the headquarters of the Hungarian Sick Benevolent Societies' Federation, which has been celebrating its 10th anniversary.

No More Robberies Than Usual

Havana, Sept. 10.—When questioned with regard to the stories that bandits were overrunning the island, kidnapping and robbing and defying the rural guard, Chief Rodriguez of the rural guards said petty robberies were being committed in the country, but not more frequently than in past years. Many stories about the operations of bandits throughout the island, upon investigation, are found to be false.

Magazine Ruins Unexplored

Boston, Sept. 10.—The ruins of the exploded magazine on Governor's island still remain as they were after the explosion. Until Captain Taylor returns and the necessary permission to search the ruins is given the fate of Joseph E. Wakefield of Cambridge, who is supposed to have perished in the explosion, will remain a mystery.

A Worthy Object

Washington, Sept. 10.—Washington Council No. 1 of the Soldiers and Sailors' Rights league, an organization whose object it will be to influence legislation in aid of poor and needy ex-soldiers and sailors, was formed here last night. Efforts will be made to secure recruits from grand army posts and other veteran societies.

Held Up by Masked Men

New York, Sept. 10.—Just as the station master of the Scarsdale station of the New York and Harlem River railroad was closing his office at midnight last night two masked men appeared and at the point of revolvers held him up and stole his watch. In the scuffle the station master was shot in the leg. The robbers escaped.

Getting Away From Danger

Paris, Sept. 10.—A cablegram from the governor of Martinique says that measures have been taken to ensure the evacuation of the northern part of the island. The cremation of the dead at Morne Rouge and Adjoupa Boullion is progressing.

DEED OF INSANE MAN

Tried to Strangle His Son and Throw Him Into Fire

Millbury, Mass., Sept. 10.—Elmore Alexander, while in an insane mood, tried to strangle his 15-year-old son, Clarence, yesterday, but was prevented from so doing by a neighbor, Henry Marble. Alexander, it is claimed, first set fire to his barn and said he was going to throw himself and boy into the burning building. Word was sent for assistance and Marble responded.

Alexander said he was only carrying out the emommand of Jesus Christ, who told him in a vision that if he would kill his son and then jump with him into the fire he would be allowed to enter the holy city. The boy said his father told him while he was trying to choke him to death that he was going to throw him into the fire. The boy will recover, but was nearly dead when rescued.

The house and barn, with nearly all the contents, were burned, and the loss is estimated at about $1000. Alexander is about 50 years old, and has a wife and three children.

Thieves' Den Unearthed

Boston, Sept. 10.—Discovered through the unwitting agency of the mysterious woman visitor at the city hospital morgue, Ernest O. Dorr, aged 24, the suspected accomplice of the dead burglar, Govan Sneede, was arrested yesterday. In the arrest of young Dorr not only have the recent headquarters of the dead burglar and his two associates been finally ascertained, but through Dorr's own confession several hundred dollars' worth of stolen property has been recovered and the source of numerous breaks all over the city during the year is at last unveiled.

Brain Probably Affected

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 10.—Osborn Galloupe, 60 years old, was met by two men on Monday, who enticed him into an alleyway, where they attempted to rob him. Galloupe beat the men off, but not until he had received severe injuries about the head and shoulders. He went to the police station and made a complaint, and there his wounds were dressed. He was then sent home to Cliftondale. Yesterday afternoon he shot and killed himself. It is believed that the wounds about the head affected his brain.

Knowlton May Succeed Holmes

Boston, Sept. 10.—Ex-Governor Long was the most surprised man in Boston yesterday when he read a dispatch from Washington that he was to be appointed by Governor Crane as chief justice of the supreme court of Massachusetts to succeed Chief Justice Holmes. Governor Crane also expressed his surprise about any suggestion of the appointment of the ex-governor. The successor to Chief Justice Holmes will be in all probability Justice Marcus P. Knowlton of Springfield.

A Maine Tragedy

Wilton, Me., Sept. 10.—Mrs. Josie Holbrook was shot either by her own hand or that of her husband yesterday while at the home of her husband's parents, and after lingering seven hours died from the effects of the wound. Young Holbrook was arrested, but vehemently declared that his wife killed herself, after firing two shots at him. An investigation failed to show any trace of bullet marks in the room. An inquest will be held.

Cigarets Paralyzed Brain

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 10.—Cigaret smoking is responsible for the incarceration of a Leominster boy in the Worcester insane hospital, according to the testimony of the physicians who examined him as to his sanity. The young man, William A. Field, belongs in North Leominster. The doctors found him to be suffering with paralysis of the brain, which they think was superinduced by the use of cigarets.

A White Mountain Attraction

Fabyan House, N. H., Sept. 10.—The new state highway through Jefferson Notch was formally opened yesterday by Governor Jordan and other state officials. With a number of invited guests they were driven over the road in a mountain wagon. It took eight hours to make the trip. The road is the highest in this region, and affords an excellent view of the mountains.

Surrendered to Authorities

New Haven, Sept. 10.—Harry W. Dupuy of Allegheny, Pa., a junior at Yale university, came to this city last night and presented himself to the police authorities. He is charged with manslaughter. Last June Dupuy, while driving in his automobile, struck D. T. Munroe, causing injuries from which he died later. Dupuy furnished bonds and immediately left town.

Want Forty Cents an Hour

New Haven, Sept. 10.—A strike of bridgebuilders employed on structural work in various cities in Connecticut was inaugurated yesterday. The men ask for an increase in the wage scale and a nine-hour day. They are now paid from 30 to 35 cents an hour and demand 40 cents. Work on many buildings has been stopped by the strike.

Want an Afternoon Off

Norwich, Conn., Sept. 10.—Two hundred and fifty employes of the Uncasville Manufacturing company, manufacturers of cotton goods at Versailles, went on strike yesterday. The strikers are dissatisfied with the winter schedule, compelling them to work Saturday afternoon.

Two Freight Wrecks

Greenfield, Mass., Sept. 10.—Freight wrecks occurred last night on the Boston and Maine railroad, one at Erving and one near Shelburne Falls. In the latter wreck two train hands were severely but not fatally injured. Tracks were blocked, but traffic was resumed this morning.

Gerimondi's Consular and Priestly Duties Ended

ACCOUNTS WERE MIXED

While Acting as United States Consul In Brazil—Went to Italy, Where He Has Become Involved In Trouble Which Will Insure Punishment

Genoa, Sept. 10.—John J. Gerimondi, an Italian who had been naturalized an American citizen and formerly United States consular agent at Santos, Brazil, who is said to have been dismissed on account of an alleged deficiency in the revenues of his office, has been arrested at Oneglia, about 10 miles from Nice.

Gerimondi, when he returned to Italy from Brazil, pretended to have been appointed a United States consul in Persia and asserted that he also was commissioned to inspect the whole United States consular service in Asia. Later he acted as a priest and had been daily celebrating mass. When arrested he was about to leave, accompanied by two Italian girls. Among Gerimondi's effects is a package of United States state department stationery. The Italian authorities are awaiting information from the United States before deciding on Gerimondi's prosecution.

Washington, Sept. 10.—The facts reported from Italy as to Gerimondi's arrest have been known to the state department for some time although, it is said, upon the point of his separation from the United States consul at Santos, that while a complete adjustment of Gerimondi's accounts may yet show some irregularities, the principal cause for his removal was the fact that he spent the greater part of his time in saying mass at various churches and almost entirely neglected his consular duties, causing the lodgment of many indignant protests at the state department by the commercial interests.

Some time ago the department was acquainted with the fact that Gerimondi was sailing under false colors in Italy, using the state department stationery and representing himself to be United States consul general to Persia as well as general inspector of consulates. Consul Pierson, at Genoa, was instructed to look into the case, and going to Omaglapatrie he found Gerimondi. The latter tried to present a bold front, but finally broke down under the consul's searching inquiries, confessed his deceptions and surrendered the department stationery.

While the consul was considering his case Gerimondi was arrested by the local authorities on the charge of betraying the daughter of an ancient Italian house and thrown into prison. The Italian government also took note of his fraudulent practices, and sought to know the pleasure of the United States in the matter of his prosecution. After full consideration, and seeing that the man was already in the way to be roundly punished for other offenses, the state department declined to express any wish in the matter, leaving Gerimondi to be dealt with by the application of the local law.

He was appointed to the consular service, it is said, upon representations from the Pacific coast people to the effect that through his influence with the large Italian element in San Francisco he had been of great use politically.

Virchow's Funeral

Berlin, Sept. 10.—The city of Berlin yesterday gave the remains of Professor Virchow, one of the four citizens upon whom had been conferred the freedom of the city, a funeral worthy of the great scientist. The town hall was profusely decorated. There were also many floral memorials from all parts of Germany and from some foreign cities. There were many persons of world-wide reputation in the audience.

American Fairness Appreciated

Berlin, Sept. 10.—The attitude of the American press regarding the sinking of the Haytien rebel gunboat Crete-a-Pierrot by the German gunboat Panther gives great satisfaction here. The press comment emphasizes the fact that the utterances of the leading papers in the United States prove that the people of that country are convinced of the unselfishness of Germany's policy in American waters.

Youngster Caused Railroad Wreck

Roanoke, Va., Sept. 10.—The mystery surrounding the wrecking of a passenger train here last Sunday was cleared up yesterday when Johnnie Barger, 11 years old, confessed that he had placed a spike in the joint between the rails for the purpose of seeing it flattened by the train. Barger is too young to be prosecuted for wrecking the train. Engineer Swain, who was injured in the wreck, will die.

Crimes Act Prosecutions Begun

Dublin, Sept. 10.—The first prosecutions here under the crimes act began yesterday when Messrs. McCarthy, O'Dwyer and Holland of The Irish People, William O'Brien's newspaper, were summoned for trial on charge of criminal conspiracy and intimidating people not to take unoccupied farms.

Anarchist Sent to Prison

Naples, Sept. 10.—Vincenzo Guerriero, the anarchist who threw two stones through the train which was bearing King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helena to Palermo, has been sentenced to be imprisoned for six years and eight months and to pay a fine of $160.

Carpets for Fall

Our experience has been that the refurnishing of houses chiefly takes place in the Fall—doubtless in preparation for the various social functions which come with the colder season.

Hence we are now displaying specially attractive Oriental Carpets and Rugs (the result of our buyer's recent trip abroad), Wilton and Brussels Carpets (both foreign and domestic), Linoleums, and a wide variety of other floor coverings in all grades.

Our Upholstery Department exhibits its customary choice assortment of Draperies and Furniture Stuffs.

Cleaning Carpets

Isn't pleasant work, no one cares to do it at home, and even if they do try, it's almost impossible to beat out all of the dirt.

Now, cleaning carpets is part of our business, we like to do it, not by hand though, for our steam carpet beating does the work neater and better than the hands of any man can do.

Carpets taken up, cleaned and relaid.

BLAME UPON MITCHELL

For Miners' Deliberate Breaking of Contracts

STATEMENT FROM MARKLE

Recites That His Men Were Satisfied Under an Arbitration Agreement, Which Was Thrown to the Winds Through Influence of Their Leader

New York, Sept. 11.—John Markle, head of the firm of G. B. Markle & Co., the largest of the individual coal operators in the anthracite field, makes the following statement respecting the proposed arbitration between the employers and employes:

"There will be no arbitration and no settlement of the coal strike in any way. We have not forgotten our experiences on a former occasion. There had been in existence from 1885 an agreement with the men in our employ, providing for the settlement in an amicable way of all differences that arose, by arbitration. This was the result of a local strike lasting three months in 1885. In 1887, notwithstanding the existence of this contract for arbitration, the men deliberately broke their agreement and went on strike, which lasted six months. Yet we reestablished the arbitration agreement after it was over and went on. In 1897 there was a widespread strike in the Lehigh region, but our men stood by their agreement and never lost a day's work.

"In 1900 John Mitchell appeared and began a campaign on our property. Our employes presented a list of grievances, and I replied to them and suggested that if our answers were not satisfactory they could demand arbitration under the existing agreement. Mr. Mitchell distinctly opposed any arbitration, asserting that we were insincere. Father Phillips, a priest of Hazleton, of his own volition urged the men to abide to their compact and suggested Archbishop Ryan as the third arbitrator. Mr. Mitchell opposed all of this, claiming that it was a bluff.

"A meeting of our employes was held to which Mitchell came unsolicited and made a speech. He asked me publicly if I would abide by the arbitrator's verdict, and when I said we would he turned to the audience and pleaded with them, nevertheless, to go upon a strike. Father Phillips and I followed him, urging the men to stand by their agreement for arbitration and the men refused to follow Mitchell's lead.

"Then came a round of threats, intimidation and violence. Almost daily rioting parties of several hundred men appeared on our property, led by Mitchell's lieutenants in the vain effort to compel our men to break their agreement. They inaugurated a reign of terror, which finally resulted in the employes breaking their compact and throwing the projected arbitration to the winds.

"Marcus A. Hanna came into the dispute and secured some concession. The strike ended and it was heralded as a triumph for Mitchell. Work was resumed under these conditions on Oct. 29, 1900. The result has been the establishment of every kind of a trades union in the coal district. From that time on there have been innumerable strikes. Mitchell has become a demigod, and alone is obeyed, so that an ordinary and usual means of discipline are practically disregarded.

"With this history before us I am sure no reasonable man will ask us to engage in any arbitration with Mr. Mitchell or his immediate followers."

Will Take Up Any Grievance

New York, Sept. 11.—President Fowler of the New York, Ontario and Western Railroad company said yesterday afternoon: "The strike will end when the men come back of their own accord and on the terms on which they worked before the outbreak of the strike. In no other manner can this strike be ended. We will brook no outside interference of whatever nature, political, humanitarian or of any other origin. When the men go back it will be at the wages and on the conditions obtaining last spring. After they have returned we will take up any grievances with our own men. We have posted notices to that effect in our collieries, and that has been our attitude right along."

President Oliphant of the Delaware and Hudson said that if he was well informed, and he thought he was, there would be no interference on the part of Mr. Morgan. He said no outside influences would be needed and that the strike would continue until the miners grow tired of it and return to work.

Governor to Confer With Mitchell

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 11.—Some important messages passed between the executive mansion at Harrisburg and President Mitchell last night. Mitchell said that he had accepted an invitation from Governor Stone to confer with him at Harrisburg on Saturday. He did not know what matters would be discussed at the conference.

Another Colliery Starts Up

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 11.—Work was resumed yesterday at one of the largest collieries belonging to the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western company. It was said that a sufficient number of men was at work to enable the company to mine and ship coal. No disturbance attended the resumption of work.

Thirty Workmen Buried Alive

Madrid, Sept. 11.—Thirty workmen were killed in the province of Lerida by the caving in of a road which they were repairing. The men were entombed.

ADMIRAL KILLICK'S FATE

Went Down With Gunboat Which He Blew Up Rather Than Surrender

Gonaives, Hayti, Sept. 11.—The body of Admiral Killick has been recovered from the Crete-a-Pierrot, which he fired when the gunboat Panther attempted to capture her. The surgeon of the Crete-a-Pierrot, who was asleep in his cabin, and two sailors of that vessel also perished.

Killick evidently wanted to blow up his gunboat, not to escape the fate of a pirate, which he was not, but, as he telegraphed to General Canal, in order to save the "national honor."

Admiral Killick, who is said to have been an Englishman, started from Port au Prince May 14 with the Haytien warships Crete-a-Pierrot and Toussaint L'Ouverture, having declared himself in favor of the candidacy for the presidency of M. Firmin, former Haytien minister at Paris, who was then, as now, at the head of the revolutionary forces in the northern part of the island.

Returned For Wife's Sake

St. Louis, Sept. 11.—John K. Murrell, who returned last Friday from exile and whose evidence has resulted in exposing the boodle gang, made a statement last night giving his reasons for returning. He had been promised, he said, that the gang would aid his wife and supply her needs and would keep him in funds. He discovered that the gang was destroying her letters to him in which she told of her impoverished condition. "I did not receive one cent from the gang while I was gone, and it was simply my own mental anguish and the fact that my wife was destitute and probably starving in St. Louis that led me to come back."

Government Cheated Out of $250,000

New York, Sept. 11.—United States deputy marshals made raids yesterday upon four snuff manufactories on the east side, took seven prisoners, and seized the plants, including about 100,000 pounds of snuff in process of manufacture. The value of the plants is estimated at $25,000. Treasury Agent Seawell asserts that he expects to prove that there has been in existence for 20 years in the heart of this city a regular organization for the illegal sale of unstamped snuff and that the government has lost fully $250,000 in stamp taxes.

Why Croker Was Bounced

New York, Sept. 11.—Mayor Low has made public Fire Commissioner Sturgis' report on the relieving of Fire Chief Croker from command of the department. In brief it is that while Croker was on vacation leave and on a day when Sturgis was ill at home Croker appeared at headquarters and issued an order to the department rescinding an order issued by the commissioner. This Sturgis characterizes as an act of insubordination and says he will file charges against the chief.

Grady Found In New York

New York, Sept. 11.—Henry W. Grady of the Atlanta Constitution, who disappeared while at Norfolk a few days ago, has been found in this city. He was recognized yesterday while walking across City Hall park by a friend. Grady apparently was suffering from mental aberration. He could not explain when and why he had left Norfolk and did not know where he had been since Friday. He is now under the care of a physician.

President at Oyster Bay

Oyster Bay, L. I., Sept. 11.—President Roosevelt returned from his southern tour yesterday afternoon. He was pretty well tired out and retired at an early hour. President Roosevelt will make no more appointments to receive visitors before going on his western trip, which begins on Sept. 19. He will devote the time between now and then in preparing for the trip and in disposing of accumulated business.

Warm Hearts For Teller

Denver, Sept. 11.—The Democratic state convention last night adopted a platform. On national questions the platform condemned the Republican party's foreign policy and pledged allegiance to the Kansas City platform of 1900 and to the cause of bimetalism. Senator Teller was endorsed as "one of the greatest of the nation's living statesmen."

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Friday, Sept. 12.
Sun rises—5:20; sets—6:01.
Moon sets—12:12 a. m.

With the exception of showers along the Atlantic coast Tuesday night there has been no precipitation of consequence. The weather will be fair in New England.

DEMOCRATS FOR GASTON.

Boston Caucuses Declare for Him in No Uncertain Manner.

Boston, Sept. 11.—Democratic primaries held throughout Massachusetts last night went through the customary business of choosing delegates to state, congressional, councillor and senatorial conventions, and in a few instances in divided districts to representative conventions. It was evident from the earliest returns that William A. Gaston, lawyer, son of the late Governor Gaston, but better known to the business world as the former chairman of the board of directors of the Boston Elevated railroad, had captured a majority of all the state delegates and will be named for governor by the Democratic state convention on Sept. 17 over Charles S. Hamlin, also of this city, assistant secretary of the treasury under John G. Carlisle. In spite of the vigorous canvasses conducted by both Gaston and Hamlin the prediction of lively caucuses was not borne out, for apart from this city the Democratic caucuses were dull and in some instances slimly attended. Most of the larger cities chose Gaston delegates, while Hamlin's strength was in the towns. The key to the situation, however, was in Boston, where the Democrats declared their preference for Gaston in no uncertain manner.

Italy Stamping Out Duelling

Milan, Sept. 11.—As a result of a duel fought here a few days ago between two captains of the Sixtieth regiment, the challenger has been expelled from the army and his antagonist has been sent to a fortress, but the most striking features of the affair are the other punitive measures taken in connection with it. The colonel of the Sixtieth regiment has been suspended, the lieutenant colonel has been sentenced to imprisonment for 15 days and two majors have been given 10 days' imprisonment. Four captains who acted as seconds in the duel have been sent to a fortress for six months.

The Craig Inquest

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 11.—Joshua B. Holden and Edwin C. Woods of Boston were the principal witnesses at yesterday's sitting of the inquest into the death of Secret Service Officer Craig of the presidential party. These men, in company with J. J. McCarthy of Boston, were in carriages behind that occupied by the president at the time of the accident. Both Holden and Woods testified that the trolley car was running at a very fast rate of speed at the time.

Government to Have Big Exhibits

Washington, Sept. 11.—An allotment of the $800,000 appropriated by congress for a government exhibit at the St. Louis Purchase exposition was made yesterday. In addition to an exhibit in the general government building by all the executive departments there will be outside exhibits by the fish commission, the lighthouse board and the agricultural department.

Succumbed to Financial Pressure

Providence, Sept. 11.—The B. H. Gladding dry goods concern, capitalized at $150,000, yesterday made an assignment. It had an existence of nearly a century. It is understood that several banks of this city furnished money to carry on the business, and their curtailment of the loans was one of the immediate causes of the assignment.

Duelists' Aim Was Poor

New York, Sept. 11.—Three persons were injured, one fatally, during a street duel last night between Frederico Bolintino and Ferdinando Cinque. A spectator is dying at a hospital, while a woman was shot in the back as she was trying to enter the door of her home. Bolintino was slightly wounded and Cinque escaped injury.

Zurich, Sept. 11.—For some time past there has been a great increase in the number of Mormon missionaries in both Germany and Switzerland. Germany has nearly 2000 such missionaries, while there are several hundred in Switzerland.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

Good Afternoon.

The views of George E. Roberts of Washington on the supervision of the trusts meet with our hearty endorsement. His arguments are plain and logical, and even if they are a step toward Socialism as some claim, it is a good step to take. An extended report of Mr. Robert's views will be found in the Ledger today.

Is there a lack of political interest this year, or is it confined to the Democratic party? Never before were such slimly attended Democratic caucuses held in this city, the total vote not being as large as at the caucuses of the Socialists.

Drift of Opinion.

—Ex-Mayor John C. Chase of Haverhill is the gubernatorial candidate for the socialists. But when it comes to the nomination of John Quincy Adams for lieutenant-governor on that ticket somehow the name seems to have gotten misplaced.—Boston Enterprise.

—John Quincy Adams as candidate for lieutenent-governor on the Socialist ticket sounds a bit odd; but perhaps not more so than that George Washington should be "driving a hack in the Capital City.—Transcript.

☞ I have been some time in this world and the result of my experience is that there is one way by which success may be obtained with ability. In all my life I have never known an instance of undiscovered merit. There are too many seekers to allow ability to remain hid. If you possess ability and were placed in a diving bell and lowered to the bottom of the sea, expeditions would be fitted out to discover you and bring you back. No matter what calling you embrace, if you have ability you will be in demand. If a lawyer, think how many persons there are in trouble who would be seeking your services. If an architect, how many who desire better houses built. I have heard it said that a young man needs a "pull" to get a start. Pay no attention to that. If you have ability you will win.—Bourke Cochran at Manhattan College.

Municipal Ownership.

Ex-Mayor John O. Hall was a guest of the New England Water Works Association at Hotel Brunswick, Boston, on Wednesday, and spoke on the duties of municipalities regarding water supply. He asserted that municipalities should control the supply, and made comparisons between cities and towns where private capital is the controlling power and those where the local government owns the works.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

IN THE FIELD.

Collagan and Fallon for Representatives.

Candidates of the Democrats.

Delegates Chosen to the Different Conventions.

Democratic caucuses were held in all wards of the city Wednesday night. There were no contests in any of the wards and the caucuses were therefore devoid of interest and but slimly attended.

There were rumors that some dark horses would develop for the Legislature, but if there was any such movement contemplated it did not materialize and Peter T. Fallon of West Quincy and William J. Collagan of Wollaston received the nominations for Representatives without contest.

Of the sixteen delegates to the State convention all are unpledged save those in Ward Two who are pledged to William A. Gaston. Of the others it is understood that while unpledged all, with the exception of those from Ward Six favor Gaston. These delegates go unpledged and may swing into line for Gaston.

The Congressional delegates are said to favor William S. McNary and the County delegates will undoubtedly favor Marshall P. Wright for County Commissioner.

WARD ONE.

Walter B. Wilson was chairman and Luke J. Coyle was secretary of the Ward One caucus. There was a woeful lack of enthusiasm as only four votes were cast. All four were unanimous for William J. Collagan for Representative, but only three voted for Peter T. Fallon. These delegates were elected:

State,—Walter B. Wilson, Thomas McDonald.
Councillor, — James E. Dunn, Walter B. Wilson.
County,—James E. Dunn, Walter B. Wilson.
Senatorial, — Frederick W. Tirrell, George H. Wilson.
Congressional, — Philip D. Cook, Luke J. Coyle.

WARD TWO.

The Quincy Point ward was the only ward in which the State delegates were pledged to William A. Gaston. There were less than ten present and voting. Timothy J. Carey was chairman and James F. Cleverly secretary. M. T. Sullivan looked after the voting list.

The delegates elect:

State, —Favorable to William A. Gaston: Timothy J. Carey, Joseph G. Kenneuy, Edward H. Perry, Jr.
Councillor,—John W. Walsh, John C. McGuane, John J. Sweeney.
County, — John W. Walsh, John C. McGuane, John J. Sweeney.
Senatorial, — James M. Cleverly, Henry P. Moynihan, Michael King.
Congressional, — Timothy J. Carey, Edward P. Connors, Michael T. Sullivan.

WARD THREE.

Less than twenty took part in the caucus in the South Quincy ward, although the polls were kept open an hour. William A. Kelley was chairman of the caucus and George D. Cahill secretary. The delegates chosen:

State,—Edward J. Parker, George D. Cahill, Patrick W. Driscoll.
Councillor,—James P. Dougherty, Thomas F. Shea, James F. Parker.
County,—James P. Dougherty, Thomas F. Shea, James F. Parker.
Senatorial,—Edward H. McGinty, Michael J. Hartrey, Timothy F. Ford.
Congressional,—William A. Kelley, Andrew W. Howley, Henry Clare.

WARD FOUR.

For a caucus where there was no contest that at West Quincy was well attended. The rumor that ex-Councilman Dugan was to become a candidate for the legislature did not materialize. John J. Dugan was chairman, Martin King secretary, and the tellers were George McDonnell, H. M. Hughes, and Fred O'Rouke.

These delegates were elected:

State,—William N. Eaton, Peter T. Fallon, William P. Hughes, James E. McDonald.
Councillor,—William P. Reardon, James P. Nolan, Thomas H. O'Neil, Thomas Shortle.
County,—John C. Ballou, John Kilmartin, Marshall P. Wright, Philip Garrity.
Senatorial,—John H. Ash, James A. White, Richard Walsh, James Fennessey.
Congressional,—John J. Dugan, James F. Burke, William T. Shea, Henry M. Hughes.

WARD FIVE.

Not many minutes were required to count the ballots cast at the caucus at Wollaston. Patrick Ferguson was chairman and W. J. Anderson secretary and Daniel O'Meara had charge of the voting list.

State,—David J. Roche, Edward Twitchell.
Councillor,—John B. McCormick, Francis R. McCormick.
Senatorial,—William J. Collagan, Jeremiah Denneen.
Congressional, — David J. Roche, Edward Twitchell.

WARD SIX.

At Atlantic the following delegates were elected:

State,—Stephen H. Edwards, Jr., John A. Duggan.
Councillor, — John H. Canty, Michael A. Hayes.
County,—Charles Duggan, Robert Clifford.
Senatorial, — Elijah G. Hall, Frederick C. Pope.
Congressional, — Martin W. Cunniff, Edmund A. Shea.

Weymouth Delegates.

Weymouth Democrats elected these delegates:

State, pledged to Gaston, M. W. Lynch, F. M. Damon, Frank McCarthy, Henry G. Riley, J. H. Pierce, Matthew O'Dowd.
Congressional, Thomas McCue, John F. Fernell, Fred F. Cronin, William F. Connor, E. J. Pitcher, Henry F. Riley.
Councillor,—Sydney Marr, A. Raymond, J. W. Donovan, Alvah Raymond, J. Henry Packet, Isaac McIsaac.
Senatorial,—M. Q. Cushing, John V. Powers, Henry E. Kiley, John W. Henley, James F. Frawley, C. J. McMorrow.
Representative,—Frank Gunville, Peter F. Hughes, John F. Dwyer, John F. Reardon, Seth J. Leary. Frank A. Raymond, M. W. Lynch, H. F. Damon, C. J. McMorrow, Jesse H. Pierce, William F. Spilsted, John Ready.

Braintree Delegates.

These delegates were elected at the Braintree Democratic caucuses.

State,—Col. A. C. Drinkwater, Edward Shaw and John J. Powers.
Councillor,—John Cavanagh, J. J. O'Keefe, and Edward L. Frampton.
County,—John Cavanagh, James W. Colbert and Philip F. Sullivan.
Congressional,—Frank W. Jackson, William A. McKean and John H. Sullivan.

Turned over to Boston Officers.

Augustus S. Reynolds, Frank R. Morrison and George Callahan, the three young fellows arrested by the Milton police Monday for attempting larceny of a horse were discharged in court this morning for want of prosecution. They were immediately arrested and turned over to officers of Station 1, Boston, who have a good case against them.

Roberts—Smith.

A pretty home wedding took place on Wednesday afternoon in Wollaston when Miss Laura B. Smith and Mr. George A. Roberts were married at the home of the bride's parents on North Central avenue. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Bessie Smith and the groom was supported by his brother, Dr. William T. Roberts of Pawtucket, R. I. Shortly after the ceremony the young couple drove to Boston where they took the Montreal express for a visit to the grooms boyhood home. Upon their return they will reside at 208 Safford street Wollaston.

Towle, Lott, Hall.

Three of the Boston wards have opposing lists for Republican Congressional delegates, Wards 16, 20 and 24. William W. Towle of Ward 12 is favored by the delegation headed by Alpheus Sanford Ward 20 and by the delegation headed by Laban Pratt in Ward 24. The other delegations are supposed to favor William H. Lott or Ex-Mayor Hall of Quincy.

—James P. Ewell, one of the board of engineers of the Holbrook fire department, died Wednesday evening, aged 65 years. He leaves a widow and one son.

CITY BREVITIES.

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

The City Council on Streets meets Friday evening.

Miss Lulu Nelson of Atlantic street is enjoying a two weeks' vacation.

Election officers will probably be appointed at the next meeting of the City Council.

The Wollaston W. C. T. U. will meet Friday, Sept. 12, at 3 o'clock, with Mrs. Geo. A. Litchfield, Warren avenue.

J. F. Sheppard & Sons are loading 100 tons of hard coal on cars at the Quincy depot for the Moshassuck Valley railroad car shops at Salesville, R. I.

Mrs. Kate Hayden has been appointed by the department president of Woman's Relief Corps, as assistant inspector of Capt. Horace Niles corps, of Randolph.

Miss Ethel Staten, who has been the guest of her grandmother, Mrs. W. S. Russell of Billings street the past month, returned to her home in New York City today.

John W. McAnarney secured the acquittal of Howard E. Smith of Hyde Park at the Supreme court, on one of the four assault charges against him. The other cases are on trial.

Mrs. Helen C. Cushing of Reynolds corps of Weymouth has been appointed assistant inspector for Paul Revere corps of Quincy, also for General Sylvanus Thayer corps of Braintree.

The Republican City Committee has secured the rooms of the Master Builders and Trades' Association for their headquarters during the campaign. The rooms are centrally and pleasantly located.

The lost child call was sounded on the fire alarm at 8.45 this morning, for a four-year-old girl named Ross, who lived near Brewers corner. The child was found on Copeland street playing with other children.

Miss Grace L. Durgin of Beale street, Wollaston, who graduated from the College of Liberal Arts, Boston University, with the class of 1902, has accepted the position of assistant teacher in the Hanover High school.

Richard Newcomb, Asa A. Pope, and Jesse F. Curtis are the committee of arrangements for the second reunion of the old Washington M. French Hose Co., to be held at the Squantum Inn, Sept. 20. Tickets are now on sale.

John Cavanagh, Peter McConarty, Michael Burns, and Edward Lawton were delegates from Quincy at the organization of the central council of the United Irish League in Boston, on Tuesday evening.

The evening foot ball games which are in progress in Atlantic are not as elevating as they might be. The energy is all right when expended on foot ball, but when expended on profanity the rising youths surely cap the climax. Were the air blue already in the evening, it would take on that color with good reason for so doing.

Three Weeks' Cruise.

Commodore A. L. Baker and Fleet Captain E. H. Nichols of the Wollaston Yacht Club, have returned from a three weeks' cruise along the coasts of Massachusetts and Maine, on board the gasoline launch Endymino, owned by Mr. Nichols. The launch is a first-class cruiser, cabin finished in mahogany, and finely upholstered. They report a royal time, fine weather, varied by two tough storms.

They took in all points of interest as far as Christmas cove. On the return trip off Plum Island they encountered a severe blow, shipping a sea which put their fire out, leaving the launch helpless in a tremenduous sea. The Life Saving station at Plum island put out for them, but with too much grit to be picked up they soaked matches in kerosene oil and getting up fire put into Newburyport. Later in the day they called at the Life Saving station, thanking the boys for offered service.

While they would not belittle the beauties of the iron bound coast of the state of Maine, they are strongly of the opinion that most yachtmen underestimate the many attractions of our own Massachusetts coast. Mr. Baker kept a log which will furnish interest and amusement at one of the social gatherings of the Wollaston Yacht club later in the season.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. For sale by all Druggist.

Epilepsy

weakens the body and degrades the mind. It saps the nervous strength that is the source of all health, and perverts the functions of every organ. Because of its stubborn nature, it is often called incurable. This is not true. There is one medicine that never fails to check the nervous spasms and give new strength to the entire system.

"Our baby boy had epileptic spasms and the physicians were unable to do anything to help him. We heard of Dr. Miles' Nervine, and from the time he took the first dose he never had another attack," MRS. J. PENNER, 459 N. Meridian Ave., Anderson, Ind.

SUPERVISION.

How Director of Mint Would Control Trusts.

The Same As National Banks.

Would Prevent Over Capitalization and Protect Investor.

The evils of the trusts are apparent to the masses, but the panacea is not so plain. The best solution seems to be advanced, however, by George E. Roberts, the director of the mint, and one of the progressive students of public questions, who takes issue with the views recently expressed by a Washington official as to the propriety of the Government's exercising a similar supervision in behalf of the stockholders of an industrial concern that it now does in behalf of bank depositors. This, it was maintained, would be a step toward Socialism.

Lincoln, the Washington correspondent of the Boston Transcript reports Mr. Roberts as follows:

"The point has been raised, that the Government supervises banks because they are custodians of money of other people, and not to protect the interests of the stockholders, and it would be another and distinct step toward Socialism to undertake to protect the citizen in his own investments.

"True, it may be a step from the supervision of banks to the supervision of other business corporations, but does it involve any new principle? The deposit of money in a bank is an investment, clearly so where it is made for the accuring interest, and the supervision is justified on the ground that it is impracticable for each individual depositor to keep himself informed as to the management of the bank, and that it is a wise public policy to encourage thrift and the conservatism of capital by the use of banks. Does this reasoning apply to other corporations? Perhaps not forcibly so long as there is ample opportunity for investment where the owner may give it his own supervision. But if the business field is to be occupied by the great corporations, if it be true that the small independent producer and dealer must give way to them, how are the savings of the people to be invested? Does it not follow that the people who have been small dealers, and the wage-earners who have savings must become shareholders in the corporations?

It is already a grave problem how to invest the savings of people. The reduction of interest rates by savings banks tells the story. Millions are wasted annually because safe investments are not readily found. It is important to the country that this capital, vast in the aggregate, be utilized, aud with the field for independent business by individual constantly narrowing, investment in industrial corporations would seem to be a natural development and the one to be encouraged. The large corporations assume in that way an evolutionary function as cooperative institutions. If they are successfully managed and the rights of small stockholders are properly protected, they will do no more to demonstrate the feasibility of cooperation, to inaugurate it as a practical solution of the labor question, than has ever been done heretofore.

"But if this is to follow these corporations must be conducted with some regard for the rights of the small stockholder. There must be some restriction of those in control of the properties. Stock jobbery must be suppressed and minorities protected. The individual stockholder is as helpless as a single depositor in a bank, and why do not the same considerations of public policy that suggest supervision of banks suggest similar oversight of all these great corporations whose stock is offered for general investment? The Government does not undertake to run the banks, but it does attempt to see that they are honestly conducted, and that certain definite regulations are enforced.

"Instead of blindly opposing the tendency to industrial concentration which is certainly irresistible, this policy would control it, adapt our industrial system to it, save the benefits of concentration and distribute them broadcast, and at the same time establish industrial peace. Call it Socialism if you will. Modern industrial life is essentially co-operative and tends to industrial unity. That is, today, the modern industrial system is a great machine, tending constantly to be simplified. We should direct it along lines that are both practical and socially wholesome.

"If there is to be governmental regulation it is likely that overcapitalization will be forbidden. While a high capitalization does not directly give the power to increase charges, it has an effort to confuse, obscure and cover up the value of the stock as well as the cost of the production. The stock is distributed to the public on an unsafe basis, a false price level is established, and our whole industrial fabric is madinsecure. There is force in the argue ments, that we should not lay burdens upon corporation that will give wealthy individuals an advantage, but there is a distinction to be made between regulations that would make it more costly to do business and regulations that simply enforce straightforward, open methods of doing business. It is pretty safe to say that eventually these mammoth corporations will have to do business in the open.

"I notice you say in one of your etters about the real estate boom in Washington that people insist upon houses that have open plumbing; there is suspicion about the plumbing unless they can see all around it; and the people want to see all around and through the big concerns that have so much power and in which they are virtually compelled to invest their money if they invest it at all. They are not private concerns; they do not belong to the men who run them; the actual ownership is widely distributed; they have become institutions; they are a part of our industrial life, the agencies through which we supply our daily needs.

"If there was a national incorporation act, under which business enterprises could voluntarily incorporate and thus place themselves under national supervision, the companies that desire to place their stock on the market would probably be compelled by public sentiment to organize under it. Investors would give a decided preference to the share of such corporations.

"The prestige of the national banking system is due to the fact that it is under national supervision. Although every State maintains a system of supervision over banks incorporated under its own laws, it is well known that the general public has a preference for banks on the national system.

"As to the protection of consumers: if a start is made in the regulation of corporations and publicity and regularity is given to their methods, the whole question will be on the way to solution. If special favors from transportation companies are suppressed there will be ample competition in every line of industry.

"The great and potent fact in the situation is that capital is increasing in this country much more rapidly than population, for that means irrepressible competition. There are tens of millions of new capital available for investment every year, and the owners must crowd it into use somewhere or let it lie idle. The only way it can find employment is through the enlarged purchasing power of the masses; they must buy what they are consuming for less money or they cannot consume more."

AT WORLD'S FAIR.

A Quincy Granite Exhibit at St. Louis in 1904.

The Quincy Granite Manufacturers' Association made a very creditable and profitable exhibition at the Chicago World's Fair, and it is suggested that Quincy also be represented at the St. Louis Fair. The Monumental News for September says: "The marble and granite interests of the country are to be placed on the same footing as other industries in the St. Louis Universal Exposition of 1904, and it behooves our producers and manufacturers to get into a line of co-operation so that the importance of these industries may be properly represented there.

"At previous expositions, no matter of what magnitude, there has been a woeful lack of business foresight in connection with the proper display of these important products and their uses and manufacture, and the coming exposition with its comprehensive and up-to-date methods of arrangement offers opportunities for all concerned which must not be neglected.

"The Department of Manufactures will comprise three buildings, in which the varied industries will be subdivided into groups, which, in the domestic exhibits, will embrace all varities of each industry. The foreign exhibits will be divided into special groups according to nationality.

"This plan will be effective and convenient for comparing the merchandise of the world, and will obviate the necessity for wandering all over the place to obtain an understanding of any particular interest. It means a systematic installation of all the various branches of an industry in one section of a building so as to make a complete representation of that line of business. It will facilitate an exhaustive study of what a visitor may be particularly interested in with comparative comfort and well-regulated attention, and will leave him free for the exposition as a whole.

"It will be seen that it is to the interest of both producers and manufacturers of both materials, tools and manufacturing machinery, to co-operate in earnest, not only for the great benefits which will accrue to themselves, but also for the appreciation such plans will create in the public mind of the magnitude, value and importance of marble and granite in the trade of the country. This wise method of display and arrangement will secure the attention of the greatest number of people likely to use or sell the goods displayed, and it will be hard to conceive a more effective and economical way in which to promote business than by comprehensive exhibits at St. Louis in 1904."

Several weddings are announced for early fall.

William B. Tinker has returned from Provincetown.

Rev. H. C. Rogers of the Baptist church preached his farewell sermon last Sunday.

The Thursday evening club resumed its weekly meetings this week. The entertainment committee provided an entertainment for the opening night.

Arthur M. Gardner has gone to New York on a visit.

Rev. T. I. Reese has returned from his vacation and will preach at the Mission church Sunday.

Republican caucuses will be held Sept. 24.

Mrs. Robert Sweeney and children have returned from Houghs Neck.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hyslop and Mr. and Mrs. John Calvin are receiving congratulations on the birth of daughters last week.

Fred Perkins is learning the mason business.

The fire department was called out twice last Saturday. The first time for a fire in a shed on Eustis street and the second time for a fire in Marr's soap factory. At the latter fire the damage was considerable.

George Ellis of Fenno lane has gone into the dairy business.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dutton have gone to New York on a brief visit.

A young child of Stephen Fuller died Friday, Sept. 5, of spinal meningitis.

Paul Babcock was married at Belle Isle, Mexico, Wednesday, and will visit his old home at East Milton on his wedding trip.

The Canton delegates to the Milton-Canton Democratic Representative convention chosen are: John Finn, T. H. Carroll, E. F. Healy, M. J. Dockray and William W. Brooks.

A Fishing Trip.

Three over ambitious Wollaston young men went to the limit on Tuesday afternoon, when they realized the danger of their situation, being tossed like feathers on the waves in a small boat.

At an early morning hour the youths started out for smelt and as there was but little wind they could only row. After going about seven miles or so, in an hour and a half, they anchored off Houghs Neck, between Sheep and Slate islands, being exhausted after a long row.

After fishing two to three hours, making catch of four dozen, they decided to change locality and weighed anchor, but instead, they set sail in direction of Boston in a stiff breeze. They were all right until off Long island, when some one said that it would be a dead beat against the wind homeward and it was time they started.

Being opposed by the majority they continued round Long Island and started towards the South Boston clubhouse. The air by this time became very puffy and squally, and in trying to pass a buoy they were blown against it. The yacht was all right but the tender, in which was one young man, caught on the buoy. After freeing themselves from this dilemma, somewhat frightened, they set sail for home.

They tried for three hours to pass through the gut between Rainsford and Wards island and each tack lost ground. About half after three, terribly frightened, they set out for Dorchester bay. After an hour and a half, shipping water, fighting every squall, and once narrowly escaping capsizing, they arrived safely at the Colonial yacht club at Savin Hill. Frightened and fatigued with no food for 24 hours, they walked home in a rain storm from Savin Hill and arrived home about six o'clock A. M. as meek as Moses.

TODAY'S COURT.

The continued case of August Peterson for assault was called and again continued until Sept. 25.

Richard F. Madden and James H. Donahue were fined $3 each for drunkenness at Weymouth.

John Thompson was arraigned for cruelty to a cow at Weymouth and was fined $3.

Anson E. Cobbett was arraigned for larceny from a clothes line at Holbrook and was fined $25.

BY Virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Charles P. Hilstrom of Campello, in the County of Plymouth, and Commonwealth of Massachusetts to John H. Dinegan of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk and Commonwealth aforesaid, dated June 6, 1893, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Lib. 694, Fol. 586, and for breach of the conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same will be sold at public auction on the premises hereinafter described, on TUESDAY, the 7th day of October, 1902, at 2.30 o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage and therein described as follows, to wit:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situated at Houghs Neck, Quincy, being lot No. 234, Sect. 3, on plan of Manet Land Associates made July, 1890, and recorded in the Book of Plans in Norfolk County Registry of Deeds. Said parcel of land is bounded and described as follows:

Northerly on lot two hundred and thirty-three on said plan, one hundred and twenty eight 16-100 (128.16) feet; easterly on River Road, fifty-two 55-100 (52.55) feet; southerly on Darrow street, one hundred and twelve (112) feet; westerly on part of lot two hundred and thirty-two on said plan, fifty-six (56) feet; and containing six thousand and four (6,004) square feet of land.

This property will be sold subject to any and all unpaid taxes, tax title assessments, etc., if any there may be.

$100 is to be paid in cash at time and place of sale and the balance within ten days at my office in Quincy.

JOHN H. DINEGAN, Mortgagee.

CUSTOMS IN MANCHURIA

Russia Evidently Determined to Retain Them

PRESENCE OF FOREIGNERS

Held to Be Objectionable During Military Occupation—Expulsion Order Aimed at Britons—United States Not Directly Concerned In Matter

Pekin, Sept. 11.—Paul Lessar, the Russian minister here, has advised the Russian commander in Manchuria that the presence of foreigners in Manchuria during the military occupation is objectionable, and he is directed to expel the British imperial customs' employes who may be sent to Manchuria to resume charge of the postal service.

According to advices received here from Manchuria the Russians are making no visible preparations to withdraw from the military occupation of the southeast portion of the province of Shing-King, as was stipulated should be done within six months of the signing of the treaty. Russian troops and immigrants are reported to be entering Manchuria in large numbers, but none are leaving the country.

Washington, Sept. 11.—While Lessar's notice of the intention of the Russian government to expel foreigners from Manchuria has not been formally brought to the attention of the state department, it can be predicted safely that, for the present at least, our government will look upon this matter as one involving Russia, China and England, and as one in which it is not directly concerned.

So far as is known here there are no Americans in that section of China, and if it should appear later that there are some American prospectors in that country it is not probable the decree would be enforced in their case, as, while general in terms, the decree really is aimed at the British and marks a determination on the part of Russia to retain the actual control of customs in Manchuria in her own hands, while nominally recognizing Chinese sovereignty.

The British customs employes referred to are British by nativity but are actually in the employ of the Chinese government, and it may be that Russia will insist that the question raised by Lessar's order only concerns Russia and China. It is improbable, however, that the British government will take this view of the matter, and it is fully expected that the British minister at Pekin will call on the Chinese government to retain these British customs officials despite the Russian order.

The Bridge Workers' Strike

New Haven, Sept. 11.—The Structural Iron Workers' union states that the strike in Bridgeport has been settled, the Pennsylvania Steel company having agreed to give their men a nine-hour day and 40 cents an hour. The Berlin Iron and Bridge company have offered their Waterbury employes a nine-hour day and 40 cents an hour to complete the buildings in that city. The strikers last night decided not to accept the offer of the Berlin company unless the offer includes all their employes.

Mail Delivery by Electricity

Rome, Sept. 11.—Postoffice officials have examined a plan submitted by an engineer named Piscicelli for the establishment of a system of electrical delivery of the mails, by which letters are to be transmitted in aluminum boxes along overhead wires at the rate of 248 miles an hour. A commission has been appointed to report upon this system before instituting experiments between Rome and Naples.

Partners In Crime Dead

New York, Sept. 11.—The bodies of Edward Bigall, a tailor, and Martha Bachmann were found in apartments in a Brooklyn tenement house yesterday. It was evident that Bigall had shot the woman and himself. He had left his family and taken up with the Bachmann woman.

Kaiser's Gift to Mayor

Boston, Sept. 11.—German Cousul Reincke called on Mayor Collins yesterday and presented him with a half-length live-sized portrait of Prince Henry of Prussia. The portrait was the personal gift of Emperor William to Mayor Collins.

HOLLIS FOR GOVERNOR

New Hampshire Democrats Go on Record In Favor of License

Concord, N. H., Sept. 11.—The Democrats of New Hampshire met in state convention here yesterday and placed in nomination for governor Henry F. Hollis of Concord. John M. Mitchell of this city was also a candidate, but he received only 146 votes of the 398 votes cast in the first and only ballot taken. Hollis' nomination was made unanimous.

The chairman of the convention was Clarence E. Carr, who addressed the delegates at length. He favored woman suffrage, a pure ballot, local option, reciprocity with Cuba, and lower tariff, restriction of trusts and self-government in the Philippines. Mr. Carr announced that he was in agreement with some of President Roosevelt's ideas on the control of illegal combinations.

The platform adopted by the convention reaffirms "allegiance to the essential principles of the Democracy of the nation." It demands "the immediate abolition of all tariffs on trust-made articles," the stringent enforcement of all laws against combines, free trade with insular territories, independence of the Philippine islands and a reduction of duties on Cuban imports. The resolutions also declare for a law authorizing towns and cities, by a majority vote, to license and control the sale of intoxicating liquors. The convention by a large majority refused to favor woman suffrage.

Slugged and Robbed

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 11.—Charles I. Foster of Salem came to this city yesterday with $200 in his pocket and woke up on the beach at 11 o'clock last night with an aching head and minus his money and watch. He said he met a stranger in a saloon and walked on the beach with him when they met another man and a woman. Foster walked along with the woman, leaving the two men talking, when he got a severe blow on the back of the head which knocked him down and he was then beaten into unconsciousness.

Charged With Killing Wife

Wilton, Me., Sept. 11.—Evidence was introduced at the coroner's inquest yesterday which caused the jury to render a verdict that Josie Holbrook came to her death by reason of a bullet from a revolver fired by Herbert L. Holbrook, her husband. Witnesses testified that Holbrook and his wife were having an exciting dispute when the shooting occurred. A careful examination showed that the woman could not have committed suicide, as Holbrook claims. Holbrook was committed to jail without bail.

Cow Butchered by Trolley Car

Danvers, Mass., Sept. 11.—A car on the new Middleton and Lawrence street railway which left Lawrence for Salem at 5 p. m. yesterday with 60 passengers ran into a cow on a hill near North Andover, and was derailed, continuing for about 400 feet over ties and rock ballast. The car was under great headway at the time, and it scattered portions of the cow's carcass for 150 feet. Most of the passengers kept their seats and all escaped injury.

Acquitted on First Charge

Dedham, Mass., Sept. 11.—The first of the several assault cases against Howard E. Smith was quickly disposed of yesterday by the jury in the Norfolk criminal court returning a verdict of not guilty on the charge made by Miss Matilda McAllister. Smith was then called to answer to the charge of attempting criminal assault on Miss Cora M. Gunn. The case was not finished when court adjourned.

Innovation In Granite Industry

Barre, Vt., Sept. 11.—Leland Hall & Co. shipped by express today to Hammond, Ind., a stone weighing 3000 pounds. The express charges on it will be $157.50. The stone was ordered on Saturday last to serve as a cornerstone for the new city hall, and as freight could not be depended upon to land the stone in Hammond by Sept. 18 the express company was given the task.

Alleged Bigamist Held

Portland, Me., Sept. 11.—Isaac W. Powers, who left his bride of three days at Bridgton three weeks ago, was arraigned in court here yesterday and bound over to the superior court in $4000 on the charge of bigamy. He was arrested at Rochester, N. H., after the police had been notified that Powers has at least one wife in the eastern part of the state.

Took Laudanum and Whisky

Gardner, Mass., Sept. 11.—The body of Mazrie Emonds, a blacksmith, who has been missing for three weeks, was found in a pasture between Templeton and Hubbardston yesterday. By its side were a laudanum bottle partly filled and an empty whisky bottle. Emonds had been in poor health for some time.

Sawmill Strike Is Off

Bangor, Me., Sept. 11.—The strike of the sawmill men was declared off last night, after having lasted eight days. The men returned to work this morning and will work 11 hours a day for the rest of the week, after which 10 hours will constitute a day's labor.

Victim of Vicious Bull

Putney, Vt., Sept. 11.—Willard F. May was killed by a thoroughbred Holstein bull on a stock farm here yesterday. He had led the bull from the barn to the pasture, and his body, terribly crushed, was found half an hour later.

A Mother's Sad Greeting

Westerly, R. I., Sept. 11.—Peter Cristine was killed near Westerly station by a train last night. He had just alighted from a work train and stepped upon the other track in front of an express. His mother had only arrived in this country from Italy yesterday.

"To say a pleasant word to anyone was almost impossible."

"I was troubled with female weakness for eight years; and suffered more than I can tell," writes Mrs. Gust. Moser of Ovando, Deerlodge Co., Mont. "My disposition was affected to such an extent that to say a pleasant word to anyone was almost impossible.

"I had two operations performed by one of the most skilled surgeons of the West, but did not get relief. Then, against my doctor's strict orders, I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and also followed the advice given in the Common Sense Medical Adviser.

"I continued this treatment for three months, and to-day am as healthy and well as a woman can be. I cannot thank Doctor Pierce enough for his kind letters to me."

Womanly diseases, as a rule, spoil the "disposition," because of the extreme nervousness and suffering they cause. Happiness as well as health is restored to the woman whose diseased condition is cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

After eight years of suffering and two fruitless operations, three months' use of "Favorite Prescription" restored Mrs. Moser to perfect health. This great remedy for woman's ills, establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

The Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 large pages, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

GAINS FOR INSURGENTS

Reported by Vessels From Colombian Ports

FIGHT AT SANTA MARTA

Hundred Government Troops Killed and Railroads Demolished—Activity on Isthmus of Panama In Expectation of Desperate Engagement

Kingston, Ja., Sept. 11.—Captain Gronmeyer of the steamer Valencia, which arrived here yesterday from Santa Marta, capital of the department of Magdalena, Colombia, says that last Friday the revolutionists made a desperate attack on the outskirts of Santa Marta. The government troops were overwhelmed and forced to retreat, leaving behind them 100 dead. Immediately after the withdrawal of the government forces the rebels started to destroy the railroad tracks. They derailed several trains at various points, demolishing engines and cars, the latter being chiefly fruit vans. Several lives were also lost in these wrecks.

Saturday the revolutionists occupied the banana district of Senega, where they continued to wreck the railroad and at the same time keeping up their advance towards Santa Marta. When the Valencia sailed from Santa Marta Monday the revolutionists were so near the town that Captain Gronmeyer could see the flashes of their guns. Several buildings in Santa Marta were then blazing, having been ignited by the few troops left there to oppose the attack of the revolutionists. The town at that time was expected momentarily to surrender.

Officers of the Valencia say that horrible atrocities were committed during the fighting by the rebels, who chiefly used machetes. Almost all of the government troops killed were found along the railroad track, their bodies being terribly mutilated. They were partially covered by branches of banana trees.

Santa Marta is entirely cut off from communication with outside points and the residents of the port have sent an appeal by sea to Colon for protection. It is feared that the revolutionists will sack Santa Marta when they capture it. The stores there are closed and the greatest terror prevails.

The attack of the revolutionists was entirely unexpected, and owing to the superior numbers of the revolutionists the resistance of the government forces was half-hearted. Officers of the Valencia do not think the Colombian government can get reinforcements into Santa Marta in time to save the town.

Steamer William Cliff reached here yesterday from Colon. Her officers report considerable activity on both sides of the isthmus when the vessel left Colon Monday, and that the revolutionists had already occupied Culebra, on the railroad between Panama and Colon, and were advancing in strength.

General Herrera is said to be in command of the revolutionary forces, which seem to be concentrating at a point about midway between Panama and Colon. There are strong government forces at both ends of the railroad and reinforcements are coming in. Breastworks are being erected at Colon and Panama. Owing to the fact that the government does not know where to expect an attack, it keeps its soldiers moving along the 40 miles of railroad.

The revolutionists gained possession of Culebra without opposition and their possession of that point has not been disturbed. The government is maintaining an attitude of defense and a desperate engagement is expected shortly. Business on the isthmus is suspended and the people are very fearful, especially since the revolutionist victory at Agua Dulce.

When the Cliff left Colon the prevailing opinion on the isthmus was that the revolutionists would attack Panama before advancing upon Colon, because of the support they would get from their gunboats on the Pacific side of the isthmus in an attack on the first named city. The revolutionists have no gunboats on the Atantic side.

It is believed the revolutionists will push their operations as quickly as possible because of the problem which confronts General Herrera of provisioning the large government force which surrendered to him at Agua Dulce, in addition to the other government prisoners he holds. It is believed that some of Herrera's prisoners will fight with his forces.

The government is said to be chafing at the delay in the arrival at Panama of the new gunboat Bogota, recently purchased at Seattle. Lack of transportation facilities for the government is said to be largely responsible for the present situation on the isthmus.

Pilgrims Killed by Gypsies

Vienna, Sept. 11.—At Maria Rabna, in Hungary, 200 pilgrims were journeying to the shrine of the Virgin. They spent the night in a barn. A body of Wallachian gypsies robbed the sleeping pilgrims and set fire to the barn. An indescribable panic ensued. Eight of the pilgrims were burned to death, nine were seriously injured—and many of them were crushed.

Latest Figures From Maine

Portland, Me., Sept. 11.—There are but 20 small towns yet to report their election figures of Monday to unofficially complete the state vote for governor. Two years ago these towns polled only 1000 in the aggregate. In Monday's election 481 towns gave a plurality for Hill of 26,040 and a majority of 20,626.

Cleaning Carpets

Isn't pleasant work, no one cares to do it at home, and even if they do try, it's almost impossible to beat out all of the dirt.

Now, cleaning carpets is part of our business, we like to do it, not by hand though, for our steam carpet beating does the work neater and better than the hands of any man can do.

Carpets taken up, cleaned and relaid.

THE COLOMBIAN CRISIS

Recognized by Our Government to Be Most Serious

BATTLESHIP AND CRUISER

Ordered to Proceed to Panama to Protect American Interests—Interference With Traffic Across the Isthmus Will Not Be Permitted

Washington, Sept. 12.—Secretary Moody yesterday telegraphed to the commanders of the battleship Wisconsin, now at Bremerton, and the cruiser Cincinnati, at Cape Haytien, directing them to proceed as soon as possible to the Isthmus of Panama, the Wisconsin reinforcing the Ranger at Panama and the Cincinnati taking station at Colon.

It will take the Wisconsin fully 20 days to make the long trip of over 4050 miles down the Pacific coast to Panama. The navy department had intended to send the Boston, which is now getting ready for service at San Francisco, to relieve or reinforce the Ranger, but the alarming situation which has so quickly arisen on the isthmus prompted the officials to take more extensive measures to increase the naval representation of the United States in that section.

The Cincinnati will consume only a few days in her trip across from Cape Haytien, so that by the beginning of next week she should have reached the other terminal of the Panama railroad.

The destruction of Admiral Killick's flagship swept away the entire naval force of Hayti, and naval officials believe that the Cincinnati can relinquish her post.

It is realized that, notwithstanding the absence of a Haytien navy on either side of the revolutionary struggle, there is danger that some of the ports where American property interests are large may suffer because of the practice which has grown up in the course of the rebellion of burning towns before evacuating them. Therefore it has been decided to send the gunboat Montgomery, now being overhauled at New York, to replace the Cincinnati at Port au Prince.

The commanders of the Cincinnati and Wisconsin will be instructed to enforce our treaty stipulations with Colombia strictly by preventing any interference with traffic across the Isthmus, and also to prevent a bombardment of Panama from the sea, on the ground that this in itself would constitute a menace to traffic. Neither the Wisconsin nor the Cincinnati carries very large marine contingents, but any lack in this respect, it is said, can be made up by equipping jackies for shore duty should it become necessary to land a force on Colombian soil to enforce the guarantees of the treaty or to protect American interests.

The sudden turn of events near Panama came as a surprise to officials of the state and navy departments. Affairs in that quarter had quieted to such a degree that only the little gunboat Ranger kept watch. The Marietta was keeping a close eye on the trend of affairs in Venezuela, and the Cincinnati was performing similar duty in Hayti.

The emergency arose so suddenly, therefore, that Hayti must be left unwatched by an American war vessel during the interval between the departure of the Cincinnati for Colon and the arrival of the Montgomery in Haytien waters.

It is thought the centre of trouble is likely to be at or near Panama city, and it is for that reason and because of the small size and complement of the Ranger that the big Wisconsin has been dispatched to the scene.

Later in the day the officials of the navy department decided to take no chances of an insufficient landing force in case of an emergency on the isthmus, and orders were sent forward to the U. S. S. Panther, which is now enroute to League Island, to take aboard a battalion of marines upon her arrival and proceed to Colon. Orders were issued for the organization of the marines, who will number 380 men, and will be commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Russell, with Major Barnett as second in command. Captains Porter, Butler and Marix will command three of the four companies and Captain Lemly will act as quartermaster. It will be the duty of the marines to keep transit across the isthmus clear. The marines performed a similar service in 1885.

Addition to Colombian Navy

San Francisco, Sept. 12.—The steamer Jessie Banning, formerly the British steamer Cutch, arrived here yesterday from Seattle on the way south to join the Colombian navy. Captain Marmaduke admitted that the steamer had been converted into a man-of-war for the Colombian government and that he would command her.

BREWERY STRIKE ENDS

Only Remaining Difficulty Is to Be Settled by Arbitration

Boston, Sept. 12.—The brewery strike is ended. An agreement was signed yesterday afternoon by Charles Pfaff, chairman of the executive committee of the Boston Brewers' association, and Edmond F. Ward, who had charge of the brewery workers' end of the strike.

Concessions have been made on both sides. The master brewers have stood by the men who kept on working when ordered to strike or were hired to take the places of the strikers. The strikers refused to consider the strike breakers' question in any way. The difficulty has been settled by referring the matter to the state board of arbitration, whose decision is to be final.

The agreement is made that all men who are out on strike or were locked out in connection with the strike shall be hired at not less than the same wages, provided they apply for work before 5 p. m. Sept. 12; all men so hired shall be reinstated in their former positions as far as possible; Boston-made beer to be taken off unfair list; the state board of arbitration to decide upon what terms the men now at work in the breweries shall be admitted into the unions. If they are admitted rotation shall apply to all contracts until January, 1903. The strike has been on since April 3.

Ran Into Hands of Police

New York, Sept. 12.—Two arrests made last night resulted in the recovery of property valued at $6000, which is alleged to have been stolen a few hours earlier in the evening. William McNamee was taken to a station for assaulting a restaurant employe. Upon being searched, a large quantity of valuable jewelry was found. Shortly afterward a man representing himself as Frank McNamee, brother to the prisoner, entered the station, and he, too, was searched. Jewelry of all sorts was found, together with $1200 in money. About the same time reports were received at police headquarters of a robbery in west Twenty-third street. The woman reporting the loss was at once taken to the station where the McNamees were and she identified the property mentioned.

Defenders Overwhelmed

Frankfort, Sept. 12.—The American Generals Young and Wood and their aides, Lieutenants McKinley and McCoy, charged with the cavalry led by Emperor William in the war maneuvers yesterday. This charge was the climax of the maneuvers. About 9000 horsemen, lancers, cuirassiers and dragoons fell upon the flank of the retreating "blues" (defending army), capturing 30 of the latter's guns and 2000 of its infantry. The enemy's forces had been previously theoretically disordered by a heavy infantry attack.

An Impoverished Treasury

Constantinople, Sept. 12.—Only one-half of the amount of money required for the payment of salaries, etc., upon the occasion of the sultan's anniversary, Sept. 8, was obtained from the provinces, and these collections were only made by threats that the provincial tax collectors would lose their positions unless the money was forthcoming. The balance of the sum required was made up from sources which will interfere with the porte's payments to the Cramps of Philadelphia and to Krupp of Germany for war material.

For Church Work In Philippines

New York, Sept. 12.—J. P. Morgan and Senator Hanna are among the signers of a statement, issued yesterday, asking for funds for the work of the Episcopal church in the Philippines. "It is important," says the statement, "that American Christianity should be in a position to carry on such work among the natives as will convince them of the benevolent intention of the people of the United States." The sum named as sufficient to yield an adequate fixed income is $1,000,000.

Heathenish Russian Ruling

London, Sept. 12.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Daily Mail relates that the commander of the Cassack station at Wertschink, anxious that his district should show a preponderance of males, has ordered that the father of every girl baby born in the district shall receive 50 strokes with the knout. Several men have already been knouted under this ruling.

Professor Broke Marriage Promise

Huntingdon, Pa., Sept. 12.—Miss Cora A. Keime, who brought an action of breach of promise against Professor Brumbaugh, acting president of the Juniata college, was awarded a verdict of $9250 yesterday. This is the only instance wherein legal action has been had between members of the Dunkard church.

Worden Made 30.50 Knots

Baltimore, Sept. 12.—The torpedo boat destroyer Worden, which, with the Bainbridge, was given her standardization trial yesterday, showed that she is the speediest vessel of her class afloat. During a spurt over one leg of her trial course the Worden developed a speed of 30.50 knots. The Worden showed an average of 29.86 knots and the Bainbridge 28.72. The contracts call for 28 knots.

Laborers Scarce In Manila

Manila Sept. 12.—The business men of this city are organizing for the purpose of agitating for limited Chinese immigration to the Philippines. The Philippine commission may endorse the proposal to permit limited immigration of Chinese, as labor here is scarce and high wages have to be paid.

WILL NOT INTERFERE

Morgan Determined Not to Meddle With Coal Strike

HEWITT GIVES HIS VIEWS

Says Mitchell Wants Recognition For Himself, Which Will Not Be Granted by Operators, Who Are Willing to Deal With Their Own Employes

New York, Sept. 12.—Abram S. Hewitt, former mayor of New York, gave out a statement yesterday in which he said he knew positively that J. P. Morgan would not interfere in the coal strike. Mr. Hewitt also said that the coal operators would not agree to arbitrate with John Mitchell, but that he believed they would consider grievances presented by their employes. Continuing, Mr. Hewitt said:

"I don't altogether blame Mitchell for bringing on this strike. Mitchell advised against the strike. When he called the convention at Shamokin he thought he would be able to control it and show what a big fellow he was. But those young fellows came in and wanted the strike and the convention got beyond Mitchell's control.

"Then he called the Indianapolis convention. He told the anthracite miners that he would ask the bituminous miners to go on a sympathetic strike. He did so and they refused.

"Mr. Mitchell in public clamors for arbitration. But does he want arbitration? What Mitchell wants is recognition for himself. Mitchell is fighting for his very life, but there will be no recognition of Mitchell on the part of the operators and no arbitration between the operators and Mitchell.

"It was Mitchell who destroyed the principle of arbitration in the coal fields. The operators are willing and ready to adjust any grievances by concessions or otherwise with their own employes. But they will have nothing to do with Mitchell. That is positive.

"Some of my critics reproach me with being the owner of coal property and therefore not disinterested. Now all through my long life I believe that it is generally recognized that when I have expressed myself in disputes between capital and labor I have generally sided with the workingman.

"In 1876, during the days of the Molly Maguires, I made a tour of inspection through the mining regions. I found terrible conditions then. I found the men living under wretchedly brutal conditions. It was shortly after this that I became a director of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company. I advised the management to better the conditions of the workingmen. They replied that they could not do so and derive profit from their business. I did my best to convince them that it will always conduce to the profit of the employer to consider the interests of those working for them. Finally I brought them around to my point of view and it was not long before better conditions obtained among the employes of that company.

"When this strike was called the employes of the companies almost to a man owned their own homesteads. They were thrifty and respectable—as respectable people as you will meet anywhere. They had $800,000 in the savings banks. They never wanted to strike, but now they have to live on their savings and walk around with their hands in their pockets, against their will, simply because they do not dare to go back to work."

Didn't Discuss Strike

Philadelphia, Sept. 12.—Senator Quay called on President Baer of the Reading company yesterday for about five minutes. After Quay departed Baer said the senator's visit had no significance. The anthracite mine workers' strike, he said, was not discussed. Senator Quay declined to talk.

Soldiers In Row With Deputies

Shenandoah, Pa., Sept. 12.—While several members of company K, Eighth regiment, were passing the stockade at Ridge colliery last evening, it is said they called the deputies hoboes and vile names and several of the latter followed them to camp and attempted to arrest them. Almost the entire company got after the deputies and chased them back to the colliery. On orders from Captain Duffy, many of the soldiers were placed in the guard house. Nearly all the members of the company are strikers.

Arbitration at Chicago

Chicago, Sept. 12.—Arbitration as a means of settling labor troubles proved a decided success in Chicago yesterday. One strike was settled, one that was threatened was averted and two were put in such shape that it is reasonably certain that they will be brought to an end today. The danger of a famine through the strike of the packing house teamsters and the bakers and cracker wagon drivers now seems a thing of the past.

Cars Not Yet Running

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 12.—The motormen's strike on the Hudson Valley trolley system is still on. It was expected to resume operations yesterday, but not a car was sent out, the reason assigned being that the sheriffs of Saratoga, Warren and Washington counties cannot secure enough deputies to afford the necessary protection.

A Removal and Appointment

Washington, Sept. 12.—The president has removed William Vaughan, United States district attorney of the northern district of Alabama, for neglect of duty. The president has appointed John P. Debolt judge at Honolulu, vice Abram S. Humphreys, resigned. Debolt is a member of the Honolulu bar.

General Condemned to Death

Port au Prince, Hayti, Sept. 12.—The revolutionary general, Chicoye, has been tried by a military tribunal and sentenced to be executed on Oct. 9. Preparations for an attack by government forces upon Gonaives, the headquarters of the Firminist revolutionists, are being continued.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Saturday, Sept. 13.
Sun rises—5:21; sets—5:59.
Moon sets—1:07 a. m.
High water—7:45 a. m.; 8 p. m.

A disturbance in the southwest will probably move northeastward with increasing intensity, extending into south and west New England, with rain and falling temperature.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

Gov. Hill's plurality is on the increase Election seturns from all but three towns and seven plantations in Maine, give Hill 95,569, Gould 38,257; Hill's plurality 27,312.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ We are going at a high clip this year. Everything is high—beefsteak, coal and timber for your new house. The Vanderbilts spend from $30,000 to $50,000 on a ball. Even the automobilists have the speed madness. The wheel of fortune whirls faster and faster and the head gets giddy from watching it. Saratoga, in a way, serves to illustrate the ruling passion of the time, and to level at the nation a warning.—Springfield Republican.

☞ The New Bedford Standard takes a sane view of the Pittsfield accident and protests that there was no necessity for all car traffic being stopped for the reason that the president was in the city and no reason why the cars should not have run as on any other day. If they had done just that there would have been no accident. There would be no justification for a motorman attempting to break through a procession of any kind at a high rate of speed, and the prosecution of the offending car man in this case should not be based simply on the fact that it was the president's carriage that was struck.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ A few days ago, John Wanamaker borrowed a million dollars, and some of the papers are making a fuss about it. Why shouldn't he borrow money if he needs it? Who knows but what he contemplated a trip to the White mountains, and everybody knows who has tried it that a million dollars will not go a great ways in the Granite State among the thrifty farmers who get their living off the summer boarders. The Philadelphians are said to be mildly excited over the loan, and they are guessing what he wants to do with it, just as if a man could not borrow a little pocket money without all the neighbors being called on to arbitrate it. Wanamaker runs a newspaper, and he may have needed the money to day off his help, or to buy a new serial story. There are lots of things he might do, or want to do with a million dollars, and we say just let him.—Lynn Item.

☞ The autumn dwellers at fashionable Lenox are said to have adopted a set of rules that sound strange as applied to "high" society. There is to be no gossip; everything is to be done in the most conservative fashion; and exclusiveness is to reign. These are fine things, all of them. No gossip—but how will society pass the time if it cannot get the exercise of "hammer-throwing?" All conservatism—but how does that agree with speeding autos, and loud outing clothes, and high spiced and high wined dinners, and all that sort of thing? We don't know who made the rules, but we are willing to wager something small and "conservative" that not one of them will be observed for over three days by any of the Lenox colony. The attempt to be exclusive will come the nearest to being observed of any of the social laws that have been set down for Lenox.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞ A decision of the Pennsylvania courts puts the Carnegie gifts for libraries in an uncertain position. This was that in the case of Grove City, which accepted a gift on the condition of appropriating $1,800 annually for maintenance. Citizens who opposed the scheme took the matter into the courts, with the result that the borough had no constitutional power to makes such an agreement. Now there is a puzzle as to weather Mr. Carnegie will take back his gift, and also whether the same rule applies to other gifts of like character.—New Bedford Standard.

—If the trust system is bad for fundamental reasons, then evidently it cannot be excused on the ground that there has been no undue mulcting of the consumer. The real trouble in solving the trust problem lies, in fact, primarily in the difficulty of getting the public to look beyond the immediate matter of prices which touches it most nearly, and to seek for such regulations as will bring about a system of industrial control that will make it possible to avoid these evils of a more deep-seated character that flows from the suppression of competition and the enjoyment of special favors. The trust problem will never be solved until we can understand that it is not exclusively a matter of prices.—Louisville Courier Journal.

☞ The big seven-master Thomas W. Lawson has been sampling the waters about Massachusetts bay preparatory to taking her maiden voyage. The idea in building these leviathans is to overcome low freights by immense sail and carrying power. Some skeptics think that the Lawson has overstretched the limit, but time will tell. The anthracite coal consumer will find scant consolation in the enormous carrying power of the new floating venture, as she is going for a load of soft coal. Now for the eight-master. But let us first see whether the megaphone will successfully reach the man at work on the outer jib after the ship's telescope has sighted him—Globe.

☞ American humanity has come off victor once more. The cowboy race from Deadwood to Omaha has been called off at the request of President Roosevelt, in honor of whose Omaha visit the race was declared. This is as it should be, and as every American knew it would be, when our "Teddy" learned of the doubtful honor. There have been days when this dash of six hundred miles would have been esteemed the fitting honor for cowboy to pay to President. There have been Presidents who might have appreciated the compliment. But there has been no such Western President as Roosevelt, and he understands the demands made upon man and horse by this mad hurry. It is only a few days ago that a similar dash was made in Germany, from one burg to another, in honor of royalty. The distance to be covered was but a fraction of the proposed American ride—only eighty miles. But this was enough to kill several horses and seriously injure more than one man. The brutality of the run aroused Europe, and certainly there could be no American imitation of the barbarous display.—St. Pauls Dispatch.

Open to Foot Travel.

Work on Quincy Point bridge is progressing favorably, but as the prelimary work is necessarily slow it does not show much change from day to day. The old bridge on the Weymouth side of the new draw is practically all torn away. Although the street railway track is intact it is not being used as it is understood the authorities will not permit. The foot bridge is outside of the railroad structure and this will probably remain in use until the new structure is completed.

That is dyspepsia.
It makes life miserable.
Its sufferers eat not because they want to, —but simply because they must.
They know they are irritable and fretful; but they cannot be otherwise.
They complain of a bad taste in the mouth, a tenderness at the pit of the stomach, an uneasy feeling of puffy fulness, headache, heartburn and what not.

PAPERS OPENED.

Nominations for the Republican Caucuses.

Only Contests in Ward Four.

Hall for Congress and Badger for County Commissioner.

Nomination papers for the Republican caucuses of next week were opened Thursday evening and there are very few contests. The only ward with opposing delegations is Ward Four of West Quincy, where there are two lists for every convention except county. West Quincy Republicans appear to be united on William E. Badger for County Commissioner, and he will probably secure all the 16 delegates from Quincy.

None of the delegates nominated, outside of County are pledged but the State delegations are undoubtedly for Bates and Guild; the Councillor for the renomination of Mr. Maxwell; the Congressional for ex-Mayor John O. Hall of Quincy and the Senatorial may be divided between Wilbur H. Powers of Hyde Park and Albert A. Brackett of Milton.

The nominations by wards:

WARD ONE.

State,—Charles A. Howland, Charles C. Hearn, Isaac M. Holt and Edward L. Goodridge.
Councillor,—Otto Gelotte, Edgar G. Cleaves, Albert G. Dolliver and Henry P. Furnald.

County (favorable to W. E. Badger),—Chas. M. Jenness, Archibald F. Macleod, Henry P. Kittredge and Arthur W. Stetson.
Senatorial,—Eben W. Sheppard, Albert G. Dolliver, Edward Johnson and Archibald F Macleod.

WARD TWO.

State,—Thaddeus H. Newcomb and Arthur W. Newcomb.
Councillor,- George E. Adams and Eugene C. Hultman.
Congressional,—Rollin H. Newcomb and Edwin W. Newcomb.
County,—John S. Gay and Thaddeus H. Newcomb.
Senatorial,—Thaddeus H. Newcomb and George P. Mead,

WARD THREE.

State,—James Thompson, John P. Bigelow, and Thomas W. Smith.
County (favorable to W. E. Badger),—Walter E. Piper, Alfred O. Diack and Thomas W. Smith.
Councillor,—James W. Pierce, William J. Williams and Alonzo L. Litchfield.
Senatorial,—Frederick L. Jones, Alexander Falconer and Oscar F. Frisk.
Congressional,—John P. Bigelow, Frank L. Carlton and John G. Roberts.

WARD FOUR.

State,—James F. Allen and William H. Hughes.
Second list,—Jonas Shackley and Eric A. Carlson.
Councillor,—Andrew Anderson and Albert G. Farnham.
Second list,—Michael Owens, and Charles Laudine.
Congressional,—Thomas F. Burke and William H. Teasdale.
Second list,—J. Leonard Ferguson and William Gelotte.
County,—Hiram W. Campbell and William E. Badger.
Senatorial,—Alfred Johnson and Alexander Shirley.
Second list,—William P. Barry and John C. Kapples.

WARD SIX.

State,—Thomas Gurney and Benjamin T. Thomas.
County,—James H. Cunningham and Herbert F. Barker.
Councillor,—Daniel McGrath and Charles R. Hendrie.
Senatorial,—Ralph W. Hobbs and Roger H. Wilde.
Congressional, — Herbert D Gearwar and Elwin R. Thorpe.

September Magazines.

Little Folks, the magazine for youngest readers, published at Salem, Mass., by S. E. Cassino, is pretty of cover and choice in contents. The September number opens with a word to lazy girls and boys in Clara D. Merriam's poem "A Belated Violet." "The Story of a Candy Heart," by Josephine Scribner Gates, will be sure to please little folk. Other things there are in verse and prose and picture which ought to make Little Folks welcome everywhere.

CITY BREVITIES.

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

Morning tides next week.

Full moon next Wednesday.

Heavy dews now every night.

Everybody says this is grand weather.

The nights will get the best of the days Sept. 27.

A pension has been issued to Mrs. Elizabeth L. Turner.

W. F. Steadman has just completed two new houses off Chubbuck street.

Miss Emily Arnold of Braintree has been the guest of Miss Mollie Brown this week.

The early evening tides and warm water still attract the bathers at Wollaston beach.

Abraham Breen is about to build a new house on the Kittredge property at Quincy Point.

The house being erected on the Col. Packard property at Quincy Point is for a Lynn party.

The new house of Dr. Bushnell on Washington street opposite Chubbuck street is about completed.

Chester Melville, who has been spending the summer at the Cape, has returned to Wollaston for a short time.

A letter has been received from Frank J. Flood of Wollaston, who is at Block island, having just returned from Kansas City City.

Miss Corlew, the popular instructor in dancing, will have classes this year at Quincy and Wollaston, opening early in October.

Ex-Mayor Hall will be a guest this evening of the North Dorchester Republican club. Tenth district affairs will be considered.

Sunday evening at the Methodist church in Atlantic the pastor is to give an address on the subject "The modern newspaper of America."

The Daily Ledger will probably occupy its business office on the first floor next week, but it will be Oct. 1, before we are permanently settled.

A golf tournament for the newspaper men of New England will be held on the links of the Wollaston Golf Club, Montclair, beginning Monday, Sept. 15.

It is reported that the old Deacon Bills house on South street has been sold and that the land is to be surveyed into house lots and put on the market.

Work rebuilding Chubbuck street is progressing and when completed will make a great improvement. A retaining wall has been built on the western side of the street near the Washington street end and a front wall in front of the Raycroft homestead. The grade of the street at the Washington street end will be raised.

L. M. Shaw, Secretary of the Treasury, informs the Ledger that final consideration of the sites for a Federal building in Quincy will be made October 9. That any person desiring to submit further statements in writing relative to any of the sites offered may do so, and that the communication will be given consideration if received befor that date.

The church and the public schools, will be the subject of both the morning and evening services at Bethany Congregational church on Sunday. The pastor will speak on their relations in the morning, and in the evening two of the principals of Quincy schools—Charles Sampson and T. B. Pollard—will speak for the schools. The public is invited.

A very mysterious accident happened at Wollaston last night. A young man leaving his bicycle on the curbing went into the paper store and on returning found his front wheel smashed in two places, thus necessitating a walk home. As only one man heard a bicycle fall and he knew not where, no one yet knows how the accident happened. An investigation is being made. It is thought that an express team which was near there had backed into it.

—Former Queen Liliuokalani has heard that her old friend Grover is back on the political trail again, and she is reviving her claims for lands which still hang in the balance because they were crown lands. The Democrats might make that an issue and start Grover out in a life boat to pull for the Hawaiain shore.

—A clergyman was much surprised one day at receiving a basket of potatoes from an old woman in his parish, with a message saying that as he had remarked in his sermon on the previous Sunday that some "common taters (commentators) did not agree with him she had sent him some real good ones.

NORFOLK, ss. PROBATE COURT.

To the heirs-at-law, next-of-kin, and all other persons interested in the estate of JAMES SMITH,
late of Quincy, in said County, deceased.

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, has been presented to said Court for Probate by Jennie Margaret Crane, (formerly Jennie Margaret Smith) of Quincy, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to her, the executrix therein named, without giving a surety on her official bond.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Dedham, in said County of Norfolk, on the seventeenth day of September, A. D. 1902, at ten o'clock in the forenoon to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Quincy Daily Ledger, a newspaper published in Quincy, the last publication to be one day at least before said Court, and by mailing, postpaid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate seven days at least before said Court.

Witness, JAMES H. FLINT, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this third day of September, in the year one thousand nine hundred and two.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. THE HUMAN STOMACH.

How It Is Overworked by Three Big Daily Meals.

It requires about five hours for the stomach to work on an ordinary meal and pass it out of itself, when it falls into a state of repose; hence if a man eats three times a day his stomach must work fifteen hours out of twenty-four. After a night's sleep we wake up with a certain amount of bodily vigor which is faithfully portioned out to every muscle of the system and every set of muscles, each its rightful share, the stomach among others.

When the external body gets weary after a long day's work, the stomach bears its share of the fatigue, but if when the body is weary with the day's toil we put it to bed, giving the stomach meanwhile a five hours' task which must be performed, we impose upon the very best friend we have—the one that gives us one of the largest amounts of earthly enjoyment—and if this overtaxing is continued it must as certainly wear out prematurely as the body itself will if it is overworked every day.

And if persons eat between meals then the stomach has no rest from breakfast in the morning until 1, 2, 3 or 4 o'clock next day; hence it is that so many persons have dyspepsia. The stomach is worked so much and so constantly that it becomes too weak to work at all.

Quick Justice at Ascot.

Not only the horses, but the powers of the law, says the London Chronicle, are swift at Ascot, for the course has a special tribunal for the punishment of evildoers. No sooner is the pickpocket, welsher or ticket snatcher arrested than he is standing in a little room in the royal stand, where the evidence is heard and the verdict and sentence pronounced before the offender fully realizes that he is caught. Nowhere else does punishment so swiftly follow crime as at this court, which is decreed by clause 31 of the indictable offenses act of 1848.

This race course tribunal arose curiously in the eighteenth century from an assault upon a royal personage. In his indignation at the impossibility of instant punishment of the assailant he ordered that in future a magistrate should always attend the royal race meeting. This has ever since been done, and by the above mentioned act the chief magistrate of Bow street was constituted ex officio a justice of the peace of the county of Berks in order to enable him to hold this court at Ascot.

Encourage the Happiness Habit.

The art of laughter should surely be cultivated—in fact, all and everything that leads to joy. The wish to be happy, the love of gladness and beauty, is, I am sure, a thing to be desired. Consequently it is worth a little cultivation. Play is as essential a factor in men's lives as work. Philosophers tell us that no man lives his own life until he plays. Work comes from the exigencies of life, from the "musts" of this world, which often push a man along very different paths from those he would choose to travel by from inclination or capacity. Play is, however, his recreation, and here at his leisure time comes out his whole soul, his power of and choice of play, his greater or lesser necessity for it, to recuperate mind and body from the strain of daily work.—Chaperone.

Municipal Bridegrooms.

An amusing story is told of the crowning of a rose queen of a country district near Paris. The selected queen, as one of the formalities of awarding their dower, was asked by the mayor for the name of her fiance. "I have none," she replied. Notified that a sweetheart was indispensable, the young lady added timidly, "I thought the municipality provided everything necessary." Straightway a young swain presented himself as an aspirant, and, being as promptly accepted, all things became regular and in order.

Synonymous.

A French gentleman, rescued from a ducking in the river and taken to an adjacent tavern, was advised to drink a tumbler of very hot brandy and water and thus addressed the waiter who was mixing it:

"Sir, I shall thank you not to make it a fortnight."

"A fortnight!" replied Joe. "Hadn't you better take it directly?"

"Oh, yes," said monsieur, "directly, to be sure, but not a fortnight—not two week."—Boys of the Empire.

Second Thought.

"Dear Mr. Hicks," she wrote, "I am very sorry that what you ask I cannot grant. I cannot become your wife. Yours sincerely, Ethel Barrows." Then she added: "P. S.—On second thoughts, dear George, I think I will marry you. Do come up tonight and see your own true Ethel."

School Attendance.

More complete returns of the attendance at the Quincy public schools this week show a grand total of 5,231 with more expected this week and next week. The total is 324 in excess of the opening day last September; and 607 in excess of September, 1900, as will be seen by the following summary:

	1900.	1901.	1902.
Adams,	418	393	428
Coddington,	414	400	401
Cranch,	—	232	289

	4,125	4,366	4,695
High,	499	541	536
	4,624	4,907	5,231

Without exception every building reports more pupils than last September.

The number of new D primary pupils is 617 and will be increased. This is 89 in excess of last year. The Adams, Coddington, Gridley Bryant, John Hancock, Lincoln, Washington, and Willard have larger classes, while the Cranch, Massachusetts Fields, Quincy and Wollaston have smaller classes. The summary:

	1900.	1901.	1902.
Adams,	46	52	65
Coddington,	22	30	51
Cranch,	—	43	27

The Lawson Sails.

The seven-masted schooner Thomas W. Lawson, Capt. Arthur Crowley in command, sailed from her anchorage back of Castle island at 8.45 Thursday morning, says the Globe, and, assisted by two tugs, made her way out through Broad Sound.

She manouvered about for some time adjusting her compasses, and at 5 P. M. she was 12 miles northeast from the observatory at Hull, standing out to sea. The wind was light from the southeast, and the new vessel, with all her sails set, appeared to be going very fast for such a light breeze.

She is bound to Philadelphia, where she will load 8000 tons of bituminous coal for the Metropolitan coal company, returning to this port as soon as her cargo is completed. No delay is anticipated in securing the cargo, and it is probable that she will arrive back here inside of three weeks.

Adams Academy.

The Adams Academy opened this week with sixty pupils. While the number of pupils is not as large as last year and more could be accommodated, the building is comfortably filled. The entering class this year numbered twelve. There is no change in the corps of teachers.

ENTIRELY TOO CLEVER.

Experience of a Doctor In Prescribing For a Patient.

An anonymous physician who has written some "confessions" for the Independent tells this story about himself:

"I received a request to call from an old patient who was afraid she was taking scarlet fever. I responded at once. The patient was one of two elderly sisters whom I had attended for many years. I greeted her in the sitting room and noted her pulse while in the act of shaking hands with her. By some witty remark I contrived to make her laugh, which enabled me to see her tongue. Then I said in a playful tone: 'If you will get me a glass I will treat you to some of my patent soda water.' She did so. I put a tablet in the water and she drank it.

"I want you to know that I take pride in my original methods. I try to educate my patients to like, and not to dread, the visits of the doctor. In this case all of my work had been done without the direct knowledge of the patient and I felt very good over it. So I bade my patient goodby with extreme cheerfulness.

"She looked surprised, and then said: 'Of course you will come upstairs and see my sister?' 'Not today,' I said. 'Give her my respects.' 'Why,' she said, looking mystified and startled, 'how strangely you talk!' 'Strangely?' I echoed. 'Why?' 'Because I sent for you to prescribe for my sister and you decline to see her.' It flashed over my mind in an instant. I had prescribed for the wrong sister. I was entirely too clever."

Where Smoking Is a Sin.

Palgrave, in his interesting book describing his journey to the sacred city of Mecca, gives an amusing account of his conversation with a mollah.

On asking the reverend gentleman which he considered the most deadly of all sins the holy man replied:

"Smoking the shameful."

"And next, O son of the prophet?"

"Drinking."

"Are these the two greatest sins, father?"

"Verily, my son."

"And murder?"

"Ah, that's nothing—nothing. It's forgivable."

"And stealing?"

"Ah, that's forgivable too."

"But smoking?"

"It is the unforgivable crime," replied the mollah sternly and looking keenly at the fictitious Mohammedan.

And this is the Afghan's creed. Murder and theft are forgivable crimes, but for smoking and drinking there is no redemption.

The Man With the Fiddle.

The little old man fiddled very hard as he stood near the curbstone in Twenty-third street. The passersby looked at him curiously. Some of them smiled. No one gave him a penny. Presently he was seen to totter and then to fall, but he kept on fiddling just the same, even when he lay prone upon his back. A man helped him to his feet. He never missed a note. A little boy who had been regarding him with keen interest went up to him. Suddenly the bow hung poised and motionless. The little old man had run down. The boy bought him for a quarter, however. The vender showed him how to start the fiddle up again, and the two went off together, happy and contented.—New York Press.

Unconvinced.

A Presbyterian preacher in the central part of New York state tells this story on himself:

"It was Sunday morning, and I had started for church. The family were preparing to follow when the youngest, a five-year-old, protested, "I do not want to go to church."

"'I don't feel much like it myself, Fred, this morning,' replied his mother, 'but we must go. Father has to go—has gone already, and he has to preach.'

"'Yes,' said Fred, unconvinced, 'but we have to listen, and that's worser.'"

Starch For Handkerchiefs.

A starch for handkerchiefs that will make them look exactly as they did when taken from the box in the shop is made by placing six drops of bluing in two quarts of water and adding a piece of raw starch the size of a walnut. Care must be taken to thoroughly dissolve the starch and to let none of it settle in the bottom of the bowl. After the handkerchiefs have been washed and dried in the usual way dip each one separately in this starch, squeeze as dry as possible with the hands and lay smoothly in a towel. Iron with care.

CLASH BARELY AVOIDED

Utah Republicans Wrangled Over Beet Sugar

INSURGENTS FINALLY WON

By Having Endorsment of President's Cuban Policy Omitted In Platform —Delegates Evidently Solid For Roosevelt's Continuance In Office

Ogden, Utah, Sept. 12.—The Republican state convention yesterday nominated Joseph Howell for congress and William McCarty for supreme court justice and adopted a platform in which mention of Cuban reciprocity was omitted. On this point the best sugar interests of the state won after a somewhat bitter and protracted debate in the committee on resolutions.

Friends of Congressman Sutherland, who was one of the Republican "insurgents" on the reciprocity question in the last session of congress, were determined that specific endorsement of the president's Cuban policy should have no place in the platform and they prevailed. In this they were aided by the church people, who insisted that a compromise platform cordially endorsing President Roosevelt's administration be adopted, but leaving out direct reference to the proposed 20 percent reduction. So strong was the feeling over the feature that had the original program as regards the order of business been carried out it is probable that an unpleasant incident would have ensued.

Senator Beveridge of Indiana was scheduled to deliver a speech last evening, marking the formal opening of the Republican campaign in Utah. This program was changed Wednesday night to have Senator Beveridge speak at the close of the morning session yesterday. When the beet sugar sympathizers heard of this they openly threatened to give him a hostile reception, believing it a plan to influence the convention in favor of a Cuban reciprocity plank, the result being that the program was changed, Senator Beveridge speaking last evening. Then, with the platform adopted, the delegates more than made up for their refusal to hear him in the morning by greeting him with wild cheering.

An amendment to the platform offered by Congressman Sutherland, declaring it to be the sense of the convention that "President Roosevelt be nominated for president in 1904 as his own successor," was carried with enthusiasm.

In the course of his address Senator Beveridge said:

"Do you name courage? Theodore Roosevelt represents it. Do you name honesty? Theodore Roosevelt is its personification. Do you name patriotism? Theodore Roosevelt named his on the field of battle. Do you name consideration for every interest of the republic? Theodore Roosevelt judges every interest in its relation to every other.

"No section owns him; he belongs to the nation. No influence controls him; he listens to the voice of the whole people. The humblest citizen may greet him face to face and have as full hearing as the richest man in the land; and he will give wealth and property their just and legal rights in spite of demagogue or mob.

"Simple justice to all—this is the spirit that rules in mind and heart of the chief magistrate of the American people. How may that which is best for all be practically accomplished—this is the question he puts to every problem that confronts him."

In the Lone Star State

Fort Worth, Tex., Sept. 12.—The state Republican convention adjourned last night after a two days' session. George P. Burkitt was nominated for governor. The platform endorses without qualification all of the acts of President Roosevelt and says that he is "the unanimous choice of Texas Republicans for president in 1904."

Candidate For Mayor—at Present

Cleveland, Sept. 12.—Mayor Johnson, replying to an inquiry from a newspaper, asking if he was a candidate for governor and for president, said: "I'm not a candidate for anything except for mayor next spring. It is my belief that my field of usefulness lies very close to the city of Cleveland."

Thinks Cholera Near Its End

San Francisco, Sept. 12.—Colonel Maus, who was recently relieved from duty, arrived from the Philippines yesterday. He had entire control of the fight waged against the epidemic of cholera in the islands. He declares that the disease was brought to Manila by ships from Hong Kong, but he thinks the epidemic will die out before Nov. 1.

AN ALLEGED ROBBER

Policeman Thought to Have Been Sailing Under False Colors

Somerville, Mass., Sept. 12.—Police Officer John G. Knight was arrested last night charged with larceny from a building, and the incident has caused something of a stir. Knight was locked up and a guard was placed over him lest he do himself bodily harm. Knight is charged with larcenies of money from the public library and of lace curtains, rugs, clocks and bric-a-brac valued at about $2000 from the furniture store of Jackson Caldwell, Union square.

Unusual incidents led up to the arrest of Knight. Since July Librarian Foss has missed money from the drawer in the public library. The money was the result of fines imposed upon delinquent book takers. While the total taken by Knight did not exceed $15, its disappearance in very small sums caused much annoyance to the library attendants. Tuesday night two men secreted themselves in the library in the hope of detecting the thief. About 5 a. m., Wednesday, the men claim to have seen Knight come in and go to the money drawer.

Knight had been on this beat since spring. Before that he had been on the Union square route, and it is while there, it is alleged, that he took goods from Caldwell's store. On Wednesday Knight was accused of theft, and he said he would resign. This he failed to do at the meeting of the police board last night. His arrest then followed. He had been on the force 13 years.

Labor Leaders Sent to Jail

Boston, Sept. 12.—Judge Hardy yesterday adjudged Thomas Lancy and Louis Sproul, leaders in the strike of the American Woolen company's weavers at Fitchburg, guilty of contempt of court, and imposed sentences of four and two months in jail respectively upon them. The defendants had singled out employes who were on their way to the mill and talked with them with a view to inducing them to quit work. Lancy is president of the Woolen Workers' union of Fitchurg and Sproul is a member of that union, and the court held that both came within the terms of the injunction.

Naval Chaplain Kills Himself

Chelsea, Mass., Sept. 12.—Chaplain William F. Morrison, U. S. N., until Tuesday on duty on board the cruiser Olympia of the north Atlantic squadron, committed suicide by shooting himself with a 32-calibre revolver at the United States naval hospital. He had been suffering from mental depression. Chaplain Morrison ranked as a commander, and was admitted to the service from Maryland on May 5, 1881. He was an Episcopalian and was 52 years old.

Will Enforce Liquor Law

Saco, Me., Sept. 12.—Newell T. Fogg, Republican, who was re-elected sheriff of York county—unless a recount should make a change of 162 votes in the result—states that he will give York county all the enforcement its citizens want while he remains sheriff. If his present deputies do not close the places where liquor is sold he says he will appoint new ones who will.

Employes Clamoring For Pay

Boston, Sept. 12.—Uriah Welch, former proprietor of the Lenox Hotel, was petitioned into bankruptcy yesterday by a large number of the hotel employes who have claims against him for back wages, ranging in amounts from $9 to $77. Welch recently made an assignment in favor of his creditors. His liabilities were very heavy.

Against the Admiral Farragut

Boston, Sept. 12.—The owners of the steamship Cumberland yesterday filed a libel in the office of the clerk of the United States district court against the steamship Admiral Farragut to recover $150,000 damages. The action arises from a collision between the steamships in the harbor July 7.

Staging Was Unsafe

Boston, Sept. 12.—By the breaking of a staging upon which Patrick Fay and Dennis Daly were working upon a building in Brighton yesterday, both men were thrown 25 feet to the ground. Fay sustained injuries from which he died, while Daly escaped with a fractured ankle and minor bruises.

Useful Substitute For Coal

Nantucket, Mass., Sept. 12.—With coal at $12 a ton, the islanders are already making arrangements for utilizing the extensive peat bogs. Digging began last week, and already a large amount is available for use. There is very little coal on the island and none is expected.

Hill Has 27,312 Plurality

Augusta, Me., Sept. 12.—The Kennebec Journal has election returns from all but three towns and seven plantations as follows: Hill, Rep., 65,569; Gould, Dem., 38,257; Hill's plurality, 27,312. The vote in the missing places in 1898 was Powers, 164; Lord, 92.

Workman Fell Nine Stories

Boston, Sept. 12.—Neil Gibbons, 38, employed on a building in course of construction on State street, while wheeling brick last night, slipped into an elevator well and fell nine stories, nearly every bone in his body being broken. He lived but a short time.

Jiminez Says He Was Assaulted

New York, Sept. 12.—Juan Y. Jiminez, former president of San Domingo, appeared in police court here yesterday as complainant against Abelardo A. Moscoso who, he alleged, had assaulted him. The magistrate held Moscoso in $300 bail for trial.

Miles Starts For Philippines

Washington, Sept. 12.—General Miles left here yesterday for the west and will sail from San Francisco on the transport Thomas for the Philippines, where he will make a tour of inspection of the army in the islands.

MISGUIDED MOROS

Appear to Have No Faith In Americans' Proffered Friendship

Washington, Sept. 12.—Manila papers received at the war department yesterday show that the Moro chiefs were informed by Filipinos from Luzon that Russia and Spain were at war with the United States. One of the sultans, when asked why he would not be on friendly terms with the United States authorities, said that the Moros were all under direction of the Sultan of Stamboul and they had been informed that there was emnity between the Sultan of Stamboul and the United States government. Another datto made the claim that the Moros always had been in undisturbed possession of the Lake Lanao country and that even the Spaniards never had attempted to interfere with them and they did not want the Americans to do so.

There had been considerably friendly correspondence with the Sultan of Bacolod, but finally a very unfriendly letter was received from him, warlike in tone, which greatly surprised the American officers. From another Moro chief the Americans were informed that the ugly letter was a forgery perpetrated by two of the dattos under the Sultan of Bacolod. These dattos were very anxious for war, one of them claiming that he could hold his fort against any force that might be sent against it. The war party was stronger than the peace party and was taunting the Moros who wanted to be on peaceful terms with the Americans by calling them cowards.

In another communication from the Moro country it is stated that Colonel Baldwin tried to get all the sultans and dattos to meet him in a friendly conference. The Sultan of Bacolod professed friendship, but asked for three months in which to communicate with the various tribes over which he was chief. Moros in the camp of Colonel Baldwin said that this was simply a ruse to gain further time and prepare for war.

King Edward In Scotland

Braemar, Sept. 12.—King Edward, wearing a kilt and with a thistle stuck in his Glengarry bonnet, attended the picturesque Braemar gathering yesterday and watched the highland games, for which the place has long been famous. With the king were many members of the royal family. Troops were present and highlanders flocked to Braemar from the surrounding counties. The sports went off excellently, and the king and queen received a great ovation.

Sailor In a Serious Scrape

New York, Sept. 12.—"Mack" McCarthy, a sailor on the battleship Kearsarge, was turned over to the New York city police last night by Commandant Higginson. It is charged that McCarthy, while walking along the Bowery, sportively emptied a can of hot green corn over Jacob Cohen, who was selling it on the street. Cohen died yesterday of the scalds he received.

Labor Troubles at Barcelona

London, Sept. 12.—According to dispatches from Barcelona the local authorities there have requested the ministry of the interior to maintain martial law on account of the attitude of the strikers. Private advices received here represent the situation at Barcelona as acute, in consequence of the determination of the authorities to suppress what is described as a genuine labor movement.

Checking Auto Speeding

London, Sept. 12.—A climax to the vigor with which offending automobilists are being prosecuted was reached yesterday, when a motor car driver in the employ of Prime Minister Balfour, who should have appeared before a magistrate for furious driving, failed to put in an appearance, and a fresh summons for the man was issued.

Boers' Gloomy Outlook

Amsterdam, Sept. 12.—General Botha, speaking yesterday, said: "We have lost our independence and have endeavored to obtain compensation from the new government for our burnt farms. We have every reason to believe no compensation will be forthcoming. Help is absolutely necessary to prevent the ruin of thousands."

Cubans' Favorite Amusement

Havana, Sept. 12.—The provincial council of Havana has approved a motion to ask congress to revoke the military order prohibiting cock-fighting and give the provincial councils throughout the island power to regulate this amusement, and to grant permits to allow cock-fights on holidays and Sundays.

Washington Town on Fire

Astoria, Wash., Sept. 12.—Port Columbia, Wash., is on fire, the result of prairie fires raging in that part of the country. A steamer has been sent from this city to render assistance.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The Queen of Belgians has been seized by a severe attack of asthma at Spa and a physician has been hurriedly summoned from Brussels.

Rev. Thomas Scully, the well known Catholic priest of Cambridge, Mass., is dead, after a long illness. He was over 70 years old and was widely known for his work in the church and in the interest of parochial schools. He was ordained to the priesthood in Boston.

DISTURBED SLEEP
IN CHILDHOOD

If a child is restless in the night, starting suddenly from sleep, tossing about the bed, grinding the teeth—growing thin and listless, apparently from loss of rest—the trouble is worms. A few doses of that famous old remedy, will expel the worms, and cure the diseased conditions, causing the child to sleep well at night, and, naturally, give it a bright and cheerful disposition throughout the day. Dr. True's Pin Worm Elixir is a purely vegetable remedy that would not harm the most delicate child even if it had no worms. In use 50 years. Sold at stores generally, 35 cents. Booklet on Children and Their Diseases free. Write us for it.

TRUE'S PIN WORM ELIXIR

The Social Realm.

We may live without poetry, music and art;
We may live without conscience, and live without heart;
We may live without friends; we may live without books;
But civilized man cannot live without cooks.
He may live without books,—what is knowledge but grieving?
He may live without hope,—what is hope but deceiving?
He may live without love,—what is passion but pining?
But where is the man that can live without dining?

—Owen Meredith.

The teachers at the Bracket Homestead school are to receive at the school on Friday, Sept. 19, from three until nine, when there will be an exhibit of art with music at five and eight.

☞ Sunday will be the anniversary of the death of President McKinley and Gov. Nash of Ohio has suggested to the clergymen of his state that it would be fitting to memorialize on that day the life of the dead. The suggestion might well be adopted throughout the country and pulpit orators who delight to be heard upon questions of national interest could find in that life and the principals that actuated it an ample text for a Sunday discourse.—Haverhill Gazette.

GAS PLANT SOLD.

The Transfer Took Place Today.

Many Improvements Contemplated.

Mains Will Be Rapidly Extended All Over the City.

It will be news to many to know that the Citizens Gas Co. of Quincy which has been owned by Boston bankers, has been sold, and that the transfer of the property takes place today.

The purchasers are the company which control the Haverhill and Amesbury Gas plants and are buying for business. Mr. Morse, the president of the company, is a thorough gas man and knows the business from A to Z.

It is understood that the company not only propose to rebuild the present plant but to extend the mains to many points of the city not now covered, and that, best of all, the price of gas will be reduced.

There have been many complaints because the company would not extend the mains and reduce the price of gas, and relief has been sought from the Legislature, but without avail, the owners always claiming that too much capital would be required.

The new company have the capital and it is understood they intend to expend it.

Sewer Proposals.

The metropolitan water and sewerage board has asked for proposals for building sections 45 and 78 of the high level sewer in Quincy and Roxbury. Section 45 in tunnel will be 970 feet; inside diameter of sewer, 135 by 150 inches. Section 78 will be 600 feet long; inside diameter, 78 by 84 inches, spruce piling 7000 linear feet. Bids will be opened Oct. 1.

Accident at Depot.

It is rather careless, the way in which those large baggage trucks are left nights at the Quincy depot. The northerly end of the platform is very dark at night and one of the large trucks is left so close to this platform that great care must be used to keep from walking into it, especially when coming from a well lighted train.

Last night the truck was left in such a position that the heavy tongue was toward the platform, but held in an upright position by a hook. In some way this became unfastened so that it fell upon the young son of Dr. Garey, who had just arrived on the train with his parents. The little fellow received a savage blow which knocked him down and cut a deep gash over an inch long in the centre of his forehead. The cut was an ugly one and required several stitches to close it.

SEVEN IN ALL.

But Only Two Can Be Nominated.

Republican Nominations Filed.

For Candidates for Representatives to General Court.

The Republican City Committee met last evening at headquarters to receive nomination papers of candidates for Representative to be voted for at the caucuses. Papers were received between the hours of 7.30 and 9.30.

All of the papers were filed shortly after 7.30 but were not opened until 9.30. In the meantime a business meeting of the committee was held.

It has been quite well understood that there would be a surplus of candidates, and there was. Every ward of the city has a candidate and Ward Five two, making seven. The names of the candidates in the order which they will appear in the official ballot is as follows:

George E. Adams, Ward Two.
Frank E. Badger, Ward Six.
Eugene F. DeNormandie, Ward Five.
Richard R. Freeman, Ward Five.
John McKnight, Ward One.
Harry S. Nicoll, Ward Three.
Edward J. Sandberg, Ward Four.

It will be seen by the list that the fight of last year in Ward Five is on again, and a large caucus will result. Both claim that they will carry their own ward, and the outcome will be watched with interest.

South Quincy is making a hustle for Nicoll, and the whole ward seems unanimous for him. He will receive a flattering vote in his own ward.

McKnight will also poll a large vote in the centre ward and Badger will do the same in the Atlantic ward. Adams of Quincy Point who is in the fight for keeps, thinks he has a good chance and that his own ward will stand by him handsomely.

Sandberg of West Quincy it an unknown quantity. He is popular among the Swedes, being president of their political club, and he will probably receive the full Swede vote in Wards One, Three and Four; and others besides.

Wollaston Nominations.

The nominations for the Ward Five Republican caucus are:

State,—Eugene H. Sprague, Walter S. Pinkham and Edward E. Jamieson.

Councilor,—Walter F. Nichols, Herbert Y. Follett and William M. Chase.

County.—Charles M. Bryant, Walter J. Wellington and Richard R. Freeman.

Senatorial.—Henry O. Fairbanks, Walter J. Wellington and Sidney F. Copeland.

THE GUARDIAN of THE GOLD

By WILLIS EMERY

Copyright, 1901, by
Frederick R. Toombs

THERE was a combination freight and express car on a siding below the station, and Horton knew that it was going east with the 9:30 train. He thought that he might find a way to go with it unobserved—to steal a ride, like a tramp, as he phrased it to himself.

As to destination, he was not particular. The important matter was to get away. He had been discharged from the service of the railroad under suspicion of dishonesty, and everybody knew it or would know it very soon. An express envelope containing a small sum of money had been stolen. It would have been possible for Horton to commit the theft, but he had not done it. However, he was known to have lost at cards and to be hard pressed, so that was the end of him.

It was a dark, gusty evening. Low, scurrying clouds grazed the top of the hill like frightened birds in flight and sped away into the east. The noise of the wind would drown any ordinary sound, and Horton stepped upon a platform of the car without especial caution. He wished to see who was in the express compartment, where there was a light.

Through the glass top of the door he saw an express messenger named Silas Wiggin sitting on an oak chest bound with iron and handling a revolver. Beside the door—indeed with a hand upon the knob—stood a "partner" of Wiggin named Banks.

The roar of the wind subsiding for a few minutes, it was possible for Horton to overhear the conversation of the two men, especially as Banks held the door open an inch or two after the first few words.

"It's 8 o'clock now," said Banks. "I'll be back before 9. You'll be all right alone."

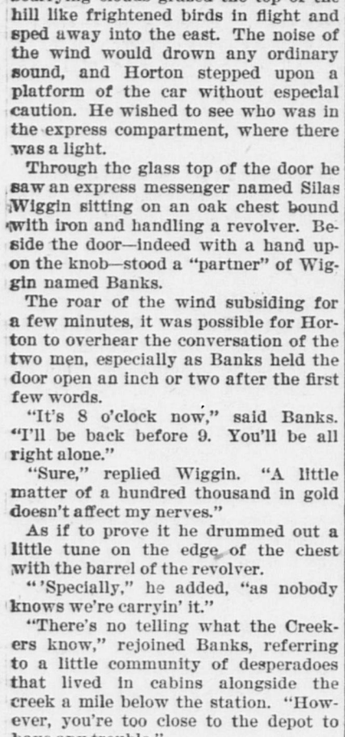
"Sure," replied Wiggin. "A little matter of a hundred thousand in gold doesn't affect my nerves."

As if to prove it he drummed out a little tune on the edge of the chest with the barrel of the revolver.

"'Specially," he added, "as nobody knows we're carryin' it."

"There's no telling what the Creekers know," rejoined Banks, referring to a little community of desperadoes that lived in cabins alongside the creek a mile below the station. "However, you're too close to the depot to have any trouble."

Wiggin replied that he wasn't expecting any and proceeded to fill his pipe. Banks opened the door wide, and Horton slid silently off the platform into the darkness. He returned, however, as soon as Banks had walked away, but he avoided the light that came through the door.



"OH, IT'S YE, IS IT?"

He was saying to himself that Wiggin had always seemed to like him and would very likely give him a chance to ride in the freight end of the car.

"I'll ask him anyway," he said. "I'd rather do that than try to turn a trick. A man caught stealing a ride on this car tonight is likely to get shot."

He rose from his crouching posture, and at this moment a gust of wind struck him with the crushing weight of a solid body. It hurled him against the door, through it, in fact, and he came into the presence of the astonished Wiggin attended by a small whirlwind laden with sand and cinders.

Wiggin jumped up, revolver in hand, and his clay pipe rattled on the floor. Then he sat down again calmly.

"Oh, it's ye, is it?" he said. "Shut the door."

"Sile," said Horton, "you know what's happened to me. I want to get out of here, and I'm broke."

"Oh, ye want to git out, do ye?" responded Silas. "What for?"

"What for?" echoed Horton. Why"—He paused and raised one hand as if listening. Wiggin slowly rose to his feet, his eyes meeting Horton's as the eyes of men in the first moment of mutual peril always meet.

"We're movin'!" he exclaimed, and, pushing Horton aside, he sprang out upon the platform.

"Ain't the brake set?" cried Horton in the teeth of the wind.

"It ain't holdin'. Help me!" was the response.

The two men heaved at the brake wheel, but produced no perceptible result. The car in the grip of the squall was by this time off the siding and well started down the steep grade of the main track.

"If we git 'round the bend at the creek," said Wiggin, "we're all right. There's a rise beyond."

"We won't," answered Horton. And the next instant the flying car left the rails.

At the first shock Horton went backward through the door. There was a sickening sense of falling and then a frightful crash as the car struck squarely in the middle of a dwarfed pine with enormous spreading branches that grew on the slope of the creek. What happened next Horton never knew, but he eventually found himself crawling out through the roof of the car, which lay upon its side, the upper parts torn out as if by an explosion.

The young man was deadly dizzy, and one of his legs lacked strength and feeling. He groped about for some object by which he might steady himself and try to rise, and by chance his hand touched the oak chest, which stood as squarely on the turf as if some one had carefully set it down there.

At the same moment he heard the voice of Wiggin.

"How are ye?" said the voice. "Dead? I ain't hurt a mite."

Horton leaned against the chest and held his revolving head in his hands. When it seemed a little steadier, he looked up, and by the faint moonlight that was struggling through the clouds he perceived Silas, clothed in rags and streamers, standing before him.

"This ain't no time to give in," said Silas. "Ye've got business on hand. Ye've got to run back to the station and tell 'em about this. It's a good chance that nobody'd miss us for an hour."

"Run?" reiterated Horton. "I can't stand. My leg's broke."

Silas whistled softly and long.

"Say," he cried at last, "did ye hear anything said between me an' Banks just before ye came into the car? Ye might 'a' been on the platform, ye know."

"I was," replied Horton. "I know that there's a hundred thousand dollars in gold in this chest I'm leaning against."

"Well, well," said Silas. "What are we goin' to do? The Creekers probably heard us come over the bank, an' they'll be a-top of us soon's they can get across."

He pointed to the lighted cabins on the opposite bank of the creek.

"You've got a gun," said Horton.

Silas came up alongside the chest and whispered as if there might have been listeners in the bushes.

"It's broke," he said. "It won't work. I must 'a' fallen on it somehow. But take it an' make the best bluff ye can. Don't let 'em get the chest. I don't think they could open it anyhow in time. It's got an iron sheath inside. But I tell ye what they'd do. They'd load it aboard that big punt—see her tied up to the bank on this side?—an' they'd float down the creek to some safe place where they'd have half the night to work in. That would be their game. Don't let 'em do it. But I say," he added as he turned away, "don't push the bluff too far. Don't let 'em kill ye."

"You leave it to me," said Horton as the other started to run up the bank.

Alone, Horton essayed to drag himself up on top of the chest. To his surprise, the injured leg seemed greatly better. Something had struck across the thigh and paralyzed it for the moment, but the effect was passing away. He could stand, and in half a minute he could walk fairly well.

Suddenly a great wave of thought swept over his mind. Disgraced, branded as a thief, he was alone with this fortune. Suppose he should follow the plan so kindly outlined by the trustful Silas. The chest was heavy. It must have weighed something like 500 pounds, yet Horton had often lifted more than that in mere pride of his strength. To drag that weight down a steep, smooth bank and tumble it somehow into a broad, low sided boat ought to be possible for him.

He took hold of one of the strong handles of the chest and dragged it a little way. Then he stopped and sat down on it.

"No," said he aloud; "not if it was a million."

Horton sat down on the chest and waited. Ten minutes passed, and then he became aware of two men in the mouth of a path through the bushes. Even in the uncertain moonlight they were Creekers beyond a shadow of doubt.

Horton raised his useless weapon.

"Don't you fellers come any nigher," he said.

"It's the express car!" cried one of the men excitedly. "It's the car they put the gold in! The wind must 'a' blown her loose."

Horton reflected upon what Banks had said about the amount of information possessed by the Creekers.

"Never mind what she is," he said, on one knee behind the chest. "You fellers stand back."

A parley ensued which seemed meaningless to Horton until an unexpected and painful explanation of it was thrust upon him. A third member of the gang who had been making a strategic detour while the others held Horton's attention suddenly precipitated himself upon the young man's back. An instant later all three were upon him, and he was helpless. His arms were strapped behind him with a leather belt, and his legs were similarly secured.

"It's a strong box, boys," said one of the Creekers, bending over the chest. "We can't open it here. We ain't got much time."

"Load it into the boat and take it down stream," said another. "That's our only show."

They began to struggle with the chest and Horton with his bonds. Tears of rage were in the young man's eyes.

"If I get loose," he said to himself, "I'll slaughter the whole three of 'em. It's in me to do it."

The belt around his arms snapped with a loud noise. He sprang to his feet, forgetting that his legs were tied, and fell in a heap. An instant later, however, he was free. He ran down the bank, but the chest was already in the boat, and the men had pushed out into the swift current.

For a moment Horton meditated the folly of plunging in, hoping that he might reach the boat and upset it. Then a cry from the top of the slope arrested his attention.

Wiggin and half a dozen others came running down the slope. Horton plodded up to meet them.

"I couldn't hold 'em," he said in a tone of despair. "They got away with it."

"Ye done jest right!" exclaimed Silas, grasping him by the hand. "The gold is safe."

"Safe?" echoed Horton, amazed.

"It never was in the chest," said Silas. "It's in them three sacks."

He dragged away a bit of the wreckage and exposed the sacks to view.

"For the love of heaven"— Horton began.

"Look here, Joe Horton," said Silas, interrupting, "there's two ways of workin' in this world. One's with yer hands, the other's with yer head. Here was this gold, an' no way to guard it. A slit with a knife would 'a' got it. I knew the Creekers was comin', an' I couldn' stop 'em. I had to go fer help an' leave ye here, an' ye was under a cloud, Joe. They said ye'd stole money.

"So what did I do? Findin' ye thought the gold was in the chest, I let ye think so, an' I give ye a scheme to git away with it. If ye'd done it, the Creekers would 'a' caught ye before ye could have loaded the chest into the boat. If ye stayed here an' made a bluff for the chest, the Creekers was bound to think the whole plunder was there. Either way the gold was safe—as safe as I could make it. The chest is full of fossils for Columbia college in New York."

"DON'T YOU FELLERS COME ANY NIGHER!"

"And you thought that I might"—Horton began.

"Never mind what I thought," responded Wiggin. "Now I know. An' if I don't square ye with the company my name ain't Silas Wiggin."

"Why, what do you mean?"

"I waited just a bit," said Silas, with his hand on the other's shoulder. "I waited till ye said, 'Not if it was a million.'"

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 14—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Delight in God's house.—Ps. lxxxiv, 1-4; c, 1-5.

The church is a divine institution. The Old Testament church was instituted by God and the New Testament church by the Lord Jesus Christ. We are told that "the Lord loved the gates of Zion above all the dwellings of Jacob," and Christ's love for the New Testament church was illustrated by the love which exists between the husband and the wife. The New Testament church is called the Bride of Christ. Such being the divine origin of the church of God in the world, it necessarily follows that it has peculiar claims upon all men. The church is not only of divine origin, but its purpose is to carry forward the work of God in the world. Knowledge of God and the way to God are to be set forth above everything else in His church.

The church not only has claims upon all men, but it should be a pleasure and a delight to meet these claims and obligations. It must be confessed, however, that in too many instances this is not the case. In many cases the obligations of the church are ignored or denied, and in many others their fulfillment is looked upon as drudgery and a hardship; purely as a sense of duty the forms of worship are observed in the house of God when there is no interest and no delight manifested in them. This, however, should not be our attitude toward the worship of God in His house. We should find joy and delight in this worship and service.

First.—We are called upon to delight in God's house. "Enter into His gates with thanksgiving and into His courts with praise" is the exhortation of the Psalms. Thus we are called upon to find delight in the public worship of God, and in response to this call we should come with a spirit of joy and of gladness, of praise and of thanksgiving, into the house of God.

Second.—The house of God is worthy our delight. "How amiable are Thy tabernacles, O Lord of Hosts!" exclaims the psalmist. "My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth, for the courts of the Lord; my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God. The sparrow hath found a house and the swallow a nest for itself, where she may lay her young, even Thine altars, O Lord of Hosts, my King and my God. Blessed are they that dwell in Thy house; they will be still praising Thee." The worth of worship in the house of God is appreciated by all who enter into it with the right spirit. This was the experience of the psalmist, for he declared that his soul longed for the courts of the Lord. Even the birds of the air delighted to make their nests about the sacred temple, and certainly if the birds could thus delight in the house of God much more should His people, who understand its value and its blessings.

Third.—There are many sources of joy and delight in the house of God. (a) There is the delight of praise. We are to enter into His courts with thanksgiving and with praise, and the heart and voice that truly praise God find delight in this devotional exercise. (b) There is the delight of fellowship with God. God's house is the place of His particular abode. Here above all places He delights to meet His people. Here we can have the best fellowship and communion with Him. It is always a supreme delight to those who are truly His children. (c) There is the joy of Christian fellowship and of Christian service.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. lxvi, 1-15; lxxxix, 1-12; cxiv, 17-19; cxxii, 1-9; cxxxv, 1-5; cxxxvii, 1-6; Matt. xiii, 16-20; Acts ii, 42-47; xx, 28; Eph. v, 25, 29; Heb. x, 23-25.

Salvation.

Salvation, as a growth, is no cheap and fleeting result. It has dignity and endurance, and they who make it theirs to any good degree are the men and women of various and sterling growth upon whom the temple of civilization rests, with all its riches of use and beauty, as on strong columns. Salvation, as the putting forth of our complex life into higher and better growths, is a gradual achievement and cannot be consummated even in this sphere of our existence. For whose nature, enriched as it may be, has culminated in all the perfections of life? The great year of eternity is still a year of growth. Ever the way opens and the ardor rises. We may find indifference low down, but never far up, for ever wisdom and virtue and love and piety know their own value and find in themselves the sufficient motive of progress.—Universalist Leader.

The Struggle Against Sin.

No advance in material conditions, however, can change the need of struggle against sin, the need of effort for individual overcoming and for social service. The new comforts are too often merely new temptations to self seeking, pride and the neglect of brotherly kindness. But here, also, while they may increase our dangers, they enlarge our opportunity. The power of the true disciple in gift and influence never reached so far as it may in the civilization of today. All the resources of the new control of matter are at the service of the church, and all the powers of knowledge throw new light upon the work of God. The world's improvement is the improvement of an instrument. The improvement of the workman can only come through experience of the life that is hid with Christ in God.—Congregationalist.

Yea or Nay?

'Tis but the mortal body of a day
That dies. The spirit passes not away,
But leaves deep impress on the lives of men,
Molded by its resistless yea or nay.

ADMIRATION OF KAISER

Expressed For President and Other Americans

END OF ARMY MANEUVERS

General Corbin and Earl Roberts Give Unstinted Plaise to Troops—Germans' Love For the Army Is In Itself a Tremendous Force

Berlin, Sept. 13.—Emperor William, in saying good-bye to Generals Corbin, Young and Wood yesterday, remarked that he was specially interested in the Americans. He admired President Roosevelt unmeasuredly for his versatility, courage, power for hard work and insight into the needs of his country. He added that he watched Mayor Low's administration of New York because he thought it important to the commercial world that New York city should be well governed. The emperor also said he was very sorry Ambassador White was leaving his court. He had the most cordial feeling for him personally, because of the man he is and for his services in fostering good-will between Germany and the United States.

General Corbin had an opportunity to present President Roosevelt's message about the St. Louis exposition and Emperor William replied that he would see that Germany had a good representation. "I will send you a large party," he added.

His majesty sent some personal messages to President Roosevelt and asked to be remembered especially to "Miss Alice," as he called Miss Roosevelt. The emperor conversed with each of the Americans and told them how much he had enjoyed their visit.

The farewell took place on the field just after Emperor William returned from leading the cavalry charge which concluded the maneuvers.

His majesty had bivouacked again with the cavalry and had ridden with them 32 miles in a wide detour, from a position in front of the right flank of the "Reds" (Russians) to their rear division. Nearly 10,000 horsemen left the camp at 4:45 o'clock and the recall was sounded at 11:05 a. m. General Corbin, who rode down the line immediately afterward, said he did not see a horse which was "blown out." He considered it to be a magnificent performance and did not believe any cavalry in the world could surpass it.

General Corbin and Earl Roberts both said, in summing up their impression of the maneuvers, that the German army is the most wonderful in the world. There may be possibly be a difference among military men," General Corbin said, "as to certain details. But the army altogether is matchless."

What pleased the American general as much as anything was the spirit of the troops—the love of the private for the army. The Americans had a notion that the rank and file had to be dragooned into the service; but instead of that being so they liked to serve and admired the army beyond any other institution in the country. The German soldiers' love for the army was in itself a tremendous force.

In speaking to General Young of the possibility of Prince Henry of Prussia's second visit to the United States, Emperor William said Prince Henry might go next April when the statue of Frederick the Great, presented by him to the United States, is unveiled at Washington, although the prince's sea duties might prevent this.

Field Marshal VonWaldersee told the Americans that he hoped next year to see them in the United States. He had been intending to visit the countess' country for some time and he now believed he could say he had an opportunity to go. Count VonWaldersee, though 77 years of age, is still on the active list of the army. He was on horseback for hours every day during the maneuvers.

The cavalry charge yesterday was a fine show, and from a stategical view point it was altogether possible. The "Blues" (Germans) first broke up the "Reds'" masses of infantry by a terrific fire from 30 machine guns and 40 pieces of artillery and then, when the infantry was theoretically demoralized, the cavarly swept down upon them.

Pardoned For Trifling Offense

Washington, Sept. 13.—The president has granted pardons to four Porto Ricans confined at Mayaguez, P. R., charged with larceny and held in default of bail. The property alleged to have been stolen was a shirt valued at 41 cents. The prisoners would have to remain in jail in default of bond for the offense until next December and the imprisonment they have already suffered is considered sufficient, even conceding them to be guilty.

Law In a Tangle

Toronto, Sept. 13.—The case of George Clark, wanted for trial at Lynn, Mass., on a charge of fraudulently using checks, was again before Judge Morgan yesterday. The case has now become so entangled that the attorney general and the minister of justice may be called upon to act before the way is clear to a trial here.

Best's Father Won't Get Body

Sackville, N. B., Sept. 13.—Relatives have received word from Boston that the body of John C Best, who was electrocuted at that city, will not be sent to his home for burial. The father had expected otherwise.

The Fairs' Bodies Buried

San Francisco, Sept. 13.—The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Fair arrived at San Francisco yesterday and were interred in Laurel Hill cemetery.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Settlement of Labor Controversies Has Aided Business

New York, Sept. 13.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Industrial activity is greater than at any recent date. Many new factories and mills have been added to the productive capacity, facilities are being increased at old plants and idle shops resumed through the settlement of labor controversies. Retail trade is large, with a bright outlook for the future in jobbing and wholesale business. There are few of the cancellations so numerous at this time last year, while collections are improving.

Although the weekly capacity of pig iron furnaces in blast on Sept. 1 was reported as 335,189 toans by The Iron Age, it has since been appreciably curtailed by the inadequate supply of fuel on which account numerous furnaces were blown out or at least banked. Railways are in great need of new locomotives and other equipment.

New England producers of boots and shoes are insisting on full prices, and some grades that were slow to respond are now sharing the improvement. Activity for some months is assured at the larger shops, jobbers urging quicker deliveries, and the pressure for early shipment testifies to the low supplies in the hands of dealers.

Textile mills are well occupied, with prices sustained in all cases and moderate advances in some cotton goods which are in demand for quick delivery. Conditions favor sellers, buyers no longer desiring concessions, but seeking to place forward contracts at present quotations.

Platt on the 1904 Nomination

New York, Sept. 13.—The question as to whether the Republican state convention will endorse President Roosevelt as a presidential candidate in 1904 was asked Senator Platt yesterday. After some hesitation he replied: "The state convention will certainly endorse his administration, but I cannot say that the convention will pledge the support of the state to the president two years in advance of the nomination. I will say, however, that I think the president deserves the nomination."

Venezuelans In Hot Battle

Willemstad, Sept. 13.—It has been learned with certainty that yesterday a serious battle commenced in the vicinity of Tinaquillo, Venezuela, between about 4000 revolutionists and 4100 government troops. It is impossible to receive news of the progress of this fight, as all the lines of communication have been cut. The result of this engagement will doubtless have a decided effect upon the fate of the Matos revolution.

Senator Stewart's Wife Killed

Alameda, Cal., Sept. 13.—Mrs. William M. Stewart, wife of the senior United States senator from Nevada, was killed here yesterday. Mrs. Stewart was riding in an automobile going at high speed. The machine ran into a telegraph pole. Mrs. Stewart was thrown against the pole with great force and was so seriously injured that death soon followed. Senator Stewart is in Holland.

Boer Leaders Fall Out

Brussels, Sept. 13.—It is said that one result of the recent conferences between Mr. Chamberlain and the Boer generals is a split between the generals and the irreconcilables, the latter led by Messrs. Kruger, Leyds and Reitz, the latter being held responsible for the failure of the generals' mission. General Botha is said to be particularly bitter against Reitz.

American Crew For Bogota

San Francisco, Sept. 13.—There is every prospect that the steamer Bogota, when she sails from this port under the Colombian flag, will have on board an entire American crew. Seymour Dutton, a reporter of a San Francisco paper, has shipped as executive officer. He was an officer on the Gloucester during the naval operations in Cuban waters.

Pays Dear For Assault

Philadelphia, Sept. 13.—Thomas Murphy was yesterday sentenced to three years' imprisonment and $1000 fine for murderous assault in June, 1901, upon Dennis Magillicuddy, formerly ground keeper for the American league ball club. After his arrest he jumped his bail, but was captured in St. Louis about a month ago.

Won't Give Up Automobiling

New York, Sept. 13.—W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., in an interview which Automobile Topics publishes, not only declares that he has no intention of retiring from automobiling, but expresses a willingness to help as far as possible the sending abroad of an American team to compete for the international challenge cup.

Admiral Asks Investigation

Washington, Sept. 13.—On the request of Rear Admiral Higginson, the navy department has appointed a court of inquiry to investigate the circumstances attending the accident to the big cruiser Brooklyn in Buzzard's bay during the recent maneuvers.

Strikers' Demands Granted

Chicago, Sept. 13.—The threatened strike of the bakery and cracker wagon drivers of the National Biscuit company was settled yesterday. The company agreed to the demands of the men.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Sunday, Sept. 14.
Sun rises—5:22; sets—5:57.
Moon sets—9:32 a. m.
High water—8:30 a. m.; 8:45 p. m.

Temperatures were below the freezing point in the Dakotas, western Nebraska and the central Rocky mountain region yesterday morning. There will be rain today in New England. The weather will be fair Sunday.

NO NEW EVIDENCE

Governor Crane, at Craig Inquest, Tells Story of the Accident

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 13.—Governor Crane testified yesterday afternoon before the Craig inquest. He said that in company with President Roosevelt and George B. Cortelyou he was nearing the foot of Howard hill when he heard the gong of the approaching car. At that time the leading horses were on the track, and he quickly arose to his feet to see how close the car was to the carriage. He was dumfounded to find that the car was but a short distance away, and that it was approaching at a very fast rate of speed. The governor could tell but little as to just how the collision occurred. He remembered nothing as to how he was thrown, and only remembered assisting the president from the carriage. The governor spoke of the police arrangements for the day, and praised them highly. He felt that the police were in no way responsible for the accident.

Other witnesses yesterday afternoon including George Conklin, who happened to be in the vicinity of the accident, and Mrs. Allen H. Horton, who was a passenger on the car. Mrs. Horton's story was to the effect that the car was running at a fair rate of speed when the collision occurred. She sat on the front seat directly behind the motorman. As the car approached the president's carriage the greater portion of the passengers stood up to get a good view of the occupants of the carriage. Suddenly she heard Motorman Madden exclaim: "Oh, my God." He then jumped to the brakes, and worked, as she said, as she never saw a man work before. Several other passengers on the car also testified as to its speed, but could throw little light upon the accident, claiming that they were in such a position that they could not see what was going on in front of the car.

Did Much For Washington

Washington, Sept. 13.—A telegram from Batopilas, Mex., announces the death there of Alexander R. Shepherd, former governor of the District of Columbia. He was 67 years old. Governor Shepherd, in spite of vigorous opposition, began and successfully continued improvements in all parts of the city with the result that Washington became a magnificent capital. To the governor is given credit for nipping in the bud a project for the removal of the capital to some western city.

Bennie Munroe's Skull Fractured

Baltimore, Sept. 13.—Bennie Monroe received probably fatal injuries and three other persons were more or less seriously injured last night by a spill at the Coliseum during a motor-paced bicycle race. Monroe's skull was fractured and he received other injuries. Jimmy Hunter was injured about the head, face and legs. George Leander was cut and bruised on the head, arms and legs, and Mrs. May Kirby was thrown against a post and received serious injuries.

Trust Question Goes Over

Berlin, Sept. 13.—The German jurists' congress yesterday discussed syndicates and trusts. The opinions expressed conflicted greatly regarding the necessity for state control of combines, and it was finally voted to postpone action until next year's meeting.

In Love With His Violin

New York, Sept. 13.—Josef Bennalfo, a violinist said to have played before Italy's king and queen and in the most noted orchestras of that nation, was taken to the Bellevue hospital insane pavilion last night. He played nine hours without a break yesterday.

Breathing Spell on Isthmus

Colon, Sept. 13.—The situation on the isthmus remains unchanged. The government continues watchful and all the approaches to the town of Colon are well garrisoned and defended. Trains are running across the isthmus as usual.

A VICIOUS ASSAULT

Fisherman Beaten Into Insensibility, Bound and Set Adrift

Gloucester, Mass., Sept. 13.—J. S. Monize, a Portuguese dory fisherman, was the victim yesterday of a particularly brutal assault. Manuel T. Begash, another fisherman, became engaged in an altercation with Monize while fishing down in the bay and, jumping into the latter's dory, it is alleged, seized an oar and pounded Monize until he was insensible. After this, he tied his victim down in his boat and set him adrift.

After Begash had left him, Monize recovered sufficiently to release himself from his bonds, and succeeded in managing his boat so as to come ashore. He then dragged himself to the police station and made a complaint against Begash, who was later arrested, and held in $10,000, charged with murderous assault.

The physicians say that there is a clot on Monize's brain, and that his injuries may prove fatal.

Policeman Admits Larceny

Somerville, Mass., Sept. 13.—John G. Knight, the patrolman who was arrested on a larceny charge, was arraigned before Judge Wentworth yesterday. There were two counts in the indictment against him, the first charging the larceny of a dictionary and cash from the public library building, and the second charging the larceny of merchandise from the store of Jackson Caldwell. Knight pleaded guilty to both counts, and the judge held him to the superior court.

Figured In Famous Tragedy

Weymouth, Mass., Sept. 13.—Albert Chase of this town died yesterday at the Soldiers' home at Togus, Me. He was a veteran of the Civil war and sergeant of the guard at the navy yard bridge in Washington on the night Booth made his escape, after shooting President Lincoln. Chase detained Booth several minutes, but as he gave a good account of himself he was allowed to go. A portion of the reward for Booth's apprehension was paid later to Chase.

Car Crashed Into Horse and Wagon

Fall River, Mass., Sept. 13.—An electric car, while going through a dark stretch of woods in North Tiverton last night, collided with a horse and wagon head-on. The motorman had no time in which to stop his car, and several of the passengers jumped as the crash came. The horse was instantly killed, and the wagon, which was unoccupied, was smashed to pieces. The horse had strayed onto the track in the absence of its driver.

Breweries Start Up Monday

Boston, Sept. 13.—According to the agreement reached for the settlement of the brewery workers' strike the strikers had until 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon to return. It is said that although nearly all the strikers reported for duty, those few who neglected to report will undoubtedly be taken back with the others on Monday, when work in all the breweries will begin.

Campaign Against Speed Madness

Manchester, Mass., Sept. 13.—Chief of Police Urquhart got after the scorching automobilists again yesterday, and as a result three machines were rounded up on a half mile stretch, where the automobiles are watched and timed by stop watches. It is claimed that all three machines were going at a rate of 20 miles an hour, which is away beyond the speed limit.

Unfortunate Drowned Herself

Boston, Sept. 13.—The body of Mrs. Ellen A. Donovan, 50, an inmate of the city institution at Austin Farm, who escaped from there yesterday, was found in a pond in Franklin park last evening. It is a supposed case of suicide.

Aged Victim of Trolley Car

Amherst, Mass., Sept. 13.—Mrs. Martha Smith, aged 82 years, is dead from injuries received yesterday by being run into by an electric car. Mrs. Smith was quite deaf and partially blind and stepped in front of the car.

Noted Southerner Kills Himself

New York, Sept. 13.—Colonel John G. Garnett, one of the most prominent southerners in New York, a West Point graduate, colonel of artillery under General Lee in the Confederate army and a native of Virginia, was found dead yesterday in the Ross Hotel. He had committed suicide by taking carbolic acid. Garnett was head of a publishing company and had been engaged in writing a history of the West Point military academy.

Troops and Mob In Conflict

Springfield, Ills., Sept. 13.—Captain Sutterfield, in command of troops at Eldorado, reports that a skirmish occurred last night between the soldiers and an armed mob. Governor Yates ordered a squad of militia to Eldorado two months ago to protect colored persons who were being cruelly treated by white residents. The trouble is the first encounter that has occurred since the troops were sent.

Russia Violates Her Promise

Pekin, Sept. 13.—The Chinese government is disturbed at the apparent determination of Russia to delay the restoration of Manchuria. Members of the imperial government are frequently in conference with Paul Lessar, Russian minister to China, and are urging upon him the fulfillment of Russia's promises.

Devastation by Forest Fires

Portland, Ore., Sept. 13.—Forest fires are burning over the Cascade and coast ranges from British Columbia to the California line, destroying millions of feet of timber, many farmhouses, barns and livestock. Two people are known to have lost their lives, others are missing and scores are hurrying to places of safety.

No Time to Lose

You cannot afford to disregard the warnings of a weak and diseased heart and put off taking the prescription of the world's greatest authority on heart and nervous disorders—

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

If your heart palpitates, flutters, or you are short of breath, have smothering spells, pain in left side, shoulder or arm, you have heart trouble and are liable to drop dead any moment.

Major J. W. Woodcock, one of the best known oil operators in the country dropped dead from heart disease recently, at his home in Portland, Ind., while mowing his lawn.—The Press.

Mrs. M. A. Birdsall, Watkins, N. Y., whose portrait heads this advertisement, says: "I write this through gratitude for benefits I received from Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. I had palpitation of the heart, severe pains under the left shoulder, and my general health was miserable. A few bottles of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure cured me entirely.

Good Afternoon.

Rev. Father Scully, who died Thursday at his home in Cambridge, will be mourned not only by the citizens of Cambridge but the community for miles around. He was active in matters which concerned the welfare of his city and as a temperance leader he accomplished much.

Drift of Opinion.

☞"Pajamas," says the Philadelphia Press, "are the most heavenly things that ever were invented for the delectation of man and converted into a blessing for women." Suspicious Benedict might say: "There is a double meaning here."—Massachusetts Ploughman.

☞ In defense of the proposition for taking extraordinary precautions for the safety of the president, one of the papers urges that "President Roosevelt is more than brave; he is rash." We submit that a president has no business to be rash; and that the American people are not called upon to protect a president against himself. If the argument proves anything, it proves altogether too much.—New Bedford Standard.

☞A study of the official figures of the British losses in the Bore war leaves no possible doubt of the bravery of the British officers. They may be open to criticism for having displayed a lack of acumen and military sense in some instances, but there can be no doubt of the personal courage of the individual officers. The official report recently shows that in proportion to the number of officers and men engaged there were nearly twice as many officers killed and wounded as enlisted men. This was very much the case with the American forces in the Cuban campaign.—Beverly Times.

☞The predictions of numerous well known citizens of this land, that the coal strike will end on this, that or the other day, are entertaining to those who love to listen to what others say, in the hope and knowledge that much of what they say will be proven wrong. We have had the coal strike settled already, according to past predictors. We now are due, according to "experts," to have it settled in three days, three weeks, by Christmas, by New Year's and not at all till after a new year has rolled around. The price, by the same expert evidence, is to go higher, lower, and stay where it is. All of which is respectfully submitted to show that even the most astute humans do not know it all, and in fact know mighty little about it.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞One effect of the beef trust is that agents of small marketmen in the cities are going over the hills, and buying up all the used-up cows, old stags, undergrown two-year-olds, for four or five cents a pound. To what extent these purchases account for the small skinny, tough, tasteless beef for which we are charged from 25 to 33 cents a pound in our public markets it is hard to say. But it is certain that not all the woes of the consumers, are due to the beef trust, or combine, and that the eastern farmers are not a whit advantaged by the high prices of beef, but the middlemen of the cities get all the profit, and a profit that compares in proportion with that of any trust ever made.—Springfield Republican.

ALL FOR HARMONY.

Three Are Willing But Are Not Seeking.

The Congressional Nomination.

Hon. John O. Hall A Guest Of North Dorchester Club.

Seldom has a more enthusiastic or larger crowd gathered at the North Dorchester Republican Club than on last evening, says the Journal, when the seventh anniversary of the club was observed in its house, 986 Dorchester avenue, Dorchester. This was the first occasion when the candidates for Congressional, Senatorial and Representative honors have been brought together in the district. They were all given a chance to address the audience and tell why they sought the support of the voters of the district, at the coming caucuses.

National issues were discussed at some length by some of the candidates, but in many cases the candidates improved the opportunity to have a heart-to-heart talk with their constituents. President Arthur L. Whittemore presided and in his opening address briefly outlined the policy which the club had pursued during the seven years of its existence. He pointed with some pride to the fact the club was just as active and as strong today as ever. It had always been loyal to the party candidates and would continue to do so. Its one aim would be the support of the Republican party. He then introduced former Representative James Howell, as Chairman of the evening.

As the first speaker, Mr. Howell introduced ex-Mayor John O. Hall of Quincy, candidate for Congress in the Tenth District. He dwelt at some length on the condition of affairs in the district and said that the Tenth and Ninth had both been conceded to the Democrats. He believed that with the proper amount of work and harmony the district could be carried by the Republicans. He said that the Ninth District was not their burden.

Ex-Senator William H. Lott, also a Congressional candidate, said that he wished it understood that he was not seeking the nomination in the Tenth District. This he thought was pretty well understood and the only delegates that were pledged to him were those in Ward 16, which were placed in the fight against his will. He wished to have the convention harmonious in the extreme and would not go in there with the idea of making a fight. He was going to support the nominee of the convention, no matter whom it might be, and he hoped the other candidates and their friends took the same view of the matter. In that event the district could be carried by the Republicans.

Hon. W. W. Towle of Ward 20, also a candidate for Congress, said that he had delegations in Wards 20 and 24 pledged to him. In Ward 24 there was another delegation placed in the field by the Ward Committee and nine of its delegates were members of the Ward Committee. He said that he always supposed, and still thought so, that Ward Committees were organized or fair play. This Ward Committee had not announced as yet to whom it was pledged, and as the voters would want to know before the caucus, he expected that they would announce the fact within a few days. In that event it would be either Mr. Hall, Mr. Lott or himself in which their choice would be perfectly agreeable to him.

Hon. H. H. Atwood was then called on to speak as the Chairman said he undertsood that gentleman was a candidate for Congress, but he was evidently not present as he did not respond.

Representative Wilbur F. Adams, candidate for Senator, was introduced and he said that he had tried to serve his constituents. He felt that his record was open to criticism. He said that he had never yet bolted the nominee of the party and if he was defeated at the caucuses he promised to suppor the nominee.

Dr. George B. Pierce, candidate for the Senate in Dorchester, was then introduced. He prophesied a victory in the Tenth Congressional District for the Republicans. He urged his hearers to stick close to the party and support the nominee, whoever they might be. He said that he would do everything in his power to support the choice of the caucuses as he thought there should be perfect harmony in the district. "I will do my level best and back any Republican of character in Dorchester," were his closing remarks. He was given a great cheer by those present.

Other speakers were Representative Callender, Representative Vinson, Representative Russell, Guy A. Horn, former Representative Wells, Van C. Lawrence, Frank W. Thayer, B. W. Putnam, and H. N. Locklin.

Iron Gives Strength

No let-up of work, no freedom from household cares, close confinement in ill-ventilated rooms, offices and stores have made many women pale, tired and wornout, just as too much study and too little outdoor exercise have made many school children spindling and delicate. They have weakened the nerves, impaired digestion, upset nutrition, so that the blood has become watery and thin,—a result plainly seen in the colorless lips, cheeks and ears.

Too much responsibility, anxiety and worry have, in the same way, broken down the health of many busy men.

Now, what is needed by all these sufferers is iron, a natural constituent of healthy, strong and ruddy blood, as combined in the new iron tonic, Peptiron, which strengthens and colors the blood, nourishes and steadies the nerves, cures paleness, weakness, nervousness, dyspepsia and sleeplessness.

Peptiron combines iron in the best and most approved form with other great tonics and nutrients. Does not injure the teeth nor cause constipation.

Peptiron is made in two forms: In a liquid—an aromatic cordial elixir—at $1 per bottle, also in chocolate-coated pills at 50c. or $1 per box. By C. I. HOOD CO., proprietors Hood's Sarsaparilla, Lowell, Mass.. U. S. A.

Wheel About the Hub.

The bicyclists of 1879 or rather the Pioneer club which made the "Wheel about the Hub" in that year will pass through Quincy on Sunday and make a stop at Dr. Kendall's at Atlantic. About 50 left Boston yesterday, and made the Massopoag Lake Hotel at Sharon their headquarters last night.

Today the ride was continued back through Canton, with a long noon stop at Cedar lodge, and in the afternoon through South Braintree, Weymouth and Hingham to Kimball's. The return is set for Sunday, the route to be decided upon later.

Among those who started were A. Nickerson, George Wright, E. C. Hodges, F. W. Weston, T. H. Hall, George F. Steele, T. Rothe, E. F. Kelley, J. B. Kelley, W. F. Libbey, Dr. O. F. Wyman, F. B. Wilde, Theo. Winsor, E. Denham, E. G. Whitney, N. Heath, W. B. Everett, J. J. Fecitt, W. G. Kendall, Dr. F. H. Willard, J. A. Hendrix, G. W. King, W. H. Edmunds, W. F. Stevens, J. F. Powers, C. C. Ryder, S. M. Turner, C. E. Duryea, N. M. Belding, Jr., A. W. Robinson, Allen Swan, F. H. Rhymer, J. S. Dean, Dr. H. A. Baker, Judge Burke, Dr. A. W. Branigan and W. H. Abermeyer.

A Transfer Man.

Since the establishment of the street railway waiting room in City Square, it has become the point at which the free transfers are given out. Heretofore the free transfers have been given out by the conductor of the car on which the cash fare was paid. This has been somewhat of an inconvenience to the conductors, especially on rush days. Now, however, when passengers alight from a car in City Square, if he or she wishes a transfer it must be obtained of the starter, who is always on duty.

The Renewal a Strain.

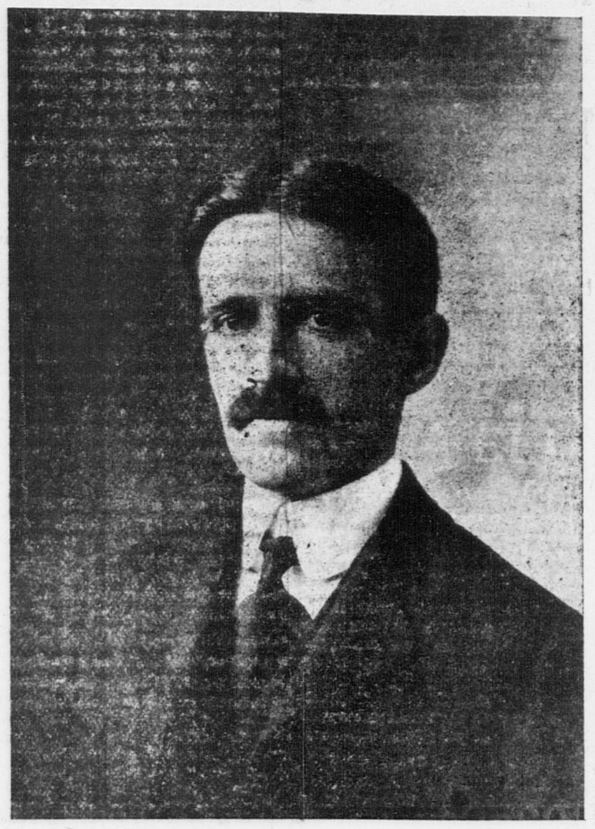
Vacation is over. Again the school bell rings at morning and at noon, again with tens of thousands the hardest kind of work has begun, the renewal of which is a mental and physical strain to all except the most rugged. The little girl that a few days ago had roses in her cheeks, and the little boy whose lips were then so red you would have insisted that they had been "kissed by strawberries," have already lost something of the appearance of health, Now is a time when many children should be given a tonic, which may avert much serious trouble, and we know of no other so highly to be recommended as Hood's Sarsaparilla, which strengthens the nerves, perfects digestion and assimilation, and aids mental development by building up the whole system.

DIED.

FORD—In Quincy, Sept. 12, Mr. Charles N. Ford, aged 56 years and 6 months. Funeral from late residence, 41 Washington street, Sunday, Sept. 14, at 2.30 P. M. Relatives and friends invited.

CANDIDATE FOR REELECTION.

The Record of Representative McKnight a Good Endorsement for an Another Year at State House.



It has been the custom of Quincy in the past to give its representatives to the General Court at least two years, and there appears to be no good reason why that custom should be deviated from this year, and Representative McKnight returned. During his service this year he served on one of the most important committees, that on Insurance, and not only was he clerk of that committee, but also clerk of the joint committee on Public Service and Insurance.

It is rather unusual for a first year man to receive two clerkships, and only shows that his ability was recognized.

Whenever he spoke upon the floor of the House he held the undivided attention of that body. His arguments were clear and concise, and made a good impression. In voting he was always on the side of good legislation, showing that he was made of the stuff of which good legislators are made, and that no mistake will be made in giving him a second year. The indications are that he will receive a flattering vote at the caucuses and will be one of the two to receive the Republican nomination.

In Darkest America.

Brigadier Alex. M. Damon, general secretary of the Chicago and Scandinavian Province of the Salvation Army, whose headquarters are in Chicago, Ill., is to visit the local Scandinavain corps on Friday, September 19. He is announced to deliver a stereopticon lecture entitled "In Darkest America," in the Faxon Hall, corner Chestnut and Revere road, at 8 P. M. Although visiting a Scandinavain corps the lecture will be in English; one hundred views are to be shown descriptive of the "other" side of life in the large cities of the United States. Brigadier Damon is a native of Lowell, Mass., receiving his schooling in that city and later in Boston, from which city he entered active service in the Army. For thirteen years he has been an officer and has occupied during that time many positions of importance and responsibility. He has had years of experience among the classes he describes in New York, Boston, Chicago, and other large cities.

Concerning this lecture G. M. Ambrose, editor of the Oak Park, Ill., Argus writes: "It was one of the most impressive lectures to which we have listened, and we cannot too strongly urge a hearing by those who have not heard him."

Ensign Christine Sangren, also of Chicago, acts as soloist, and comes well recommended. One of the special features of the service will be the illustrated songs, which are innovations of recent date in Army meetings.

Tickets are sold at 15 cents by the soldiers of the corps who say the proceeds will be utilized in helping the Army work.

Alexander Greig.

Mr. Greig, a native of Scotland, but of recent years a resident and citizen of Quincy, died last Wednesday, aged 52 years, at Dr. Cullis' Home for Consumptives, New Dorchester.

Mrs. George Esson, of 36 Intervale street, a sister of the deceased, and several members of her family attended the burial, which was at Mount Wolliston yesterday.

Mr. Greig was a ship carpenter by trade and worked for Mr. Merritt at his boat building place at City Point.

Charles N. Ford Dead.

Mr. Charles N. Ford, a well known resident of Quincy, died yesterday at his home on Washington street. Mr. Ford was for many years employed at Packard's essence manufactory but of late failing heath has prevented his following his usual employment. He was 56 years of age and leaves a widow and one child.

—"Good temper, like a sunny dayt sheds a brightness over everything. It is the sweetness of toil and the soother of disquietude."

Worden and Bainbridge.

The torpedo boat destroyer Worden had her standardizing trial at Baltimore Thursday, and showed herself the speediest vessel of her class. During a spurt she developed a speed of 30.50 knots. She averaged 29.86 knots. The Bainbridge also was standardized and averaged 28.62 knots. The contracts call for 28 knots.

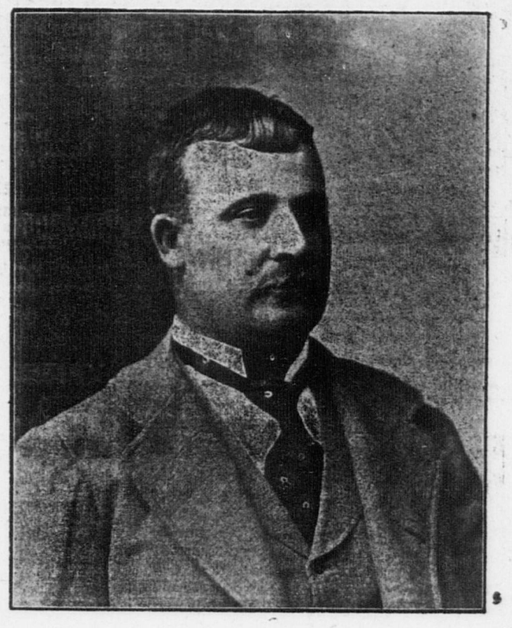
A POPULAR CANDIDATE.

Sketch of Edward J. Sandberg, Prominately Named for Republican Representative Candidate.



Prominent among the candidates for the Republican nomination for Representative is Edward J. Sandberg, who was born at Helsinberg, Sweden, Oct. 21, 1866. He was educated in the public schools of that city. At an early age he went to Denmark, where he entered the service of an engineering corps connected with the railway systems of that country. In 1886 he came to America, taking up his abode in Quincy. He established the business of teaming and contracting, with success, and today is rated among the best. The equipment of his plant enables him to undertake contracts of any description demanding great skill. He has had many large contracts in Boston.

Mr. Sandberg, on becoming a citizen, joined the Republican party and has been a firm supporter of its candidates and principles. He has served as a member of the Ward and City committees for several years, also as a special police officer, and is a trustee of the Swedish Lutheran church, Vice president and director of the Master Builders' and Traders' Association, president of the Scandia Granite Works, member of Mount Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F., Manet Encampment, Geo. L. Gill Rebekah lodge and Canton Shawmut No. 1 of Boston.

June 13, 1891, Mr. Sandberg married Hannah Marie Dorum of Quincy. He resides on Buckley street, West Quincy, and is among Ward Four's most successful business men.

—We have heard of collecting "at the other end" on telegraph lines, but its use on electric street cars is rather a new thing. One evening this week a very "tired" man boarded a car at Forest Hills. When the conductor came round for the fares the tired one said he had no money and informed the conductor that he could collect at the other end. While the other passengers laughed, the conductor took the man's name. The car finally reached Cleary square, and a woman came from the corner toward the conductor and, handing him a nickel, pulled the man off the car, and the two went off peacefully, though slowly, up the street.—Hyde Park Gazette.

SWIFT AND HOT BLAST

From Mont Pelee Carried Death and Destruction

PROF HEILPRIN'S REPORT

Ruined Cities Covered With Ashes a Foot Deep—Wonderful Electrical Illuminations Accompanied the Phenomena—Martinique Uneasy

Fort de France, Island of Martinique, Sept. 13.—Professor Heilprin, president of the Philadelphia Geographical society, who is in Martinique in the interests of the National Geographical society, has made the following report of the recent eruptions of Mont Pelee:

The scene of destruction in the last eruption of Mont Pelee far surpasses in extent that of the eruption of May 8, when St. Pierre was destroyed, and includes the broad area lying between Macouba and Carbet, and involves Haute Tours de Bourdon, Basse Pointe, Morne Balai and Ajoupa Bouillon, where alone upwards of 300 persons were killed, as well as Morne Rouge, with a death list of probably not less than 1100 persons; Morne Capot and the heights somewhat this side of Fonds St. Denis, the blast, however, leaving the last named place untouched. Great cinders fell also over the region of Grand Reviere, and Precheur is covered deep with ashes. In Carbet the ashes lie one foot deep and nearly the same amount covers the ruins of St. Pierre. All of Morne Rouge, with the exception of about four houses and the beautiful church, has been swept to the ground and the greater part of the town has been burned. At Ajoupa Bouillon, where one-half of the town has been prostrated, there is no trace of fire of any kind.

The destructive blast, instead of confining itself to a section or area as was the case during the first eruption, was distributed radially, crossing the low summit of the volcano near the Knob of Morne Jacob and skipping zones between its rays. The danger from Mont Pelee is thus materially increased and perhaps no position in the north of the island is absolutely safe. The government has judiciously ordered the evacuation of all points reached by a radius of about eight or 10 miles from the crater.

The recent phenomena were precisely like those of May 8, death resulting in most cases from contact with the terribly swift and hot blast, which burnt and which suffocated. The sulphur emitted from the crater during the recent eruptions was comparatively insignificant, although it densely permeated the ash cloud which fell over Precheur. The electrical illuminations during the storm were wonderful, and greatly surpassed those of July 9. There was no barometric disturbance to indicate a coming eruption.

During the time I was on the volcano on the afternoon of the eruption Mont Pelee was in terrible activity and refuge from flying bombs had to be sought in a hole. The great cone could not be seen. On the way down the mountain the party was enveloped in ashes and mud, the center of the ash and steam clouds being almost vertically over us. The destruction of the several towns and localities was simultaneous, occurring at 9:10 p. m.

There is much uneasiness all over the island of Martinique and this is intensified by the knowledge that La Soufriere, on the Island of St Vincent, is again in full activity. The illumination of the eruption on St. Vincent, as seen from here the night of Wednesday, was most terrifying, and on Thursday morning the ash cloud from the St. Vincent volcano carried darkness to Fort de France for a period of nearly six hours. No details of the casualties on St. Vincent have as yet been received here.

Regarding Dead Soldiers

Washington, Sept. 13.—The war department has issued a circular announcing that the remains of soldiers dying at posts within the United States cannot be disinterred and shipped home at government expense. Efforts will be made to communicate with relatives of such soldiers before they are buried so that the remains may be shipped home for interment.

A Georgia Woman's Nerve

Nashville, Ga., Sept. 13.—Boisy Bryant was hanged here yesterday for the murder of Town Marshal Hynds. Mrs. Etta H. Parker, daughter of the murdered man, watched the execution from the scaffold trap. As soon as Bryant was pronounced dead Mrs. Parker cut the body of the murderer down.

Young Roosevelt Returns Home

Oyster Bay, L. I., Sept. 13—John T. McDonough, secretary of state of New York, was the president's guest at dinner last night. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., who has been in the west on a hunting and fishing trip, returned home last evening.

Colorado With Roosevelt

Denver, Sept. 13.—James H. Peabody was nominated for governor by the Republican state convention yesterday. The administration of President Roosevelt was endorsed.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

ELECTRIC DANCERS.

An Easily Made Toy That Will Give You Lots of Fun.

With the help of electricity in its simplest form a great many tricks and entertaining feats can be performed, such as the following: Get a plain sheet of glass about 12 inches long by 8 inches wide and insert it between two volumes, as shown in the illustration. The distance of the glass from the table should be about three inches. With the help of scissors cut a number of small figures, such as men, women, clowns, animals, etc., not higher than 1½ inches, out of different colored paper. Lay the little figures flat in a line on the table underneath the glass.

MAKING THE FIGURES DANCE.

Make a sort of ball of woolen or, better yet, silk cloth, warm it a little and rub the surface of the glass with it. You will notice immediately how the electricity obtained by this process enlivens the little paper figures; how they stand up and jump to the glass ceiling of their little ballroom, to be repulsed and fall back, only to renew their dance. If you stop rubbing, the funny actions of the figures are continued for awhile. When the dance is ended, the touch of the hand on the glass is sufficient to enliven the figures again.

An Ideal For Boys.

It is the ambition of all boys to be men. Do they think what constitutes manhood? The idea of most boys is that a man is one grown in years and size and free to come and go and act without parental or other restraint. Boys should be taught that these things are not all that constitute manhood. It is something more than mature years and size or parental freedom. True manhood is made up of character, of human excellence, of good behavior, gentlemanliness, of honesty, of truthfulness, of desire and ability to do good. Whatever that person's calling, his first thought should be to be a man, a useful man, a true man in every respect and at all times. He may be a poor man, so far as the possession of this world's goods is concerned, and yet be an ideal man, a pure man in thought and action, standing before God and man as one determined to do his whole duty to his fellow creatures as far as his circumstances and ability will permit. A man clean in mind and body may defy the world and be respected by every one.

Let boys keep an ideal of this kind of manhood ever before them and endeavor to imitate him in his virtues, and they will be likely to spend their days in happiness and possess an ideal family and home.—Southern Standard.

Sprouted Again.

My sister had a baby tooth which needed pulling, and Brother Charlie, aged five, said he would pull it for her, which he did. Several days afterward the new tooth, which had just pushed through the gum and could be plainly seen, was discovered by Charlie, and he said:

"Why, that mean thing! I thought I pulled it clear out, and here it is sprouting up again!"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Prudent Maid.

Miss Dorothy Dot, before going to wade,
Takes her little tin bucket and little tin spade,
And Bobbie and she work away with a vim
Till her little tin bucket is full to the brim.
"With this sand we can build us a little dry spot
If the ocean's too wet," says Miss Dorothy Dot.
—Harriot Brewer Sterling in St. Nicholas.

When to Eat His Supper.

"Fred, you didn't sleep a wink last night, and you kept me awake, too," said little Bess in a complaining tone. "You should never go to bed after supper."

"But when am I to eat my supper?" Master Fred wanted to know.

A puzzled look overspread her face for a second, and then she said in the tone of one having solved a problem:

"The next day, I s'pect."

Chameleon Spider.

The chameleon spider is one of those spiders which do not spin webs. It sits among the yellow petals of the black eyed daisy, with which it is very much alike in color, and when a butterfly flits along it springs out and seizes it, with a bound like that of a tiger. Thus the stock of butterflies, whose caterpillars are ruinous to orchards and gardens, is kept down.

Didn't Break the Rule.

Tom had been kept in at school for talking out loud.

"Why did you do it, Tom?" asked his mamma. "Didn't you know that it was against the rules?"

"No," said Tom. "Teacher only said I mustn't whisper, and I didn't."

LAUNDRY LINES.

A tablespoonful of turpentine in the clothes boiler will whiten the linen and remove stains.

A tablespoonful of black pepper to the water in which black stockings are washed will brighten them.

Linen may be made beautifully white by the use of a little refined borax in the water instead of using a washing fluid.

To remove salt water stains dip a piece of the stained material into vinegar and rub until the stain disappears.

Cottons that have much gray, mauve or brown in the pattern should be wet in alum water before putting in the wash.

Some women, when in a hurry, cool irons by plunging them into cold water, which will soon have the effect of spoiling them.

To prevent irons from sticking mix a little turpentine in the hot starch. A little borax mixed with the starch will have the same effect.

Silk stockings must never be washed with soap. Warm water, to which bran is added in the proportion of two tablespoonfuls to a pint, is what is needed. Do not wring, but squeeze out after rinsing them and dry in the shade.

For a Clear Complexion.

Famous beauties nearly all unite in giving testimony that a thorough steaming of the face at night is wonderfully effective in producing a clear complexion. This is done by holding the face over a bowl of hot water.

A certain amount of exercise is indispensable. Brisk morning walks, regularly taken and persistently adhered to, produce a healthy glow that defies artificial imitation.

Avoid rich and greasy foods. Though it is practically useless to tell a woman to adjure sweets, it may be suggested that they are complexion destroyers and that the fewer one eats the fairer one's skin is likely to be.

Massage is recommended by many who have made a special study of the fine art of complexion preserving. A gentle kneading of the face at night and in the morning makes the skin soft and healthy.

Overfrequent washing of the face should be avoided. Some physicians insist that the face should be washed but once a day and then in tepid water. It is understood that only the purest soap should be used.

Successor of Mary Lyon.

Miss Mary Woolley constantly has to submit to a somewhat trying comparison with Mary Lyon, who is regarded by many persons as the patron saint of the higher education of women. Miss Woolley is the president of Mount Holyoke college, which was founded by Miss Lyon. It was Mount Holyoke seminary in those days, and there was then quite as much attention paid to religion as to the higher education, and a good deal to housework, of which every student had to do her share. Miss Lyon sent out many missionaries and wives of missionaries into foreign lands from Mount Holyoke and pupils of hers founded two branch Holyokes, one in Painesville, O., and the other in Oxford, in the same state, both of which rivaled the mother seminary in their contributions to the missionary field. The rival claims of Mary Lyon and of Emma Willard, who founded the Troy Female seminary, for the title of pioneer in the realm of the higher education for women are vigorously discussed by pupils of the two schools.

The Women Men Like.

There are many different ideas regarding what special virtues in women are liked by men. One observer says that, first of all, one must understand that what they like are not always the same thing. A man is often attracted by a bewitching smile, but a good tempered wóman in the end has the greatest hold on him and wins his respect. It is a mistake to think that in these days men prefer brainless, silly women. On the contrary, they like those who have bright, quick brains, who take an interest in things around them and can talk sensibly on subjects in which they themselves are interested, though if the women possess superior knowledge on any one topic they will do well to keep that fact in the background and play the part of interested listeners.—Detroit News-Tribune.

Hair Lotions.

Hair lotions are not advisable at all times and it is quite possible to use too many of them. A lotion to the hair is like fertilizer to the plant and should never be used constantly.

Monthly applications of good tonic, weekly shampoos, judicious brushing and singeing of the ends when they grow brittle and have a tendency to split should keep the hair in excellent condition.

There are several good hair tonics on the market, but care should be taken to select one which does not contain a great amount of alcoholic properties. Too frequently the after results of the use of alcohol on the hair are overlooked. It is very drying and shrivels the roots and glands.

She Doesn't Like the Term.

"No, I don't mind being an old maid or even being called one," protested the woman who was nearing middle age, "but I do hope that I am not old maidish. I dread that with all my heart. But, bad as it is to be old maidish," she sighed, "I prefer that to calling myself a bachelor girl after I am gray haired and old enough to be a grandmother, as the spinsters of the present day love to do. I know a woman who is at least sixty years old and who invariably refers to herself as a bachelor girl. Bah! I'm a spinster or an old maid or anything else you please except a bachelor girl."

A SPEECH BY MITCHELL

In Which He Opposes Compulsory Arbitration Plan

WILL NOT ENSLAVE OTHERS

In Order to Get Out of Their Own Difficulty—Calls Special Policemen Criminals and Thugs—Refutes Hewitt's Claim as Labor's Friend

Philadelphia, Sept. 13.—President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers came here last night and was presented with about $3000 by the organized workmen of this city for the benefit of the striking mine workers. The miners' chief was given an enthusiastic reception by the great crowd within the building. After the relief money had been formally presented to him, Mr. Mitchell made a short address. He thanked the donors on behalf of the "great army of men, women and children who are making a great struggle for living wages." He said the mine workers' fight was a fight for trade unionism, without which the workmen of the country could not get fair treatment from the employers.

The spokesman of the operators, he continued, contended they are making a fight for individual liberty and for a principle, but Mitchell claimed the operators are battling to give wages satisfactory only to the coal trust. He said the strikers are just as firm today as they were four months ago. If the strike were to be lost, which, he said, is not likely, it would not only mean the disintegration of organized labor, but it would be a shock which would be seriously felt.

President Mitchell said it was difficult to keep peace among such a great army of men who are struggling for living wages, but the miners were keeping within the law as best they can. The coal operators, he said, have characterized the Miners' union as a "irresponsible and lawless body." He admitted there had been some lawlessness, "but of the six persons killed in the coal fields since the strike was started, three were murdered by the coal and iron policemen." No one deplored lawlessness more than he did, even though committed by his own brother. He characterized most of the special policemen as "criminals and thugs."

Continuing, he said: "Governor Stone is contemplating an extra session of the Pennsylvania legislature for the purpose of having enacted a compulsory arbitration law. The miners are willing to arbitrate, but they are not willing to have compulsory arbitration. They are not willing to enslave the workmen of Pennsylvania in order to get out of their own difficulty.

Mr. Mitchell referred to the recent public statement of ex-Mayor Hewitt of New York, in which the latter was quoted as saying Mitchell was responsible for the anthracite strike and that he had ordered the bituminous miners to quit work but that the latter had refused. Mitchell denied these statements and also refuted Hewitt's claim that he has been a friend of labor. Hewitt, he said, is a director in the Erie railroad and a director in a very large coal company.

"All of the men in the employ of Mr. Hewitt in West Virginia," Mitchell said, "are on strike, although he never told that to the public."

Mr. Mitchell pictured the young and frail children going to the mines and factories when they ought to be in the schools where they could receive an education. He asked the citizens of Philadelphia to further assist the strikers.

"We cannot win the strike alone," he said, "but with the help of the trades unions of the country victory will be ours. This is the struggle of our time and it is the duty of every organized workman in the country to do what he can for our success."

Governor Stone's Good Offices

Harrisburg, Sept. 13.—A conference was held at the executive mansion early this morning between Governor Stone, Senator Flinn and M. K. McMullin, President Mitchell and District Presidents Duffy, Fahey and Nichols of the United Mine Workers for the purpose of discussing means of settling the coal strike. The governor has devised a plan by which he hopes to effect a settlement between the operators and miners without the necessity of an extra session of the legislature for the enactment of arbitration legislation. The conference did not begin until long after midnight. The governor originally arranged for a meeting today, but Mitchell had an engagement at Wilkesbarre today and asked that the governor meet him earlier and the executive cheerfully complied with his request. Senator Flinn is one of the largest individual employers of labor in the state and he has never had a strike.

Boodle Cases Before Grand Jury

St. Louis, Sept. 13.—The grand jury spent yesterday examining witnesses supposed to know something about the operations of the municipal assembly that passed the city lighting bill, for which $47,500 is said to have been paid to members of the house combine and another large sum to ringleaders in the council. The inquiry is unfinished.

One Car Starts to Work

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 13.—The Hudson Valley Railway company yesterday afternoon succeeded in sending a car, operated by non-union men and guarded by sheriffs' deputies, from Stillwater to Schuylerville and return without incident. The trolley system has been tied up 14 days.

SASH WINDOWS.

Probably a Dutch Invention of the Seventeenth Century.

The history of sash windows is somewhat obscure, but the probability is that they were a Dutch invention and that they were introduced into England soon after the revolution of 1688. The derivation of the word "sash" in this sense is the Dutch "sas," a sluice—old English "sasse." In Queen Anne's reign they were yet so comparatively uncommon as to be mentioned as a special feature of houses that were advertised as "To let." In the Tatler, for instance, No. 178, May 27-30, 1710, there is this advertisement:

"To be lett, in Devonshire Square, near Bishopsgate, a very good Brick House of 3 Rooms of a Floor, and a good Hall, with very good light and dark Closets, the whole House being well wainscoted, and sash'd with 30 Sash Lights, a very pleasant and convenient Office below Stairs," etc.

From England they passed into France, where the first to put them up was Marshal de Lorge at his new house at Montmartre. Speaking of this, Lister in 1699 writes in his "Journey to Paris:" "We had the good fortune here to find the marshal himself. He showed us his great sash windows, how easily they might be lifted up and down and stood at any height, which contrivance, he said, he had out of England by a small model brought on purpose from thence, there being nothing of this poise in windows in France before."—London Standard.

Fresh Clothing.

Go to bed in fresh clothing every night. Never think of allowing yourself to sleep in the clothing worn during the day—not a stitch of it. Take everything off. Put on night clothing that has been thoroughly aired.

When you get up in the morning, take off everything again. This is the time to take a cold bath, very quickly, with vigorous rubbing. If for any reason you do not take the cold bath, rub your skin all over thoroughly with a rough towel. Don't be afraid of being naked a little while.

There is no better tonic for the skin than nakedness. Take off everything. Give yourself a little hand massage. Exercise the muscles. Rub your skin with a coarse towel, anything, so as to spend a little time naked. Then put on fresh clothing.

People who wear the same clothes every night and day get themselves surrounded by an atmosphere of their own bodily emanations that is very unhealthy. Neither faith cures nor drug cures are of a particle of use to dirty people. Cleanliness is the first law of health. If this law be broken, it will be very little use to try any remedy.—Exchange.

How Water Freezes.

It used to puzzle all thinking people why ponds and rivers do not freeze beyond a certain depth. This depends on a most curious fact—namely, that water is at its heaviest when it reaches 40 degrees F.—that is, 8 degrees above freezing point. On a frosty night as each top layer of water falls to 40 degrees it sinks to the bottom; therefore the whole pond has to drop to 40 degrees before any of it can freeze. At last it is all cooled to this point, and then ice begins to form. But ice is a very bad conductor of heat; therefore it shuts off the freezing air from the big body of comparatively warm water underneath. The thicker it gets the more perfectly does it act as a great coat, and that is why even the Arctic ocean never freezes beyond a few feet in thickness.—Marine Journal.

Hard to Get.

A certain young fellow received a government berth, for which he had to undergo a very strict examination.

One day a friend of his who had been noticing how little work he did to earn his salary tackled him.

"I say, Walter, my boy," he began, "you don't perform a great deal of labor, do you?"

"No, I don't have to,"

"Aren't you expected to work?"

"Of course not," was the candid reply. "It takes so much hard work to get a job like this that the authorities haven't the nerve to ask a man to do anything more to earn his salary after he gets it."

An Enterprising Burglar.

A professional burglar in Berlin found a new and original way of adding to the ordinary profits of his profession. After each burglary he sent a full account of it to one of the daily newspapers, and for this he received payment in the usual way. But he tried his plan once too often. The editor became suspicious and gave information to the police, who soon found how this amateur reporter was able to beat all rivals in the way of early information.

The Lucky Member of the Family.

"No use o' talkin'," said Mr. Erastus Pinkley, "dat brother o' mine is a mighty lucky man. He allus has money."

"But you must remember that he is much more industrious than you are. He isn't at all afraid of work."

"Dat's jes' de point. He were lucky in bein' born industrious."—Washington Star.

Not Particular.

STORIES OF W. F. HOWE

Some That Are Told of the Famous Criminal Lawyer.

HOW HE ALMOST SHOT A JURYMAN

Well Known New York Attorney Once Carried His Realism to the Verge of Tragedy—Odd Experience With a Crook—His Successful Methods In Winning Juries.

The late William F. Howe of New York, the famous criminal lawyer, at one time narrowly escaped taking the life of a juryman in the court of general sessions in New York. He was speaking in defense of Alexander Huppe, on trial for killing Frank Kretchman, says a Chicago exchange. The pistol with which Kretchman was slain lay on a table in front of Mr. Howe, who in the course of his address thought it advisable to illustrate to the jury how the tragedy, according to the defense, occurred. He showed how the two men stood and then, raising the weapon, said:

"Now, gentlemen, to make this matter perfectly plain, I'll pull the trigger."

"Hold on!" yelled Assistant District Attorney Davis, springing to his feet. "That gun's loaded."

Lawyer Howe turned as white as his shirt front and sat down in a half dazed way, realizing how near he had come to blowing a hole in the juryman at whom the gun had been pointed. The latter tried to smile, but the effort was a ghastly failure, and it was some minutes before Lawyer Howe was able to proceed. Huppe was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced.

William F. Howe probably appeared in more than a thousand murder cases, says the New York World. He was one of the most picturesque of men as far as dress was concerned. He loved to wear a cap. He always wore several thousand dollars' worth of jewelry. His hands glistened with diamonds. Even the buttons on his cap were of solid gold. The initial letters on the buttons were set in diamonds. His neckties were remarkable. Mr. Howe never wore the same suit of clothes two days in succession.

One day a western crook was on a car in which Mr. Howe, who had been trying a case and was very tired, had fallen asleep. The western crook snatched Mr. Howe's valuable diamond pin and handed it to his partner, who at once recognized it.

"Fool!" said the New York thief. "That man will have to defend you before many days are passed."

When Mr. Howe alighted from the car, he was met by the New York man, who said:

"Mr. Howe, some fool stole your pin. Here it is. Please excuse the fellow; he didn't know any better."

In the trial of a case Lawyer William F. Howe's procedure was absolutely distinctive and inimitable, says the New York Times. Gifted with a voice of unusual range, he could paint a word picture with remarkable imaginative effect and at the same time enact a dialogue with consummate art. He utilized every dramatic possibility in a courtroom. In his famous defense of Ella Nelson, who shot the man who had played her false, he stopped suddenly in the midst of an impassioned appeal. The prisoner was seated next to him, heavily veiled in black, her head buried between her hands. Mr. Howe unexpectedly wheeled around, seized her wrists, quickly pulled them apart and held her arms distended so that her features were exposed to the gaze of the jury, exclaiming:

"Look at those features, proclaiming a broken heart!"

The celerity of his action had frightened the woman. Her face of ashy hue was deluged with tears, and the desired impression was made on each juror. The district attorney would not allow the girl to enter a plea of murder in the second degree, thinking conviction for the higher crime certain. But the jury found her "not guilty."

Mr. Howe defended the notorious Edward Unger, who killed his lodger, Boles, to steal his bankbook. The body of the murdered man had been terribly mutilated, and Unger had confessed to the deed. Mr. Howe entered a plea of self defense, and the district attorney confidently predicted a verdict of guilty. In the midst of another of his impassioned appeals to the jury Mr. Howe said:

"Gentlemen, Edward Unger did not cut the dead man's head off. He did not mutilate the body. He did not throw the head from the ferryboat under the paddle wheels. He did not put the dilapidated trunk in a box and send it to Baltimore." Then the lawyer paused. The court was astonished, for Unger had acknowledged doing each of these things.

It so happened, however, that on Unger's knee there was at that moment sitting his little seven-year-old child, ignorant of her father's peril, running her hands through his gray hair. After his pause Mr. Howe pointed suddenly at the child and exclaimed dramatically:

"Look at that little girl! It was she who cut off that head; she mutilated that body. It was not Unger. Yes, 'twas she, 'twas she, for Unger could not bear the thought of having it said, with that beauteous girl living, that he, her father, had committed so horrible a deed, and therefore when in a moment it occurred to him that he could hide the deed which he had perpetrated he mutilated the body. It was the thought of that little girl which caused him to do it, and therefore I say it was she that did it."

The effect was remarkable, and the jury convicted Unger of only manslaughter.

THE PRESIDENT'S BOAR.

Roosevelt Describes the Killing of His Game In Corbin Reserve.

Standing hatless on the broad porch of the hunting lodge at Corbin park early in the morning, President Roosevelt told the story of how he killed the wild boar the other day, says a special dispatch from Burlington, Vt., to the New York World.

"I fired but once," he said. "The bullet pierced both lungs and the heart. I had not intended to do any hunting, but Senator Proctor lured me into it. You should have seen me. Senator Proctor loaned me his old shooting coat, some one else donated a pair of blue overalls, and Bill Morrison contributed shoes and socks. Bill, the senator and myself made up the party.

"We had no luck at first, but just about dusk a wild boar bolted out of the brush fifty yards ahead of us. Bill saw him first, the senator next and I last of all. The boar took a slanting course to the right through the thick brush, with us after him. A second later we lost him in the gloom, but we kept up the chase, and suddenly I spotted him.

"'There he is!' I shouted.

"'Wrong!' yelled the senator, squinting ahead. 'That's a deer.'

"'It's the boar, I tell you,' said I, bringing my rifle to my shoulder.

"'Senator's right,' chimed in Bill Morrison, 'it's a deer for sure.' But I knew better and blazed away. It looked like a miss for a minute. Like a frightened rabbit the big boar plunged straight ahead, going faster than before the shot. But just as I took sight for a second try he pitched forward and rolled over dead.

"Now, that's the story of the hunt, gentlemen, and as to that shot of mine, all that I have to say is that it was a mighty lucky one."

FINE FEED FOR NEWSBOYS.

Novel Way of Celebrating Savable's Victory In the Futurity.

Colonel Bill Thompson of St. Paul, Minn., after winning heavily on Savable, the winner of the Futurity at the Sheepshead Bay race track, early the other morning rounded up a dozen or more newsboys in front of the Imperial hotel in New York city and led them to a restaurant in Sixth avenue between Thirty-first and Thirty-second streets. The colonel ranged the boys at the counter and told them to pitch in, that anything in the restaurant was theirs for the asking, says the New York Tribune.

Johnny McCarthy took a sardine sandwich, and most of the others took ham and egg sandwiches. Then Johnny ordered a sirloin steak. The others took courage. Everybody took a steak. After many other things had been ordered the manager of the restaurant conferred with the chef and returned to suggest that the boys ought not to impose on the colonel's generosity. The colonel laughed the suggestion away, and legs of lamb, cantaloupe and watermelon were ordered.

When the first crowd of boys was through, the colonel wanted to call in others, but the manager of the restaurant said he had his regular customers, for whom he would have to save something. Policemen had to keep the boys away from the door for some time. The bill for what the boys ate amounted to $25.

PLANTERS BAR BASEBALL.

Want Game Prohibited In the Cotton Picking Season.

The planters of the Mississippi delta, the great farming section of the state of Louisiana, are demanding legislation at the next session of the general assembly prohibiting the playing of baseball during the fall months of the year, says a New Orleans special to the New York Times. One Saturday recently nine negro baseball teams played ball in the little town of Port Gibson, thus taking eighty-one men out of cotton patches. There were the usual number of rooters, and it is safe to estimate that 200 farm hands were idle on that day.

The argument is advanced that the ball games between the negro hands cause heavy losses to the planters in the harvesting season, and it is certain that an act will be introduced at the next legislature prohibiting playing ball while the cotton picking season is on.

A Story of General Sigel.

To illustrate the late General Franz Sigel's scrupulous regard for the difference between meum and tuum Captain Simpson Hamburger tells a story of the time when the general was pension agent in New York city. Captain Hamburger, whom General Sigel had appointed a clerk in his office, was complaining to him of the small salaries which the government paid and said he would make out an application for a position as special agent, whose pay was higher. "All right," replied Sigel. "You make out the application, unt I will indorse it." So the application was written out and presented to Sigel for his signature, says the New York Tribune. It was on office stationery. "No, no, no! Dot won't do," said the general with characteristic emphasis. "I have plenty of paper. This paper belongs to the United States government." And he gave Captain Hamburger a sheet of foolscap from his desk and signed the application on that.

New Use For Clams.

Rats are proving very troublesome in the New York aquarium. One was caught the other day by a clam, which closed down on the inquisitive rodent's tail.

World's Biggest Dock.

The new Maas dock, now building at Rottendam, will be the largest in the world, says the Great Round World. It will cover 150 acres.

SOME GOVERNMENT RULES.

Carrying Bundles Into the Capitol and Out of the Treasury.

Among all the departments in Washington the most strict is the treasury. A citizen may carry anything that he likes into the treasury building, but when he undertakes to carry anything bulky out of the building he is apt to get into trouble if he does not explain with readiness.

A visitor to Washington the other day carried a fairly large package into the building. Nobody said a word to him about it when he was going in, but when he started out with the package he was held up, made to open it and to explain all about himself and his business. The good sense of the rule is apparent.

At the capitol it is against the rules to carry any sort of a bundle into the building. The fear is that somebody will carry in a bomb. The rule was never enforced rigorously until the senate took up the Sherman repeal bill. At that time the public mind became so influenced against the delay in the senate that violence was feared, and the rule was put into active operation and continued for some years.

Then it dropped out of sight until the Spanish war excitement came on, when it was again enforced, as it has been more or less rigorously ever since.—New York Mail and Express.

Snowballs Brought Water.

"Speaking of drinking water," said one of a group of men waiting for a shower to pass over, "the best I ever drank was on my uncle's farm.

"We lived on top of a clay hill and had a well very deep, sixty feet, I reckon, but it never had any water in it until ten years ago. A heavy snow fell that winter, and uncle filled the well with snow. He rolled up balls until they were large enough to go into the well cleverly and then dumped them in until it was packed to the top. They were packed so closely that they did not melt until late the following summer, but when they did they produced a supply of water I never saw surpassed for purity, softness or coolness. It was delicious.

"Strange to say, this well, always dry before, has produced a plentiful supply since. The water, while not as good as that from the snowballs, is still excellent and celebrated throughout the neighborhood."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Gall, Not Heart, In China.

The Chinese, says the Shanghai Mercury, lay stress on the amount of gall a man has and not on the amount of heart. Thus we read of Hou King, who was governor of Honan in the sixth century, that he once captured a rebel named Li Cheh, brought him into the market, chopped off his hands and his feet, ripped up his heart and cut out his vitals. The victim, however, continued to jest, with his features undistorted and his countenance unchanged. His gall bladder was then seen to have the capacity of a pint measure, which completely accounted for his stoicism. In 1645, when the armies of the Mantchoos were gradually overrunning China, one Wu Han Chao made head against them in Anhui, but he finally fell into their hands. The historian records that his gall was three inches long.

After the Strike.

He tried the door with his key, but the thing was locked on the inside—locked and bolted. And just as he was about to apply the knocker a voice, stern and admonitory, reached him from above:

"Hello! Who are you? What do you want?"

"My dear," he called, "isn't that a trifle gratuitous? I want to come in. D'ye see?"

"Where have you been till this hour?"

"Club, my darling. Been down discussing the strike."

"Very well, then. Now you can go back and discuss the lockout. Does it still rain?"—Pearson's Weekly.

Sponge Fishing.

Sponges are gathered by means of a long pole with a hook attached to the lower end, with which the sponge fisherman is very expert. He lies upon his stomach in the stern of a boat looking through an ordinary water bucket with a glass bottom, which does away with the glare from the water and allows him to survey the bottom leisurely while the boatman rows or sculls the boat. A schooner lies at anchor near by, from which half a dozen or more of these small boats fish. It returns to port when it is loaded, or at night, as the case may be.

Nothing Much Happened.

In his "Story of the Cowboy" Emerson Hough gives the following quarterly report of a foreman to an eastern ranch owner, which constituted his most serious labor of the year:

"Deer Sur, we have brand 800 caves this roundup we have made sum hay potatoes is a fare crop. That Inglishman yu lef in charge at the other camp got to fresh an' we had to kill him. Nothing much has hapened sence yu lef. Yurs truly, JIM."

Her Unintended Satire.

"Charley, dear," exclaimed young Mrs. Torkins, "the paper has a sketch of you as a rising young reformer."

"Yes. I thought that would surprise and please you. What did you think of the biography?"

"Oh, Charley, dear, it is too good to be true!"—Washington Star.

The palmlike nipa tree of tropical Asia has a sap exceedingly rich in sugar, but so salty that its utilization has not been found profitable.

It is enough excuse for a spendthrift that he is not a miser.—Atchison Globe.

Sickness steals more savings than the burglar. Slowly, coin by coin, the money that has been so hardly earned is paid out for drugs and doctors. Sickness is the worst enemy of the working man, and the common cause of the working man's sickness is disease of the stomach often involving the heart, lungs, liver, or kidneys.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will stop the stealing of the savings by sickness. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It cures diseases of heart, liver, lungs, kidneys, etc., when these diseases are caused by the diseased condition of the stomach and its allied organs.

"About ten years ago I began to have trouble with my stomach," writes Wm. Connolly, of 535 Walnut Street, Lorain, Ohio. "It got so bad I had to lay off quite often two and three days in a week, my stomach would bloat, and I would belch up gas, and was in awful distress at such times. I have employed and been treated by the best doctors in the city but got no help whatever. By some way or other I happened to get hold of a vial of your 'Pellets,' and I thought they helped me. It was then I wrote to you for advice. You told me that by my symptoms you thought I had liver complaint, and advised the use of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets' in connection. These medicines I have taken as directed, and am very happy to state that I commenced to get better from the start and have not lost a day this summer on account of my stomach. I feel tiptop, and better than I have for ten years."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." Nothing else is "just as good."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate the bowels.

WEYMOUTH.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy B. Cook have returned from their wedding trip.

Read the ad of the Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial Socity in another column.

Booker T. Washington has gone to attend duties at the Tuskegee college.

H. Franklin Perry's name is mentioned as a candidate to represent the republicans of Weymouth and Braintree in the next house of representatives.

Mrs. Booker T. Washington delivered an able address Thursday afternoon to the Old Colony and Monday clubs and friends, in the vestry of the Union church. An informal reception followed.

Postmaster Nash of South Weymouth is to be congratulated. Weymouth is to have letter carriers in October and the South Weymouth office will be made the principal office. The other post offices of the town will be kept open as stations.

Belcher—Gallagher.

Wednesday evening the home of Dr. Gallagher at Braintree was the scene of a very pretty affair, when his daughter, Miss Agnes, was united in marriage to Mr. Robert E. Belcher. The affair was very quiet and informal, about one hundred relatives and friends having been bidden to offer congratulations and good wishes.

At about half after seven the ceremony was performed by the Reverend Mr. Hamlin of Easthampton, a life long friend of the family. The bride was given away by her father, and looked most lovely in a gown of cream lansdowne with garniture of chiffon—she mrried a shower bouquet of sweet peas.

Miss Corson of Philadel phia gowned in pink crepe-de-chine, made a charming bridesmaid. After the ceremony, the happy couple received, assisted by Dr. Gallagher and his fiancee, Miss Ella W. Sheppard.

Dainty refreshments were served, after which Mr. and Mrs. Belcher, quietly departed for Maine, where they will spend a short time.

On their return they will be at home with the bride's father Dr. Gallagher on Washington street.

A Famous Soap.

Among the endless variety of propriety articles sold by druggists and others, there are a few which stand out sharply from the rest by reason of long tested service, and consequent high esteem. These favorites have long passed the experimental stage, both as regards their merits and popular knowledge of the same, and are accepted everywhere as the standards of their kind. Their very names have become household words.

Such an article is that known as Packer's Tar Soap. This soap has now been for many years, literally, in the hands of the public. Its claims have been put to every possible test, it has out-lived a host of rivals and imitators, and is today the one recognized leader of its kind, and without a second, in the regard of its users.

Mr. Packer, the original manufacturer of Packer's Tar Soap, was the first maker of soap to incorporate pine tar as an ingredient. The name of this soap—indicative of its prominent ingredient—was happily chosen. Pine-tar is closely associated, in the mind, with the idea of cleansing and healing, and a preparation known to contain it inspires hope and invites confidence. Thus, Packer's Tar Soap is often, first tried on its seeming promise. And this promise is always fulfilled.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. For sale by all Druggist.

BRAINTREE.

Unfortunate Children.

The following address was given at the Woman's Congress, Onset, Aug. 9, by Mrs. Carrie F. Loring.

"As I rise to address you this lovely morning amid all these attractive and beautiful decorations, the influence of which should be an inspiration to every one of us. I would gladly offer you a picture representing the world beautiful in its different representations, but instead, I have responded to an invitation from the chairman of this Woman's Congress to present a subject of a far different character—the poor and neglected children of Massachusetts—poor because of the circumstances under which they came into the world; neglected and abused because of the vice, intemperance and crime of their parents.

"A question of very serious consideration in the future government of this country lies in the fact that the children of today are to be the men and women of tomorrow, and society has claimed a right to have a voice in the shaping of the course to be pursued by these children in their unfoldment. The legislature has wisely made laws in this direction and officers have been appointed to see that these laws are carried into effect. 'As the twig is bent so is the tree inclined,' is a fair illustration of this subject. What can we expect from children brought up in homes where their surroundings are dissipation, vice and crime? Yet there are thousands of children today in this state that are growing up criminals and sooner or later will graduate to some penal institution. We can truly say that many of these follow the example set by their parents. Look at the different institutions all over the State crowded to overflowing with this undesirable class, institutions being enlarged and new ones being built at enormous expense to restrain and prevent one part of the people from robbery and murder of the other. It is a sad yet true story that from this class of people the strong arm of the law has removed over 2,700 children during the last two years and placed them in the care of the State. These are very nearly all Protestant children. The Catholic home on Harrison avenue Boston, with four or five hundred continually coming and going, are but two of the many. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children handled cases involving 6,621 children between the ages of one to sixteen years in 1901. No one knows better of these conditions than this society, which rescues yearly thousands of boys and girls from homes of misery, ignorance and brutality.

"There is a prevailing idea that wretchedness and misery are evils found almost exclusively in great cities and comparatively unknown in country places. Inhabitants of the country read with horror of the cases of destitution and cruelty which are brought to light in a large city like Boston, and are shocked at the wretchedness which prevails there, when it is not unlikely that in the outskirts of their own town there are families half starved, dressed in rags and children cruelly abused.

"Hanging on the walls of the office of this society are a gruesome assortment of implements of torture that would do credit to a prison chamber in Siberia. But these Boston specimens have been used not upon criminals or convicts, but upon helpless children in this commonwealth. They are heavy whip handles, cat-o'-nine-tails, ropes with ugly knots tied in them, like the Russian death knout, and belts with buckles, all bearing evidence of long and frequent use. These and many more signs of the existence of fiendish cruelty to children being practised all the while in our midst may be seen at any time at the office. We will here allude to a case of a boy in Springfield who was beaten by one of these whips until his entire back was a mass of scars and bleeding wounds. Another is the case of an inhuman mother in Lakeville, who threw her babe at the officer, saying 'You can take that brat if you want it.' It had been starved into such a condition it was but a living skeleton. It was put into the court at Middleboro as a neglected child, and by order of the court turned over to the State Board of Charity, who placed it in kind hands and by proper care has become a bright, plump, happy and promising child. That such kinds of cruelty can be going on right at our doors seems almost incredible, but a little investigation serves only to convince that it is but too lamentably true. The majority of the cases which come before the M. S. P. C. C. as a society are for neglect. It is often a delicate question to determine how much inattention and squalor constitute legal and criminal neglect and when neglect becomes cruelty. Some idea can be formed of the work of this society by reference to their report for 1901:

New cases	1380
Old cases re-investigated	781
Total number of children under investigation during the year	6621
Number of children having an intemperate father	2314
Number of children having an intemperate mother	1343
Number of children having no father	599
Number of children having no mother	655
Number of children having a parent in prison	524
Number of children illegitimate	137
Number of children placed in homes, institutions, etc.	1514
Cases in court for neglect, non-support, guardianship, etc.	561

"I have with me some of the implements of torture which are used on the sensitive bodies of these helpless little ones, and the question is often asked, 'Can it be possible?' when they look on the pile of this class of implements in our possession which have been from time to time confiscated by us. These, wielded by the hand of a drunken parent with a violent temper, make the case all the more aggravated. There have been cases where the bodies of children were cut and bruised in a shocking manner and the parents thought no one had the right to interfere in the interest of the helpless child.

Autumn in the White Mountains.

Of late years it has been the custom for a number of people to choose for their vacation period that portion of the early fall when nature in her kindness has dispelled the sultry heat, but kept in their choice array the fields and foliage and imparted to the atmosphere a priceless endowment in the shape of cool, brisk and invigorating ozone.

During September the forests and fields retain their green mantle which summer has given them, but as October lengthens the varigated colors of autumn give a most beautiful and charming appearance. Especially is this noticeable in the White Mountains, where the long, deep ravines, walled on both sides by monster rocks, over which a growth of vines and mosses give a delightfully picturesque and beautiful appearance, then the beautiful valleys, so fresh and fertile looking guarded over by the towering mountains, with whole forests of woodland on their backs, and away up, reaching towards the heavens, at times appearing outlined against the clear sky and then again enshrouded in the clouds, are the lofty peaks of Mt. Washington.

At this season of the year the Land of Evangeline and the beauties of an Indian summer along the Ohio river lack the wild grandeur and pleasing enchantments of the White Mountains.

The trips to the summit of Mt. Washington, to the beautiful and famous Franconia Notch, to the numerous visiting points, Bethlehem, Maplewood, Bartlett, Jefferson, etc., are always features of a fall visit to the mountains.

In order to accommodate the large number who yearly wend their way to this unexcelled elysium, the Boston & Maine railroad offers a reduced rate for the fall excursions.

Tickets will be good going Sept. 15 to Oct. 11, and returning not after Oct. 13, and will be on sale from this station and principal stations on the Boston & Maine railroad.

For full information in regard to rates, etc., inquire of your Boston & Maine ticket agent or send to the general passenger department, Boston & Maine railroad, Boston.

Fruit and Flowers.

Horticultural hall, 300 Massachusetts avenue, Boston, is filled this week with rare plants, fruits, flowers, and vegetables. The exhibition commenced on Thursday and will close on Sunday evening at 10 o'clock.

There is close competition for this year's prizes, which, besides the premiums, amount to $1,200, and everything is of superior quality.

The three halls are inadequate to accommodate all the exhibits, and many were obliged to leave their displays unpacked.

All the private greenhouses in the state entered for competition, and there are displays from Philadelphia, New York and New Jersey as well.

On Sunday forenoon, afternoon and evening a musical program will be rendered.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

For the first time since early last spring there will be an entire change of program at Keith's if the biograph is not taken into consideration. The Motion picture machine has become as much a part of the establishment as the engine room, and it would be missed by the majority of the patrons of the house if it was withdrawn. The principal newcomer is Lillian Burkhart, who will present one of the dainty comedy sketches with which her name has always been associated; Smith, Doty and Coe, a noted trio of musical comedians; Arthur Durepeau, a wonderful 17-year-old tenor vocalist; Dave Genaro and Ray Bailey, in a comedy and singing sketch, introducing their great exhibition of cake-walking, and Provo, a skilful and comic juggler. Wormwood's dog and monkey circus is underlined for the week of Sept. 22.

PARK THEATRE.

The popularity of Corse Payton and his stock company, now the permanent attraction at the Park Theatre, is growing steadily. During the week "The Banker's Daughter" has drawn large and enthusiastic audiences, and there is equal promise of a warm greeting to the "Woman Hater," with which Mr. Payton will begin the fifth week of his season next Monday. Playgoers will remember "The Woman Hater" as one of the most popular plays in the late Roland Reed's repertory and it will be seen at the Park Theatre for the first time in Boston in several seasons. Next Tuesday afternoon at the close of the performance, a tea and reception will be held on the stage of the leading lady, Ema Abell Bunhar, to which all ladies and children in the audience are cordially invited.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

HIS MEMORY CHERISHED

Anniversary of the Death of President McKinley

JUDGE DAY'S LOVING WORDS

Martyr Endured Burdens and Suffered From Criticism, Yet Never Uttered an Unkind Word of Another—A Gospel of Cheerfulness and Sunshine

Canton, O., Sept. 15.—There was a general observance of McKinley memorial day in the city which claimed the martyred president as its own. From almost every pulpit there was reference in prayer or in address to him and his work. His favorite hymns were used. The address that attracted the most attention was given by Judge William R. Day, former secretary of state and a friend and adviser of McKinley for many years. The address was delivered in the First Methodist Episcopal church, of which Mr. McKinley was a member and in which the public funeral was held Sept. 19, 1901.

Although deeply conscious of the fact that it was just one year ago that her beloved husband died, Mrs. McKinley did not vary the program followed by her for several months. All days to her have been memorial days. Her usual trip to West Lawn cemetery was taken in the forenoon and she laid flowers on the casket that contains the remains of the nation's martyred chief. Mrs. Garrett A. Hobart, who is her guest, went with her into the McKinley tomb and also laid a boquet of flowers on the coffin. The subsequent drive took them to the family McKinley burial lot.

Judge Day's tribute to his martyred chief was in part as follows:

"This tragedy which fills our hearts with grief has a lesson for the living and calls upon law makers and law enforcers for all that legislation and courts can do for the suppression and punishment of those who teach or practice the dreadful tenets of this code of lawlessness and ruin.

"William McKinley never consciously wronged a fellow being. It was his rule not only to refrain from inflicting pain, but to scatter joy wherever he could. He would step aside from a march of retreat to assure a weeping mother who loved the union that defeat was but for the day and would be turned into victory. Steadfast in his friendship, he would not swerve from loyalty for the glittering prize of the presidency.

"Enduring the burdens which came before, during and after the war, no word of impatience ever escaped him, and he met the people with a smile of welcome and a word of encouragement. He would turn from the most important affairs of state to give a flower to a little child or to say a kindly word to some visitor for whom he could do no more. Resentment he had none. He believed life was too short to give any of his time to cherishing animosity. Sensitive to criticism, no one ever heard him utter an unkind word of another. He met calumny with silence and unfair criticism with charity. His was the gospel of cheerfulness. His presence was sunshine, never gloom; his encouraging word dispelled doubt, and nerved others to their duty."

In conclusion the speaker said: "If the youth of the country learn from his life that the surest foundation of success is upright character, and that the path of duty is indeed the way to glory, then may this great life 'live beyond its too short living with praises and thanksgiving' that such a character was given to the world."

Dispatches show that McKinley memorial services were held yesterday in churches generally throughout the country irrespective of denominational lines. Sermons appropriate to the occasion were delivered, in which the preachers eulogized the dead president and drew lessons from his life and deeds. In many of the churches the features of the music were the favorite hymns of the dead president, "Lead, Kindly Light," and "Nearer, My God to Thee."

Brought In Trust Question

Oyster Bay, L. I., Sept. 15.—Rev. Henry H. Washburn, rector of Christ Episcopal church, in the presence of President Roosevelt and his family and a congregation that filled the church to overflowing, yesterday preached a sermon in which he devoted considerable attention to "possibility of danger coming by and through the unguarded use of great wealth concentrated in the hands of a few" and in which he also stated if "ever circumstances indicated that one was placed providentially in the executive chair of the nation, then the circumstances that attended the promotion of Mr. Roosevelt so indicated." The first part of the sermon was devoted to an eulogy upon the life and character of Mr. McKinley and to this the president listened attentively. But when Mr. Washburn took occasion to speak of the possibility of danger coming through certain trusts and also to laud the president, Mr. Roosevelt became restive. His face colored and he plainly showed signs of disapproval of the rector's utterances.

Nothing New From Panama

Washington, Sept. 15.—Neither the state nor the navy departments received any news yesterday regarding affairs at the isthmus of Panama. The cruiser Cincinnati is expected to reach Colon today.

DEATH AND DESTITUTION

In the Wake of Fires Which Devastated Portions of the Northwest

Oregon City, Ore., Sept. 15.—Nearly every farmer in the territory covered by the postoffices of Dodge and Springwater has been burned out. The loss is appalling and cannot be estimated. People are destitute, homeless and without money, food or clothing and have called for aid.

The forest fires on Lewis river have wrought sad havoc. Ten persons are dead and five logging camps are burned out completely. The fire has spread from Lewis river north to the Kalama river and 50 sections of the finest timber on the coast have been destroyed. Loss of property is estimated at about $300,000.

A great fire also is raging on the Coweman. Everything combustible in its path has been consumed. The air is thick with smoke and falling ashes. Five people are dead and two missing, with only partial reports from the burned district.

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 15.—There has been no cessation of the forest fires. The new hotel, postoffice and a new store at Mount Stycker were burned yesterday. In all parts of the district settlers are fighting to save their homes and crops.

Collision of Electrics

Boston, Sept. 15.—Half a dozen persons were injured in a rear end collision between two electric cars of the Boston Elevated railway on Dorchester avenue shortly before midnight. In addition all of the other passengers were badly shaken up and frightened, several sustaining minor bruises. One car had stopped at the transfer station and was discharging its passengers when the second car came up behind and, owing to the wet condition of the rails, the motorman was unable to stop it before it had crashed into the car ahead. The rear platform and end of the forward car were badly wrecked.

New York For Roosevelt

New York, Sept. 15.—There was a conference of prominent New York state Republicans Saturday and at its close Senator Platt gave out this statement: "It was decided to endorse Mr. Roosevelt and his administration and, as far as it is in our power, to endorse him for 1904." Senator Platt said that no other subject was discussed at the meeting. He admitted that there had been some opposition to the resolution proposing the endorsement, but the final decision was practically unanimous.

Not an Expert Swimmer

Gardiner, Me., Sept. 15.—Albert Perfect, superintendent of a paper mill here, was accidentally drowned while sailing with his wife on the Cobossee waters. Perfect and his wife were discussing his ability to swim and to demonstrate that he could swim as well as when he was a boy he plunged into the water and that was the last seen of him.

Matrimony and Finance

London, Sept. 15.—The marriage of Lord Francis Hope and Beatrice Ricketts will occur as soon as the decree of divorce he obtained from May Yohe in March of this year becomes absolute. Hope and Miss Ricketts are cousins. It is said that the marriage will considerably improve Lord Francis' financial condition.

An Italian Sensation

Rome, Sept. 15.—Countess Bon Martini, wife of Count Bon Martini, who was assassinated at Bolonga by Tullio Murri, his brother-in-law, has been arrested on the charge of complicity in the murder of her husband. It is alleged that the countess spurred her brother on to commit the crime.

Notorious Outlaw Killed

Manila, Sept. 15.—"Captain" Bilo, a leader of ladrones in Luzon, who was guilty of 30 murders and who has been an outlaw for years, has been killed by the native constabulary. Bilo was surrounded, but refused to surrender. The constabulary then shot him to death.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. For sale by all Druggist.

CRISIS IS PERHAPS NEAR

Operators Expect Break In Coal Strike This Week

BOTH SIDES ARE STILL FIRM

Feeling That Amicable Adjustment of Trouble Is Still Far Off—Conference Between Stone and Mitchell Apparently Barren of Result

Shenandoah, Pa., Sept. 15.—Today begins the 19th week of the coal strike. The date on which Senator Platt predicted that the strike would end has passed and the hope which was instilled into the people in this locality because of that prediction has been succeeded by a feeling that the end is still far off.

The reiteration by the coal presidents during last week that no concession would be made and the resolutions passed by nearly all the local unions of the United Mine Workers renewing their allegiance to their officers and pledging themselves to continue the strike until concessions are granted show that neither side to the controversy is weakening.

General Gobin, in charge of the state troops encamped in this county, denies that he is preparing to remove the troops at an early date or that he expects an order from the government to withdraw the troops. He says he does not anticipate an order of that kind until there is a settlement of the strike.

President Mitchell was asked whether he had any statement to make regarding his conference with Governor Stone early Saturday morning. He said he had none. The reticence of Mitchell weighs heavily on the business and industrial interests of the strike region, who were hopeful that the meeting between the governor and Mitchell would result in some plan for a settlement of the strike. The silence of Mitchell is interpreted to mean that the Harrisburg conference was barren of results.

There is more or less activity at all the collieries in the Wilkesbarre region, and it is said that some of the companies will make desperate efforts to resume work at many of the collieries at once.

The coal operators say the conference between the governor and Mitchell was merely a friendly talk and that neither party to the conference submitted a proposition. The operators think the crisis will come this week and that a break in the ranks of the strikers is among the possibilities.

At strike headquarters it is claimed that the companies are in no better position to start their collieries now than they were three months ago and that there will be no break in the ranks of the strikers.

Church Folks Discuss Strike

New York, Sept. 15.—The entire congregation of the First Union Presbyterian church, this city, last night adopted a resolution calling upon the coal operators and miners to end the strike. The resolution says in part: "We demand of the contending parties a recognition of the rights of the community, and we earnestly request, in the interest of the general welfare, that they at once endeavor to adjust their differences; and we recommend that if they are unable to come to any agreement among themselves, they submit the matter for final and peaceful adjustment to arbitration."

In his sermon last night Rev. Dr. Lorimer of the Madison Avenue Baptist church discussed the coal strike. The refusal of the coal operators to listen to arbitration, Dr. Lorimer said, would waken the people to speedy action. The entire American people, he declared, should compel the operators to arbitrate, whatever the cost.

Rev. J. L. Lee of the Westminster Presbyterian church also referred to the coal strike, saying: "If those who have large money power in connection with the coal strike would regard the true rights of those under their control, not only this but all similar troubles would be at an end."

Rev. W. E. Bently of All Souls church said it was to be regretted there was not a united church of the United States to take up the coal war problem. Such a church, representing the religious sentiments of all the people, would soon secure a settlement of the question. Mr. Bently thought President Roosevelt ought to act.

Bullet Through Miner's Lung

Tamaqua, Pa., Sept. 15.—By the accidental discharge of a rifle in the hands of Hugh Black, a deputy, near Nesquehoning Saturday night, Paul Haulick, a non-union miner, was instantly killed. The bullet passed through his left lung, coming out of his back. A verdict of accidental death was rendered.

Winter Weather In Germany

Berlin, Sept. 15.—Destructive storms raged in many parts of Germany yesterday. In Saxony the temperature sank to zero and a hurricane-like wind unroofed many houses and injured a large number of people. The damage is very heavy. A severe northwest storm visited the cities on the North sea.

Drift of Opinion.

☞A Haverhill minister wants to organize a co-operative church to include all brands of liberal thinkers, which shall pay expenses by running co-operative stores for the members. He has the business side of it figured out, and seems to take the religious side for granted.—North Adams Transcript.

☞There is little reason why the motorman who tried to make a run to please his customers and thus caused the accident which resulted fatally to the presidential party in Pittsfield, should be held more responsible for the accident than the men who paid him to make a reckless run.—Portland Express.

☞A policeman in Somerville has been found to be a thief, and has been arrested and must face the consequence of his crime. There is an intimation that kleptomania will be set up as a defence. The case should be made very strong if that is to serve as an excuse, and secure him his liberty. Sometimes policemen who turn out to be thieves are dropped from the force when reappointing time comes, or allowed to resign, but where an officer is caught in the act, something serious should happen to him. If the Somerville office is insane, there appears to have been considerable method in his madness. He stole things he needed, which the kleptomaniac seldom does, and he stole the fine money from the public library, and put the attendants under suspicion. His case needs careful attention.—Lynn Item.

Not a Hen Thief.

Officer Hinchon had quite an experience one night last week with what at first he supposed was a hen thief. It was after midnight when his attention was attracted to a man entering a hen house on Robertson street. Going closer he saw that the man was boxing up the hens.

Hands up he shouted and like a flash up went the hands of the frightened man. The officer quickly had the twisters on the fellow and was walking him toward the patrol box when the fellow found his voice and protested. He said that the hens belonged to him and that he was moving.

At the prisoner's request, a West Quincy man well known to the officer, was interviewed and he confirmed the prisoner's story, and he was then released.

Team Match.

Two teams of the Wollaston Golf club played on Saturday, one captained by F. B. Reed and the other by H. O. Doten. Four men on each team were successful but the scores of Messrs. Price and Reed were so good that the result appears one sided, Mr. Reeds team winning 22 to 8, as follows:

CITY COUNCIL.

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held tonight at which a batch of reports will be received from the Committee on Streets. In some cases they will report orders and in others leave to withdraw or reference to the next City Council. Among the matters upon which they will report are: Extension of Newbury avenue; gravel sidewalk on Billings street; laying out Baxter lane; electric light poles on Newport avenue; laying out Everett street; laying out Barry street; acceptance of Cottage street; widening of Sea street; relocating the south easterly end of Sea street; telephone poles on Cottage and Deldorf streets; amending street lighting ordinance and the street lighting order.

The Committee on Public Buildings will report on the order to enlarge the bath house.

The Committee on Licenses will report on a number of petitions for minor licenses.

In the calendar is the order for $1300 for water closets at the Almshouse, and an order refunding tax titles to Harlow H. Rogers.

Badger and Badger.

There are two gentlemen by the name of Badger who are prominently mentioned for office this year, and both are pretty good fellows, but often they get mixed up, sometimes to the detriment of one or the other.

It is Frank E. Badger of Ward Six who has served two years in the House of Representatives, and is a candidate for reelection. Frank E. Badger is also a member of the Board of Sewer Commissioners, and prominent in the Squantum yacht club and in Atlantic. He has been a member of the City Council.

It is William E. Badger of Ward Four, who is handsomely endorsed for the Republican nomination for County Commissioner. William E. Badger is also a member of the Board of Health, a member of the well known firm of Badger Bros. at West Quincy, an expert machinists, and has served in the City Council.

Hospital Burned.

The new Jordan hospital, presented to the town of Plymouth by Eben D. Jordan of Boston, which would have been completed in a few days, caught fire just before midnight Friday night. The building is gutted, the roof having fallen and some of the walls are bulged so that the whole structure will probably have to be rebuilt. The ruins were found on fire Sunday morning, and the new building is a hopeless wreck.

County Convention.

The Democratic conventions are coming early this year. At a meeting of the Norfolk county Democratic committee held Saturday it was voted to hold the Norfolk county Democratic convention at Dedham Saturday, Sept. 20, at 3 P. M. The 2d Norfolk senatorial convention will be held in the same place immediately after the county convention and will be followed by the 2d Norfolk councillor convention.

SCHOOL----CHURCH.

Problem Debated by Pastor and Principal.

The Sunday Schools Criticised.

Lamentable Ignorance of the Bible and on the Increase.

Large congregations were in attendance at both services at Bethany church on Sunday. The relations of the church and the public schools was the subject both morning and evening.

The pastor, Rev. E. N. Hardy took his text from Proverbs 17:—The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge."

The liberal interpretation of the old Hebrew would be—The reverence of the Lord is the principal part of education. The pastor queried what is the aim and purpose of education, and thought there was urgent need that we meditate on the interpretation. The day was set apart by Congregationalists for prayer for our public schools. We have 17,000,000 children in our schools; an enormous army.

The speaker emphasized the need of more ethical training. He had the impression that some children are better cared for in school than at home, and that there was an ethical loss by the long summer vacation. The welfare of children depends more on teachers than any other person. Home training seems to be deteriorating. One-half hour a week in the Sunday school is inadequate to obtain great results. The Christian Endeavor movement helps out. There was, however, a growing ignorance of the Bible. There was need of reverence for God's work. The ethical should be placed ahead of the intellectual. It need not be sectarian, but character building. Co-ordination and cooperation were needed.

In the evening the subject was continued. When Charles Sampson, the principal of the Quincy school, and T. B. Pollard, principal of the Washington school spoke.

Mr. Sampson said that as teachers we have a right to believe the home and the church have given the religious training, but it would be difficult to teach without surrounding ourself with religion. Religion and literature were inseperable. Bible stories and Proverbs could be used to advantage. Music should be encouraged.

Mr. Sampson criticised the Sunday schools, and the international lessons. Would teach Bible stories rather than lessons, and have the Sunday school graded. He would not have the children on the streets so much on Sunday and in the evening. Band concerts in City Square had been demoralizing. Had also noted that morals of child dropped during vacation.

Mr. Pollard refuted the charge that the schools were Godless. They could not be with such teachers as are employed in Quincy. There are many opportunities to give moral training.

Attendance at school was a good moral training. But church people should have a good deal more to do with the school. The good people of the city should interest themselves. They have common interest with the teachers, and the teachers are not perfect.

The teachers task was difficult to take 50 to 60 "bits of squirming humanity" and educate them. It was the duty of the teacher to make the best possible children during the year.

He hoped the time would come when Catholics and Protestants would have confidence in each other. Then Bible stories would be introduced. He found a lamentable ignorance of them.

The Sunday School might be improved by imitating the public schools. Fathers and mothers should do more in teaching Bible stories.

A MODERN DWELLING.

Eight Room House That Can Be Erected For $2,200.

[Copyright, 1902, by Dennis & Gastmeyer, 289 Broadway, New York.]

The elevation and the floor plans shown below represent a model eight room home of very neat and attractive design. The special features are the convenient arrangement of the chambers and the large and roomy piazza.

Under the whole house is a cellar, the walls of which are built up with local quarry stones in red cement joints, while the floor is cemented. The cellar contains coal bins and a hot air furnace.

The entire frame of the house is of good sound hemlock lumber and is framed together balloon style. The first floor ceiling is 9 feet 6 inches high and the second floor 8 feet 6 inches.

The exterior walls are sheathed, papered and sided as shown, and the gables, dormers, etc., are shingled with fancy dimension pine shingles. The roofs are covered with cypress shingles complete.

The floors throughout are of narrow North Carolina pine, blind nailed. All of the interior walls are plastered with patent plaster, two coat work, and left in shape for tinting over. The entire house is trimmed with selected cypress. The stairs are of oak, with turned newels, rails and balusters. The hardware is of dark bronze. The parlor and dining room contain cabinet quartered oak mantels, with bevel plate mirrors.

The interior woodwork is finished in the natural wood with one good coat of light liquid wood fillers well rubbed down and then covered with two good coats of light interior varnish. The walls are covered with two good coats of cold water tints and have fancy paper borders run all around the angles.

The exterior woodwork is painted in such shades as may be desired with best white lead and linseed oil paint. The shingling is covered with two good brush coats of shingle stain.

This house is provided with complete modern plumbing and fixtures, as shown, and can be erected as above in almost any place for $2,200, but in many places it can be built for less.

PRAIRIE LIFE TOO LONELY.

Novel Experiment In Co-operative Emigration For Canada.

An interesting experiment is to be made by a group of intending settlers in Canada who have at their head the Rev. J. Barr, curate in charge of St. Saviour's church, Crouch Hill, says the London Express.

Referring to a recent cablegram published in our columns on the American invasion of Canada, the reverend gentleman expresses wonder that Englishmen are so willing to hand over "the splendid agricultural and commercial opportunities which Canada offers" to our American cousins.

"I venture," he continues, "to make a suggestion and to mention a movement which may be of interest to some of your readers.

"From conversations with not a few intelligent persons I have gathered that many who would otherwise be inclined to go to Canada are deterred by the dreaded isolation and loneliness of farm life on the prairie.

"People desire neighbors, and many, in short, would emigrate if they could join a company of desirable people who would settle closer together and be neighbors.

"This grouping of settlers would have many of the advantages of co-operative agriculture and would mean success from the start.

"Large reduction in the cost of transportation of the people and their effects from the mother country to their new home in Canada and also of farm machinery, animals and building material purchased there would be a necessary result.

"There might further be co-operative ownership and use of the heavier and more expensive kinds of farm implements, such as mowing, reaping and thrashing machines. These are only a few of many obvious advantages."

Such a party, he concludes, is being organized, with himself at its head, and he is prepared to receive communications from any one who would like to join it.

NEW BOER WAR FORETOLD

Reitz Says His Race Will Never Accept Present Situation.

Mynheer Reitz, former state secretary of the Transvaal, said the other day to the New York Journal's Paris correspondent:

"I will never take the oath of allegiance to Great Britain. I would not swear allegiance to the British flag to save my wife and children from starvation. England wants to make another Ireland of the Transvaal. Chamberlain is a clever scoundrel and Sir Alfred Milner an ignorant scoundrel. There will never be peace in South Africa so long as Milner be left there. He is arrogant, and his ignorance is appalling.

"I am going to America to tell the American people of the inhuman treatment which our women and children received at the hands of the English. Americans do not admire the concentration camp policy.

"I would like to have our people settle upon your western lands, but America is too far away from South Africa to suit our future purposes. My two sons are going to Madagascar to examine the situation there and see whether it is a fit place for our people. We could easily colonize Madagascar, whereas France cannot.

"When our next war does occur, our people would be within easy distance, and there will be another war when we are ready. The Boers will never accept the present situation. We were not beaten. Twenty years of war by England could not beat us. We laid down our arms to save our women and children from annihilation. The Boer race must not become extinct."

ILL FATED MORNE ROUGE.

West Indian City Was a Great Resort For Martinique Invalids.

Morne Rouge, which has just been destroyed by another eruption of Mont Pelee, is about seven miles from St. Pierre and was a summer resort for the wealthy classes of that ill fated city. When Mont Pelee destroyed the inhabitants of St. Pierre on May 8, it was thought that Morne Rouge, being nearer the volcano, must have met with the same fate, but this was not the case. At one time the place seemed surrounded by a sea of lava, but this cooled before reaching Morne Rouge. The greater number of the inhabitants fled and did not return, as the nearby volcano has been in frequent and violent eruption since the outbreak that destroyed St. Pierre.

Morne Rouge, which is situated on an elevation, has long been known as one of the most beautiful places in a land of luxuriant loveliness. On first approach it seemed to be one long, straggling street. Closer inspection showed the homes of some 5,000 inhabitants, surrounded and shaded by tropical trees, hedges and innumerable rosebushes. Morne Rouge for many years was the great resort for the invalids of Martinique.

New Cigarette Paper.

Rofia, raffia or raphia fiber, one of the vegetable products peculiar to Madagascar, is now being used for cigarette paper, and samples have been placed in the Commercial museum at Tananarivo. Mr. William H. Hunt, United States consul at Tamatave, says in regard to them, "The paper presents the qualities of decided suppleness and strength, and as the fiber from the start is tasteless, inodorous and exceedingly clean-it certainly recommends itself to the most fastidious." The consul also points out that this fiber can be used for other purposes and that therefore it will be well worth while for manufacturers to experiment with it.

Jim Dumps' good wife was much distressed
Because her cook went off "to rest."
"Great guns! I have to cook!" she said.
Said Jim: "Don't cook—have 'Force' instead!"
The children all agreed with him
And passed their plates to "Sunny Jim."

IN GOOD FAITH.

Councilman Adams Writes Open Letter Regarding His Candidacy.

Editors Quincy Daily Ledger,

I desire to say a few words through your paper to contradict an impression which has, in some manner, been started to the effect that my candidacy for Representative is not, perhaps, as earnest as it might be. I wish to say that my campaign is an active, sincere, and energetic one, and it could not be otherwise if I were to act in good faith towards my friends and supporters throughout the city.

I would say, that, after consulting with others, I feel perfectly justified in running for Representative, having been born and brought up in Quincy and on account of my previous experience in the Council and in political affairs in the city and would also add that if I win out nothing would stand in the way of my serving the citizens and the interests of the City of Quincy.

No Transfer Man.

It was inadvertently stated in Saturday's Ledger that the free transfers on the street railway would hereafter be given out by the starter in City Square instead of the conductors when the original fare is paid. This was an error, for while some such method has been considered it has not been adopted as yet and the transfers are given out by the conductors as heretofore.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

Pilgrimages Almost Daily to the City of Presidents.

Quincy will soon be as famous for pilgrimages as Plymouth and Concord, as parties come now almost daily. Surely there are many historic spots of National interest, and enterprises which are novel to many. A brief list is given below.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN ADAMS.

Franklin street, Quincy Adams, house built in 1681 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Patriotic societies admitted free, although contributions are welcome to defray expenses of keeping house open and in repair. Small fee asked the general public.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

Junction of Franklin street, Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

BURIAL PLACE OF PRESIDENTS ADAMS.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian), Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. In cellar is old town hearse, also box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams. At extreme end, under front steps are the vaults of the presidents, a massive stone door closing the entrance. Janitor can be found at Savings Bank building or at his home Maple place. No fee charged, but janitor may be paid for his trouble.

HANCOCK CEMETERY.

Hancock street, across from First Church. Many old stones, among the oldest that of Rev. John Hancock, father of the Patriot, who died May 7, 1744. Was fifth minister of First Church.

PRESIDENTS ADAMS MANSION.

Adams street, corner Newport avenue, Quincy. Residence of President John Adams and contains many family relics. Occupied by descendants. Not open to public.

JOHN HANCOCK BIRTHPLACE.

Adams street, junction of Dimmock and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence, was born.

MYLES STANDISH CAIRN.

Squantum heights, erected in 1895 by the Daughters of the Revolution, of Massachusetts, in memory of Captain Myles Standish and his men of Plymouth Colony, who landed here Sept. 30, 1621, guided by the indian Tisquantum.

SQUAW ROCK.

Pile of rock, on which is a perfect head of a squaw, frequently mentioned in early Squantum history. Near by is also Sachem's Knoll.

ABIGAIL ADAMS CAIRN.

Penns hill, erected June 17, 1896, by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son John Quincy, from the spot watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

DOROTHY Q. HOUSE.

Hancock street, corner Butler road, Quincy. Old Quincy homestead in which Dorothy Q was born. Has quaint old-paper on parlor put on for wedding of John Hancock and Dorothy Quincy; also secret chamber and other interesting features. Private house, not open to public.

MYLES STANDISH SPRING.

On the beach to the left and back of Squantum Inn. Spring of fresh cold water, where Standish and his party breakfasted and thence started to explore the country around Boston Bay.

PRESIDENTS LANE.

Now Goffe street, leading from Adams street, near Mansion. Opened by John Adams to drive his cows to pasture.

The newspaper men's tournament at the Wollaston Golf club links started today when the qualifying rounds were played and the drawing for match play took place.

Won the Gross Prize.

The Merrymount Golf club of Wollaston is rejoicing because one of its members won the gross prize in a big field at the Tedesco club's tournament. H. N. Raymond did the course in 82 with P. Bigelow a close second. Mr. Raymond also won the second net prize with 72 being one point behind A. L. Johnson of Medford. Others from the Merrymount were J. E. McLaughlin, S. F. Shirley, and T. P. Harrison. The Wollaston club was represented by George Wright, F. J. Robbins, J. W. Parks, J. F. Morrill, J. F. Emery and C. L. Perkins.

DRESS HINTS.

Blue eyed girls should wear blue as often as possible.

The shrinkage of washable goods averages three-quarters of an inch to the yard.

If silk is "slimpsy," its body may be restored in a measure by sponging it with water in which an old kid glove has been boiled.

Dress shields of stockinet or rubber may be washed in warm soapsuds, rinsed, partly dried and then ironed, and they will be almost as good as new.

In buying gloves examine the seams well. Should the stitching show a drawn white place on the kid they will be easily torn, will last only a short time and never look well.

A white silk or white woolen waist or gown that is not to be worn for some time should be folded in dark blue tissue paper and then in an old sheet to prevent its becoming yellow.

Put your ribbons and belts away in boxes so as to keep them uncrushed. Smooth out your face veils and fold them when putting them away. Fold your ribbons, belts and collars, and they will last twice as long.

At Vassar.

Professor—I don't know about letting you go to the theater with Mr. Smith yet. Are you engaged to him?

Gwendolyn—Not yet. But if you'll let me go I will be by the time I get back.—New York World.

TO LET.

Campaign on National Lines

Boston, Sept. 15.—Forecasting the platform to be adopted at the coming Democratic state convention, The Post says that it will be a vigorous one and that it will be drawn on national lines, because of the fact that this is a congressional campaign.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

A PECULIAR ACCIDENT

Which Resulted In a Man Being Shot Through the Heart

Wilton, N. H., Sept. 15.—Coroner Hunt of Nashua held an inquest yesterday on the body of Eugene Rollins, a weaver of Three Rivers, Mass., who was shot through the heart and instantly killed by the discharge of a revolver in the Wilton Hotel, late Saturday night. After hearing the evidence a verdict of accidental death was returned. Rollins, who was staying at the hotel, sat in the office talking to Police Officer Thomas Cooley. After a few minutes' conversation Officer Cooley started to leave, when, as he was rising, the revolver which he carried in his hip pocket was caught in the rounds of a chair and in falling upon the floor was discharged. The bullet went through one of the rounds of the chair and then passed through Rollins' heart.

Jealous Old Fellow's Crime

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 15.—Andrew Genvich, an aged farmer, living in Southwick, attempted to kill his wife by pounding her with a stone and cutting her throat with a razor in a lot not far from their home yesterday. The woman's cries brought her son-in-law, George Gasper, to the scene, and he rescued her from her husband. She was taken to her home and lies at the point of death. Genvich attempted to cut his own throat. Gasper overpowered him and he was taken to Westfield. Genvich is about 65 years old and his wife is 70. Jealousy is supposed to be the cause of the deed.

Olneyville Strikers Weaken

Providence, Sept. 15.—The striking weavers at Olneyville, the centre of the fight against the American Woolen company and its two-loom system, voted yesterday to return to work where one loom is operated. Lack of money to carry on the fight was announced as the cause of the action. The workers voted to support all weavers who will quit the mills if asked to operate two looms on fancy worsteds. It was announced that the fight will be carried on against the two-loom system indefinitely.

Bullet In His Throat

Lawrence, Mass., Sept. 15.—Jerry Donahue was shot through the throat by an unknown Italian Saturday night and narrowly escaped death. He will, however, probably recover. In company with a friend, Donahue was walking on Common street and when near No. 338 was approached by a woman named Rose Friel, who said there was an Italian in her room who would not leave. Donahue and his friend put the Italian out, and the shooting followed. The Italian escaped.

Double Canoeing Fatality

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 25.—Two persons were drowned in Sluice pond yesterday, both members of a camping party who were out for a canoe trip. The victims were Sumner P. Garney and Miss Mary E. Hood, both of this city. Just what led up to the accident is not known, the capsizing being in a bay which was not within eyesight of the camping party. A small sail was carried in the craft and presumably a gust of wind filled it and the sheet being fouled the upset followed.

Struck by Trolley Car

Haverhill, Mass., Sept. 15.—As a result of an electric car accident at Newton, N. H., George Brown and Walter Sargent are at a hospital in this city in a dangerous condition. The men were driving along the railway tracks when a car rounded a curve and crashed into the carriage, killing the horse and throwing the occupants out, and completely destroying the wagon. Motorman Wakefield was badly injured.

Tried to Kidnap Girl

Houlton, Me., Sept. 15.—Jack McGlinchey and Shero Victory, both about 28 years old, attemped to carry away the 10-year-old daughter of John Adams, intercepting the girl as she was driving a cow to pasture. Her screams aroused the neighborhood. The men drove off with the girl, but a mile away their vehicle broke down, giving officers a chance to catch up and put both under arrest.

A Prohibition Farce

Biddeford, Me., Sept. 15.—It has been a long time since liquor selling flourished as openly on a Sunday as yesterday in this city, apparently in disregard or in defiance of Sheriff Fogg's order that saloons should close at 11 Saturday night and stay closed. Back doors to saloons were wide open yesterday, and in many instances customers flocked in through the front doors.

Bank Robbed by Professionals

Houlton, Me., Sept. 15.—The Florenceville, N. B., bank was broken into and robbed by three professional burglars during Saturday night and $2000 was secured. The men were traced to Harvey, 12 miles above here. Officers have gone up the Bangor and Aroostook line in the hope of intercepting them.

An Insane Asylum Tragedy

Medfield, Mass., Sept. 15.—Superintendent French of the Medfield insane asylum admits that Sarah McCormick, aged 30, was attacked by another patient with a club and received injuries that resulted in her death, but beyond this fact he absolutely refuses to make any statement.

Two Men Stabbed

Lawrence, Mass., Sept. 15.—During a row at the lower end of the city Saturday night, James Corcoran and Charles Fitzpatrick were seriously stabbed by Italians who have not yet been apprehended. Neither man is dangerously injured. They will not give the particulars of the row.

HUSBAND'S VENGEANCE

On Faithless Woman Who Wrecked His Home

KILLS HER ON THE STREET

Had Eloped With a Concert Hall Singer and Were Found After a Seven Weeks' Continuous Search—Woman Begged Forgiveness

Great Barrington, Mass., Sept. 15.—Mrs. Mary Huber, who seven weeks ago ran away from her home in New York with Andrew C. Fearing, a New York concert hall singer, was shot and killed by her husband, George Huber, yesterday, at Monterey. Huber was arrested and brought here.

According to Huber's story to the police he said that he was 31 years old and his wife 24 years. They had a pleasant home in New York city up to a year and a half ago, when his wife got acquainted with Fearing. From that time Huber's happiness was completely destroyed. His wife seemed to be infatuated with Fearing and from time to time she had furnished him with money which Huber had earned at his trade.

Seven weeks ago the couple left New York together and since that time Huber has been searching for them continuously. Some time last week he heard that his wife and Fearing were in Monterey and he came here last Thursday night and went to Monterey on Friday, boarding at the home of Deputy Sheriff Bidwell. He spent Friday and Saturday searching for the couple, but without success. Sunday morning he started out again and was passing the home of Herbert Smith when he saw h. wife, with Fearing and two others, leaving the house.

As soon as Fearing and Mrs. Huber saw who was waiting for them they started to run away in opposite directions. Huber started after Fearing, firing a shot at him as he ran, but without hitting him. He then ran after his wife and fired a shot at her which entered her back under her left shoulder. She fell forward on her face and Huber, running up, took her in his arms. Mrs. Huber lived only a few minutes, but before she died she asked her husband's forgiveness. Huber was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Bidwell, at whose house he was staying, and then brought here. It is said that Fearing and Mrs. Huber have been in Monterey for three weeks.

Praise For German Army

Berlin, Sept. 15.—General Corbin, who, with Generals Young and Wood, attended the German army maneuvers last week, says: "My companions and I have reached the conviction that the German army in every respect is among the best in existence, if not the best." He praises the many marks of distinction and courtesy bestowed upon them by Emperor William and his officers.

Italian Wielded Stiletto

Fall River, Mass., Sept. 15.—An exciting fight in which a stiletto was used occurred on Orange street yesterday between Italians as a result of which Francesca Schieri, 50 years old, is under arrest, charged with stabbing Pasquale Debuona, 26. The point of the knife had struck a rib and this fact had prevented a murder. The police say that Debuona is a very dangerous man.

Slur on Dublin Denounced

Dublin, Sept. 15.—Some 20,000 persons assembled in Phoenix park yesterday to protest against the action of the government in "proclaiming" the Irish capital. George Wyndham, chief secretary for Ireland, was the principal target for abuse, and ringing resolutions denouncing the slur of Dublin's name and fame were unanimously passed.

An Unaccountable Explosion

New York, Sept. 15.—Engineer Lutz, Fireman Dooley and Conductor Webber were blown out of the cab of a locomotive which exploded on the Pennsylvania railroad yesterday. Lutz was killed and the others seriously scalded and bruised. No cause for the explosion has been discovered. The engine was one of the biggest on the road.

After the Rios Gang

Manila, Sept. 15.—The force of native constabulary which has been in pursuit of the Rios band of irreconcilables has killed 18 and captured 25 of the bandits. The constabulary suffered no losses whatever. Rios says he will never be captured alive.

Governor Against Prize Fighting

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 15.—Governor Beckham yesterday directed Attorney General Pratt to proceed with legal proceedings to stop the McGovern-Corbett prize fight at Louisville next Monday.

Belgian Queen Very Sick

Brussels, Sept. 15.—The Soir says the condition of Marie Henriette, the Queen of the Belgians, is hopeless and that King Leopold will probably be obliged to shorten his visit to France in consequence.

Fifty Killed In a Wreck

Madras, British India, Sept. 15.—An English mail train, 205 miles from this city, dashed over a bridge which had been undermined by floods. Fifty passengers were drowned.

DEATH OF MINER STRATTON

Millionaire Who Shared Much of His Fortune With Charity

Colorado Springs, Col., Sept. 15.—Winfield S. Stratton, the millionaire mining man, died here last night. He had been ill for several months and his death was expected.

WINFIELD S. STRATTON.

Mr. Stratton was born at Jeffersonville, Ind., in 1848. After an education in the city schools of Jeffersonville he mastered the carpenter trade. He came to Colorado Springs in 1872 and has since been a resident of this city. For 30 years he has been interested in mining and opened the famous Independence Bonanza.

In April, 1891, he went to Cripple Creek district to prospect. After weeks of fruitless prospecting Stratton decided to stake out a claim on his own account and on the morning of July 4, 1891, staked out the Independence and Washington claims. The Independence yielded him millions of dollars and in 1898 he sold it for $10,000,000, retaining, however, a very considerable interest.

Mr. Stratton's private charities were large and his interest in public welfare was almost without limit. His wealth is estimated at from $15,000,000 to $50,000,000.

Strike Breaker Murdered

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 15.—Earl Caldwell was killed and M. W. Ball was seriously injured in an assault committed on the two men as they were returning to the Union Pacific shops at an early hour Sunday Both men had been employed at the shops as strike breakers. When near the yard entrance they were accosted by several pickets and after some words the assault occurred. Nine arrests have been made. Yesterday's killing is the culmination of a number of assaults during the past two weeks.

A "Left-Handed" Compliment

Manila, Sept. 15.—The Chinese chamber of commerce of Manila gave a banquet to Governor Taft Saturday night. In the address made by the president of the chamber the advisability of admitting more Chinese to the Philippine islands was suggested. In reply Governor Taft said the exclusion of Chinese was a recognition of their thrift and energy and that the Chinese were themselves complimented by the measure. He did not discuss their possible admission to the islands.

Mob Got After "New Messiah"

London, Sept. 15.—At Clapton yesterday nearly 5000 persons attempted to mob a former Episcopalian clergyman, Smyth Piggott, who is now the leader of an eccentric sect. Piggott had announced himself as The Messiah. Exposures of the man heightened public interest in the matter to such a pitch that yesterday Piggott was only taken from the mob by the efforts of mounted policemen. In the face of howling disorder, Piggott again affirmed that he was the Christ.

Will Recover From Injuries

Baltimore, Sept. 15.—At Johns Hopkins hospital it is stated by the physicians that Bennie Monroe and Jimmie Hunter, who were injured in the bicycle races at the Coliseum Friday night, will recover. Monroe's skull was fractured and his recovery will be slow. Hunter's skull was also fractured, but the physicians report that his recovery will be rapid.

Mistook Friend For Burglar

East Orange, N. J., Sept. 15.—Clarence White was shot and killed before daylight yesterday by Edward Taylor, his best friend, who mistook him for a burglar. The two roomed together. White came into the room while Taylor was asleep and the latter, waking suddenly and not recognizing his friend, took a revolver from under the pillow and fired. White fell dead.

Bride Becomes a Widow

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 15.—Charles B. Robson of Atlin, B. C., a rich mine owner, ended a two days' honeymoon by going insane and jumping in the river after forcing his bride to walk through the streets with him at 2:45 a. m. in her nightrobe. He was married Friday to Miss Phoebe G. Stephens of Saginaw. His body was recovered.

King to Visit Us

Brussels, Sept. 15.—It is announced that King Leopold will visit the United States next year. The time of the visit has been definitely fixed for next February and March.

NORFOLK, ss. PROBATE COURT.

TO the heirs-at-law, next-of-kin, and all other persons interested in the estate of JAMES SMITH,
late of Quincy, in said County, deceased.

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, has been presented to said Court for Probate by Jennie Margaret Crane, (formerly Jennie Margaret Smith) of Quincy, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to her, the executrix therein named, without giving a surety on her official bond.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Dedham, in said County of Norfolk, on the seventeenth day of September, A. D. 1902, at ten o'clock in the forenoon to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Quincy Daily Ledger, a newspaper published in Quincy, the last publication to be one day at least before said Court, and by mailing, postpaid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate seven days at least before said Court.

Witness, JAMES H. FLINT, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this third day of September, in the year one thousand nine hundred and two.

Carpets for Fall

Our experience has been that the refurnishing of houses chiefly takes place in the Fall—doubtless in preparation for the various social functions which come with the colder season.

Hence we are now displaying specially attractive Oriental Carpets and Rugs (the result of our buyer's recent trip abroad), Wilton and Brussels Carpets (both foreign and domestic), Linoleums, and a wide variety of other floor coverings in all grades.

Our Upholstery Department exhibits its customary choice assortment of Draperies and Furniture Stuffs.

OYSTER BAY'S GALA DAY

Delightful Reception at Home of the President

SIX THOUSAND VISITORS

Filed by Chief Executive and Grasped His Hand—All Sorts and Conditions of Life Represented—Each One Received a Memento of the Occasion

Oyster Bay, L. I., Sept. 16.—President Roosevelt yesterday received his friends and neighbors of Nassau county, and over 6000 people shook his hand. The reception was held at his country home on Sagamore hill, and from 3 o'clock until 6 he was busy shaking hands and renewing old acquaintances. He met people whom he had not seen for 30 years and shook hands with men whom had known him when he was a child. The president thoroughly enjoyed the affair and was as fresh when it was over as when it began.

The weather could not have been more delightful. The decorators did their work thoroughly, and when the sun rose in the morning and shone upon a village resplendant with color. The most effective decoration was along the road leading from the centre of the town to the road that winds up Sagamore hill. Where the private road leaves the main thoroughfare a large arch of flowers and flags had been erected with the word "Welcome" in the centre. The president's residence was handsomely decorated with large flags.

The crowds began to arrive early from points on Long Island and by noon the village streets were crowded. At 1 o'clock the members of the committees, headed by a band, started for Sagamore hill, and they were followed by vehicles of all descriptions filled with Long Islanders, many of whom had come a considerable distance to greet the president.

The precautions to guard the president against any possible harm were of the most extensive character. In addition to Sheriff Johnson's 300 special deputies, who had been sworn in for duty yesterday, a large number of secret service men and policemen from New York were on the porch and about the grounds. No one was allowed to go past the president with a camera or a stick of any description. Cameras, valises, canes, umbrellas and in many cases overcoats and women's wraps were taken from their owners and piled up under a tree near the porch, until the space around looked like a second-hand clothing store.

It was 2:45 when the reception began. The president stood on his porch and shook hands with all. After passing him the visitors passed off the porch along a road leading to the side of the house, where lemonade was served, and thence by another out of the ground. The lemonade was served in small glasses, on which were inscribed: "President Roosevelt, 1902, Oyster Bay." The cups were retained as souvenirs.

All sorts of people in all conditions of life filed by the president. White and black, poor and well-to-do, women with babies in arms, small boys and little girls, all got a pleasant smile and a shake of the hand.

The line was kept moving and the visitors passed the president at the rate of one a second.

"My daughter has a grandson—" began a woman as she passed the president, but before she could complete the sentence she was beyond the receiving line. The president evidently understood that the grandson had been named after him, for he said: "Good enough."

"I am a fair representative from Missouri," said a woman as she passed the president. "I am delighted," replied Mr. Roosevelt, with a bow.

"You are the greatest man on earth, in the estimation of every American," said another woman, as she reached the president. Her compliment was answered with a smile and a bow.

"Theodore, how air yer?" said an old salt, dressed in the uniform of an American jackie, as he shook the president's hand.

"Mr. President, I am a Long Islander from Turkey and I am mighty glad to be here, and meet you," was the greeting of one fair visitor. And so it went on. Many were the expressions of good will and "God bless you," that came from hundreds of throats.

During the reception a number of bands, stationed on the lawn in front of the porch, discoursed music. The Hicksville battery at the foot of the hill also did its share to make the affair a success and fired a continuous salute. A pleasing incident occurred toward the close of the reception. The New York policemen wanted their picture taken with the president in their midst. When the request was made of the president he complied at once: "This is one time I really want a picture taken," he said. "I know these men and I admire them. I am proud to have my picture taken with them."

Before the reception closed the bands filed past the president. He shook each man by the hand and thanked him for the music he had made. The band from Oyster Bay, at the head of the men who had acted as deputy sheriffs, brought the affair to a close. They marched up to the porch and after the president had shaken hands with them he was given three hearty cheers.

SEVENTEEN MEN KILLED

By an Explosion of Gas In a West Virginia Coal Mine

North Fork, W. Va., Sept. 16.—A disastrous gas and powder explosion occurred in the Big Four mine of the Algoma Coal and Coke company here yesterday. James Lester, an engineer, one Hungarian and 15 colored miners are known to be in the mine now and there is no chance of their being recovered alive, as they are beyond the point where the explosion occurred, and the gas and smoke is so thick that the rescuing parties are being driven back. Two men succeeded in crawling over the fallen coal and slate to the lights of the rescuing party and have been taken out alive.

The explosion was caused by the accumulation of gas catching fire from the lamp of a miner who was going to work and this in turn firing six kegs of blasting powder that had been stored in the mines.

The explosion knocked down all the brattices for a quarter of a mile back towards the mine entrance, thus cutting out the air from the men imprisoned behind the debris.

There had been a small gas explosion in the mine on Sunday last and Mine Superintendent Stewart had cautioned the men who worked in the mine not to attempt to work again until the air had been tested by a safety lamp, but they disregarded his caution and went in.

Jews Not to Blame

New York, Sept. 16.—The committee appointed some time ago by Mayor Low to investigate the riot at the funeral of Chief Rabbi Jacob on July 30 reported yesterday that the primary responsibility rested on persons in the establishment in front of which the riot occurred, in that these persons insulted the funeral procession. Police headquarters is censured for not providing more protection to the large procession.

Banker Fish Badly Hurt

New York, Sept. 16.—Nicholas Fish, the banker, father of the late Hamilton Fish of the Rough Riders, who was killed in Cuba, was found last evening lying unconscious on a sidewalk. He had sustained a fracture of the skull by falling on a stone step. His condition is reported to be extremely grave.

Coal Strikers Are Quiet

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 16.—Sheriff Jacobs and a large number of deputies assembled here yesterday in anticipation of trouble occurring at some of the mines. But outside of an outbreak at Old Forge, in which an Italian was badly beaten by strikers, the day was a very quiet one in the strike region.

Archduke May Not Be Dead

Vienna, Sept. 16.—A report has been published here that the missing Archduke Johann is now living on one of the South Sea islands. The authority quoted is an officer of a Dalmatian vessel. The archduke disappeared in 1890 and the imperial family of Austria believe that he is dead.

King Not Coming to America

Brussels, Sept. 16.—The report that King Leopold intends to visit the United States early in 1903 is contradicted. The condition of the queen precludes the making of any such plans. The king will shortly depart for Belgium from Luchon, France, because of the queen's condition.

Boxers Again In Evidence

Shanghai, Sept. 16.—A force of armed Boxers entered Cheng-Tu-Fu yesterday. Some of them were killed or captured in the streets of the city, and the shops there are closed. The military authorities are patrolling Cheng-Tu-Fu and the situation there is reported to be serious.

To Demand Higher Wages

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Sept. 16.—E. E. Clark, grand chief of the Order of Railway Conductors, confirms the report that employes of all railroads in the west will make a united demand for increased wages.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. SOME GRAND RESULTS

Expected From First Case Before Arbitration Court

TWO AMERICAN REPUBLICS

Receive Credit For Availing Themselves of Privilege Advocated by Old World Powers—Long Standing Pious Fund Case Considered

The Hague, Sept. 16.—The hearing of the claim of the United States against Mexico growing out of the "pious fund" of California commenced here yesterday before the international board of arbitration.

In his address of welcome, Baron Van Lynden said: "Since January, 1901, our court was, so to speak, waiting cases. Ours was the lot of briefless barristers and judges without cases. The comatose Old World powers appeared to be unwilling to appeal to the peaceful methods to which they had all subscribed, and which they had proclaimed to be excellent. It was left to two New World republics spontaneously to set Europe an example and give an impetus to the peace machine: they have saved the court from destitude."

Dr. Martens, president of the court, thanked the minister for his friendly greetings and said he hoped the court would become the centre of international right. The president then opened the first sessions of the arbitration court, expressing the hope that the work of the tribunal would harmonize with the sublime idea which led to its establishment. He said a glorious result was anticipated from the arbitration court, namely, to facilitate the peaceful settlement of disputes between states on the basis of respect for right.

The American and Mexican representatives expressed their thanks for the welcome and said they had full confidence in the impartiality and equity of the court. In declaring in advance their intention to abide by the decision of the court, the Mexican representatives hoped that both great and small powers would follow the lead of the two great North American republics.

During the afternoon session the Mexican representatives obtained permission to add to their documents in the case of the reply of Mexico to the United States memorandum. United States Senator Stewart, former attorney general of California, commenced the pleadings. He applied himself to showing that Mexico always intended proceeds of the pious fund for the civilization of the natives of California and propagation of the Catholic religion in those regions.

The "pious fund" originated in 1697 in gifts made in trust to the Jesuits from charitable persons, to be devoted to establishing and supporting Roman Catholic missions in the Californias. The Spanish government expelled the Jesuits in 1767 and seized all their property, which thereafter was administered by the Franciscans. When Mexico gained her independence, she took charge of the fund. In 1842 Mexico sold the properties of the fund and guaranteed the church authorities 6 percent on it in perpetuity. At the time California was ceded to the United States Mexico stopped paying this interest. In 1869 Mexico paid $904,700 arrears on an award made in favor of the church authorities by Sir Edward Thornton. Since then nothing has been paid.

The international tribunal consists of 80 judges, appointed by the 24 nations—two, three, four, or five, as the nation chooses. From these 80 the United States selected two judges to determine the "Pious" case. The United States named Sir Edward Fry, formerly chief justice of the English court of appeals, and Dr. F. Martens of Russia. Mexico named Signor Chelli, a distinguished Italian judge, and Dr. Lohman, a Dutch magistrate of high rank. These select a fifth judge, which completes the court for this occasion. Neither nation may select one of its own citizens or the subject of its own sovereign.

The court will have to arrange many of the precedents for the proceedings of future trials. This fact gives a special interest to the occasion. Dr. Martens has been called the "chief justice of Christendom" because he has so often been selected as a member of courts of arbitration between nations. He was made doctor of laws by Yale university last October.

Cruiser Needs Further Tinkering

Newport News, Va., Sept. 16.—The protected cruiser San Francisco arrived in Hampton Roads Sunday from Havre and yesterday went to the navy yard at Norfolk for a survey by the naval board. The cruiser was recently remodelled there, and is said to be in such a delapidated condition that a board of inquiry may be ordered to investigate the cause.

Hobson's Sick Leave Expires

Washington, Sept. 16.—Naval Constructor Hobson, who appeared before a retiring board a few months ago and failed to qualify for retirement, will be assigned to duty shortly by the navy department, Surgeon General Rixey having pronounced the officer fit for duty. He has been on sick leave since June 18

This great building has been put up by paper patterns. It is a fact for wonderment that out of such a small thing as the Butterick Pattern should grow a business, which requires for its products the largest printing plant in the world and a building one of the largest occupied by any single business firm in New York City. It is a matter of course to those who know what the business is and where it goes.

The Butterick Pattern started forty years ago in the little town of Sterling, Mass., even now hardly given a place on the map. The capital then possessed was a ream of tissue paper and a pair of shears. One man was employer and employe. The business is now capitalized at twelve millions of dollars and listed on the New York Stock Exchange, and five thousand people are busily engaged attending to it.

Starting in this little town in Massachusetts, Butterick has become a household word throughout this Continent. This fact is common knowledge, and yet comparatively few know that this business has become one of the great industries that go to make up the American invasion of Europe. Its patterns and publications are printed in English, French, German and Spanish, and are distributed all over the civilized world. Its thousands of agents are not only throughout the United States and Canada, but in Great Britain, France, Germany, Spain, Italy, South America, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, the Hawaiian Islands and the Philippines. Its French fashion publication, printed in New York and shipped to Paris (the supposed source of all styles) has a larger circulation than any magazine of its character published in France. Its German publication, printed in New York and shipped to Germany, also has a larger circulation than any magazine of its character published in Germany. Now it enters upon this new building, which, completed, will represent an expenditure of $1,250,000. Yet it will take only a little over one year's profits to pay for it.

Only recently the stock of the Company was admitted to dealings on the New York Stock Exchange, where it occupies a place with the great railroad and other industrial corporations of the country. Just now, it is selling at $50 per share, par value $100, and the Company is paying 4 per cent. dividend on the stock or 8 per cent. on the purchase price. This dividend payment requires profits of only $480,000 per year, and as the Company is earning, and undoubtedly will continue to earn, largely in excess of this amount, the dividend should be shortly increased and the stock should materially advance in value.

And out of the little Butterick Pattern this immense business has grown.

OTHER APPOINTMENTS.

The Mayor announced the appointment of John Downs as constable and William H. Flynn as weigher of coal. Approved.

The auctioneer's bonds of James F. Burke and John H. Dinegan were approved.

PETITIONS.

H. B. Blackwell of Prospect street presented a petition in which he stated that when the street was widened he gave what land was needed and he asked as a matter of equity that his sidewalk assessment be abated. To Committee on Finance.

Maurice Newcomb petitioned to have his victualler's license changed to a license for a pool table.

ASSESSORS PLANS.

The Committee on Finance reported an order for $1000 for assessors' plans. Took second reading.

BATH HOUSE.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported reference to the next City Council on the order for $1300 to enlarge the bath house.

HOSPITAL.

The joint committee on Finance and Public Buildings reported ought to pass on order for $1500 to purchase the French house for a small pox hospital and moving it to the poor farm. Took second reading.

FIRE STATION.

The Committee an Finance reported on order for order for $2000 for additional for fire station at Houghs Neck. Took second reading.

FAXON PARK ROAD.

The Committee on Finance reported on order for $3000 for laying out Faxon Park road. Took second reading.

LOAN ORDER.

The Committee on Finance reported a loan order for $5,800 to cover the above orders. Ordered to a second reading.

STREET REPORTS.

The Committee on Streets reported upon the following matters:

Favorable, on the petition of the Telephone Company for one pole on Cottage street,

An order for a public hearing Oct. 6, on relocating the south easterly end of Sea street at Houghs Neck.

Leave to withdraw on the petition to widen Sea street.

COTTAGE AVENUE

Leave to withdraw on the petition to lay out and accept Cottage avenue.

Councilman Fallon objected. This he said was a much needed necessity, and it should be graded and accepted. It was a disgrace to have a street like that in the center of the city. The Council should have a little pride and recommend something respectable. They will recommend $3000 for Grove street which is back in the woods where but few people use it but right in the center is the worst slough hole in the city which they will not fix. He would like to know why.

Councilman Newcomb said this matter had been before the Council for two years. Several conferences with those interested had been held, but the petitioners could not agree upon any definite plan, and the present plan was not acceptable to any one.

Councilman Fallon declared that statement to be false. No one but Mr. Packard objected. It was the first time he ever heard the petitioners could not agree.

Councilman Whiton asked as to the cost, and Councilman Newcomb replied $6000 or $7000. Continuing, he said, that Councilman Fallon had told him, personally, that he would not accept the plans on line as drawn now.

Councilman Fallon—The idea of such a statement. I had these plans drawn and paid for them myself. The idea of telling me I find fault with my own plans.

Councilman Newcomb asked how wide he wanted the street and Councilman Fallon replied, forty feet.

Councilman Newcomb—The plan calls for 28 feet.

Councilman Fallon—The plan that went with the petition called for forty feet. This plan has been dug up from some cellar and brought here to play a snap game with.

Councilman Bass moved to lay on the table. He could see no reason why abutters should be punished because they could not agree. If laid on the table they will probably get together and agree.

Councilman Newcomb opposed. The committee thought it foolish at the present time to expend $6000.

Voted to lay on table.

Councilman Fallon doubted motion. Carried by vote of 10 to 8.

Later the order was taken from the table and recommitted.

The same committee reported a substitute street lighting order referring the matter to the executive, and if there was any money available the lights be located in order of date of the petition or order.

Reference to the next City Council on petition to lay out Barry street.

Ought not to pass on order amending the street lighting contract so that lights shall burn all night.

Leave to withdraw on the petition to lay out Everett street.

Leave to withdraw on the petition to lay out Baxter avenue.

Ought not to pass on order for a gravel sidewalk on Billings street.

An order for $1000 for laying out Newbury avenue. To Finance committee.

An order granting Electric Light company a location for two poles on Newport avenue.

The Committee on Sewers and Drains reported an amendment to the order for $600 for a drain on Independence avenue, changing the amount to $800.

The Committee on License reported favorable on several petitions for minor licenses.

The Committee on Ordinances reported favorable on the order for $1300 for water closets at the Almshouse. Passed.

The same committee reported favorable on the order refunding tax title to Harlow H. Rogers and Willard Welch. Passed.

A HOLIDAY.

Councilman Elcock offered a resolution that the School Committee be requested to order their superintendent to close all schools on Monday, Oct. 6.

Councilman Bass asked the reason.

Councilman Elcock replied that many teachers and childr n desired to attend the Brockton fair.

Resolution adopted.

Upon motion of Councilman Hughes the petitions of Ferris & Littlefield for a pool table and bowling alley license, and of Charles H. Johnson and James F. Burke for auctioneer licenses were taken from the table and granted.

CALENDAR.

The order granting the Telephone Co. a location for one pole on Deldorf street was passed.

The order transferring $300 to the appropriation for printing of City Council was passed.

The order for $2500 for payment of small pox bills was passed.

Adjourned at 8.43.

What are Humors?

They are vitiated or morbid fluids coursing the veins and affecting the tissues. They are commonly due to defective digestion but are sometimes inherited.

How do they manifest themselves?

In many forms of cutaneous eruption, salt rheum or eczema, pimples and boils, and in weakness, languor, general debility.

How are they expelled? By

which also builds up the system that has suffered from them.

It is the best medicine for all humors.

A Nervous Woman

Will often feel compelled to stop the clock whose ticking seems unbearable to her. In such a nervous condition the woman needs a building up of the entire system. It is useless to attempt the cure of the nerves while the cause of the nervousness remains uncured. A very common cause of nervousness in women is a diseased condition of the delicate womanly organism.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures womanly diseases and the nervousness which they cause. It changes irregularity to regularity, dries the drains which weaken women, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It is a perfect tonic and nervine, tranquilizing the nerves, promoting the appetite and inducing refreshing sleep.

"When I first wrote you I had been to three different doctors and two of them said I would never get better without going to the hospital for an operation," writes Mrs. Selma Erickson, of 496 Rice Street, St. Paul, Minn. "Was not able to do anything. If I would get up and walk to the kitchen and back I would have to lie in bed for a day or sometimes two days. Now I have used six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and six of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and the result is just wonderful. I was so nervous I had to have some one by my side all the time even in day time, and I could hardly eat anything. I took treatment from a doctor twice a week, and every time I would go there I felt so sick, but since I quit all the doctors and began taking your medicines I gained right along. I weighed 125 pounds, when I began taking your medicines (in August) and now I am up to my usual weight 165. I am as well and feel as good as ever."

FREE. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 31 stamps for cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE WOODWARD.

Has a Larger Number of Pupils Than Ever.

The Entering Class Numbers 51.

Necessary to Divide Some of the Classes.

The ninth year of the Woodward Institute for girls opened Monday with 147 pupils. This is the largest number in the history of the school which would appear to show that the popularity of the school is on the increase.

The largest number of pupils in any previous year was at the beginning of the second term, Sept. 10, 1894, when 125 pupils were enrolled. The number fell off from that until in 1900, when the enrollment was but 88.

Last year the school was given in charge of Supt. Parlin and Frederic W. Plummer succeeded Miss Small as principal. With these changes came an increase in enrollment to 122 pupils. There was another increase this year until now as stated above the school is the largest it has ever been.

The entering class this year numbered 51 and there are 9 in the preparatory class. Several of the classes are so large that it has been necessary to divide them.

GOLD PRESENTED.

Large Attendance at Golden Wedding of Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Hayden.

There was a large gathering of relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel P. Hayden on Monday at the residence of their son Bradford Hayden on Washington street, Quincy Point. The occasion was the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage.

The house was very prettily decorated with ferns and golden rod, and from 3 to 10 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Hayden were showered with congratulations and well wishes.

They were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Hannibal Folsom of Stoughton, and the guests were presented by Miss Grace Lapham, Miss Beatrice Adams, Frank Melville, Frank Simmons and Robert McKenzie.

During the evening Mrs. M. R. Newcomb read an original poem, George McKenzie of Boston sang, and Col. Edward Anderson made an address. The Lord family were also present and rendered a number of musical selections.

During the evening a wedding supper was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Hayden received a number of wedding gifts which included a number of pieces of gold. Among the many gifts was a purse of $32.50 in gold, a gift of the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Washington Street Congregational church.

TEST DRINKING WATER.

Two Methods by Which You May Determine Its Quality.

The supply of drinking water for the family should be tested at least once a year. Water that at one time is pure and wholesome may become too impure for use, yet it may be without color, and have no odor or taste to show its dangerous qualities.

A simple test of drinking water is the Meisch sewage test. Fill a clean pint bottle three-quarters full of the water to be tested, and dissolve in it half a teaspoonful of granulated sugar. Cork it and set it in a warm place for two days. If during this time it becomes cloudy or milky it is unfit for domestic use. If it remains perfectly clear it is probably safe. Be careful that the bottle is absolutely as clean as you can make it and the sugar pure.

The second test is also a simple one. Obtain from a trustworthy druggist 5 cents' worth of saturated solution of permanganate of potassium. Add about five drops of this to a pint bottle of water. This will turn the water a beautiful rose purple. If there is any considerable amount of organic matter the color will give place in the course of a few hours to a more or less dirty reddish brown. If the color of the water in the bottle remains for twelve hours unchanged from the rose purple it assumed when the permanganate of potassium was first added, it may be considered free from organic contamination.—Health Magazine.

The Hawaiian as a Diver.

The working crews of the Hawaiian Islands were quartered in suitable camps near their field of labor. They were natives, good fellows, willing workers, admirably adapted to the duty required of them, which was largely in boats and in the water. I well remember one who excelled in diving. On a certain occasion, when the placing of a deep water mooring had just been accomplished, it became necessary to detach under water the end of a hawser, which had been made fast to the submerged part of a spar buoy about forty or fifty feet below the surface of the sea. The man was told to take his sheath knife down with him and cut the hawser as near its end as he could, so as to lose as little as possible of the valuable cable. Taking his knife in his teeth, he disappeared beneath the water and remained out of sight so long that he was almost given up for lost, when he suddenly reappeared, and on being asked if he had cut the hawser as he had been told to reported that he had unbent it without cutting off any part of it whatever.—James D. Hague in Century.

MORE WARSHIPS.

Rear Admiral Bowles Advocates Cruisers and Battleships.

The Washington correspondent of the Herald says: "The whole influence of the navy will be exerted to overcome the inclination of the naval committee of Congress not to recommend the construction of new warships at the coming session.

Rear Admiral Bowles, chief constructor, believes especially that one of the numerous reasons for the authorization of additional ships is the maintenance of unity in construction. The last naval appropriation authorized two battleships and two armored cruisers.

The number of battleships comprising a tactical unit—that is, a force capable of effective manoeuvring—is four. Rear Admiral Bowles consequently advocates the addition of two more battleships and two additional armored cruisers. Admiral Bowles' views are cordially supported by other naval officers.

Secretary Moody is expected to refer the question to the general board, of which Admiral Dewey is president. This board, it is understood, favors an annual appropriation for new ships along the line of a definite ship building policy.

Arm In Arm With a Tigress.

It is related of Sir Edward Bradford that he once walked arm in arm, so to speak, with a tigress. He was out shooting and, always a fearless sportsman, had come to close quarters with his quarry. He fired, and either the ball failed to take effect or but slightly wounded the animal. She sprang at him and seized his left arm above the elbow. The pain must have been terrible, but Sir Edward kept cool, and, realizing that it would be death to drag his mangled arm away and allow her to spring afresh at him, he deliberately walked a few agonizing paces until his comrade was able to take aim and kill the brute. Thus his courage saved his life, though the amputation of his arm at the shoulder proved necessary.

Wild Brook Trout.

Hawthorne describes an ideal breakfast as consisting of hot cakes, brook trout, roast potatoes, fresh boiled eggs and coffee. The piece de resistance of this breakfast is the brook trout. In spite of all the efforts of fish culturists, the wild brook trout remains the finest morsel the epicure can seek. Cultivated trout taste too perceptibly of liver to be a food greatly desired. The wild trout that springs in his native mountain stream is far superior to any cultivated fish. Cook it in the simplest manner, dipping it in oil, salt and pepper and broiling it over hot coals. Serve it simply with butter and slices of lemon.—New York Tribune.

—According to chemical analysis, 15 parts of the flesh of fish have about the some nutritive value as 12 parts of boneless beef.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Fred Illsley, 41 years old, committed suicide at Hudson, Mass., by cutting his throat. He had been considerably depressed recently.

Two men were killed, one probably fatally hurt and a dozen others more or less seriously injured by the explosion of the boiler in a sawmill at Maxwell, Ind.

The coal is now burning and there is no hope of extinguishing the flames until a new air passage can be built to the point of the explosion. Superintendent Stewart has a large force of men at work now.

Felix St. Amour of Worcester was declared in contempt of court by Judge Lowell in the United States district court at Boston for failing to appear before a referee in bankruptcy at an adjourned meeting of his creditors. He was sentenced to jail for one week.

The biggest electric railway deal ever undertaken in Michigan is now under way. It means the unification of all the electric lines in the lower peninsula except two. This unification will be accomplished by a new company with a capital stock of from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000.

A dispatch from Liverpool says J. P. Morgan has purchased from the chairman of the Leyland line of steamers five steamers engaged in trade between Antwerp and Montreal.

General Gillespie, chief of engineers, has arranged to have complete representation of the engineer corps at the army maneuvers at Fort Riley, Kas.

Miss Mary E. Williams, an artist of international reputation, died at her home at Salem, Mass., after a short illness. Miss Williams was born in Boston in 1825.

Connelly Meets Defeat

London, Sept. 16.—Eddie Connolly, American, was defeated here last night by Tom Woodley, English, after 11 rounds of fierce fighting, for a purse of $2000 and the 144-pound championship.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

A DREAM OF LOVE

Dispelled by Dose of Poison and Prompt Use of Stomach Pump

Fall River, Mass., Sept. 16.—Elsie Manchester, aged 13, attempted suicide because of disappointment in love yesterday afternoon, and the police soon after took in charge, pending an inquiry, the young man whom the girl claimed had been her sweetheart. Through prompt medical aid the girl's life has been saved. She claimed that Amiges Mercier, a bartender, had deserted her and married another girl.

The Manchester girl, while her mother was at work, locked herself in her room and wrote a note in which she expressed her intention of killing herself. A list of friends whom she wished to see her as she was laid out in her coffin was also included. This note the girl threw out of the window and it was immediately picked up by a little girl named Sheehan, who carried it to her mother.

Mrs. Sheehan rushed into the Manchester apartment, and was admitted by Elsie, who thereupon ran to a closet, put some powder in a glass of water, and drank the mixture. The powder was paris green. Mrs. Sheehan ran for a doctor, who responded soon enough to pump out Elsie's stomach and give her restoratives. She expressed sorrow for her act, and upon statements that she made regarding Mercier, the police arrested the latter.

Had a Terrible Fall

Clinton, Mass., Sept. 16.—Judson Darling, 22 years old, is at the Clinton hospital suffering from severe injuries received in a fall from Lover's Leap, a ledge 100 feet high. Darling was passing the ledge when he climbed upon the protecting wall and said laughingly to some friends with him that he was going to try the lover's leap. Then without looking where he was going he jumped and went down the 100 feet drop. He received a scalp wound which was closed up with 26 stitches. He had several other severe cuts and concussion of the brain, but the physicians think he will recover.

Prohibition Prohibited

Houlton, Me., Sept. 16.—An attempt to enforce the Maine prohibitory law here resulted seriously for a preacher and the banishment from the country of a "spotter" yesterday. A Frenchman named Duchette had secured evidence against a dozen or more saloon keepers and this would have been presented before the grand jury today. A half dozen men were after him and last night they captured him, a crowd of 300 people gathering. The preacher interfered, and as a result his face was terribly lacerated. Duchette was taken out of town and started towards his home in Halifax.

Drinking Water Is Impure

Wakefield, Mass., Sept. 16.—Typhoid fever is prevalent in this town, and the cause is attributed to impurity of the water supply. The town has been installing a sewerage system necessitating the upturning of much earth, from which drainage has been into Crystal lake. While not officially stated, it is believed the water of the lake has become impregnated with impurities. Dr. Morse of the state board of health has warned the townspeople to boil drinking water before use.

Goelet Housekeeper Killed

Newport, R. I., Sept. 16.—Mrs. Margaret Blake, housekeeper for Mrs. Ogden Goelet, was killed in the elevator at the Goelet villa yesterday. She was operating the elevator lever herself and was crushed between the car and the floor. At the moment of her death Grand Duke Boris and his suite and Mrs. and Miss Goelet were leaving the villa, and were called back by the death screams of the woman. They were unable to render aid, as the woman was dead.

Used Knife on Tormentor

Fall River, Mass., Sept. 16.—John Brant, employed as cook in a restaurant, is locked up, charged with assault upon Alexander Erizones, also employed in the place. Brant says that he was interfered with in his work, and after one especially aggravating joke he struck the Greek a blow between the shoulder blades with a knife having a corrugated edge, inflicting a bad wound.

Free Use of Revolver

Providence, Sept. 16.—William H. Adams shot and severely wounded Albert and Henry Bennett and a woman named Ida Allen in the town of Gloucester. It is claimed that the man was actuated by jealousy because a former housekeeper named Farrell had left him and gone to live with one of the Bennetts. Albert may die. Adams is under arrest.

Report on Westlake Inquest

Providence, Sept. 16.—Coroner Lincoln yesterday filed his report of the inquest into the death of Joseph Westlake, the Narragansett Pier police officer. The coroner finds that Westlake came to his death at the hands of William Lacey. Lacey is being held for the grand jury on charge of murder.

Chasing Up Hotel Keepers

Portland, Me., Sept. 16.—Sheriff Dunn has notified Mayor Boothby that a number of hotels in the city holding victuallers' licenses have been repeatedly convicted for liquor selling and requests that their license be revoked. The matter will be referred to the board of aldermen.

Caldwell the Champion Cyclist

Hartford, Sept. 16.—Harry Caldwell of this city won the cycle paced championship of America last night, defeating Bobby Walthour in two straight 10-mile heats. Caldwell has won 23 races this season and lost but three, defeating all the best riders in the country.

A REDUCTION OF TARIFF

Would Not Tend to Kill Industrial Combines

PUBLICITY THE BEST PLAN

Littlefield Says Trusts Flourish In Free Trade Countries, Where They Are Not Nurtured by a Tariff—Individuals Must Be Considered

Gloucester, Mass., Sept. 16.—Politics was the topic of discussion among many of the leading public men of this section, at the annual dinner of the Essex club, the leading Republican organization of Essex county, which was given yesterday afternoon at the Hawthorne Inn. About 275 persons were present and most of them are intensely interested in the struggle which is now in progress for the nomination for congress. After dinner the principal speakers were Congressman Littlefield of Rockland, Me., and Michael J. Murray of Boston.

Mr. Littlefield said he brought to the club the greeting of 27,000 plurality obtained by the party in Maine, a greater plurality than the managers had expected, and one which had been secured by much discomfort and hard work. He eulogized Secretary Moody, and then proceeded to talk on the subject of trusts.

He said he took issue with those Democrats who would like to deal with the trusts through the medium of the tariff. He said that some Democrats wished to have the law give the president the right to use his discretion to take off the tariff, and then renew it at such times as he saw fit. The idea of these Democrats was that the president could punish the trusts by using the tariff law against them.

Mr. Littlefield said that this would be poor policy, for the reason that by the time the president, after taking off the tariff to offset the evils of a trust, got ready to restore it, he would find that there was neither manufacturers nor employes.

Mr. Littlefield claimed that the tariff was not the mother of trusts. In explaining this, he quoted free-trade countries as evidence, saying that trusts flourished there and they had not been nurtured by a tariff. He thought the best remedy for the trust evil was publicity, and he wished that the Republican party be given the opportunity to look into the matter of trusts in order to find the best way to control them. In the course of his illustrations, he quoted the sugar and tin industries and referred to the Standard Oil company and the coal combine as instances where, there being no tariff duties, there was no relation between the creator and the creature.

He claimed that in some instances where a trust was protected by the tariff the individual was alike benefited, and in these instances, if the tariff was repealed, the individual would be the first to go to the wall. He said the solution of the question was through judicious legislation, but he was not ready to state just the specific in the way of legislation that was needed. He would emphasize, he said, that publicity would be the greatest lever.

He said that there was no question that the trusts at the present time have a great advantage over the individual through being able to buy and sell in enormous amounts, and at the same time to give rebates and discounts. For this reason, the trust question has become a serious one, but in solving it some consideration must be given to the individual and not kill him off in a futile attempt to reach the greater evil.

Mr. Murray spoke on the administration's policy, with respect to Cuba and the Philippines. This policy Mr. Murray strongly endorsed.

Elimination of the Negro

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 16.—The Republican executive committee has refused admittance to negro delegates to the state convention today. This action was the result of several hours' struggle yesterday between the new regime, known as the Lillie Whites, and those not in favor of barring out the negroes.

To Administer Fair Estate

San Francisco, Sept. 16.—Judge Cook issued letters of administration yesterday in the estates of the late Charles and Caroline Fair to Herman Oelrichs, Joseph Harvey and Charles Neal. Oelrichs acts for his wife and her sister, Mrs. Vanderbilt, and the others act for Mrs. Nelson, mother of Mrs. Fair.

Macedonian Boss Captured

Vienna, Sept. 16.—A telegram from Belgrade, Servia, announces the arrest of M. Sarafoff, president of the revolutionary Macedonian committee, who has been in hiding for some time past.

EXPLORER PEARY SAFE

Reports Himself on Board the Windward, Off Coast of Labrador

New York, Sept. 16.—Herbert L. Bridgman, secretary of the Peary Arctic club, received a dispatch yesterday from Lieutenant R. E. Peary, the Arctic explorer, dated Chateau Bay, Labrador. Lieutenant Peary says in the dispatch that he is on his way home on the relief ship Windward and that all on board are well.

Beyond that contained in the dispatch Mr. Bridgman has no information as to the movements of the explorer, who sailed with his expedition to the north pole July 4, 1898. Mr. Bridgman left the lieutenant at Cape Sabine on Aug. 29, 1901.

The relief ship Windward left New York in July last to find the Peary expedition and has evidently been successful.

Twenty Lives Were Lost

Portland, Ore., Sept. 16.—Twenty lives have been lost and it is roughly estimated that property worth $1,500,000 has been destroyed during the past week by forest fires in Oregon and Washington. Many people are missing, but it will not be known how many are dead until reports from remote districts come in. The estimate of the property loss does not include standing timber. It is estimated that there are 500 people without food and shelter. The fires have nearly burned out.

Short, but Vicious Battle

Fort Erie, Ont., Sept. 16.—Tommy Ryan may be the veteran of the middleweights in the prize ring, but he is still far from a back number. Last night, in a vicious, bruising fight, he knocked out Kid Carter in the last minute of the sixth round. The knockout was clean and decisive and came chiefly as the result of the superior ring generalship of Ryan, which enabled him throughout to successfully evade or withstand the heavy onslaughts of his opponent.

Case of Brotherly Love

St. Louis, Sept. 16.—Charles A. Gutke, one of the five former members of the house of delegates confined in the city jail on charge of bribery and perjury, was informed yesterday of the death of his young son. Delegate Bersch, out on bonds aggregating $45,000, volunteered to go to jail in place of Gutke in order that the latter might be at home until after the funeral of his son. Judge Davis gave his consent to the substitution.

Steel Rail Combine In England

London, Sept. 16.—The Daily Mail declares that after many months of secret negotiations there has been formed an association of the leading British steel rail manufacturers for the purpose of controlling prices and the regulation of the output, with an aggregate of capital roughly estimated at $60,000,000, not counting large debenture issues. The association is said to affect steel rails only.

Set Fires For Excitement

Colebrook, N. H., Sept. 16.—Fred Haynes, aged 40, the adopted son of a well-to-do farmer of South Canaan, is under medical as well as official surveillance, because of charges against him of incendiarism. Haynes, who has been considered of weak mind, is said to have admitted setting a number of fires. When asked the reason of his mania for incendiarism he said he did it to cause excitement.

Methodists Want Explanation

Milwaukee, Sept. 16.—President Roosevelt was called upon by the Wisconsin Methodist conference yesterday to refute the report that he has asked the Vatican at Rome to create Archbishop Ireland a cardinal. The conference decided to send a letter of inquiry on the subject to the president.

Two New Gunboats For Mexico

Elizabethport, N. J., Sept. 16.—The Mexican gunboats Tampico and Vera Cruz, were successfully launched at the Crescent ship yards here yesterday. The Tampico was christened by Mrs. Lewis Nixon and the Vera Cruz by Mercedes Godey, daughter of Mr. Godey of the Mexican legation.

Thousands of Flood Sufferers

Calcutta, Sept. 16.—Twenty-five villages have been swept away and 6000 persons have been rendered homeless by floods due to the overflowing of rivers in the southern part of Bengal. Relief camps for the sufferers have been started.

Congress' Desire Fulfilled

Washington, Sept. 16.—A treasury warrant for $39,809 was forwarded yesterday to Ida S. McKinley, widow of the late president, for salary which would have been due him on July 1, 1902, the appropriation for which was made at the last session of congress.

Carried No Passengers

Ballston, N. Y., Sept. 16.—The first car on the Hudson Valley railway since Sept. 6 arrived here from Mechanicsville in charge of four strike breakers and 11 deputy sheriffs and went on its way to Saratoga Springs unmolested. There were no passengers on board.

Faith In Forger's Reformation

San Francisco, Sept. 16.—Charles Becker, the king of forgers, who is now in San Quentin prison, has been offered a good position in a Chicago bank when his term of imprisonment shall have expired.

NORFOLK, ss. PROBATE COURT.

TO the heirs-at-law, next-of-kin, and all other persons interested in the estate of JAMES SMITH,
late of Quincy, in said County, deceased.

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, has been presented to said Court for Probate by Jennie Margaret Crane, (formerly Jennie Margaret Smith) of Quincy, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to her, the executrix therein named, without giving a surety on her official bond.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Dedham, in said County of Norfolk, on the seventeenth day of September, A. D. 1902, at ten o'clock in the forenoon to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Quincy Daily Ledger, a newspaper published in Quincy, the last publication to be one day at least before said Court, and by mailing, postpaid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate seven days at least before said Court.

Witness, JAMES H. FLINT, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this third day of September, in the year one thousand nine hundred and two.

KANSAS CITY PLATFORM

Demanded by Williams In Bay State Convention

QUINCY MAKES OBJECTION

The Latter Wins In the Committee on Resolutions by a Vote of 14 to 7—Today's Proceedings Promise to Be of a Lively Character

Boston, Sept. 17.—The prospects of a harmonious convention today of the Democrats of Massachusetts, a convention with every detail arranged the night before, a convention without a discordant note, are not particularly bright.

That the contest for the head of the ticket between William A. Gaston and Charles S. Hamlin would be carried into the convention has been generally accepted, but that the committee on resolutions should become a storm centre with the question of reaffirming the Kansas City platform as the issue, came as a great surprise and furnished plenty of excitement to the gathering at the Revere House last evening.

For nearly 10 hours yesterday the six members at large of the committee on resolutions debated the question, three of them, including George F. Williams, the chairman, demanding that the Kansas City declarations be incorporated into this year's Massachusetts Democratic platform, while three other members, led by Josiah Quincy, strongly opposed any such plank, although willing to accept other national issues, such as those on trusts and monopolies provided that they were not drawn in drastic terms.

The deadlock was over that portion of the Kansas City platform which might be taken as an endorsement of free silver and over other principles advocated by Mr. Bryan to which many of the Democrats of the east are opposed. The contest was still on when the general committee, which included the 14 members from congressional districts, met at 10 o'clock last evening. Mr. Quincy presented the draft of the platform which the Gaston men wished and spoke in favor of it. Mr. Williams then brought forward another draft which had previously been submitted to the Gaston contingent and which they had refused to accept. The difference between the two was in dealing with the national issues alone. It was generally understood that Mr. Hamlin was willing to stand upon the platform advocated by Mr. Williams and approved of the reaffirmation of the Kansas City resolution in toto.

The actual proceedings of the resolutions committee were not ended until nearly 2 o'clock this morning. When the meeting broke up Mr. Williams stated that he should present his minority report to the convention provided it was not accepted at the formal meeting of the committee after the convention had ratified the appointments made by the committee on permanent organization.

At the meeting of the committee last night Mr. Williams presided. Mr. Williams, in behalf of the members at large, presented his platform, which endorsed the Kansas City platform. Josiah Quincy of Boston then offered a substitute platform.

A discussion then followed which lasted until 1:30 this morning, at which time a vote was then taken with the result that the Quincy platform was substituted for that presented by Mr. Williams by a vote of 14 to 7.

The Quincy platform follows:

The Democrats of Massachusetts in convention assembled, reaffirming their allegiance to the fundamental principles of Democracy, invite the support of all opponents of modern Republican policies, make the following declarations upon questions which now demand public attention and require speedy legislative action:

In the place of the Republican policy of fostering and protecting great monopolies by legislation, at the expense of the people, we demand protection for the people against the abuses and exactions of monopoly. We make no warfare upon any legitimate corporate business which is willing to sustain itself without governmental supervision and regulation; but the supremacy of the state over its corporate creatures must be asserted and maintained and they must conduct their business with due regard to the vast public interests in their charge.

Exorbitant tariff duties are producing a surplus which is today locking up in the treasury money which our business needs urgently require; these should be reduced to a reasonable revenue basis.

Free raw material is the only sound foundation for the manufacturing supremacy which this country is seeking; we again demand that the duties upon such material, so injurious and unfair to the industrial development of this commonwealth, shall be wholly removed. We demand particularly free coal, free iron ore, free wool, and free hides, and we condemn the Republican policy of sacrificing great New England interests to its political exigencies.

We favor any honest policy of reciprocity with other nations, and we particularly demand the passage of a liberal measure of reciprocity with Canada.

The present tariff is protecting great trusts and making exorbitant profits upon the necessities of our people, while selling their products to foreign markets at much lower prices than the prices exacted here; we demand the repeal of all tariff duties upon articles whose production is controlled by trusts. This is the one simple, practical and immediate remedy which will at least limit the exactions of monopoly; it can be applied while further legislation is being formulated and discussed. The federal government can at least allow the people to purchase their coal and their meat, which have been rising toward prohibitive prices, without paying tribute to the coal trusts and the meat trust.

A decent regard for the interests of the people require that both sides to a great industrial controversy should accept the principle of arbitration. We condemn the arrogant refusal of the representatives of the anthracite coal combinations to submit to arbitration their differences with their employes as the cause of vast loss and injury to the general public.

As we declared a year ago: "The people of Cuba, for whose welfare we have made ourselves trustees, are plainly entitled to the most favored commercial relations with this country." The refusal of the present Republican congress under the dictation of selfish, special interests, to give Cuba, through proper tariff concessions, a living chance of establishing a stable and efficient government under her own flag, was a shameful betrayal of our national honor. While she is entitled whenever it is her own desire to enjoy the advantages of a full political union with this country, and consequently freedom of trade with us, such a union should never be forced upon her by bankruptcy deliberately created by our actions. We denounce the small measure of relief which some Republicans were willing to grant as utterly inadequate to meet the situation in which their representatives left Cuba.

We are opposed to all forms of governmental subsidies to favored interests or classes, whether on land or on the sea.

We affirm our opposition to colonial imperialism in every form, and again demand that our government shall declare its purpose to give to the people of the Philippine islands at the earliest possible date their independence under the protection of this country.

The action of the federal government has proved inadequate to adapt Boston harbor to the rapidly growing requirements of commerce, and to maintain its relative position with other ports; we believe that the business interests of this state now require that the commonwealth, in conjunction with the city of Boston, should join in this work of improvement, and hasten and extend it.

We favor stringent laws to prevent the use of the patronage of corporations to influence legislation and political action; corporations should be prohibited from giving employment to persons recommended by office-holders or members of political committees.

Emphasizing the above matters as those now demanding most immediate consideration, while reaffirming our support of the reforms in state government, and legislation embodied in our last platform, including responsible executive government, restriction of special legislation, a proper system of referendum, primary elections, direct nominations, elections of the United States senators by the people, progressive labor legislation, including an eight-hour law, home rule for cities, we confidently appeal to the people to support our candidates.

Fight Likely In New Hampshire

Concord, N. H., Sept. 17.—A plank in the platform dealing with the prohibitory law and its non-enforcement in New Hampshire is likely to precipitate a lively fight in the Republican state convention today. The Prohibition element among the convention delegates object to the draft of this particular plank as submitted by the committee on resolutions. There are two candidates for the nomination for governor, Nathan J. Batchelder of Andover and Stephen H. Gale of Exeter, and the chances appear to favor the former. Apart from this contest, the storm centre is around the plank dealing with the liquor question.

Roosevelt In 1904

Hartford, Sept. 17.—The Republican state convention assembled here last night to transact the business preliminary to the more important program of today, which calls for the nomination of candidates for the high state offices. An important feature of the session was a resolution endorsing President Roosevelt for the presidential nomination in 1904. The resolution was referred to the committee on resolutions.

Devery Downs Opponents

New York, Sept. 17.—In the Democratic primary election contests held here yesterday the outlook is that William S. Devery, former chief of police, has the leadership of the Ninth district. John C. Sheehan, one of Devery's opponents, concedes Devery's election. In 19 districts the former chief had 211 plurality, with six districts to be heard from, including Devery's own district.

Delaware Democrats' Claim

Dover, Del., Sept. 17.—The Democratic state convention yesterday nominated H. A. Houston for representative in congress, defeating ex-Congressman Handy by a majority of two votes. Because of the split in the Republican ranks the Democratic leaders claim to be able to elect their congressional candidate in November and consequently there was a scramble for the nomination.

Fastest Steam Automobile

Cleveland, Sept. 17.—At the race meeting of the Cleveland Automobile club yesterday Rollin White drove his steam machine five miles in 6:43, a new record for steam machines.

WILL BE NEW SPEAKER

Henderson Out of Congressional Race In Iowa

SPLIT ON TARIFF QUESTION

With Many of His Party Forbids Him Appearing In a False Position—Trusts Cannot Be Cured or the People Benefited by Free Trade

Dubuque, Ia., Sept. 17.—Speaker Henderson, finding that his views in respect to the treatment of trusts by reducing the tariff in whole or in part are not in accord with the views of many of his party in Iowa, yesterday declined to accept the nomination for congress and has withdrawn from the race.

Speaker Henderson announced his withdrawal after a conference of several hours' duration with Chairman Glasser of the congressional committee and friends yesterday afternoon. His friends implored him not to take the action, but to no avail. He said he had made up his mind and no argument could cause him to change his decision. When asked for his reasons for his withdrawal, Speaker Henderson said:

"My letter to Chairman Albrook is the whole thing in a nutshell. You cannot kill the trusts by applying free trade without killing our own industries. After my conference last Saturday at Waterloo, hearing the views of the chairman of my district, I concluded that my views on the tariff question were at variance with those of many of my party, and I did not desire to appear in a false position."

The following letter was addressed to C. E. Albrook, chairman of the notification committee, by Mr. Henderson:

"I have never answered the kind notice communicated by you and your associates advising me of my nomination for the 11th time by acclamation as the Republican candidate for congress for the Third congressional district of Iowa. Reported conditions in the public mind in my district upon public policies induced me to make this delay.

"Since my return to the district I have made a careful study as to the sentiment in the district and state and I believe there is no little sentiment, and a growing sentiment among Republicans, that I do not truly represent their views on the tariff question. Believing this condition to exist and knowing that I do not agree with many of my people that trusts, to which I am and have been opposed, can be cured, or the people benefited by free trade, in whole or in part, I must decline to accept the nomination so generously and enthusiastically made.

"I have devoted 20 of the best years of my life to the service of my people and my country and I have fought for what I believed to be the best for the farmer, the laborer, and the business interests of this district and state. I am grateful for the devotion that has ever been accorded me and to the hour of my death I will hold in a grateful heart the memory of that devotion.

"I will give later on, in some detail, my views and convictions on our conditions and on public questions, and will state my reasons why the Republican party and its policies should continue in the confidence of the voters of the United States and why the doctrines of the Democracy should find no lodgment in the faith and teachings of the Republican party."

Washington Is Surprised

Washington, Sept. 17.—The dispatch announcing Speaker Henderson's declination of the congressional nomination caused a sensation in Washington. All the public men here expressed regret that the speaker had determined on the course announced in the Dubuque dispatch. Public men acknowledge that there is a demand in sections of the west and northwest for a revision of the tariff along certain lines, notably in the cases of articles whose manufacture is controlled by the trusts. Their opinion is that General Henderson's decision will make this issue more acute.

President's Attitude Endorsed

Oyster Bay, L. I., Sept. 17.—Senators Hanna, Spooner, Allison, Aldrich and Lodge and Postmaster General Payne spent several hours with President Roosevelt yesterday and discussed with him the entire political situation, having special reference to the conditions in the western states which the president is to visit on his approaching trip.

The parties to the conference were very close-mouthed after they returned from Sagamore hill, but it can be stated on reliable authority that it was decided to make no attempt to revise the tariff at the coming session of congress; that the president is to maintain his position as to the trusts; and, further, that he is to insist in his demand for reciprocity with Cuba. It also can be stated on excellent authority that the coal strike was not discussed.

The president's purpose in having this conference was to ascertain if there had been any marked political changes in the different sections of the country during the past year. The conference, it is said, showed that there had been none.

"The conference was entirely harmonious," said one of the men who participated in it. "No differences of opinion developed and the president's position on the different questions discussed was endorsed."

A Model Fireman.

Mike O'Hagan had never been a success. He had been discharged from the service of a bus company for allowing his bus to be smashed by a tramcar and from the service of a tram company for bumping into a carriage.

Finally, however, he landed in the fire brigade, and all his friends expected that he was settled for life. He was not, however, for in less than a month he was again looking for a job.

"How did it happen, Tim?" said Mike's friend Pat to Mike's brother Tim.

"Oi'll tell ye, me bhoy," replied the latter. "Shure, there came a foire, an' Molke he wint. An' whin he got there there was a man on the top ov a blazin' buildin' scr'amin' for help. 'What'll Oi do at all?' says he. 'Hould on,' says Molke, an' he throws him a rope. 'Tie it round yer neck,' says he."

"And what did Mike do then?"

"He pulled him down!"—London Answers.

Good Points of a Mule.

Rightly used, kindly treated, given the same good care as a horse, the mule has always shown himself kind, good tempered, willing, docile and intelligent. Moreover, while he has none of the horse's graceful, sympathetic ways of showing affection and responding to appreciation, the mule is capable of genuine devotion to a kind master. Both the horse and the ass have affectionate dispositions, and the only reason the mule does not evince such is because nothing calls it out. Jack is not demonstrative, but he does respond visibly to kind treatment.

He makes, moreover, an easy paced, careful, kindly riding animal when well treated. Taken altogether, he is a useful, intelligent, much enduring, little appreciated brute, whose melancholy position is that of a dog with a bad name—his good qualities rarely mentioned, while his bad ones are credited at their full value.

A Bit of Travers' Wit.

Among the many stories told of the inimitable William R. Travers is the following:

A New York clubman whose reputation as a conceited and insufferable bore was a byword was attempting to impress a group of men as being a society pet.

"What a hospitable fellow Blank is," he said, naming one of New York's cleverest men. "I dropped in on him the other night, and he and his wife fairly insisted that I stay for dinner. Such a time as I had getting away! Why, when I started to leave, they came right out in the hall and backed up against the front door."

"After you'd g-g-gone out?" inquired Travers.

A Witty Pauper.

While walking through an old street in Stuttgart recently a man found a purse, and, thinking that it might contain something valuable, he stuck it hastily in his pocket and hurried home. He examined it then and was disgusted to find that it contained nothing except these four lines in German on a slip of paper:

When you find this purse, refrain from joy;
I'll tell you why in a minute—
I only threw it away because
I hadn't a cent to put in it.

Good Afternoon.

A large apple may have a large worm in it. New York has had Croker and is likely to have Devery.

Free trade theorists would find conditions in Africa to suit them. All the exports are national products and all the imports manufactured articles.

Speaker Henderson should be prevailed upon to withdraw his declaration not to be a candidate for reelection to Congress. He has proved a valuable man.

A man named Feldsmith recently attempted suicide twice in one day. A careful investigation revealed the fact that his wife composes literary poems instead of gastronomic ones.

Some of the rich men of Newport have threatened to leave the state because of the stringent automobile law. If Rhode Island would enact a stringent divorce law Newport might become a deserted city.

The opposition to Representative Badger for a third term is rather amusing. It comes from those who want to make a place for others more in harmony with the present City Hall ring. The only exception to a three year term in Quincy for the past ten years was in case of Hon. Eugene H. Sprague, who was advanced to the Senate the third year. Postmaster Charles L. Hammond had three years, so did Assessor James Thompson and Thaddeus H. Newcomb in 1896, '97 and '98, and Eben W. Sheppard in 1899, 1900 and 1901. Eugene H. Sprague was Representative with Mr. Sheppard in 1899 and 1900, and Representative Badger was elected for the year 1900. Fair play for Ward Six means another year for Mr. Badger.

It seems to be the opinion of many that the City Council over-reached the limit at its meeting this week by requesting the School Committee to close all the schools of the city on one of the days of the Brockton fair. In Brockton or an abutting town it might be different, but even then it is questionable if a City Council acting under a city charter like that of Quincy, should interfere with the School Committee, an executive department entirely separate from the Mayor.

Again, there was no popular demand for the closing of the schools, and had there been, a petition of parents to the School Committee would have been the proper procedure. Probably less than 100 school children will attend the fair if the schools are closed, yet over 5000 will be turned adrift for the day.

Brockton clergymen, further, have criticised the fair, and it is doubtful if the influence of the midway will do children who attend any good. Those who do not go, do not need a holiday as they have scarcely got down to work since the long summer vacation. Parents who might go to the fair if the schools were in session may have to stay at home if they close to take care of the children.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Some things cost more than they did a few years ago, but those who produce them are getting better prices for them. The consumers who grumble at the enhanced cost of living are for the most part getting better prices for that which they produce, whether by labor of brain or by handiwork. From wide observation of neighbors and fellow citizens, we are convinced that most of our forebodings are without cause, and the things we suffer are imaginary. It may be that the street railway companies make more money than they ought to; but, when the man who boards an electric car and pays five cents for a ten-mile ride says that his blood boils with indignation every time he does it because of the rapacity of the corporation which accommodates him, his wrath seems to us fictitious, and the amount he suffers because of the two cents he begrudges to the corporation is more than balanced by the enjoyment he gets in "kicking."—Christian Register.

☞ The coal operators' claim of right to run their business as they see fit, regardless of the interests of employes or public, has some foundation—the same foundation as has a man's claim of right to have smallpox if he chooses, regardless of infection of others. It is a poor foundation.—Cleveland Press.

☞ It is intolerable that one state like New Jersey should indulge in a corporation debauch, and make all the other states the prey of her creatures. National incorporation and regulation is the obvious remedy. The present chartering and regulation of the national banks shows that this can be done with perfect success.—Chicago Advance.

☞ "No section owns him; he belongs to the nation. No influence controls him; he listens to the voice of the whole people. Simple justice to all—this is the spirit that rules the mind and the heart of the chief magistrate of the American people. How may that which is best for all be practically accomplished—this is the question he puts to every problem that confronts him."—Senator Beveridge on President Roosevelt.

☞ A man in Gardiner, Me., sailing with his wife on Cobosse lake, claimed that although he was 50 years old he could swim as well as when he was a boy. To demonstrate it he plunged overboard, disappeared, and that was the last seen of him. The man who has passed middle life is more susceptible to cramps than he was at the age of 10, and the plunge into cold water is too great a test for one who is unaccustomed to it. Beside, a man at that age is stouter than when he was young, and the exertion of swimming, unless he has kept up the practice since boyhood, very soon exhausts him. The mistake this man made was in trying to make good his boast. He better have withdrawn it, or better still, not have made it.—Lynn Item.

FELL DOWN STAIRS.

Fatal Accident to John Gallagher Aged 60 Years.

John Gallagher met with a serious accident Tuesday night, receiving injuries from which he died this morning. Mr. Gallagher, who is about 60 years of age, and employed as a mason's tender, boarded with Mrs. Ellen Walsh at 31 Water street. Early Tuesday evening Mr. Gallager was coming down a short flight of stairs at his boarding house when he slipped and fell. The distance was not great but he struck the side of his head a terrific blow which fractured the skull. Medical aid was summoned but of no avail and he passed away this morning.

THE LAWSON.

Reached Philadelphia All Right Yesterday.

The big seven master schooner Thomas W. Lawson reached Philadelphia on Tuesday.

Capt. Crowley reports that the Lawson behaved beautifully, like a small yacht, he says.

John Hancock Children.

The new five year-olds at the John Hancock school this term are:

Gertrude Archibald, Morris Asmes, Josephine Berlucchi, James Brown, James Cawley, Catherine Clare, Norman Clark, Cecelia Connors, John Curry, William Curtin, Herbert Driscoll, Agnes Frolind, David Gorshell, John Gilcoine, Etta Grossman, George Imray, Herbert Johnson, Andrew Johnson, Thomas Kantola, Helma Sahti, Percy Lubarsky, Esther Littlewood.

Irene Marshall, Albert Mattson, Amy Medlin, Nellie McEachern, Helen McKenzie, Margaret McKimmon, William McKimmon, Herbert Morton, George McDonald, Christina Mc Innis, Annie McLeod, Henry McIntosh, Margaret McQueen, Alice Nelson, John Nelson, Alfred Nicoll, Agnes Norling.

Einae Pelto, Laura Richards, Max Ritwo, Rosina Sente, Laina Saleneuis, Etta Shockman, Julius Sorgman, James Smith, Joseph Sugrue, Fred Tinney, Grace Williams, William Watson.

Granite Shipment.

The total amount of granite shipped from their railroad terminals in Quincy during the month of August was 10,959,636 pounds. This was a little over a million pounds less than in the previous month. It was, however, expected that there would be a falling off, and amount shipped was larger than expected. Besides that shipped by rail, which is largely finished stock, there was a very large amount shipped by teams, of which no estimate can be obtained. The amount shipped from the several terminals in August was: Quincy Adams, 4,473,091 pounds; West Quincy, 4,276,435 pounds; Quarry railroad, 2,210,110 pounds.

Waiting Room.

The Railroad Commissioners advertise a hearing for September 25 on the order of the City Council requesting the Old Colony street railway to establish a waiting room at West Quincy, near the corner of Copeland and Cross streets. City solicitor Blackmur informs the Ledger that that portion of the order for a waiting room in City Square has been dropped, as the company have established such a room since the passage of the order.

Automobilist Fined.

Stephen W. Sleeper, a prominent member of the Boston Automobile club, was before the district court this morning for fast driving on the Blue Hill Parkway. Officer White, who made the arrest, testified that Sleeper's machine was going very fast, that he pulled out his watch and timed him and that he covered 700 feet in fifteen seconds. Sleeper claimed that the gasoline in his machine was low and that he was not going over eight miles an hour. The court accepted a plea of nolo-contendere, and imposed a fine of $15.

Incendiary Fire.

Someone is determined to destroy by fire the small unoccupied barn on Garr place. The building was set on fire one night early this month but was not destroyed. It was set on fire again Tuesday night, but was discovered early, and an alarm sounded from Box 41 about midnight. This fire was extinguished with a loss of not over $5.

The Bad Bargain That Was Made by a French Dentist.

During a recent festival at Neuilly a young woman attracted the attention of a large crowd by holding a heavy bar of iron between her teeth. Among those who watched her was a dentist, and at the close of her performance a luminous idea came to him, and he determined to carry it out.

Going to the young woman, he said: "Mademoiselle, I am a dentist, and therefore I am more impressed with the wonderful power of your jaws than any one else. Now, I am about to make a proposition to you. I will give you $250 if you will write a letter to me saying that you do all this work by the aid of a set of false teeth which I have manufactured for you."

After some thought the young woman replied: "I will accept your offer on one condition. You must first give me as many dollars as I can raise from the ground with my teeth."

The dentist hesitated a moment and then said that he would give her in dollars as many 25 cent pieces as she could raise. To this she agreed, and a few minutes later the dentist was almost stupefied when he saw her raise a weight which was equal to that of $10,000. It was a costly advertisement for the dentist.

The Old Surf Bath.

It is not so many years ago when surf bathing of a very primitive kind prevailed at the eastern end of Long Island and, for aught I know, at other points. Every Saturday morning or afternoon, as the tide willed, throughout the summer big farm wagons trundled down to the beach and were swung around abreast of the line of breakers. Old fishhouses served the purpose of modern bathing pavilions, and the sea costumes were those of last year's village street. A long rope was drawn from under the seats and hitched to the wheel, and then some sturdy ex-whaler or life crew man in red flannel shirt and old trousers tied at the ankles slipped his waist through the loop at the end of this primitive life line and, wading out, kept it as taut as circumstances permitted, while the women and children hung to it and reveled and wallowed and shrieked, rejoicing in their "Saturday tub."—Outing.

Unexpected Success.

There are times when an honest confession of ignorance results to one's advantage. An examination of history was going on in a high school. The second row of the scholars looked supremely contented. They knew what was coming next and were confident of making brilliant recitations. The professor gravely put the question:

"What became of the Greeks who were slain at Thermopylæ?"

The first boy hesitated and then hazarded, "Burnt 'em."

"Next," was the icy answer.

"Buried 'em," came from the second promptly. "Oh, what an easy one!"

"Next."

"Don't know," drawled the third boy hopelessly.

"Right. Nobody does."

The successful one looked surprised; then he crowed a little. The other two looked sheepish.—London Tit-Bits.

Divers' Madness.

An Australian pearl diver says that one of the strange effects of diving is the invariable bad temper felt while working at the bottom of the sea. As this usually passes away as soon as the surface is reached, it is probably due to the pressure of the air affecting the lungs and through them the brain. The exhilaration and good temper of the mountain climber are contrary feelings from an opposite cause. A diver becomes so angry at some imaginary wrongdoing on the part of those in the boat above that he gives the signal to be pulled up, "with the intention of knocking the heads off the entire crew," only to forget what he came up for when the surface is reached.

Taking Out the Sting.

One day at a rehearsal W. S. Gilbert observed a girl crying and asked her the cause of it.

Between her sobs the girl declared she had been insulted by one of the costumers, who had said to her, "You are no better than you ought to be."

Gilbert immediately looked very sympathetic and said, "Well, you are not, are you, my dear?"

To which she replied promptly, "Why, of course not, Mr. Gilbert."

"Ah, that's all right," he said, and she went away perfectly comforted.

What Puzzled Him.

Sir Joshua Fitch told a story of the nature study exhibition in London illustrating the popular wonder at scientific knowledge. Sir John Avebury was showing the heavens through his telescope to some neighbors and servants when one exclaimed, "I do not wonder, Sir John, that clever people find out the sizes and distances of the stars and how they move, but what beats me is how you ever could tell their names!"

A Tug at It.

She—You must not kiss me until we are formally engaged.

He—Do you mean to say that you always insist upon that rule?

She—I've always tried to.—Detroit News Tribune.

It is easy enough to restrain our wrath when the other fellow is the bigger.—New York News.

A VACATION TRIP.

Through America's Finest Scenery via Boston & Albany R. R.

The annual autumnal excursion on the Boston & Albany Railroad will take place Thursday Oct. 9. It will be from Boston, through the most interesting cities of Massachusetts to Albany, down the historic Hudson river by daylight, with its historic and scenic points of interest, to New York City, returning via Fall River Line Steamer.

Who would not be tempted to take such a journey, combinding as it does the most interesting cities in Massachusetts and New York States; passing through some of the finest scenery in America, and at a time when the weather and all other conditions will be as nearly perfect for travelling as it is possible to expect? Such is the annual tour offered by the Boston & Albany Railroad.

The excursion starts Thursday morning, October 9th, and is due to return either Saturday October 11th or Sunday, October 12. It is one of the highest class excursions given by any railroad in the country, and at a time when it will be most appreciated by those who enjoy travelling. It is exclusive, as the number of tickets issued will be limited. Every arrangement will be perfect. There is nothing cheap about the excursion except the price, which is the nominal sum of $5. the cost of an ordinary ticket between Boston and New York one way.

The conditions under which this excursion is given are ideal and can but appeal to every lover of travel. The time of the year is most opportune. The weather is settled, and the golden October sunshine will make each day a period of full enjoyment. According to the itinerary the excursion starts from South Station, Boston, at 8.30, Thursday morning, October 9. The journey from Boston to Albany will be on one of the Boston & Albany's luxurious trains, over one of the finest roadbeds in existence.

The traveller will pass through the great commercial centres of Massachusetts, Worcester and Springfield and through the heart of the famous Berkshire Hills, where the natural beauty of the scenery is unrivaled, passing finally through the "Albany Gateway" to the City of Albany, where the train is due at 2.35 P. M. A representative of the Albany Chamber of Commerce will be on the train to give any information as to points of interest in the City of Albany.

To those who wish to remain over in Albany for the day, are many things worth seeing, including the State Capitol, the handsomest and most elaborate capitol building of any state in the Union. In the event of remaining over night in Albany, the excursionist takes the steamer "New York," of the famous Hudson River Day Line, which leaves Albany at 8.30 A. M., on Friday, October 10th.

If the traveller prefers he may continue to New York that same evening by one of the elegant steamers of the People's Evening Line, which leaves Albany at 8 P. M. All the way down the Hudson River the scenery is magnificent and rich in historic associations. West Point, the nursery of patriotism and training school for officers of the United States Army; Fort Clinton, Fort Putnam, Constitution Island, and such historic eminences as Storm King, Cro'nest, Taurus and Breakneck, are some of the points present themselves in rapid succession.

Below West Point the steamer passes the famous Treason Hill, where Major Andre was captured, and the region of Sleepy Hollow, made famous by Irving.

Late in the afternoon, the wonderful Palisades of the Hudson come into sight. This is the grandest point of scenery on the whole trip. The Palisades have made the Hudson famous, and have caused it to be frequently compared in scenery to the River Rhine.

Upon arrival at New York on Friday afternoon, Oct. 10th, (or if you take the night line from Albany, on Friday morning) the traveler has before him a delightful return journey over the Fall River Line, by one of the beautiful steamers "Priscilla" or "Puritan" leaving Pier No. 19, North River, at 5 P. M., and arriving in Boston at 7 A. M., either on Saturday or Sunday morning.

If the traveller arrives in New York on Friday morning by the night line from Albany, he may have two whole days in the Metropolis and still reach Boston within the limit of his ticket. If, however, this length of time is not sufficient for any one, the time of ticket may be extended by the payment of $2 to the Fall River Line at Pier No. 19.

As the price of an ordinary ticket is $5 for one way, business men and others who wish to make a longer sojourn in New York, will find it greatly to their advantage to arrange to go upon this excursion. Remember that the price of the entire journey is only $5; the opportunity is offered only once each year, and the number of tickets is limited.

If, therefore, you contemplate taking your vacation, or can by any means arrange to be absent for three days at this season it would be well to make application for tickets as soon as possible. Tickets will be placed on sale only at principal stations, and there is no question but that every ticket available will be taken before the date set for the excursion.

This excursion ticket will be accepted on any train out of Boston to Albany, over the Boston & Albany Road, during the day of Oct. 9th, with the single exception of train No. 15, which leaves the South Station at 10.45 A. M. It is not, therefore, absolutely necessary to take the special train at 8.30 A. M., but suburban residents or those living even at a distance from Boston, can leave their homes on the morning of Oct. 9th and join the main excursion in Albany, by taking a later train.

Remember these three things—The date of the Excursion is Thursday, Oct. 9th. The time the special train leaves South Station is 8.30 A. M. The price for the grand tour,—Boston, Albany, New York City, Boston—is only $5.

For illustrated circular descriptive of the route to be traversed, or any other details not furnished in this article, upon which the traveller may wish to be informed, call on nearest ticket agent, or address A. S. Hanson, G. P. A., Boston & Albany R. R., Boston, Mass.

Sec. Moody for Increase.

The Washington correspondent of the Herald writes: "That Secretary Moody proposes to use his influence to induce Congress to grant new construction to the navy at the forthcoming session, notwithstanding the opposition of the naval committees of the Senate and House, was shown Tuesday by his approval of estimates for three new training vessels— two ships and one brig—which had been submitted by Rear Admiral Bowles, chief constructor.

Admiral Bowles wanted six training ships and two brigs, but Mr. Moody was not willing to ask for such a large number.

In view of this action, naval officers argue that the secretary will not be unwilling to urge Congress to grant an increase commensurate with the needs of the country.

Newspaper Men at Golf.

The first round of the Newspaper men's golf tournament at Wollaston on Tuesday resulted as follows:

J. D. Dalton (Globe) beat T. P. Harrington (N. Y. Sun).

Daniels (Traveller) beat Pember (Advertiser) 3—5:

O'Connell (Globe) beat Myers (Associated Press) 1 up;

Swan (New Bedford Mercury) beat Shirley (Globe) by default;

Flanagan (Journal) beat Latta (Transcript) by default;

Fletcher (Anglo-American) beat O'Connell (Fitchburge) default.

Second Round—Swan (Associated Press) beat Boyle (Globe) 9—7.

The defeated players will compete in a consolation event.

Socialist Candidate.

Quincy men were chairman and secretary of the Tenth district Socialist convention held Tuesday evening, Wm. Norrie being chairman, and William M. Packard secretary.

The convention was held at Naomi hall, 724 Washington street, Boston. The Quincy delegates landed their favorite, John Weaver Sherman as candidate for Congress, who was nominated by acclamation.

Dedham Tax Rate.

The tax rate of Dedham is $15.80, a reduction from $16.10. The assessors announce the valuation of real estate, $7,889,300; personal estate, $2,075,475; total valuation, $9,964,775, an increase of $787,225.

—Old-fashioned families are still plenty in Maine, and one of them must liv ein Lubec, where it is reported that a man recently bought 13 pairs of shoes at a removal sale, and then did not have enough to go around the family circle.

THE IOWA PARTY.

To Attend the Launching of Cruiser Des Moines at Quincy.

When the new protected cruiser Des Moines is launched at the Fore River shipyard on Saturday the state of Iowa will be represented by a party of about 50 persons, representative of the state. Miss Elsie Macomber, who will christen the cruiser, will be chaperoned by Mrs. Cummins, wife of Gov. Albert B. Cummins.

In the party will be John Briar, secretary to the governor, and Mrs. Briar, Secretary of State Martin, State Treasurer Gilbertson, State Auditor Merriam and several members of the governor's staff, headed by Brig. Gen. Byers of Des Moines, adjutant-general of the Iowa militia.

The representation of the city of Des Moines will include Mayor Brenton, B. O. Hanger of the board of Public work works, and several of the aldermen.

TRANSPLANTED TREES.

Why They Frequently Remain Dormant a Whole Season.

Certain kinds of trees frequently remain dormant all summer, following spring transplanting. To all appearances they are dead, and they are an eyesore to the owner till removed.

The writer of this has seen wistarias, horse chestnuts, ashes and tulip trees remain perfectly dormant all summer and come out safely into leaf the following spring. It seems contrary to nature that trees should live without the leaves, which we learn are their lungs and essential for evaporation and assimilation of food in the growing season.

Explanation of this peculiar action is had by studying for a moment the conditions that probably exist. The roots of such trees have been disturbed and their feeding powers suddenly checked. They are called upon to support the tops as formerly, yet their opportunity for the time being is gone. A struggle is going on. The tops make a feeble effort to put forth buds and draw on the roots for nourishment with poor success. The roots yield of their stored food, but are too weak or are not in a position to make new feeding fibers. If the tops have not been pruned, the drain is so much the greater. Where leaves put forth, transpiration would be more than the trees could stand, and they would gradually die away.—Meehan's Monthly.

A Hard Luck Tale With a Sting.

It was not a new hard luck tale to the man to whom it was told. The young man, neatly dressed and dapper looking, was not out of work, had not lost his purse, was not poverty stricken at all, but he had come down from Rye to go over to Newark and in changing his clothes had forgotten to transfer his pocketbook to the trousers he put on.

"I hate to ask the favor of a stranger," the young man said, "but really it would save me much embarrassment if you could let me have a couple of dollars until tomorrow."

"Indeed I can't do it," said the man, for he believed not a word of the tale, and he left the disconsolate youth at the postoffice and, meeting a friend, invited him to luncheon and told him of his "gentleman beggar."

When the waiter handed him a check, the two had agreed that the story was highly improbable, but a moment later the doubting man gave a start.

"By Jove!" he exclaimed. "I've left my pocketbook in my other trousers!" —New York Times.

The Advance In Paper Making.

When Ulman Stromer long ago established paper making in Germany, he had no foresight of the important position paper was destined to assume in the civilization of man. In Stromer's time paper was a rare material, little used and only to be found in the offices of the learned, of scribes and of officers. The supply of Germany and of all northern Europe was brought from Italy and Spain—most of it from the factories of Fabriano, in Italy, where paper mills existed in the twelfth century, while a lively paper industry flourished in Spain, with its principle seat at San Felipe, in Valencia, as early as 1150.

The paper making art was introduced into both of these lands by the Arabs, who learned it in Samarcand and spread it through Europe. It was introduced into Samarcand in 751 by Chinese prisoners from their country, where it had been carried on from extremely ancient times.

—From 1870 to 1892 the U. S. government maintained a station for weather observations at the summit of Mt. Washington, and for 17 years of that period the observers remained on the mountain top winter and summer.

Benefits of Traveling.

Proper recreation prolongs life. This fact is now better appreciated by busy people than ever before. Of all the forms of recreation the best perhaps is traveling. The benefits to be derived from it cannot be exaggerated. A journey, whether brief or long, is sure to relieve the mind of business or domestic cares by directing it into pleasanter channels. Thousands can testify that traveling has improved their health, lengthened their lives, brightened their mental faculties more than anything else.—Boston Globe.

The Other One.

Two brothers in Paris were remarkably alike. A gentleman meeting one of them on the boulevard stops him, saying, "Pardon me, but is it to you or to your brother that I have the honor of speaking?"

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

SOCIALISTIC IDEA REJECTED

Haverhill Minister Advocated Co-operative Church and Store Plan

Haverhill, Mass., Sept. 17.—Members of the First Unitarian parish last night gave consideration to the plan of the pastor, Rev. George E. Littlefield, which provided for the establishment of a co-operative church and a co-operative church store. By a large majority vote the pastor's plan was deemed impracticable and it was rejected. The vote did not pertain to the recent action of the pastor any more than to show that the sentiment was not in support of his idea.

It is not known whether Mr. Littlefield will continue as pastor, but it is supposed he will remain until the end of the church year. He has recently come into public attention by his advocacy of the socialist idea of a co-operative church through which would be merged the church interests without regard to sectarian faiths, to be conducted in accordance with the socialist system of co-operation. He has stated that he has received an offer of a fixed salary to organize forums in various cities of New England for the agitation of the ideas which he is now proclaiming.

Jack the Slugger Held

Boston, Sept. 17.—The expected trial of John C. L. Soderquest, known as "Jack the Slugger," did not take place yesterday. This was owing to the action of the accused, who withdrew his plea of "not guilty" and pleaded guilty to the charge of murderously assaulting Eva Crockett. The prisoner was then remanded by Judge Aiken for sentence.

Slipped From Running Board

Brockton, Mass., Sept. 17.—John Murphy, a street railway conductor, fell from the running board of his car in Campello while it was in motion yesterday and received injuries from which he later died. The running board was crowded with passengers at the time and Murphy slipped while making his way along collecting fares.

QUARREL IN A SALOON

Results In Tragic Death of Nicholas Fish

A BANKER AND DIPLOMAT

Had Been Drinking With Two Women and Were Joined by Private Detective, Who, It Is Alleged, Struck the Fatal Blow—Held For Homicide

New York, Sept. 17.—The death of Nicholas Fish as the result of a quarrel in a saloon and the arrest of Thomas J. Sharkey on the charge of homicide in that connection, is the subject of close police investigation and conjecture.

Mr. Fish was the head of one of the most distinguished families in the United States and a banker of great wealth. According to information gathered by the police, Fish's death was due to a blow struck by Thomas J. Sharkey, a private detective, who, with two women who were present at the time, were arrested after the death.

A policeman found Fish lying unconscious on the sidewalk in front of the saloon and summoned an ambulance in which he was taken to the Roosevelt hospital. A dispatch was sent to Mrs. Fish, who was at Tuxedo, and who reached the hospital soon after midnight.

According to the police, Mr. Fish, who, in his wife's absence, was living at his town home in Irving Place, entered Erhardt's saloon Monday afternoon, accompanied by a Mrs. Phillips and a Mrs. Casey. There they sat drinking for some hours until they were joined by Sharkey, at the invitation of one of the women. Fish continued to treat his companions until, on discovering that his money was exhausted, he announced that he would draw a check and get the bartender to cash it. This provoked a derisive remark by Sharkey, who was ignorant of Fish's identity, and high words followed. A blow was struck, by whom the police do not know, and the two men rushed at each other, the women trying to separate them. One of the women, clutching Fish by the arm, succeeded in dragging him out of the saloon to the sidewalk. There he was confronted by Sharkey, who had broken away from his companions, and they clinched. A moment later Fish reeled as if from a blow and fell prone to the sidewalk. Seeing him lying unconscious and fearing that he might be killed, his late companions fled.

As soon as the fact of Fish's identity was established a dozen detectives were set on the trail of his companions and before daylight the trio were arrested. They were brought before Coroner Jackson, who, after a preliminary inquiry, held Sharkey in $10,000 bail on the charge of homicide and the women as witnesses.

To the coroner Sharkey said that he met Fish and the two women in the saloon and after a verbal altercation with Fish they left the place by different doors. He denied striking Fish and declared that he must have fallen as he was leaving the saloon. Detective Trojan, who made the arrest, declared that Sharkey admitted to him that he struck Fish. Both the women made sworn statements, but these District Attorney Jerome has refused to make public.

Coroner Jackson, after performing an autopsy, pronounced Fish's death to be due to cerebral hemorrhage, following concussion of the brain, and not a fracture of the skull, as was at first supposed by the surgeons at the hospital. The coroner declared his conviction that the injury was caused by a heavy blow and not by contact with the sidewalk in a fall. In the latter case, he said, there would almost certainly have been exterior injuries and a fracture of the skull.

Nicholas Fish was a son of Hamilton Fish, secretary of state under Grant, was born in New York in 1849, was graduated from Columbia college in 1867, took a law course at Harvard, and for several years was in the diplomatic service of the government. He was first secretary of the legation at Berlin in 1874, charge of affairs to the Swiss confederation, 1877 to 1881, and United States minister to Belgium, 1882 to 1886. He was in banking since 1887. His only son, Hamilton Fish, 3d, went to Cuba as a member of Roosevelt's Rough Riders, and was shot at Las Guasimas. Of Mr. Fish's brothers, Hamilton is former Republican speaker of the New York assembly, and Stuyvesant is president of the Illinois Central Railroad company.

Seventeen Were Killed

Roanoke, Va., Sept. 17.—But little has been heard from the Algoma mine at North Fork, W. Va., which was the scene of a gas and powder explosion, which caused the death of 17 miners and several mine mules. The last of the victims was brought out of the mine last midnight.

Sentence None Too Heavy

Butler, Pa., Sept. 17.—Joseph Bennett, who narrowly escaped lynching at the hands of a mob on Saturday night for assaulting a 6-year-old girl, entered a plea of non-contendere in court yesterday and was sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment.

Hereford Bull Brought $10,000

Indianapolis, Sept. 17.—At the stock yards yesterday Clem Graves, owner of the Bunker Hill farm, sold the Hereford bull Crusader for $10,000 to Edward F. Hawkins of Earl Park, Ind.

LABOR LEADERS MEET

Gompers Says Federation Will Give Miners Aid If They Need It

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 17.—President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor and National President Mitchell and National Treasurer Wilson of the United Mine Workers, together with the district presidents of the same organization in the anthracite region, spent the best part of yesterday in a conference here which was secret. After the meeting none of those who participated was in a communciative mood. President Mitchell said it was the regular monthly meeting of the executive board of United Mine Workers and Mr. Gompers and Mr. Wilson happening to be coming this way stopped over. Mr. Gompers was a little more talkative than the others. When asked what was the object of his visit to strike headquarters, he replied:

"I simply came up here to look over the strike situation. I find everything in excellent shape. The strike is being ably conducted and I learn that there is ample relief for all the strikers."

Mr. Gompers was asked whether the federation will be assessed to support the miners. He said in reply that the trades unions now comprising the federation are making voluntary contributions to help the miners and that if it is necessary to give additional aid it will be done.

Llewellyn Company Gives In

Shamokin, Pa., Sept. 17.—The Llewellyn Coal company has granted a 10 percent increase and an eight-hour day to their men. Thirty men of the Royal Oak colliery, owned by the Llewellyn company, went back to work, but they were persuaded to go home and wait until the other and larger companies announced concessions. It is believed here among the miners that the strike is really ended and that the surrender of the other coal companies is merely a question of time.

More Collieries Start Up

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 17.—The Delaware and Hudson company yesterday started up three more collieries. This makes six collieries and three washeries this company have in operation. The Ontario and Western company has now three mines and three washeries going. Altogether the companies having headquarters here claim to be operating 19 collieries and 21 washeries, with an estimated daily output of 20,000 tons.

England Benefits by Strike

London, Sept. 17.—The coal strike in the United States is continuing to affect the English iron market favorably. In view of the shortage of American pig iron a large number of midland and northern furnaces are running on full time to meet American orders.

Canadian Forts Inefficient

London, Sept. 18.—The Daily Express says that Colonel Townshend, who has returned to England after having inspected, on behalf of the war office, the forts on the Canadian-American frontier, reports that the British fortifications all along the frontier are absolutely inefficient, while the American forts are well equipped. Referring to this The Express says: "In the event of war between Great Britain and the United States the Yankees would easily march over the frontier and seize Canada before anything could be done to resist them."

Soldiers' Turbulent Actions

San Francisco, Sept. 17.—Another riot occurred at the Presidio yesterday. Five hundred soldiers, chagrined at being molested in their attempt to destroy the saloon of Adolph Rehfield Monday night, broke in the front doors yesterday and proceeded to drink up Rehfield's stock and to make way with cigars and tobacco. A squad of soldiers from the reservation appeared on the scene and the riotous soldiers were ordered to their camps.

The Return of Peary

London, Sept. 17.—The Morning Post devotes the place of honor on its pages this morning to the announcement of The Associated Press of the safety of Lieutenant Peary. This announcement is followed by a description of Lieutenant Peary's expedition and an editorial article in which The Post says it fears that Lieutenant Peary's return indicates that the pole is still unconquered by man.

Hard Times For Fishermen

St. Johns, Sept. 17.—Steamer Virginia Lake reached here yesterday from Labrador. She reports the loss of 10 fishing schooners with their cargoes of fish and their outfits during the last fortnight. The crews of the lost schooners were saved and brought here by the Virginia Lake.

Borax as a Preservative

Washington, Sept. 17.—Commissioner Yerkes of the internal revenue bureau has decided that where borax or similar preservatives are used in butter in extremely small quantities, for preservative purposes only, the product will not be subject to tax as adulterated butter.

Captain Moynihan Out of Work

New York, Sept. 17.—Police Captain Moynihan of Brooklyn was yesterday convicted of neglect of duty and violation of the rules of the department and was dismissed from the force.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Homeless cats in Newport, R. I., are to be cared for by a society to be formed there on the lines of the Boston society. There is not another city of the size of Newport which has so many felines.

The National Baseball league magnates met at New York and adjourned without having decided upon any definite plan of action for the future as regards the American league situation.

Try to pay $15.00 for your Suit, if you can. It gives you better tailoring all over, and a better variety of patterns. Not that the $10.00 and $12.00 Suit aren't good--they are better than most Suits at the price--but it pays to get as good a suit as you can afford.

A man put on one of our $15 Suits the other day, and the first friend he met asked. "Where did you get it made?"

You really cannot tell our ready-made Clothing from custom-made. Attention to detail in Suit-making does the business. We're ready for YOU any day. Our Suits are far better than our prices would indicate. Compare YOUR Ideas with OUR Goods. You will find our prices will suit your Purse. COME SEE.

WILLIAMS WAS ROUTED

In Bay State Democrats' Contest Over Platform

GASTON GETS NOMINATION

Balance of State Ticket Selected From List Submitted by Minority of Committee—New Hampshire Republicans For Change In Liquor Law

Boston, Sept. 18.—Acrimony was not wanting for a time in the Democratic state convention here yesterday, but in the end harmony was restored and the state ticket finally named was enthusiastically greeted. The ticket follows:

For governor, William A. Gaston, Boston; lieutenant governor, John C. Crosby, Pittsfield; secretary of state, Willmore B. Stone, Springfield; treasurer, Thomas C. Thatcher, Yarmouth; auditor, J. L. Chalifoux, Lowell; attorney general, John J. Flaherty, Gloucester.

It might be said that in naming Colonel Gaston to head the ticket precedent was shattered, inasmuch as he was nominated, and then given a platform of his own dictation. Not unlike the famous conventions of 1896 and 1900, the fight was over the national issues in the platform. As man for man the test of strength was between Gaston on the one hand and George Fred Williams, once the stalwart leader of the silver Democrats, on the other. In this battle Williams was utterly routed with the predicted result that he is shorn of all power of leadership.

The platform adopted is a repudiation of the Kansas City platform, for Gaston refused to be the nominee if in any way the declaration of principles could be construed to endorse those things most prominently advocated by the party in the last two national campaigns.

Williams was chairman of the committee on resolutions, and at first proposed endorsement of the Kansas City platform. In deference to the protests of Josiah Quincy, a member of the committee, speaking for Gaston, he consented to waive the endorsement, and proposed planks in which the nation l questions of trusts, monopolies and corporations were dealt with in strong language. Quincy wrote a platform which was acceptable to Gaston, whose convention strength was estimated, rightfully as it proved, at four to one, over Charles S. Hamlin, the other candidate for nomination. In committee Tuesday night, Quincy's draft was accepted by a majority vote of 14 to 7, which was repeated before the convention opened.

The convention opened with trouble brewing. It came soon after Gaston's nomination when the matter of platform was brought up. The battle from the floor was one of bitter words, during which delegates objecting to Williams' sarcastic references to the last five planks in the platform, which he said were placed there at Gaston's solicitation, hissed and cried him down. Throughout the tumult the speaker exultantly surveyed the throng and when order was restored concluded his speech to be hissed again as he sat down. The minority report was utterly defeated.

Another incident before closing was the rejection of the report of the committee on balance of state ticket, and acceptance of a substitute list brought in by a minority of the committee. The reason given was that the majority gave too many offices to men in the eastern part of the state. Immediately thereafter Mr. Hamlin, taking the platform, asked that Gaston's nomination be made unanimous, which was done amid cheers, and the convention adjourned.

Mr. Williams will support Gaston and the remainder of the state ticket, but he will not take the stump. His decision on these two points was announced after the adjournment of the convention.

William A. Gaston is the son of the late Governor William Gaston, one of the few Democrats who have held that office in this state, serving in 1876. Colonel Gaston was on the staff of Governor Russell. In business life, although a lawyer, he has been known through directorship in the Boston Elevated road.

BATCHELDER NOMINATED

Granite State Republicans Dissatisfied With Prohibitory Law

Concord, N. H., Sept. 18.—Following the action of the party in Vermont, the Republicans of New Hampshire, in state convention here yesterday, warmly debated the question of making changes in the prohibitory law. Those in favor of a change carried the day. The contest for governor was won by Nahum J. Batchelder of Andover, a man prominently identified with the Patrons of Husbandry. The name of the other candidate, Stephen H. Gale of Exeter, was withdrawn before the nominations were called for and Batchelder was chosen by acclamation.

No other candidates are nominated by state conventions in New Hampshire.

The platform endorses the administration on all points and favors the renomination of President Roosevelt. Illegal combines are condemned, and one plank opposes the indiscriminate destruction of forests. The plank on the liquor issue adopted, which was opposed by the out-and-out Prohibitionists, is as follows:

"We recognize the unsatisfactory municipal conditions in many parts of the state relating to the enforcement of the prohibitory law. We believe that the best interests of our citizens demand essential changes in the law, but the details of such changes should be fully discussed and carefully considered by the representatives of the people to be elected next November, with that end in view.

"We therefore recommend that at the next session of the legislature in January, 1903, all questions relating to liquor legislation be re-examined and that such laws be enacted as will more effectually promote temperance."

Chamberlain In Connecticut

Hartford, Sept. 18.—Abiram Chamberlain of Meriden was nominated yesterday by the Connecticut Republican convention as a candidate for governor, to succeed Governor McLean, who, on account of ill health, had declined to be a candidate for another term. Chamberlain was opposed for the nomination by Livingston W. Cleaveland of New Haven. Resolutions endorsing the administration of President Roosevelt and favoring his nomination for the presidency in 1904 were adopted.

Rhode Island Prohibitionists

Providence, Sept. 18.—The Prohibition convention here yesterday nominated the following officers: For governor, W. B. Brightman, Tiverton; lieutenant governor, E. A. Aldrich, East Providence; secretary of state, W. G. Lawton, Cranston; attorney general, J. A. Williams, Providence; treasurer, J. W. P. King, Charlestown. Rev. E. G. Wesley of this city was nominated for congress by the First district convention and Henry D. Dexter of Pawtucket by the Second district convention.

Military Guard For Railway

Glens Falls, N. Y., Sept. 18.—Sheriff Gill, deeming his force of deputies insufficient to guard the Hudson Valley Railway company's property, called upon Captain Mott of the National Guard for aid. Mott responded promptly and the property of the railroad company is in the hands of the sheriff and is picketed by national guardsmen. A car was started yesterday, but it left the tracks and efforts to replace it by employes were frustrated. One of the new non-union men was struck in the head with a stone and severely injured. Several encounters between strikers and soldiers and deputies occurred and several warrants have been issued.

Turkey May Yield to Russia

Constantinople, Sept. 18.—A ministerial document has been issued suggesting that the demand made by Russia that four unarmed Russian torpedo boats be allowed to pass through the Dardanelles may be permitted under certain reservations. Russia has represented that the czar merely wishes to inspect the torpedo boats in question during his forthcoming visit to Livadia, and that he promises not to regard the case as a precedent.

Wife Not Mentioned In Will

New York, Sept. 18.—The will of the late Bradford B. McGregor of the Standard Oil company, who died Sept. 7, after an operation, and who married Miss Clara Schlemmer a few hours before he submitted to the surgeon's knife, was filed yesterday. It was reported that he had left a large fortune in Standard Oil shares to his wife, but she is not mentioned in the will. His mother is the heir to the bulk of the property.

Receivers For Bicycle Concern

Chicago, Sept. 18.—The American Cycle Manufacturing company, owner of the largest bicycle factory in Chicago, was placed in the hands of receivers yesterday on the application of Attorney Towle, who explained that the concern had lost credit through the recent appointment of receivers for the American Bicycle company. The company has a paid up capital of $8,000,000.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. For sale by all Druggist.

THE CRISIS IS REACHED

On the Question of Tariff and the Trusts

HENDERSON'S WITHDRAWAL

Emphasizes the Difference of Opinion That Exists In the West and Strikes a Damaging Blow to His Party—Request For Consideration Refused

Dubuque, Ia., Sept. 18.—The following is the telegram received yesterday by Speaker Henderson from the president:

"Most earnestly ask that you reconsider your determination not to run."

Congressman Babcock, chairman of the Republican national committee, sent the following:

"Am in receipt of telegram signed by you saying that you have this day declined nomination for congress. We cannot believe the telegram is genuine. Hepburn and Hull are here and all entertain our earnest protest against action of this kind by you. The Republican party that you have served so long and faithfully cannot part with your service now."

Replying to these telegrams the speaker further explained his action, adhering to his position. He gave positive assurance that there was no danger to the third district; that Governor Boise is a very weak candidate; that the Republican candidate will be elected; that he will do what he can to insure his election. After these assurances the speaker said he must decline to reconsider his withdrawal.

Washington, Sept. 18.—Speaker Henderson's withdrawal from congress because he is not in accord with the revision views of his constituents, it is agreed, brings to a crisis the question of tariff and the trusts. Whatever may be the final outcome of Speaker Henderson's sensational withdrawal—and of that Washington predictions are still mysteriously in the dark—everybody agrees that he has struck his party a most damaging blow at a critical moment.

He has emphasized the differences of opinion that undoubtedly exist in the west as to the tariff and has advertised them before the country. He has exaggerated the cleavage which was beginning to appear, and made it conspicuous, to the delight of the Democrats and the consternation of his party associates, whether they happen to take his view or that of the Iowa platform in its opposition to the continuance of tariff rates which "afford a shelter to monopoly." He has made the contest for congress more difficult for every man in a close district throughout the north.

Such a step is especially surprising when made by a man whose life-long capital has been partisan loyalty. "The Republican party, right or wrong," has in effect been his exclamation at every issue raised in the 20 years of his congressional service. He changed from opposition to Cuban reciprocity to vigorous advocacy at the behest of his party. He was especially vigorous in denouncing those of his associates who were not willing to reverse their attitude on the "plain duty to Porto Rico" proposal, when such a reversal had become the party program. That a man who has so steadfastly preached party loyalty should strike so recklessly in the face of Republican prospects has created anything but good feelings among his associates.

Littlefield a Candidate For Speaker

Boston, Sept. 18.—Congressman Charles E. Littlefield of Maine yesterday informed The Globe that he would be a candidate for the speakership of the national house, in the event of Speaker Henderson persisting in his refusal to accept the nomination from the Third congressional district of Iowa. Congressman Littlefield is visiting in Somerville, and will leave today for Pittsburg.

More Ships In Morgan Combine

London, Sept. 18.—The Norfolk and North American Steam Shipping company, owing nine large steamers trading between England and the United States in connection with the Lehigh Valley and Reading railroads, is said to have been taken over by the Morgan shipping combine. The report has created a sensation in local shipping circles.

Nova Scotia's Oldest Resident Dead

CHRISTIANS IN CHINA

Contribute Toward Complicating Bad Situation Created by Boxers

London, Sept. 18.—Cabling from Shanghai, the correspondent of The Daily Mail says that Cheng-Tu-Fu, capital of the province of Sze-Chuen, is surrounded by 50,000 Boxers, but that their attempts to take the city have so far failed. Without immediate help, however, Cheng-Tu-Fu must fall.

"A prominent Chinese merchant tells me," continues the correspondent, "that if Cheng-Tu-Fu is taken a rising in the provinces is inevitable. To further complicate matters the feuds between Protestant and Catholic converts are now worse than at any previous stage, and magisterial jurisdiction in various matters has been unwarrantably interfered with by priests and missionaries."

Fair Warning to Poachers

London, Sept. 18.—The Odessa correspondent of The Standard says the Russian government has taken effective measures for the suppression of the systematic poaching operations of Americans and Japanese among the seal and other sea animals in Russian waters. The government now gives formal notice that poachers captured within the limits of Russia's maritime jurisdiction on the Siberian coast will be liable to three months' imprisonment and their ships and cargoes to confiscation. This order will be enforced by three fast gunboats.

Governor Sees Watering Device

Des Moines, Sept. 18.—Attorney General Mullan, in an opinion filed with Governor Cummins yesterday, holds that the acts of the new Iowa corporation in connection with the Rock Island reorganization are not contrary to public policy in the legal sense of the term. Governor Cummins concurs in the opinion from a legal viewpoint, but adds: "The thing done is neither a merger nor a consolidation. Not a mile of track nor a dollar in value is added to the Rock Island property. It is simply a new device for watering securities."

Doggie Dressed In Baby Clothing

London, Sept. 18.—A smartly dressed young woman landed at Dover yesterday from the Ostend steamer, carrying in her arms what was ostensibly a baby in long clothes. As the young woman was passing the customs officials the "baby" barked, and an investigation disclosed the supposed infant was in reality a valuable dog, which the woman was endeavoring to smuggle in contravention to strict English laws. The animal, which had been unsuccessfully drugged, was sent back to Belgium.

Sand In La Soufriere's Crater

Kingstown, B. W. I., Sept. 18.—Both craters of LaSoufriere have been active since Sept. 11. Two natives named Cummings and Adams ventured to ascend the volcano yesterday and reached the summit of the old crater. On Sept. 3 this crater contained water, but now is is nearly filled with sand and has a funnel-shaped cavity in the centre. Cummings and Adams saw flames rising from three distinct places in the crater. They experienced a narrow escape.

Nebraska Desperado Caught

Pierce, Neb., Sept. 18.—Two citizens of Winside yesterday discovered Niegenfind, the Pierce county murderer, in a cornfield near town. He resisted arrest and was shot. Physicians believe he is not fatally hurt. Niegenfind, a week ago, killed his divorced wife and her father and wounded his mother-in-law and his sister-in-law. He escaped and sent word he would finish the rest of the family before he was done.

Engineers Want $125 a Month

New York, Sept. 18.—Formal demands for higher wages were received yesterday by the officials of nearly every ferry company doing business in this harbor. The demands were made by the local union of steamboat engineers. The engineers want a 25 per cent increase on Oct. 1, which, if granted, would make their wages $125 a month. The officials say that the demands will be considered.

Speed Fixed at Eighteen Knots

Washington, Sept. 18.—The official report of the trial of the battleship Maine has been received at the navy department. Her uncorrected speed was 17.96. Her tidal allowances brought the speed up to 17.98, but the board found other conditions which warranted it in fixing her speed at 18 knots, which is her contract speed.

Almost a Lynching

Jersey City, N. J., Sept. 18.—William D. Grady, a clerk in the postoffice here, shot his wife on the street yesterday. She is probably fatally wounded. Grady had a narrow escape from lynching at the hands of some workmen who witnessed the shooting. The couple had been living apart for the last three years.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Friday, Sept. 19.
Sun rises—5:27; sets—5:48.
Moon rises—6:48 p. m.
High water—12 m.; 12:15 p. m.

Much cloudiness prevails in the northern sections, with occasional showers in parts of the upper valleys. The weather is fair elsewhere, although unsettled in the west and the southwest. It will be partly cloudy in New England, probably followed by rain.

Good Afternoon.

Will the Old Colony have electric cars enough for the launching on Saturday?

We have received from Mr. G. B. Bates quite a lengthy spicy article, asking the Mayor some important questions, which will appear in our Saturday edition.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Among the corporations recently formed in Maine is the Sunshine Company. There is a deal of moonshine about the average Maine corporation, although the fact is not paraded in its title.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞Nothing has curdled the mugwump cream for a long time equal to the appointment of George Fred Williams as Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions of the Democratic State convention. It has caused that amphibious element to make some frightful grimaces.—Lynn Item.

☞One of the meanest and most contemptible things in the world is a two-faced man. He is a liar, a thief and a coward, these things being only the natural adjuncts to his ruling passion. He can stir up more dissension, provoke more disorder and create more ill feeling in ten minutes than can be remedied in ten years. He belongs in the same category with the gossiper, the scandalmonger and the talebearer, and they all belong in the nether clime.—Karnes County, Texas, News.

☞It is urged that President Roosevelt's views on trusts are "largely academic," since the chief remedy he proposes could not be carried out for years. That, however, is no reason for not considering his proposition. Everything has to go through an "academic" stage, if that is academic. Plans and policies have to be discussed a long time before they get into the domain of the practical.—New Bedford Standard.

No Further Postponement.

The case of John M. Fisher and Fred E. Betts, charged with using the United States mails in a scheme to defraud were to have come up for trial before Judge Lowell in the district court, Wednesday, but the court being busy in trying another case, the Fisher-Betts cases were put off until next Tuesday.

Betts and Fisher were arrested about a year ago, says the Herald, and while their cases have been postponed from time to time, it is believed that next Tuesday will surely see the beginning of the trial.

Cruiser Des Moines to be Launched Saturday.

First Warship Built in Quincy.

Everybody Invited, the More the Merrier.

The Fore River company wish it understood that the launching of the United States cruiser Des Moines at Quincy on Saturday is going to be open to all, and that the more who come the merrier. Later, the Ledger will have an illustrated story of the cruiser, and the launching.

The arrangements for the launching of the United States protected cruiser Des Moines at the yard of the Fore River Ship & Engine Company at Quincy, Mass., September 20, are as follows:

The cruiser will be launched at flood tide, 12.30 M.

Miss Elsie Macomber of Des Moines, selected by Governor Cummins of Iowa and Mayor Brenton of Des Moines, to christen the vessel, by breaking a bottle of American champagne across her bow; Mrs. Cummins is coming East especially to chaperon her.

Miss Clara N. Carleton of Haverhill, chosen by Secretary of the Navy Moody, to release the vessel on the ways as official representative of Massachusetts, by severing with a hatchet made from the steel and mahogany used in the cruiser's construction, the cord that holds the last block under the keel in place.

Miss Macomber is the daughter of J. K. Macomber, lawyer. Her gown is to be of white broadcloth and she is to wear a white picture hat. The silver casing of the champagne bottle and the hatchet were made by Tiffany.

Miss Carleton is the daughter of Hon. George H. Carleton of Haverhill, banker, ex-mayor, former member of the Massachusetts legislature. She is to wear a blue broadcloth gown with black picture hat.

The party on the christening stand to include Governor Albert B. Cummins and Mrs. Cummins, Mayor James Brenton of Des Moines, and 50 men and women prominent officially, socially, and in business life in Iowa; high officials of the state of Massachusetts; of the city of Boston and other cities about Quincy; Rear Admiral Charles O'Neal, chief of the Bureau of Ordinance, U. S. N., and several other representatives of the Navy department; officers from the Portsmouth and Boston navy yards; officers of the United States army from the fortifications in Boston Harbor; Commander William Hovgaard, Royal Danish Navy, and Gen. William Draper of Hopedale, Mass.

The make-up of the Iowa party, as announced, to be as follows: Governor Albert B. Cummins and Mrs. Cummins; State Treasurer G. C. Gilbertson, State Secretary W. B. Martin; State Auditor F. A. Merriam and Mrs. Merriam; Brigadier General M. H. Byers; Colonel John R. Prime; Colonel John C. Loper; Colonel C. S. Saunders; Colonel J. B. Santee; Colonel Charles E. Mitchell; Colonel Walter M. Davis; Colonel Robert M. Bigelow and Major Joe Beeson of the Governor's staff, Governor's Secretary John Brier and Mrs. Brier, Miss Ann Cummins, Mrs. Mitchell, Mrs. Santee, Mrs. Bigelow, Mrs. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. S. X. Way, Mrs. W. J. Pratt, Mrs. P. J. Durley, Miss Irene Roberts, Mayor James Brenton, B. O. Hanger and F. Brackett of the Des Moines city government.

The launching party and special guests to be taken from Boston to Quincy on special train at 10.30 A. M. and driven from Quincy to the Fore River works.

The Fore River company purposes to entertain the party from Iowa and the launching party before the ceremony, after which a launching luncheon is to be served.

Fines Aggregate $35.

Thomas McCarthy, formerly of Quincy, was in court this morning to answer to three complaints. Two of these were held by Weymouth officers. and one by Quincy officers. The fines imposed aggregated $35, and as McCarthy had no money he will work it out at the county institution at Dedham.

McCarthy was arrested at Weymouth by Chief Fitzgerald early this morning. The evidence was that McCarthy visited the house of his father-in-law while under the influence of liquor and smashed in the door. Once inside, McCarthy smashed the dining room table, tea pot and other kitchen paraphernalia, and was making things interesting when the police arrived. McCarthy was arrested in Quincy, April 17, for drunkenness and was fined $3, and was given two weeks to raise the money. That was the last seen of him until his arrest.

Masonic Visitation.

There was a large attendence at the meeting of the Wollaston lodge, A. F. and A. M., on Tuesday evening. District deputy A. G. Boyden, vice principal of the Bridgewater Normal School, and his suite, visited the lodge and complimented it on its excellent work and fine record for the past year.

ACCIDENTAL?

The jury returned a verdict of accidental death on the man who fell from the window ledge on which he had fallen asleep. But the death was really due to carelessness which made the accident possible.

There are a great many lives suddenly terminated as a result of carelessness, although the medical certificate may read "heart failure." When a man takes chances with his stomach and neglects the warning symptoms of disease, he is carelessly inviting calamity.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food, which makes strength. It stimulates the liver, cures biliousness, and removes bilious impurities from the blood.

"I had been troubled with a pain in lower part of my stomach for three years, so severe I thought it would kill me in time," writes Mr. Aaron Van Dam, of (Kensington) 2549 119th St., Chicago, Ill. "I could hardly work; it felt like a big weight hanging on me and got so bad that I had to take medicine. I used Stomach Bitters for a time, but it did no good so I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce for advice, which he gave me immediately. I followed his directions; used two bottles of his medicine and was cured. I had a torpid liver which was troubling me instead of cramps (as I thought), so Dr. Pierce told me. I have pleasure in living now; have gained in weight 15 pounds since then."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. They do not beget the pill habit.

MILTON.

Dr. Robinson of Brackett street was united in marriage Wednesday evening to a popular young lady of Natick. A number of his East Milton friends attended the reception.

Four alarms of fire Monday afternoon between the hours of 3 and 10 kept the firemen on the move. The first fire, which was the most disastrous, was the old Hinckley homestead owned by James Russell. The building was badly gutted. The second alarm was for a brush fire. The third a Boston call, and the fourth a small wooden building at Mattapan.

The driver of White's milk wagon from Braintree met with a painful accident Monday morning on Adams street. He started to jump onto his team when he slipped and in falling fractured his collar bone, and cut his face. He was carried to Dr. Gilchrist's office and then removed home.

E. P. Bowditch, who owns a large estate boardering on the boulevard, is to build a number of houses. Water and sewer pipes have been run through the property and it will be a desirable residential section.

The old Dustin house is being remodeled.

The morning service and Sunday school of the Mission of Our Saviour church will be resumed in October.

MODERN DOUBLE HOUSE.

Two Family Residence Costing Not More Than $2,600.

[Copyright, 1902, by Dennis & Gastmeyer 280 Broadway, New York.]

Herewith is shown the design of a house arranged for two families, but on the one family plan and possessing all the exterior appearance of a one family house.

The lines of the design are sufficiently broken to give it an attractive outline.

The underpinning is built of brick laid in a neat manner.

The exterior framework is sheathed, then covered with building paper and then with clapboards. The roof is covered with cedar shingles, as are also the dormer windows.

The interior walls are given two generous coats of patent plaster, and the trimmings are all of cypress.

The house is heated with two hot air furnaces and piped throughout for gas.

There are two large bathrooms, which contain full sanitary plumbing fixtures with nickel trimmings, as do the kitchens also.

The body of the house is painted a colonial yellow, while the trimmings are white. The roof shingles are dipped in moss green shingle stain before being laid.

SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

The hardware throughout is of bronze, and the house has a number of leaded glass windows.

This house will cost complete, as above described, $2,600.

Architectural Art.

How about an American style? Is such a thing discernible through the apparent chaos of varied local requirements and practice and individual idiosyncrasies? Surely not, if by "style" we mean a certain definite and uniform combination of unvarying details. If by "style" we mean distinguishing character, we have a style or styles which clearly set off American work from English, French or German work, however varied its decorative details may be. In every line of design the American type is clearly marked. American country houses, from the smallest shingled seaside cottage to the largest colonial mansion at Lenox, are distinctively American by reason of characteristics which are not found in any European type.—Professor A. D. F. Hamlin in Forum.

The Best Homes.

The best homes are not always built in cities and towns where numerous architects may be found to execute plans to the order of the intending builder. By the "best" homes is not meant those of most pretense or costly construction, but those which are best adapted to the purposes for which they are intended, says a writer in American Homes. Generally speaking, those which are designed for persons at a distance from populous centers call for and receive more careful consideration in planning, because they embody all the owner can afford to expend for such purpose and must be made to conform to ideas to which the family have given many months, perhaps years, of consideration and which they can ill afford to be mistaken in.

Less Meat; Better Health.

"All physicians are agreed that, on the whole, we in this country eat too much meat, and to this fact is due much of the rheumatism and gout from which we people suffer, as well as some more serious and fatal constitutional diseases. The average health and longevity of our people would be improved and increased by the substitution of a vegetable and cereal diet for a portion of the meat which they are in the daily habit of consuming."—DR. BENJAMIN LEE, Sec'y Pennsylvania State Board of Health.

Breach of Contract.

A dispatch from Portland, Me., to the Globe says: Frank H. Putnam of Wollaston, Mass., was here Wednesday collecting evidence to be used in a novel suit he is about to bring against the Boston & Maine railroad for alleged breach of contract.

Last Sunday evening, with his wife and her sister, Mr. Putnam left Boston on the 7 o'clock train. He claims that the train was overcrowded, and that the conductor, although requested to find seats for them, could not do so.

Mrs. Putnam, it is claimed, was forced to stand until they reached Portsmouth, and Mr. Putnam did not get a seat until the train reached Biddeford.

Mr. Putnam claims that having bought tickets they had a right to seats and that the company had no right to take his money and then decline to live up to its implied contract to furnish a seat with every ticket sold.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Fountain Green Removed.

Some months ago the City Council passed an order which when carried out, would remove that green plot near the fountain in City Square and make that space part of the street. Nothing, however, has been done toward carrying out the provisions of the order until this morning, when the low wooden fence was removed and teams commenced to carry away the loam.

—Artificial flowers were unknown to the ancient civilized nations of Europe. They are first mentioned in Italy in the 14th century, but in China they were known at an earlier date.

—Chilean papers state that two days prior to the latest earthquake in the bay of Payta thousands of crabs of an unknown kind crawled on shore. They were all greatly excited, as if escaping from an enemy.

HOT PORKERS.

Served Up to Teachers of Bethany Bible School.

A reunion of the past and present Sunday school teachers of the Bethany church was held Wednesday evening. Upwards of eighty-five were present, including several of the teachers of years ago. It was a most happy gathering and one of the most successful meetings of teachers ever held at this church.

At 6 o'clock an informal social was held in the ladies' parlor, and half an hour later an adjournment was made to the dining room, and seats taken about the tables upon which were three steaming hot porkers.

Supt. Branch, who presided, introduced Miss Hattie Sargent who read Lamb's essay on "Roast Pig." Meanwhile Rev. Edwin N. Hardy, W. E. Blanchard and Supt. Branch were busy carving the little fellows. That the supper was an enjoyable one goes without saying.

This part of the program over, Supt. Branch welcomed those present, and introduced as the first speaker Rev. Mr. Webster of Jamaica Plain. He was followed by Rev. Edward Norton and Charles S. Bates, president of the Congregational Sunday School Superintendents' Union, and treasurer of the Massachusetts Sunday School association.

Rev. Edwin N. Hardy was on the list for a few remarks, but he was called away before his name was reached. The theme of all the speakers was Sunday school work, and were exceedingly interesting.

Exasperating.

Mrs. Wadsleigh—Oh, dear!

Mrs. Gadsum—What's the trouble?

Mrs. Wadsleigh—I'm so unlucky. My old nurse has left me, and the new one I have is so unreliable that I don't feel at all easy in my mind unless I see the children at least two or three times a week. It's so exasperating!—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Major—Not all, madam; not all. I am still in the bachelor ranks.—Exchange.

The Voice of Experience.

Singleton—The woman I marry must be an ideal housekeeper.

Wederly (with a sigh)—Take my tip, old man, and freeze on to a practical one.—Chicago News.

Worldly Wisdom.

Father—In choosing a wife one should never judge by appearances.

A Snake Story From India.

A queer story of the cure of a snake bite comes from India. A young man bitten by a venomous snake was evidently dying. The moh called in resolved to try the most powerful remedy he knew. He tied a cowrie shell on to a piece of string and muttered incantations till it began to whirl round and round and finally disappeared. In a few minutes the snake that had done the damage appeared with the string and shell round its neck and was commanded by the moh to put its mouth to the wound for about ten minutes, after which it went away. The dying man speedily recovered.

The British Seas.

The seas around the coast of the British isles are mostly narrow. The greatest width of the English channel is between Portland Bill and St. Malo, 140 miles. It narrows to 20¼ miles at one point in the strait of Dover. The distance between Great Britain and Ireland is even less. Tor Head is only twelve miles from the nearest point of the Mull of Cantire. Between Carnsore Point and St. David's Head, in Wales, forty-seven miles is the least breadth of water.

Well Guarded.

"That's a handsome office clock of yours. Aren't you afraid it'll be stolen?"

"Never. Why, every clerk in my employ has one eye on it all day."—New York World.

President Won't Discuss It

Oyster Bay, L. I., Sept. 18.—The president declines to say anything whatever on the subject of the declination of Speaker Henderson to accept the renomination to congress. He has consistently refused the requests of newspaper men for an expression from him bearing on the subject.

Legislation Which Was Needed

Sydney, N. S. W., Sept. 18.—The suffering in New South Wales attendant upon the recent droughts has resulted in the passage through parliament of a bill appropriating $1,000,000 a year for five years to be expended in the conservation of water and the irrigation of the country districts.

Granite Cutters' Complaint

Philadelphia, Sept. 18.—The granite cutters employed in the erection of a new building at the League Island navy yard were yesterday ordered on strike. The union claims that the stone used in the building comes from quarries in North Carolina which have been placed on the "unfair" list.

Another Victory For Gans

Baltimore, Sept. 18.—Joe Gans, the lightweight champion, knocked out Gus Gardner here last night in the fifth round of their 20-round bout. Both men had trained hard for the bout and were in prime condition, but they fought at 138 pounds, out of the lightweight class.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The first jury ever empanelled in the San Juan, P. R., district court under the new code convicted Pedro Torres of manslaughter. He was sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment.

An order has been published at Havana placing a duty of $2 a head on cattle imported for other than breeding purposes.

The governments of France and the United States have agreed to an extension of one year from Sept. 24 of the time limit for the ratification of the commercial convention between the two countries of July 27, 1899.

The unveiling of two memorials and the selection of a site of a new $10,000 monument on the Antietam battlefield marked the 40th anniversary of the battle of Antietam.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

A CRAZY MAN'S DOINGS

Shoots Judge and Selectman and Then Ends His Own Life

Essex, Conn., Sept. 18.—David Hayden, an insane veteran of the Civil war, stopped Judge Thomas D. Coulter on the street yesterday afternoon and asked if the judge had a grudge against him. Coulter laughingly replied no, whereupon Hayden drew a revolver and fired twice. One bullet entered directly below Coulter's heart and another in the side. Coulter attempted to disarm the man and in the struggle the revolver was discharged and a third bullet entered Coulter's hand. He succeeded in getting the revolver, however, and Hayden fled.

Selectman Pratt witnessed part of the affair and gave chase, but Hayden gained on him rapidly and ran to his house, where he procured a shotgun and shot his pursuer just over the heart as he attempted to enter the yard.

Hayden then re-entered the house and became involved in a quarrel with his sister Elizabeth. The latter ran into the street, calling for assistance. A moment later the report of a gun was heard in the rear of the house and when the crowd which had collected ran into the back yard they found Hayden on the ground with the top of his head blown off. On the ground beside him was the shotgun with which he had wounded Pratt and then ended his own life.

Pratt and Coulter were taken to the Memorial hospital in New London. They are both probably fatally wounded.

Hayden was dishonorably discharged from the navy in 1861 and has tried repeatedly to get a pension. He has always been refused and blamed any one who refused to take up his case. This is the only reason that can be advanced for the shooting.

Newport's Automobile Law

Newport, R. I., Sept. 18.—That the automobilists of the city are determined to make a stand against frequent arrests and require proof of the charges of excessive speed was shown yesterday when Chauffeur Blum, employed by W. W. Sherman, pleaded not guilty to fast running and appealed. Blum was arrested on a warrant charging him with running his machine over six miles an hour.

American Methods the Best

Boston, Sept. 18.—Henry Van Liew, George Clark, and George S. Abbott, three of the leading shoe men of England, are here to study the methods of American shoe manufacturers. Mr. Abbott, in an interview, said: "In the long run the so-called American invasion and American competition will be beneficial to England. It will compel our manufacturers and workmen to be up to date."

Black Diphtheria In Maine Town

Buxton, Me., Sept. 18.—A 9-year-old son of Warren Haley and the 7-year-old daughter of Edwin Thompson died here yesterday and the physicians pronounced the disease to be black diphtheria. The children have been attending school and mingling with other children and a spread is feared.

York County to Be Dry

Biddeford, Me., Sept. 18.—All the saloons in this city were closed yesterday, through the activity of Sheriff Fogg's deputies. Sheriff Fogg was reelected by a narrow majority in the recent contest in York county.

Too Much Clubbing by Police

New York, Sept. 18.—Mayor Low yesterday took further action on the recent riot at the funeral of Rabbi Joseph. He sent all the papers in the case to District Attorney Jerome, asking him to take such action as seemed called for. Mayor Low also sent the report of his special committee, appointed to investigate the riot, to Police Commissioner Patridge, calling special attention to a paragraph in the committee's report which says that clubbing of citizens by the police is of too frequent occurrence. Partridge is asked to proceed with the trial of the officers concerned with all due diligence.

Whacking at British Navy

London, Sept. 18.—Nothing daunted by his recently conferred knighthood, Sir William Allan, M. P., addressing the Gateshead Liberals yesterday, described the British navy as a phantom fleet with a skeleton crew. He declared the navy was short 14,000 firemen, 2000 engine room artificers and 900 engineers. He said the admiralty was a gigantic muddle and that its old conservative system needed reformation.

Perhaps Beyond Repair

Havana, Sept. 18.—While workmen were raising the end of the floating drydock, which formerly belonged to Spain, yesterday afternoon, the strain caused the dock to break amidships. One of the boilers exploded and injured a workman. The break is thought to be irreparable. The dock is now the property of the United States, and it has been undergoing repairs for several months past.

Root Returns to His Desk

Washington, Sept. 18.—Secretary of War Root returned to Washington last night after his trip to Carlsbad. The secretary looks rugged and says he is in splendid health. He resumed charge of affairs at the war department today. Secretary Root expects to deliver a political speech at Peoria, Ills., Sept. 24, opening the Republican campaign in that state.

Soldiers In Railroad Wreck

Little Rock, Sept. 18.—A special train carrying two companies of infantry stationed at Fort Logan collided with a freight train near here yesterday. Two of the freight crew were killed. The trains ran together head-on on a curve and the soldiers were badly shaken up and several of them injured.

WOULD PROD ROUMANIA

Secretary Hay Sends a Note to European Powers

THE PERSECUTION OF JEWS

Should Be Checked In the Name of Humanity as Well as For Prevention of Immigration of Pauperized Class Into the United States

Washington, Sept. 18.—With the double purpose of protecting the long-suffering Jews of the Balkan states and of averting the very present peril of the immigration into the United States of a horde of paupers, Secretary Hay has adopted the unusual course of appealing to the powers of Europe to force one of their children to observe the obligations of humanity in case of the Jews. The appeal takes the form of a state paper, which has been dispatched in identical form to each ambassador and minister of the United States residing in Great Britain, France, Germany, Russia, Italy, Austria and Turkey. As these powers are responsible for the existence of Roumania, the culprit in this case, the secretary of state has directed the note to them in the hope that they will bring Roumania to a sense of its duties towards civilization at large as well as to cause it to ameliorate the frightful condition of the Roumanian Jews.

Secretary Hay's document says in part: "The United States welcomes the voluntary immigration of all aliens coming hither under considerations befitting them to become merged in the body politic of this land. The pauper, the criminal, the contagiously or incurably diseased are excluded from the benefits of immigration only when they are likely to become a burden upon the community. The voluntary character of their coming is essential; hence we shut out all immigration assisted or constrained by foreign agencies.

"The condition of a large class of the inhabitants of Roumania has for many years been a course of grave concern to the United States. I refer to the Roumanian Jews, numbering some 400,000. The persecution of the indigenous Jews under Turkish rule called forth in 1872 the strong remonstrance of the United States. The treaty of Berlin was hailed as a cure for the wrong, prescribing, as it did, that in Roumania the difference of religious creeds and confessions shall not be alleged against any person as a ground for exclusion or incapacity in matters relating to the enjoyment of civil and political rights.

"With the lapse of time these just prescriptions have been rendered nugatory in great part, as regards the native Jews, by the legislation and municipal regulations of Roumania. The ability of the Jew to earn even the scanty means of existence that suffice for a frugal race has been constricted by degrees, until nearly every opportunity to win a livelihood is denied.

"Granting that, in better and more healthful surroundings, the morbid conditions will eventually change for good, such emigration is necessarily for a time a burden to the community upon which the fugitives may be cast. Jews possess in a high degree the mental and moral qualifications of conscientious citizenhood. But when they come as outcasts, their migration lacks the essential conditions which make alien immigration either acceptable or beneficial.

"Putting together the facts now painfully brought home to this government during the past few years, that many of the inhabitants of Roumania are being forced, by artificially adverse discriminations, to quit their native country; that the hospitable asylum offered by this country is almost the only refuge left to them; that they come hither unfitted, by the conditions of their exile, to take part in the new life of this land under circumstances either profitable to themselves or beneficial to the community; and that they are objects of charity from the outset, and for a long time—the right of remonstrances against the acts of the Roumanian government is clearly established in favor of this government.

Whether consciously and of purpose or not, these helpless people, burdened and spurned by their native land, are forced by the sovereign power of Roumania upon the charity of the United States. This government cannot be a tacit party to such an international wrong. It is constrained to protest against the treatment to which the Jews of Roumania are subjected, not alone because it has unimpeachable ground to remonstrate against the resultant injury to itself, but in the name of humanity."

Loss of $1,500,000 In Timber

Portland, Ore., Sept. 18.—Three townships have been burned over by forest fires along the Wilson river in Tillamook county, destroying timber estimated to be worth $1,500,000.

Old Enough to Know Better

Wyandotte, Mich., Sept. 18.—Charles Brooklyn, aged 85, attacked his aged wife with a butcher knife yesterday. He stabbed her 12 times and then plunged the knife into his own throat. Both will probably die.

Will Be No Discrimination

Chicago, Sept. 18.—Union labor won another victory in the packing house district yesterday when Swift & Co. agreed not to discriminate against members of the organizations in the employment of men.

MERE MEN.

President Roosevelt has still in his employ at Oyster Bay Alfred Davis, the old negro who drove Mr. Roosevelt to the polls when he cast his first vote.

Johann Gottfried Galle, who on Sept. 23, 1846, discovered the planet Neptune, is still living and recently celebrated his ninetieth birthday in Potsdam.

Dr. Henry M. Field, who is now in his eighty-first year, is the sole survivor of the famous Field brothers, which included David Dudley, Cyrus and Judge Stephen Field.

Sergeant James Condon is the oldest enlisted man in the United States army, having served from Nov. 7, 1838, to May 7, 1885, when he went on the retired list. He served in Florida, Mexico and in the civil war.

Shortly after the present James Gordon Bennett was born in 1842 his father started the Sunday edition of the New York Herald, at the same time announcing "James Gordon Bennett, Jr.," as editor.

Henry Martin, the distinguished janitor of the University of Virginia, has made a most gracious acknowledgment of the gift of a suit of clothes from the board of visitors. Henry is an institution of the university, having held the position for fifty-four years.

According to the St. James Gazette, the knighthood conferred upon the Hon. Michael Henry Herbert, British embassador to the United States, is preliminary to a peerage, which, it is declared, is sure to follow if all goes well at the British embassy at Washington.

Sir Hiram Maxim, who is slowly recovering from an attack of bronchitis and has gone to the south of France for a course of special treatment at one of the baths, cables the St. Louis fair managers that he expects to get his flying machine to soaring in time for the world's fair.

The late John W. Mackay was one of the best expert gold and silver prospectors in the United States. In the early days on the coast he was quite famous for his abilities along this line and, while unable to find "paying leads" for himself, made a living by giving expert opinions upon other people's claims.

FLIPPANT FLINGS.

When it comes to a question of supremacy, wheat acknowledges the corn.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A machine that will lay brick as fast as six or seven men has been invented, but we shall still continue to get our eggs in the same old homely way.—New York Press.

The Pullman company has raised the wages of its conductors. The traveling public, however, will continue to raise the wages of its porters.—New York Mail and Express.

Russia has demanded $4,200,000 from Turkey as indemnity for damage done during the Russo-Turkish war. It is a lonely day when the bill collector does not call on the sultan.—Washington Star.

The Philadelphia Press publishes what purports to be a picture of St. Peter recently discovered. Just now St. Peter can't help himself, but if the editor of the Press ever knocks at the pearly gates he will have his innings.—Florida Times-Union.

BETWEEN HEATS.

Silver Sign, 2:10¾, is earning an enviable reputation as a fast and game trotter.

There is talk in California of a match race between Bonnie Direct, 2:05¼, and Miss Logan, 2:06½.

Dr. W. J. Hinman of Winnipeg, Manitoba, bought Harold H., 2:04, paying the reported price of $6,000.

Crescent, 2:14¼, in Dan Burge's string at Indianapolis, has taken to pacing and is going fast at the gait.

Effie Logan, dam of that sensational pacer Sir Albert S., 2:08¾, is now owned in Honolulu, but is to be sent back to the states to be bred again to Diablo, 2:09¼.

It is said that the well known Pacific coast stallion and sire Boodle, 2:12½, by Stranger, is again in training. He is sixteen, and his record is of seven years' standing.

THRONE LIGHTS.

The czar of Russia has been taking lessons in painting to amuse his leisure and is reported to have developed quite a talent in this direction.

It is officially announced that Queen Wilhelmina's stay at Schaumburg has had a very beneficial influence on her health, but precautions still have to be observed.

The late king of Saxony, who had a rooted obection to exchanging his old clothes for new ones, is said to have one day sighed for "the good time the old knights had in their armor. They were troubled with no creases."

The crown prince of Germany has developed into an automobile expert. He knows every piece of the machine, and the other day when his automobile broke down the prince himself alighted and repaired the damage.

BITS OF PHILOSOPHY.

If we struggled half as hard to keep down expenses as we do to keep up appearances, we would soon have a bank account.

This little item of "common sense" which we hear so much about as being necessary in the affairs of life is not so common after all.

Some men are so rushed in this world that if they were to die tonight they would want to come downtown in the morning and work until the hour set for the funeral.—American Thresherman.

PEARY'S HUNT FOR POLE

Would Be Successful If He Had Ample Means

HIS PARTY IN GOOD HEALTH

After Their Sojourn In the Frozen North For Four Years—Brings Outfit Abandoned by Greely Expedition and Specimens of Natural History

North Sydney, C. B., Sept. 19.—Lieutenant Commander Robert E. Peary arrived here yesterday on the steamer Windward from the frozen north. He did not discover the North Pole during his trip of four years, but he says that in his last dash, with that object in view, he made important discoveries. He says he feels certain that the pole can be reached and furthermore, that if he were a man of independent means, he would persevere until he succeeded.

The most northerly point reached was 84 degrees 17 minutes in latitude, northwest of Cape Hecla and north of Greenwell Land. Lieutenant Peary says that the pole can be reached from Franz Josef Land, and from Grant Land in latitude 83 degrees, if the winter quarters is established as far north as possible. He says that he would just as soon winter at Cape Hecla as at Sabine or Etah.

On board the Windward also was Mrs. Peary, who is just recovering from a fortnight's illness, and who is glad in reaching land once more. She is expected to recuperate quickly on proceeding to more congenial climes. Little Marie Peary and others of the party are in good health. Lieutenant Peary is recovering from an accident to one of his legs, from which he suffered last winter. He is slightly lame, although this is not especially noticeable.

Neither Peary nor Dr. Dedrick would make a statement pertaining to their reported quarrel some time ago. Members of the Windward's crew say that the two men had no intercourse whatever since the doctor was taken on board at Cape York, where he spent the winter. Dr. Dedrick leaves today for his home in New York.

The Windward has on board the instruments, chronometers and Arctic library abandoned by the Greely expedition, and numerous specimens of natural history, bear, musk ox, reindeer and walrus skins. The skeleton of a two-horned norwhal, a rare Arctic specimen, also living specimens of musk ox, walrus, Arctic hares and Eskimo dogs are on board. The anchor and chain lost by Erik last summer is on board.

Lieutenant Peary reports that the Fram, which has been mysteriously absent in the north three years, left Godhaven about Aug. 20, bound home. She has been in Soner sound, from whence it is understood explorations were made to the northwest. One death (a fireman) is reported since. Others on board said to be well. The little schooner Forget Me Not, which was caught in the ice at Cape Haven last year, is now on her way to St. John.

One of the most interesting pieces of news in connection with Peary's report is that in regard to the safety of Sverdrup and his ship, the Fram. Peary's statement that Sverdrup confined his attention to the west coast of Greenland will disappoint the promoters of his expedition, who only a few months ago expressed their firm belief that Captain Sverdrup had pushed around the north end of Greenland and was then somewhere on the east coast of the great island. The Norwegians proposed next spring to send a relief party to that coast.

The citizens of Sydney gave Lieutenant Peary a public reception in Alexandra hall last evening. Mayor Crow presided and presented to Lieutenant Peary an elaborate address commendatory of his work, to which the explorer made a brief response.

Lieutenant Peary has received an invitation from the Scottish Geographical society to visit Edinburgh and receive a gold medal, its highest honor. He has also been elected an honorary fellow of the National Geographical society, whose headquarters are at Washington.

Government Forces Beaten

Washington, Sept. 19.—A cablegram received in private sources here yesterday said that a naval battle between the Venezuelan government troops and the revolutionists is reported to have occurred off San Felix, on the Orinoco. The government vessels were defeated and the Venezuelan government, because of the defeat, is unable to establish and maintain an effective blockade of the Orinoco.

Salisbury Confined to Bed

London, Sept. 19.—The Times this morning says that Lord Salisbury, who at present is in Switzerland, is ill and confined to his bed. He has been touring the health resorts of southern Europe for several weeks. For some time past his health has been gradually failing and the announcement in The Times causes alarm.

Bank Official's Heavy Theft

Vienna, Sept. 19.—Edmund Jellinek, an official in the cashier's department of the Lenderbank, disappeared hurriedly from Vienna yesterday. It was discovered that he had defrauded the bank of $315,000 by falsifying checks. The money thus obtained was spent by Jellinek in speculation. He has not yet been apprehended.

To Use Skull For Evidence

New York, Sept. 19.—The drowning of Clarence Foster and Sarah Lawrence in Tiana Bay, L. I., early last summer, was again brought to public notice yesterday by the exhumation of the body of Clarence Foster. The skull was severed and then the other portion consigned once more to the grave. District Attorney Smith declined to state why the skull of Foster is wanted as evidence. Louis Disbrow is now in jail, charged with the killing of Foster.

Looking For Counterfeiting Plant

Chicago, Sept. 19.—Federal officials made a raid into "Little Italy" yesterday for the purpose of locating a gang of counterfeiters and their bogus coin plant. Four Italians were arrested and a number of spurious 10-cent pieces were found, but no trace of the plant was found. Italians were much surprised over the arrest of the alleged principal, Antonio D'Andrea and his wife. D'Andrea was once a priest.

Had $50,000 Worth of Plunder

New York, Sept. 19.—J. E. Weikman, a private of the marine corps at the Brooklyn navy yard, was arrested yesterday, accused of a series of robberies in the marine barracks. A trunk said to be Weikman's was examined, and, it is alleged, jewelry, Chinese and Japanese coins, rare porcelain and a great variety of oriental goods were found in it, amounting to an estimated value of $50,000.

Merchants Suffer From Fire

Boston, Sept. 19.—Fire broke out this morning in the 3½-story brick building at the corner of Fulton and Cross streets, in the market district, and two alarms brought a score of engines to the scene. Although the blaze appeared to be threatening, it is believed that the total loss will not exceed $8000. The building was occupied by provision and produce dealers.

Postoffice Building Wrecked

Minot, N. D., Sept. 19.—The postoffice building here collapsed yesterday and is a total wreck. County Treasurer Lynch and N. Davis, an attorney, were seriously injured, and about 15 people who were in the building at the time of the collapse are believed to be buried in the ruins. The offices of two weekly papers were in the building and went down with the wreck.

Charged With Wife Murder

Great Barrington, Mass., Sept. 19.—Judge Safford yesterday held George Huber for the grand jury on a charge of murdering his wife. The tragedy occurred last Sunday at Monterey and was due to the apparent preference of Mrs. Huber for the company of Andrew C. Fearing. Fearing and Mrs. Huber had been living at Monterey three or four weeks.

Russian Troops to Withdraw

Pekin, Sept. 19.—Paul Lessar, the Russian minister, announces that Russia will restore southern Manchuria, to Liau river, and the new Chwang-Shan Hai Kwan railroad to the Chinese on Oct. 8. An earlier date, he says, is impossible on account of the destruction of a bridge which prevents the withdrawal of the troops.

Customs Inspectors Bounced

Washington, Sept. 19.—Secretary Shaw has approved the recommendation of the collector of customs at New York and ordered the dismissal of five customs inspectors charged with lax methods in the examination of baggage and accepting gratuities from incoming steamer passengers.

Forest Fire In Idaho

Washington, Sept. 19.—A new forest fire is reported in the official telegraphic advices to the interior department to be raging in the section of Idaho just west of the Yellowstone National park and about 15 miles north of St. Anthony.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. RETIREMENT IS GENUINE

Opinion at Washington In Regard to Henderson

GOSSIP AS TO HIS SUCCESSOR

Appears to Place Cannon of Illinois as the Man Likely to Be Chosen—Conservative on National Questions and Has a Very Strong Following

Washington, Sept. 18—It is regarded here as settled that Speaker Henderson is genuinely out of the race. The editorial of his home paper, the Dubuque Times, which has always been his personal organ, is especially significant. In fact Mr. Henderson seems to have burned his bridges behind him completely by the form in which he couched his declaration, and still more so in his address to the voters.

His friends here insisted that reconsideration would be the outcome, and that he would make the race on a platform "construing" the Iowa state declaration in such a way as to harmonize it wholly with his views. This prediction was so generally expressed in official circles that the evening newspapers practically announced this as the program. But it was evident then that he would have considerable trouble in getting anything like an unanimous vote in that district for any interpretation of the Iowa platform which would eliminate its tariff revision clauses.

Interest centres in the succession to the speakership, assuming that the Republicans are successful at the polls. It is even suggested that Colonel Henderson may retire from the speakership for the coming short session. It would be somewhat anomalous for him to retain the leadership of the house, with its tremendous responsibilities, after he had quitted the party battle in disgust in his own state. It is predicted that at least he will turn the chair over to speakers pro tem for most of the session. He might give the house a chance in this way to see whom it liked best as a presiding officer.

The general opinion here continues to point toward Mr. Cannon, who will be backed by the large delegation of Illinois. It has long been his ambition to round out his career in the speakership, and his hold on the house is very strong. He is extremely conservative by nature on the tariff and all other questions.

His retirement from the chairmanship of the appropriations committee would leave a vacancy which could easily be utilized to bring to his support the votes of the Indiana delegation, through its promise of promotion of Mr. Hemenway of that state. Other candidates have made announcement, but the real consideration of their respective claims will await the assurance in November that the Republicans are to have a majority in the house.

Collieries Evidently Working

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 19.—The output of coal at the mines in the Wyoming region is on the increase. At the office of the Lehigh Valley Coal company it was stated that yesterday's output was 2400 tons. Seventy-one cars of good coal was hoisted at the Maltby mine yesterday. The Delaware and Hudson company placed 1000 tons of coal on the cars at Plymouth and this coal was shipped to various points in the east.

Zulus and Boers May Clash

Durban, Natal, Sept. 19.—The Times of Natal says the feeling in Zululand between Boers and natives demands active government intervention. The Zulus still have the arms with which they were provided during the war. Since the Zulus were killed by the Boers in the Vryheid district, the paper continues, a bitter feeling has prevailed among the natives, and this threatens to culminate in a serious collision.

Comes Under Civil Law

Boston, Sept. 19.—Frederick S. Bonnelle of Brookline, charged with the larceny of $52,000 worth of bonds from the Winnebago Traction company, who was arrested last July, was discharged in the municipal court yesterday after a two days' hearing. Judge Dewey said that it was not a criminal, but a civil matter. Bonnelle was formerly president of the company.

Attempt to Blow Up Lawyer

Lincoln, Ills., Sept. 19.—An attempt was made last night to kill E. M. Barnes, an attorney. A 25-pound can of powder was placed under his bedroom and exploded by means of a slow fuse. There was a terrific explosion, but Barnes escaped uninjured.

BODY FOUND IN CANAL

Murder of a "Ripper" Character For Detectives to Work Upon

New York, Sept. 19.—The nude body of a young woman was found yesterday in the Morris canal between Newark and Jersey City and was last night identified by Joseph Pulitzer of Manhattan as that of his wife, Annie, who had been missing since Tuesday. An attempt had been made to sink it with a 20-pound iron weight attached to a long hitching strap, the other end of which was tied around the waist. A long stab wound was found in the abdomen and the woman's skull was fractured. Probably two days had elapsed since the woman was killed, but the body had been in the water but a few hours. The body was removed to Jersey City and Chief of Police Murphy put all his available detectives on the case.

Pulitzer and his wife lived in a boarding house kept by a Mrs. Fleming. Mrs. Fleming says that the couple had been with her for about a month and that the husband is a journeyman tailor. On Tuesday evening, Mrs. Fleming says, Pulitzer complained of feeling ill and his wife went out about midnight, saying that she would get him some fruit. Mrs. Fleming says that she did not see Pulitzer again until yesterday, when he told her that his wife was missing and that he had been telephoning to her relatives in the hope of finding some trace of her. Yesterday afternoon he went to police headquarters and gave a description of the missing woman. Later, when he was shown an evening paper containing an account of the finding of the body and on reading the description, which tallied with that of his wife, he hurried to Jersey City, where he at once identified the body.

It was announced at police headquarters that nothing had been found in the Pulitzer rooms that could throw any light on the mystery. Pulitzer and a man named Shields who accompanied him were detained as witnesses by Chief Murphy of Jersey City, who is inclined to believe that Pulitzer has told all he knows of the disappearance of his wife.

American Priests For Philippines

Philadelphia, Sept. 19.—At Villa Nova college yesterday Rev. Fr. Rodriquez of Rome, prior general of the Augustinian order throughout the world, announced that Rev. Fr. O'Mahoney of Andover, Mass., and Rev. Fr. McErlaine of Villa Nova had been ordered to the Philippines as pioneers in the movement of American priests to those islands to succeed the Spaniards. The two priests will leave for Manila within the next two weeks, and will be followed in a short time, it is believed, by several other Americans Augustinians.

The Boxer Troubles

Pekin, Sept. 19.—The Boxer attack on Cheng Tu Fu, capital of Sze Chuen province, in which 50,000 Boxers made ineffectual attempts to take the city, began Sept. 15. The attackers were driven back and the gates of the city were closed and guarded by troops. Soldiers quelled the disorder within the city. Fourteen Boxer leaders and several other rebels were executed.

Firebugs In Coal District

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 19.—The Clark Tunnel Coal company's engine house was totally destroyed last night by a fire of supposed incendiary origin. It was within a short distance of the Taylor Coal company's washery, which was destroyed by an incendiary fire Wednesday night.

Good Afternoon.

The launching of the United States cruiser Des Moines tomorrow is an important event in the annals of city and the state, as it will be the first Quincy-built warship to take her maiden dip. The Des Moines is a big ship, her extreme length being 303 feet, and her normal displacement 3200 tons. The launching should draw as large a crowd as the seven-master Thomas W. Lawson, but possibly that event was better advertised throughout the State.

At Saturday's launching, however, there will be the Governor and State officials of Iowa, the Mayor and other officials of the city of Des Moines, representatives of the Navy and the United States government, and representatives of the State of Massachusetts, city of Quincy of other municipalities. It should be a gala day.

All of Quincy should be interested in the hearing before the County Commissioners tomorrow morning at Quincy on the widening of the Hancock street bridge and approaches at Atlantic. This bridge is at the entrance to our city from Boston, and now creates a bad impression on all who drive into the city.

It is not a move for the benfit of the street railway, but for the city as a whole. Other parts of Hancock street are wide and well built, and the bridge should have been widened many years ago.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Education does not make it easier to live, but the reverse. Education creates so many new interests, awakens so many new sympathies, nurses so many new loves, multiplies necessities so fast that it makes it less easy to live than it is when one is ignorant. But education makes it possible to get so much more out of life. It gives a fresh relish to life, and to everything in it. Above all it makes it easier to lift up others. It makes life mean more to a man, and makes the man mean more to life.—Journal of Education.

☞ Complaint has come to the board of health because one's neighbor uses an alarm clock, which is said to disturb the peace of the whole neighborhood. Sometimes the complaint is that a rooster rises too early and insists upon arousing everyone within hearing of its clarion notes. After all, to what extent are persons expected to keep quiet for the benefit of others? In times of illness it often becomes necessary to hush the usual noises. But at such times it is almost impossible to get the neighbors to willingly cut out even the most unnecessary sounds. They are ready enough so do anything but keep quiet. Nearly everyone who has had illness in the family has found this out. The noise makers are a menance to health and happiness, however, and their suppression is as reasonable at times, as other precaution ry measures in the interest of humanity.—Brockton Enterprise.

—Salt is heavily taxed in Italy, and no one can draw a bucket of water from the sea without permission, lest he should evade the tax by extracting the salt contained in the water.

Johnson—Witting.

A pretty home wedding took place on Wednesday evening at Worcester, when Mr. Oscar Andrew Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson of this city was united in marriage to Miss Selma Victoria Witting daughter of Rev. Victor Witting, formerly of this city but now of Worcester.

At 8 o'clock the bridal party entered the parlor, the wedding march from Lohengrin, being played by Miss Anna Jacobson of this city. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father, assisted by Pastor Wyman of the Swedish Methodist church of Boston.

The best man was Mr. Charles Johnson, brother of the groom, and the bridemaids were Miss Anna Johnson sister of the groom and Miss Mary Hook. The maid of honor was Miss Mary Witting, sister of the bride.

The spacious parlor was prettily decorated with palms, ferns, laurel and cut flowers.

The bride was handsomely attired in a costume of white landsdowne, trimmed with lace, chiffon and pearl trimmings. Her bridal veil was caught with bride roses and she carried a bouquet of the same.

The bridesmaids wore pretty gowns of light blue muslin over blue silk, daintily trimmed with ribbon and lace. They carried pink carnations.

The maid of honor wore a creation of pink muslin over pink silk and carried pink roses.

A reception followed the ceremony, the happy couple being assisted in receiving by the bride's father and sister and Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson, father and mother of the groom. A wedding supper was served.

Numerous handsome and useful gifts were received.

At 12 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Johnson departed amid a shower of rice and well wishes for a wedding trip to New York and on their return will reside in their new home on Deldorf street this city.

Among those present from this city were: Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson, Messrs. Charles Johnson, Fred Johnson, Willie Johnson, Theodore Hermanson, and Oscar Jacobson; Misses Anna Jacobson, Anna Johnson and Selma Gustafson.

Many clergymen were present and telegrams were received wishing the newly wedded couple happiness for the the future.

New Monuments.

The unveiling of two memorials and the selection of a site of a new $10,000 monument on the Antietam battlefield marked the fortieth anniversary of the battle of Antietam at Frederick, Md. Mrs. Donald McLean, regent of the New York Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, made a patriotic address, and Hon. John D. Henderson of New York delivered an oration. Nathan Esterbrook of New Haven, Conn., presided. Following the exercises the monument and site were formally transferred to the United States. Ohio will soon begin the erection of twelve monuments to its soldier dead on Antietam field, one of them to the memory of President McKinley, for which the Ohio Legislature has appropriated $20,000.

Was it Stolen?

William Buchan, a well known character in Quincy, fell into the hands of the Braintree police this morning. The complaint against him was the larcency of a bicycle from some person unknown. William appeared at the house of J. R. Qualey with a bicycle to sell. The price was $3, and as it was a bargain, Mr. Qualey purchased the wheel and William, who signed his name Brown, was arrested. He claimed that the wheel was given him, and the court gave him until next Tuesday to prove his statement true. The wheel is a Wolf American numbered 84821, worth at least $20.

Distance Lends Enchantment.

The house owned by William Russell on the corner of Billings and Newhall streets, is ornamented by a hornet's nest of great size and exquisite workmanship. The nest is directly in the centre of the cornice of the piazza, and looks more like a design of stone than the product of the skill of the busy bee. Unfortunately one can only get a far view of the nest on account of its vicious inmates, but it has been proven that in all things that "distance lends enchantment."

The New Bridge.

The large wooden mould for the centre, or drawbridge pier of the new bridge at Quincy Point has been put in position and work has been commenced filling it with concrete. An enormous amount will be required. A dredger is also at work in the channel near the new draw. A large gang of men are at work on the bridge and work is being rushed.

—The Sahara is not a barren waste, as is popularly supposed. Not long ago there were 9,000,000 sheep, 2,000,000 goats and 260,000 camels in the Algerian Sahara alone, and the oases furnish 1,500,000 of date palms.

EVENTFUL LIFE.

And a Large Number of Friends in Quincy.

Surprise for Capt. and Mrs. Doane.

A Presentation at Wilson Hall Last Night.

Captain Ephraim H. Doane, who has recently resigned his position as superintendent of Sailors' Sung Harbor, after a service of seventeen years, was given a farewell reception Thursday evening by a number of his many friends. The affair which was a surprise to the genial captain was held at Wilson's hall. Capt. and Mrs. Doane had been invited to spend the evening with Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, and upon their arrival there were informed by Mrs. Wilson that as quite a number had arrived it was thought best to go over to the hall.

The Captain was a little surprised at seeing so many, but did not realize that it was for him. On a table was a handsome punch bowl of English Doulton ware, full of fruit punch. The bowl also contained an old wooden ladle. The Captain was invited to serve the punch and while engaged at that George H. Wilson in a few words presented him with a silver ladle on which was the inscription: "Presented to Capt. and Mrs. E. H. Doane, Quincy, 1902." Then he was handed a package containing a dozen cut glass punch mugs and a little later he was informed that the handsome punch bowl was also his.

After recovering himself he made a few remarks referring to the many happy days he had passed in Quincy, the life-long friendships he had made, and thanked them one and all for their gift.

Vocal and instrumental music followed and a social time. Remick serving a lunch.

Among those present were:
Mr. and Mrs. John Hall.
Mr. and Mrs. Henery E. Emerson.
Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Wilson.
Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Wadsworth.
Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Hearn.
Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Pettengill.
Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Fellows.
Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Patch.
Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Miller.
Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Packard.
Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Sanborn.
Mr. and Mrs. Amos E. Damon.
Mr. and Mrs. James McConnell.
Mr. and Mrs. Frank F. Crane.
Hon. and Mrs. W. A. Hodges.
Miss Clark, Farmington, Me.
H. E. Crane.
Frank W. Crane.
Fred E. Zoller.

Capt. Doane, who retires the first of next month, was born in Harwich in 1843; and at the age of twelve years made his first sea voyage. He continued to follow the sea until 1885, when he came to Quincy. He had command of a merchant vessel when but eighteen years of age, and during his career visited many foreign ports.

He had the distinction of being in command of the first vessel captured by the Confederates. It was the schooner Nathan Chase. She was returning from a foreign port and while in Southern waters was ordered to surrender by an armed tug. The captain at that time did not know that war had been declared, and refused. A shot was then sent after him and he was compelled to surrender.

The confederates robbed him and his crew of everything they had, and after keeping them a few weeks put them on board a small boat and told them to skip. It is needless to say that the order was obeyed. Making his way to New York he entered the government transport service, and was an officer on the transport that conveyed the first troops to Washington from New York.

After the war he again entered the merchant trade and followed it until he came to Quincy. When he leaves Quincy in October he will return to his native place at Harwich.

Captain Doane holds a commission in the Ancient and Honorable Artillery and is an honorary member of Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R.

Catarrh

Is a constitutional disease.

It originates in a scrofulous condition of the blood and depends on that condition.

It often causes headache and dizziness, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, affects the vocal organs, disturbs the stomach.

It is always radically and permanently cured by the blood-purifying, alterative and tonic action of

Hood's Sarsaparilla

This great medicine has wrought the most wonderful cures of all diseases depending on scrofula or the scrofulous habit.

HOOD'S PILLS are the best cathartic.

That the health conditions of Quincy are good is shown by the fact that but one contagious disease has been reported to the Board of Health since Aug. 27.

Joseph Day of Quincy has purchased of George C. Putnam of Sunapee, Sullivan County, N. H., his stock and dairy farm, situated on the banks of Perkins pond, and comprising 160 acres of land, with a farmhouse, two barns and numerous outbuildings.

Nathan A. Thayer, of the class 1902, of the Lawrence Scientific School, leaves today for Cincinnati, in company with his uncle Rev. George A. Thayer, at whose home he is to be a guest. Later he expects to take up his profession as civil engineer in that locality.

Ward Six is very fortunate in having such a conscientious road overseer as Mr. Dennis O'Neil. The sewer has put the streets in a bad condition, but they are fast becoming ship-shape under Mr. O'Neil's direction and care. Atlantic does not present that "dug up" appearance which the putting through of the sewer leaves behind it in the neighboring towns.

HAPPY GATHERING.

The Annual Reunion of the Old People of Weymouth.

The South Weymouth Old People's Association held its ninth annual reunion, Thursday, at the Union Congregational church. Fully 200 sat down to the banquet and of these 125 were people over 70 years of age.

The tables were very prettily arranged and each of the old people were given a carnation as they entered the dining hall.

Representative Gordon Willis, president of the association, was in charge, and was assisted by Bates Torrey, the secretary, and other officers.

From 10.30 until noon the time was spent in renewing acquaintances.

The special guests were: Rev. Judson Van Clancy of West Medford, Rev. Daniel W. Waldron, Rev. George F. Stanton of Lowell, Rev. Anson Titus of Medford and Henery Varley of London, Eng.

Mrs. Booker T. Washington was also present at the reunion.

After dinner the guests adjourned to the church auditorium. President Willis made the address of welcome and Secretary Torrey read the necrology showing ten deaths.

Other addresses were made by Rev. Mr. Waldron, Rev. Mr. Clancy, Rev. Mr. Stanton, Rev. Mr. Titus, Mr. Varley, Rev. L. W. Atwood, Rev. Frank C. Butler and Rev. Henry C. Alvord. A musical entertainment was also given.

The following officers were elected: President, J. Burton Reed; Vice President, Clarence W. Fearing; secretary and treasurer, Bates Torrey; musical director, Mrs. Ella M. Clark; executive committee, A. B. Raymond, Alvin Hollis, Mrs. Henry Lawlor, Mrs. S. A. Doble, B. C. Tirrell, Mrs. Irville Waterman.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

Pilgrimages Almost Daily to the City of Presidents.

Quincy will soon be as famous for pilgrimages as Plymouth and Concord, as parties come now almost daily. Surely there are many historic spots of National interest, and enterprises which are novel to many. A brief list is given below.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN ADAMS.

Franklin street, Quincy Adams, house built in 1681 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Patriotic societies admitted free, although contributions are welcome to defray expenses of keeping house open and in repair. Small fee asked the general public.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

Junction of Franklin street, Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

BURIAL PLACE OF PRESIDENTS ADAMS.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian), Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. In cellar is old town hearse, also box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams. At extreme end, under front steps are the vaults of the presidents, a massive stone door closing the entrance. Janitor can be found at Savings Bank building or at his home Maple place. No fee charged, but janitor may be paid for his trouble.

HANCOCK CEMETERY.

Hancock street, across from First Church. Many old stones, among the oldest that of Rev. John Hancock, father of the Patriot, who died May 7, 1744. Was fifth minister of First Church.

Not a Carriage Way.

When some one loses a horse and has a team smashed they will learn that the Quincy Point bridge is closed to travel for teams. Several have attempted at night or early morning to drive across by the railroad bridge but up to the present time the attempts have ended in disaster. The last man to attempt it was George Anderson of Wollaston It was early in the morning and he drove onto the railroad bridge but had not gone far before his horse's legs went down between the railroad ties. It was some time before the animal could be rescued from his perilous position, and he was badly bruised.

Chubbuck Street.

A large gang of men are at work on Chubbuck street and when completed it will be a great improvement. It has always been quite a steep grade at the Washington street end and after a heavy rain, or in the spring, there has always been a mud puddle. A deep fill is being made at this end of the street so it will be on the same grade as Washington street.

THE ST LOUIS SCANDAL

Men Who Denied Knowledge of Boodling Are Charged With Perjury

St. Louis, Sept. 19.—Circuit Attorney Folk yesterday filed informations charging former Delegates Hannigan, Denny, Albright and Bersch with perjury. This action was taken as the result of testimony before the grand jury by the accused, who denied any knowledge of the reported payment of $75,000 to members of the house combine by the Suburban Street Railway company to secure a certain franchise.

The one member and five former members of the house of delegates who rest under several charges of bribery and perjury and who have not yet surrendered to the authorities have until tonight to give themselves up. After that time they will be fugitives under the law. If they shall not appear during the day, Circuit Attorney Folk will issue notices to be sent all over the country, offering a reward of $300 for the apprehension of each of the six men.

Administrators of Rice Estate

New York, Sept. 19.—William M. Rice, Jr., John D. Bartin and James A. Baker, Jr., were yesterday granted letters of administration on the estate of William M. Rice, under the will executed by him in 1896. They are required to give a bond, which is said to be in the neighborhood of $7,000,000. Albert M. Patrick, who was named as residuary legatee in an alleged forged will, is now in Sing Sing prison awaiting the trial of his appeal from the conviction of the murder of Rice.

Bluejackets Guard Trains

Colon, Sept. 19.—United States bluejackets, with a small quick-firing gun from the cruiser Cincinnati, continue to accompany each passenger and freight train across the isthmus, notwithstanding the protests against such measures which the Colombian government has lodged with the United States consul here.

—Dun's Review says steady progress is reported in trade and industry. Distribution of merchandise is heavy and a healthy tone is evident. Prices are maintained by liberal consumption which more than neutralizes the effect of enlarged production. Domestic conditions continue much better than those existing abroad and home trade receives more attention than foreign commerce. Farm products have appreciated in value, owing to les favorable weather, and producers will be fully compensated for any decrease in quantity by the higher quotations.

A Remarkable Record.

JEWS WILL NOT WORK

According to One Story From Roumanian Capital

STATEMENT CONTRADICTED

By a Correspondent In Vienna, Who Says Jews Have Been Treated as Baneful and Despicable Aliens at Every Step In Their Life

London, Sept. 19.—In a dispatch from Bucharest, a correspondent of The Express says the emigration fever among the Jews of Roumania still continues, and that within the last three months 4000 Jews have left the country. Last night, the correspondent goes on, a party of 350 left for Canada and the United States, and small parties of Jews leave the larger towns of this country almost daily.

Although the reason given by the emigrants for leaving is their inability to obtain work, the Jews steadily refuse to take up farm labor. Proof of this is found in the fact that within the last three years Roumania has paid for outside Bulgarian labor something like $3,000,000, which might have gone to the Jews if they would only turn their hands to the light labor of harvesting. Bulgarian laborers, the correspondent concludes, are well housed and excellently fed while working on Roumanian farms.

The Vienna correspondent of The Standard says the note of the United States with regard to the treatment of Jews in Roumania has been communicated to the powers which are parties to the treaty of Berlin, and European governments like Austria Hungary, which has looked on and done nothing, have been placed thereby in a somewhat humiliating position.

"I am afraid, however," cables the correspondent, "that the result of America's action will be nil. What King Charles of Roumania, a just and humane sovereign, could not achieve; what a number of ministries, Conservative, Liberal and Unionist, have attempted in vain; what even the Jewish bankers of Frankfort-on-the-Main, Berlin and Vienna, who several years ago refused to deal in Roumanian securities when Roumania urgently needed a foreign loan, have not been able to bring about; namely, justice to the Jews in the country, the note of the United States is extremely unlikely to effect, however well meant.

"The Jews have been treated as baneful and despicable aliens at every step in their life, although many of them did service for Roumania on the field of battle. They live on sufferance; they must contribute to the cost of the government like the Gentiles, yet they have not the rights even of gypsies. They are prevented from giving their children a proper education; they must screen themselves behind a Roumanian citizen if they wish to exercise any but the lowest calling, and there is no security for them.

It is this want of security and fair play on the part of the great mass of the Roumanian people which drives the Jews out of Roumania. In a constant stream they pass through Vienna en route to the west—that is, England, the United States, Canada, etc. The men, who are mostly artisans, go first. As soon as they can they send passage money for their women and children to join them.

"I believe that about 150 families every week, as many as the Jewish relief committee in Vienna can provide for at one time, are thus emigrating. It was stated the other day that 3800 passports were taken out by Jews during the last three months at Bucharest alone, and that house rent was rapidly declining in consequence of this wholesale emigration both there and in other Roumanian towns.

"In the meantime," the correspondent goes on, "the emigration of Roumanian Jews, as they seem to be unwelcome in the United States, ought to be systematically directed to Canada, where numbers of healthy, industrious and peaceful foreign settlers should be welcome. The Roumanian Jew who emigrates is often nothing more than a merchant and peddler, as the Jews of Germany and Austria Hungary mostly are, but some, like the Russian Jews, are craftsmen and agriculturists.

"Those of them who have been passing through Vienna gave one the impression of being intelligent men and a great majority of them were young and skilled in some trade."

Mitchell Makes a Denial

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 19.—President Mitchell denies the reports that he had prepared a demand in which terms for a settlement of the big strike were modified and had forwarded it to J. P. Morgan with a note saying that the financier would be given until Oct. 20 to accept the proposition.

Soldiers Homeward Bound

Washington, Sept. 19.—The war department has been advised of the sailing of the transport Logan from Manila Sept. 16 for San Francisco, with Brigadier General Grant, headquarters and six troops of the Ninth cavalry; 123 sick, 8 insane, 187 casuals and 55 discharged soldiers.

A Much-Needed Rainfall

London, Sept. 19.—Viceroy Curzon of India telegraphs that the agricultural prospects in that country have been further improved by the general rains of this week, and that the gratuitous relief is less today than at any time since last February.

MURDER OF BYGONE DAYS

Apparently Revealed by Unearthing of a Skeleton In Maine

York Harbor, Me., Sept. 19.—A story which many people believe is authenticated by a recent discovery is that of a murder which is supposed to have been committed in this locality previous to the beginning of the last century. In making excavations for the building of a house near the Paris creek bridge workmen unearthed, beneath about 20 inches of soil, a human skeleton, nearly complete and in a comparatively good state of preservation.

The skull is intact except for a big fracture in the temple, which may have been the cause of death. The larger bones of the body show the man to have been of large stature. Near the same place were some coins, the dates of which were not discernible.

Upon this spot was located the old Stacy Tavern, built in 1634 for a store. The old building was converted into a tavern and after the revolution was owned by a Mr. Stacy, who had been a lieutenant under Paul Jones on the Bon Homme Richard. During a night of revelry a pack peddler, who participated in the gaiety, mysteriously disappeared. It was thought that he had been the victim of foul play, but his body was never found.

Business Man Kills Himself

Boston, Sept. 19.—Henry I. Turner, aged 37, a prominent real estate broker, and a member of a well known Brookline family, killed himself by shooting with a revolver at the home of his brother, William D. Turner, yesterday afternoon. The incident has caused much surprise among Mr. Turner's friends and acquaintances, since there is no known reason why he should have been led to take his life. Turner became divorced a few years ago. Since then he had lived with his mother and sister.

A Thieving Policeman

Somerville, Mass., Sept. 19.—John G. Knight, who was dismissed from the local police department recently, because he had stolen goods from a local house furnishing store and stolen money from the public library, and who was later arrested on the charge of larceny, was again arrested last night, this time on the charge of breaking and entering Jackson Caldwell's store and larceny of $375 worth of property. On the previous larceny charge Knight has been held in $3100 for the grand jury.

Verdict Probably For Plaintiff

Rockland, Me., Sept. 19.—After hearing testimony in the libel suit for $3000 damages brought by Miles D. Cramer against James Sidlinger, Justice Powers ordered the jury to bring in a verdict for the plaintiff. The jury last evening returned a sealed verdict, which undoubtedly is in accord with the court's advice. Sidlinger was charged with making a statement to the effect that Representative Cramer was a forger.

Bunco Men Got His Roll

Lowell, Mass., Sept. 19.—A game of cards with two bunco men yesterday cost Andrew C. Wheelock just $5000. The men induced the aged millionaire real estate dealer to go to the Union National bank and draw the money, after which the two strangers engaged in a game of cards, and one of them won considerable money. An invitation to join in the game was accepted by Wheelock and he was fleeced.

Coal Famine Approaching

Boston, Sept. 19.—With the approach of cooler weather the coal situation in this city is getting serious. With the utmost economy and cutting down of orders there is not enough to last a month. Some relief to the press on the market is afforded by the more general use of soft coal for steaming purposes, by the limited output of coke, and by the substitution of gas stoves wherever it is possible.

Typhoid Prevalent at Fort Wright

New London, Conn., Sept. 19.—The death of Private O'Brien at Fort Wright, Fisher's Island, discloses the fact that typhoid fever has been prevalent at the post ever since the reinforcements of the garrison for the war maneuvers. It is officially stated that there have been 68 cases among the soldiers on Fisher's Island. There are 30 typhoid cases in the post hospital at present.

Strike Against Non-Union Man

Boston, Sept. 19.—Forty-two pressmen in the employ of the Rand-Avery Supply company struck yesterday because of the employment of a foreman who is not a member of the union. It is expected that the press feeders and assistants will strike if an attempt is made to replace with new men the pressmen who struck.

Fast Time Across the Pond

Boston, Sept. 19.—Steamship New England of the Dominion line, which arrived yesterday from Liverpool and Queenstown, established a new record for the trip between Liverpool and the port of Boston. The vessel covered the distance in 6 days, 7 hours and 12 minutes. This is 10 minutes better than the best previous time.

Crosby May Decline Honor

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 19.—John C. Crosby, nominated for lieutenant governor by the Democratic convention Wednesday, is said by friends to be undecided as to acceptance of the honor. He may announce his decision today or tomorrow.

Confesses to Shooting

Lawrence, Mass., Sept. 19.—Santo Calluro, an Italian, was arrested this morning on the charge of shooting Jerry Donahue, a pugilist, last Saturday. He confessed to the assault on Donahue, but claims he did it in self-defense.

"NOTHING TO WEAR."

William Allen Butler's Death Recalls Story of Flora McFlimsey.

The recent death of William Allen Butler has revived interest in his first and most famous poem, "Nothing to Wear," which appeared anonymously in Harper's Weekly in 1857.

It was one of the most notable satires on New York society's extravagance. These verses, which were reproduced in Great Britain and translated into French and German, relate how Miss Flora McFlimsey spent most of her money and all of her time buying clothes and yet had "nothing to wear." Here is Miss McFlimsey's career:

Miss Flora McFlimsey of Madison square
Has made three separate journeys to Paris,
And her father assures me, each time she was there,
That she and her friend Mrs. Harris
(Not the lady whose name is so famous in history,
But plain Mrs. H., without romance or mystery)
Spent six consecutive weeks without stopping,
In one continuous round of shopping—
Shopping alone and shopping together
At all hours of the day and in all sorts of weather,
For all manner of things that a woman can put
On the crown of her head or the sole of her foot,
Or wrap round her shoulders, or fit round her waist,
Or that can be sewed on, or pinned on, or laced,
Or tied on with a string, or stitched on with a bow,
In front or behind, above or below;
For bonnets, mantillas, capes, collars and shawls,
Dresses for breakfasts and dinners and balls,
Dresses to sit in and stand in and walk in,
Dresses to dance in and flirt in and talk in,
Dresses in which to do nothing at all,
Dresses for winter, spring, summer and fall.

* * * * * * *

And yet, though scarce three months have passed since the day
This merchandise went, on twelve carts, up Broadway,
This same Miss McFlimsey of Madison square,
The last time we met was in utter despair
Because she had nothing whatever to wear!

The day of the Stuckup's grand ball arrived, and Miss McFlimsey is in despair. "Why, Harry, mon cher," she says to her lover, "I should like above all things to go with you there, but really and truly—I've nothing to wear!"

He rashly suggests that she wear the gown she has on, whereupon Miss McFlimsey opens her batteries of scorn upon him:

"How absurd that any sane man should suppose
That a lady would go to a ball in the clothes,
No matter how fine, that she wears every day!"
So I ventured again, "Wear your crimson brocade"—
(Second turn up of nose)—"That's too dark by a shade."
"Your blue silk." "That's too heavy."
"Your pink." "That's too light."
"Wear tulle over satin." "I can't endure white."
"Your rose colored, then, the best of the batch."
"I haven't a thread of point lace to match."
"Your brown moire antique." "Yes, and look like a Quaker."
"The pearl colored." "I would, but that plaguy dressmaker
Has had it a week." "Then that exquisite lilac
In which you would melt the heart of a Shylock."
(Here the nose took again the same elevation).
"I wouldn't wear that for the whole of creation."
"Why not? It's my fancy. There's nothing could strike it
As more comme il faut." "Yes, but, dear me, that lean
Sophronia Stuckup has got one just like it,
And I won't appear dressed like a chit of sixteen."
"Then that splendid purple, that sweet Mazarine;
That superb point d'aiguille, that imperial green;
That zephyrlike tarletan, that rich grenadine"—
"Not one of all which is fit to be seen,"
Said the lady, becoming excited and flushed.
"Then wear," I exclaimed in a tone which quite crushed Opposition, "that gorgeous toilet which you sported
In Paris last spring at the grand presentation,
When you quite turned the head of the head of the nation
And by all the grand court were so very much courted."
The end of the nose was portentously tipped up,
And both the bright eyes shot forth indignation
As she burst upon me with a fierce exclamation,
"I have worn it three times, at the least calculation,
And that and most of my dresses are ripped up!"

* * * * * * * *

"I've told you and shown you I've nothing to wear,
And it's perfectly plain you not only don't care,
But you do not believe me"—(here the nose went still higher)—
"I suppose if you dared you would call me a liar.
Our engagement is ended, sir—yes, on the spot;
You're a brute and a monster, and I don't know what."

* * * * * * * *

In similar strain the author then extends his lesson of "nothing to wear" to all of feminine Fifth avenue and Murray Hill. In those days, however, display in feminine finery in New York was comparatively simple judged by modern standards. Somebody might write a "Flora McFlimsey of 1902" and thus draw a striking contrast.—New York Times.

Dog Prevents a Train Wreck.

Robert Wallace's dog prevented the wrecking of a Colorado and Southern freight train on a burning bridge near Denver, says a special dispatch from that city. Persistent barking awakened Mr. Wallace, who scolded the dog for disturbing his rest and went back to bed. The dog, however, would not be quiet, and when Mr. Wallace arose again it ran barking and whining from the house. Wallace followed far enough to discover the wooden bridge on fire. He then aroused the agent in time to flag the train.

Try to pay $15.00 for your Suit, if you can. It gives you better tailoring all over, and a better variety of patterns. Not that the $10.00 and $12.00 Suit aren't good--they are better than most Suits at the price--but it pays to get as good a suit as you can afford.

A man put on one of our $15 Suits the other day, and the first friend he met asked. "Where did you get it made?"

You really cannot tell our ready-made Clothing from custom-made. Attention to detail in Suit-making does the business. We're ready for YOU any day. Our Suits are far better than our prices would indicate. Compare YOUR Ideas with OUR Goods. You will find our prices will suit your Purse. COME SEE.

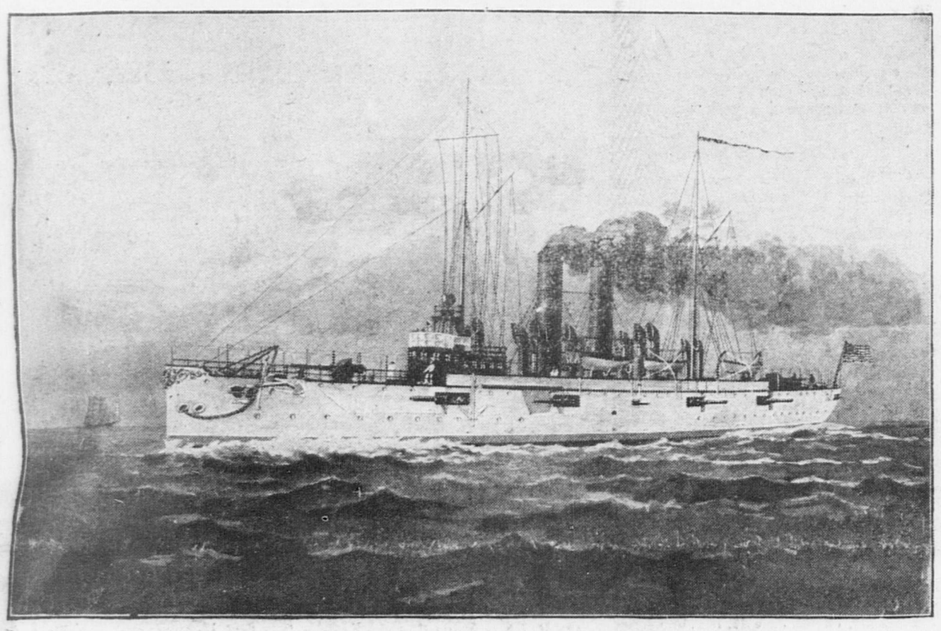
QUINCY DAILY LEDGER.

Vol. 14. No. 220. QUINCY, MASS., SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1902. PRICE TWO CENTS.

LAUNCHING OF THE WARSHIP.

The United States Cruiser Des Moines, Built by the Fore River Company at Quincy, Takes Her Maiden Dip.



THE U. S. CRUISER, "DES MOINES."
Launched at Fore River, Boston Harbor, on Sept. 20. From a Water-Color Sketch Studied from the Official Specifications.

MISS ELSIE MACOMBER, OF DES MOINES,
The Iowa Representative Who Christened the New Cruiser.

When the splendid new cruiser Des Moines slipped gracefully from the ways at the Fore River shipyard this afternoon the Queen City of the wheat fields had reason to be proud of her position as godmother, for it was not only a new war-vessel but a new type of war-vessel which was taken and cradled on the sail-whitened bosom of Massachusetts Bay. That is to say, the "Denver" type, of which the Des Moines is to be one of the finest exponents, is new in that the vessels belonging to it while designed for war recognize also the equal demands of peace.

The Des Moines may well be called, however, first of all, a fighting ship. She is to carry a most deadly and efficient armament. Ten five-inch, 50 calibre, rapid fire, breech-loading guns constitute her main battery. These guns will use smokeless powder, being thus equal in efficiency to the six-inch guns using black powder, called by a high naval authority the most serviceable gun that the navy has.

Eight of these 10 guns will be on the main gun deck in recessed ports, so mounted that two will command a sweep from full aft to 60 degrees forward; two will be able to sweep the horizon from directly forward to 60 degrees aft, while the four waist guns will be almost as effective with their range of 60 degrees each way. The remaining two guns are to be on the spar deck, forward and aft, mounted behind a steel shield.

There will be four six-pounder guns on each deck, two one-pounders aft, and four Colt automatic machine guns mounted high on the hammock berthings amidships. Nor each five-inch gun there will be 250 rounds of fixed ammunition; for each six-pounder, 500 rounds; and the magazines will hold a vastly greater proportion of deadly missiles for the smaller calibre arms.

Thus the new cruiser will sail the seas bristling with that science can devise, bearing within her hull the most deadly and destructive of modern missiles, with a crew of 30 officers and 263 men, a ship capable of whipping anything of her size afloat, yet still designed for and bound on peaceful missions.

"In times of peace" wrote the first advisory board summoned for the construction of a new navy over 20 years ago, "iron clads are not required to carry on the work of the United States navy." Nevertheless, recognizing that the best assurance of peace comes in being fully prepared for war, the government has wisely gone on building battleships, heavily armoured cruisers, and other vessels of the fighting type, so that today we rank among the five great world powers in the efficiency of our navy, only two, England and France, have fighting vessels much superior to ours in number, none in efficiency, ship for ship.

MISS CLARA N. CARLETON,
The Massachusetts Representative at the Launching of the "Des Moines."

The flag must be carried to all the Seven Seas that the national dignity may be upheld, our commerce, our citizens, and our island possessions protected. This requires particularly vessels of the cruiser type, strong for attack, bristling with threat if need be, yet capable of long voyages, comfortable for the men aboard in the long fierce heat of the tropics, and with great coal bunker capacity that trips between distant ports need not be delayed.

This sort of ship we have in the Des Moines, leader of the "Denver" type, as the naval authorities call it. The Des Moines is 292 feet in length on her load water line, and of an extreme breadth of 44 feet. She is too broad for great speed, yet she is to steam 16 and a half knots an hour and can no doubt be forced beyond that. But what she loses in speed she gains in distance. The great capacity of her bunkers, 700 tons, will allow her to steam a distance of 10,000 miles at 10 knots, or 2600 at full speed.

Thus the Des Moines might steam from San Francisco to Manila without coaling, a most desirable feature in a cruiser destined to go "coast-wise, cross seas, round the world and back again" as the exigencies may demand of these roving adventurers of

THE NEW NAVY.

The Des Moines is about the size of the Cincinnati, a vessel built when it was thought that greater speed was a desideratum. The Cincinnati is speedier by two knots an hour, but she has a far less steaming radius, for while the engines of the Des Moines are only of 4700 horse power, the engines of the Cincinnati are of 10,000 horse power, requiring much more coal to the mile and taking up more space that in the Des Moines is wisely used for coal bunkers—thus giving her the far greater steaming radius.

This is the key note or the new type: a maximum of qualities that are desirable in practical daily usage in times of peace, while taking away nothing from the fighting ability of the ship when the need comes to fight.

Indeed, the care that has been taken to keep up this fighting efficiency is shown in many ways, none more conspicuously than in the recessed ports already spoken of. The recessed gun port is new to the American navy in this type of ship. It is not a new idea, however, having been adopted in several of the English fighting ships already. By its use guns of the forward and after batteries of the gun deck are given fair opportunity to train directly fore or aft without altering the course of the vessel.

In case of chasing or being chased, though no Yankee man-o'-war's man will agree that the latter contingency is liable to arise, three of the guns of the main battery of the Des Moines may be trained directly upon a ship ahead, three others on a ship in the wake behind, without altering the course of the cruiser. Another advantage of the recessed gun port is that the guns are placed a little nearer the central line of the vessel, thus lessening the strain from their concussion.

So much for the improvement in fighting points, but it is not in these alone that the fine new ship is typical. She is not, to be sure, an armored vessel, but she is "protected" in more ways than one. One of these is the protection adopted in most modern ships of war, the watertight deck of nickel steel. This you will not see in an ordinary examination of the ship. Her steel sides rise at right angles to the water line, unarmored and easily pierced by the shots of an enemy. But the engines, the ammunition, in fact all are beneath this curved nickel-steel deck which rises from a little below the water line on either side and curves upwards protecting all beneath it by its power to "glance" a shot. A shell from the enemy may easily enter the the thin steel sides of the cruiser above water, but it will glance from the slant of this protecting steel deck and ricochet without harming anything that is below. Thus the real ship, all the

THE FRUIT OF THE ROSEBUSH

.....By Howard Fielding

Copyright, 1901, by Charles W. Hooke

THERE reclined in a seat of the smoking car a young man in a soiled and dusty gray suit and a white "sweater" stained with machine oil. His head was in a corner, and his cap was over one eye. The conductor, coming through the train for fares, gently shook this passenger, thereby tilting his head forward so that he snored loudly. A spasmodic movement of the young man's hand revealed a ticket there, which proved upon inspection to be satisfactory.

In the next seat rearward were two men who glanced at the conductor and nodded familiarly. The elder of them had high shoulders, rather too heavy for the rest of his figure; a long face and a prominent nose, slightly reddened at the end. He also had a fat hand, which was always ponderously busy when he talked.

"You don't show up with the money. Do you understand?" said he.

The person thus addressed was a thin man with a nose like an ax. He carried his high hat on his knees and caressed it with his nervous hands.

"I had made up my mind that I couldn't spare the money," said he. "I had intended to let Uncle Amos know today that he must not depend upon me."

"Next week will do just as well," was the rejoinder. "I mean what I say, Baring."

"It will put Uncle Amos in a hole," said Baring. "He won't be able to turn himself. You'll foreclose your mortgage, and in the end you'll have the farm."

"Is Amos Lawrence worth more to you than I am?" said the other. "That's all you've got to consider. Can you get anything politically without me?"

"Frankly, Mr. Beckley," said Baring, "I don't believe I can nor any other man in this district."

"Lawrence came out against me last fall," said Beckley. "He found fault with my man."

Baring smiled grimly. Then he assumed suddenly the professional manner of the lawyer.

"You want me to let him think he's going to get that loan of me until it's too late for him to raise the money anywhere else," he said in a short, crisp tone scarcely above a whisper.

"Very well. It's dirty work, but I'll do it."

"I thought so," said Beckley. And the fat hand came to rest upon his knee.

* * * * * * *

Uncle Amos Lawrence sat on the well curb filling his pipe after supper when a young man in a dusty gray suit approached him across the grass.

"Good evening," said he, halting with one foot on the edge of the platform around the well. "I wonder if you could spare me a drink of water?"

"Our well's sixty-five foot deep, an' it's nearly full," said the farmer. "How much do you hold?"

"I'm dug out pretty thin," answered the young man, "and I haven't had dinner yet"—

"No dinner yet?" echoed Uncle Amos, with evident concern. "Nothin' sence breakfast? Dear me! Been footin' it far?"

"Not a great way," was the reply. "My machine broke down"—

"Oh, you're a bicycle rider," said Uncle Amos, "off on a tower. Vacation, I suppose?" The young man nodded.

"Well," said the farmer, "go into the house, an' mother'll give you a bite to

"LAWRENCE CAME OUT AGAINST ME LAST FALL," SAID BECKLEY.

eat. I don't think the dishes are cleared away yet. Here, Dolly!" he continued, addressing a pretty girl of eight or nine years who came running with matches for her father. "Ask your mother if she's got any supper left. You go right along with her, Mr."—

"Norton," said the young man. "Frank Norton is my name. But, as to the supper, I intended to eat at the hotel in the village. However, if you'll let me buy my supper here"—

"'Twon't cost you nothin'," said Uncle Amos. "Glad to get the stuff eat up. Dolly'll take you in."

Dolly eyed the stranger shyly, he returning the glance with admiration of the pretty child, upon whose face and tangle of bright hair the last ray from the west struck for an instant warmly. The young man extended his hand, and Dolly, after brief hesitation, laid her own in it and led him toward the house.

"This is a pretty country," said he. "Don't you think so?"

"Oh, yes," she said. "This is fine, specially in summer, of course. See my roses there? They're almost gone, but I had a lot. Mother and I planted the bushes when we first came here. I'm always going to have them."

"Always going to have them!" repeated the young man.

"Of course I'll go away by and by to school," said Dolly. "Father has promised me. But that won't be yet awhile. It's a good many years."

"The years pass," said the young man. "I hope they'll be good years, all of them, for you and the roses."

So they went into the house together, and when Norton came out again, half

THEN SUDDENLY SHE CRIED, "GOOD NIGHT, MR. NORTON!"

an hour later, Uncle Amos from his seat by the well observed with pleasure that the guest of the evening was loosening the buckle of his belt.

Norton lighted a cigar and stood erect, alert, receptive.

"This looks like a fine bit of land," said he, looking across the fields, whitened by the moonlight.

"Middlin' good," replied Uncle Amos, "an' a mighty sight better than it was when I took hold of it. I've worked, but I guess you wouldn't understand that. Your trade will be somethin' in the mechanical line, I should judge—engineer or the like of that?"

"Yes," said Norton, "I'm an engineer. But we were speaking of the farm."

He paused, glancing toward the house, where, in the lighted doorway, the motherly form of Mrs. Lawrence appeared with Dolly beside her. The little girl advanced timidly along the path toward the well. She paused at six paces distance and seemed to hesitate.

"Well, little one?" queried Uncle Amos.

"Mother told me I could come out to say good night," she said.

"Come along, then," said her father, extending his arms.

But the child did not move, except to raise one hand to her round little throat as if her collar had been to tight. Then suddenly she cried, "Good night, Mr. Norton!" and fled into the house so fast that it seemed the young man's answering "good night" could hardly overtake her.

"You were goin' to say somethin' about the farm," said Uncle Amos after an interval of silence.

"The farm is all right," replied Norton slowly. "It is surely all right. But I must be going to the village. Country hotels close early."

"You ain't goin' to no hotel this night," said Uncle Amos. "We can put you up without a bit of trouble."

The young man held his chin in his hand for a matter of ten seconds.

"It is very kind of you," he said. "I will be glad to stay."

* * * * * * *

"This is wholly unexpected, Mr. Lawrence," said Lawyer Baring. "I had no reason to doubt my ability to take up this mortgage for you and fix things all right, but there have been demands upon me that I could not foresee. I'm afraid you'll have to look elsewhere."

Uncle Amos' hat fell to the floor.

"This is sort of sudden," he said in a husky voice. "Couldn't you 'a' let me know sooner? I ain't scarcely got time to do nothin'."

"I thought up to the last minute that I should be able to spare the money," answered Baring. "I should have gone to see you today if you hadn't come to me. Let's see. When is the—the crack of doom?"

"Thursday," said Uncle Amos. "An' it's Tuesday now. I was countin' on you."

"Sorry, dreadfully, dreadfully sorry," said Baring, "but it can't be helped. You can get the money elsewhere."

"I be'n lookin' round," responded Uncle Amos, "an' the prospect's bad. Yes, sir, it's bad. The story's gone forth that Joe Beckley's made up his mind to ruin me. Everybody's afraid."

"Nonsense," said the lawyer. "I don't believe Beckley will press you."

Uncle Amos looked at him steadily.

"You don't believe Beckley'll press me?" said the farmer, with almost painful slowness of enunciation. "You're a darn liar, an' in my opinion you've never be'n anything else from first to last of this business."

He picked up his hat from the floor and stalked out of the office.

The worst part of trouble is taking it home, especially when one has decided that it would better not be mentioned. When Uncle Amos was met by Dolly at the gate that afternoon as usual, he could not lift her up in his arms as he had always done before because of the weight of the heart in his breast that had wearied him. Mrs. Lawrence, looking out from the porch, knew that something was wrong before her husband had taken three steps in the yard, and, though she was not aware that he had seen Baring that day, she guessed the cause; but, being the right kind of a wife, she did not speak of it.

"Anything in the mail?" she asked.

"I forgot to look into the office," said Uncle Amos. "I'll go down tomorrer mornin'. But there won't be nothin'."

* * * * * * *

A bronzed and handsome young man in raiment of the best, yet not too fine, gave cheerful greeting to a blue uniformed boy who opened the door for him.

"There's somebody waiting for you, sir," said the boy, indicating by a wave of his hand the reception room, which was at the right of the private offices. "He said it was a personal matter. He was here before we opened up, in the hall outside. His name's Lawrence."

"Thunder!" said the young man, and for a moment he looked like one who can't quite face the situation. Then he shook himself together and walked into the reception room, where Uncle Amos Lawrence had been pacing up and down for an hour. He turned hastily, yet stiffly, hearing footsteps. Norton, entering the room, flung out both hands as one who wards off an attack.

"Now, don't say a word!" he cried. "You got my letter? All right. It's a trifle. You see, I couldn't let any such deal as that go through; I really couldn't. I heard Beckley and Baring talking in the train; made 'em think I was asleep. Then I asked a few questions when I got to your village. Finding that you were all right, a square man and a good man every way, I went up to your place to put you on your guard. Then I saw the little girl and the roses. Well, you understand. I made up my mind to fix the thing myself. But I couldn't quite bring myself to say so. I'm bashful, that's what's the trouble with me. I can't talk worth a cent. On a matter like that I'd rather write and send a check."

From the deep swirl of Uncle Amos' thoughts and emotions one trivial matter found its way to the surface.

"I thought you said you were an engineer;" he gasped.

"So I am," replied Norton. "I can run anything that has wheels, except my own head sometimes. I'd been running an engine up through your region—an automobile, you know. When I said 'a machine,' you thought I meant a bicycle, and I didn't take the trouble to correct you because automobiles mean money, and I wasn't quite decided about mentioning the fact that I had any. It broke down, and I couldn't tinker it up without the proper tools, so I sent it home by rail and took a train the other way myself. And that's the whole story. How's Dolly and the roses?"

"NOW, DON'T SAY A WORD!" HE CRIED.

Uncle Amos weakly fumbled in a pocket, producing at last and with great care an object wrapped in white tissue paper.

"This is the last of 'em," he said. "She sent it to you. But about that money"—

Norton, with the rose in his left hand, laid his right upon Uncle Amos' shoulder.

"Give me your I. O. U.," he said. "When you're perfectly easy in your pocket and the sum won't bother you, let me know. This is a good loan; it doesn't worry me. So that's all settled. And now, if you'll make yourself comfortable while I get a few little matters off my mind, we'll go out and have a look at the town. And—er—there's one more thing before we quit the subject. It may be in the future that you'll find yourself pressed. Your friend Beckley may try to turn another trick, or perhaps it may be some need that you can't quite meet, like sending Dolly to a first rate school or—or anything else that she's set her heart on. In that case let me know. It may seem a lot of money to you and mighty little to me."

HISTORIC QUINCY.

Pilgrimages Almost Daily to the City of Presidents.

Quincy will soon be as famous for pilgrimages as Plymouth and Concord, as parties come now almost daily. Surely there are many historic spots of National interest, and enterprises which are novel to many. A brief list is given below.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN ADAMS.

Franklin street, Quincy Adams, house built in 1681 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Patriotic societies admitted free, although contributions are welcome to defray expenses of keeping house open and in repair. Small fee asked the general public.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

Junction of Franklin street, Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

BURIAL PLACE OF PRESIDENTS ADAMS.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian), Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monumerts, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. In cellar is old town hearse, also box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams. At extreme end, under front steps are the vaults of the presidents, a massive stone door closing the entrance. Janitor can be found at Savings Bank building or at his home Maple place. No fee charged, but janitor may be paid for his trouble.

HANCOCK CEMETERY.

Hancock street, across from First Church. Many old stones, among the oldest that of Rev. John Hancock, father of the Patriot, who died May 7, 1744. Was fifth minister of First Church.

PRESIDENTS ADAMS MANSION.

Adams street, corner Newport avenue, Quincy. Residence of President John Adams and contains many family relics. Occupied by descendants. Not open to public.

JOHN HANCOCK BIRTHPLACE.

Adams street, junction of Dimmock and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence, was born.

MYLES STANDISH CAIRN.

Squantum heights, erected in 1895 by the Daughters of the Revolution, of Massachusetts, in memory of Captain Myles Standish and his men of Plymouth Colony, who landed here Sept. 30, 1621, guided by the indian Tisquantum.

SQUAW ROCK.

Pile of rock, on which is a perfect head of a squaw, frequently mentioned in early Squantum history. Near by is also Sachem's Knoll.

ABIGAIL ADAMS CAIRN.

Penns hill, erected June 17, 1896, by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son John Quincy, from the spot watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

DOROTHY Q. HOUSE.

Hancock street, corner Butler road, Quincy. Old Quincy homestead in which Dorothy Q was born. Has quaint old paper on parlor put on for wedding of John Hancock and Dorothy Quincy; also secret chamber and other interesting features. Private house, not open to public.

MYLES STANDISH SPRING.

On the beach to the left and back of Squantum Inn. Spring of fresh cold water, where Standish and his party breakfasted and thence started to explore the country around Boston Bay.

PRESIDENTS LANE.

Now Goffe street, leading from Adams street, near Mansion. Opened by John Adams to drive his cows to pasture.

—Dun's Review says steady progress is reported in trade and industry. Distribution of merchandise is heavy and a healthy tone is evident. Prices are maintained by liberal consumption which more than neutralizes the effect of enlarged production. Domestic conditions continue much better than those existing abroad and home trade receives more attention than foreign commerce. Farm products have appreciated in value, owing to les favorable weather, and producers will be fully compensated for any decrease in quantity by the higher quotations.

—The popular illuminating agent in France continues to be the old-fashioned candle, and in most hotels gas has not been distributed through pipes beyond the offices and dining rooms.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

POLITICAL PULL.

A Harvest of Corruption in Quincy.

Too Many Cheap Politicians.

Men Subsidized and Coerced and Favors Distributed.

To His Honor, Charles H. Bryant,
Mayor of the City of Quincy:

My Dear Sir:—I see by the daily papers that one of our venerable, much esteemed and life-long residents has been sued by a scavenger. When an administration, or its appointees, directly or indirectly resorts to the law for sympathy, owing to a lack of arguments on facts, it is prima facie evidence that they cannot stand the searchlight of publicity turned on their official acts. When such tactics are adopted it is the beginning of the end of that galaxy of officials and "God speed it" is the sentiment of all whom I meet. If I was not positive that the citizens of Quincy will awake to their political duty and relieve themselves from the thraldom by which they are now bound. I would tomorrow sell every dollars worth of property which I own, and like the Arab, silently move away.

Three years ago it became my duly to expose the political rottenness of the municipal administration, although it was only a yearling and the people made a change. The next incoming executive, I have no doubt, was honest in his intentions and meant to right that great wrong which still hovers over our city, but there was an abortion performed somewhere and the people at the next election decided that he was not the man for the place. They elected another person as chief executive to work the improvement in city affairs which has not yet appeared. The politicians said they could fool him, and I guess they did, and that controversy is not settled yet as nothing is ever settled until it is settled right. Two of those officials by political pull still retain the same relative positions of tnree years ago.

When officials by their official acts will convert the houses of our citizens into veritable death-traps, (slaughter-houses in disguise), I believe it is time that such a condition of affairs should be investigated and righted rather than condoned and covered up. I am patiently waiting for a new Board of Health, and you promise your friends that there would be a new bunch of violets on that board this year. I would like to ask one question. Why did you not keep your word and why did you send word to me that you did not want me to prefer any charges against the Inspector of Plumbing during your administration? When there is a new Board of Health I can have the opportunity of having invaded investig all its nakedness the criminal existence of the plumbing work in this city as approved by the Inspector of plumbing.

This suit brought by a scavenger against one of the most respected citizens made me laugh when I read it and reminded me of the various suits that were brought against me by some of the city officials with the hope that the attention of the people would be diverted from the real issue at stake and they would obtain a new lease of political power, but alas, fate proved otherwise. I will briefly allude to the manner in which I was treated during that time:

First, I was, during the Sears regime, jumped upon and sued criminally and civilly to the tune of $10,000. If they thought I was weak-kneed they found out their mistake for they never got a dollar.

Secondly, not having the courage to attack me again so soon the Board of Health and the Inspector of Plumbing had an apprentice of mine arrested because he was found by the Inspector turning a screw into a 4 inch soil pipe clamp on the outside of a building. The case was tried before a jury and the judge upon hearing the evidence immediately ordered the jury without leaving their seats to discharge the boy.

Thirdly, The Inspector of Plumbing, by a vote of the Board of Health, swore out a warrant for my arrest for putting in a short T. Y. This case was tried in the lower court and it took nearly six months of political juggling to convince Judge Humphrey that I was guilty. I appealed the case from the far-fetched decision, and it was tried before twelve of my countrymen. That contest was a bitter one on the part of the Inspector and the Board of Health for this case was brimful of politics and they must win at all hazards. District Attorney Harris never tried harder to win a government case, but they met their Waterloo, they not being able to convince even one juryman that I was guilty, while all of the twelve were satisfied that I was right. What was the great crime that I committed? It was this: I put in a soil pipe fitting that had been used ever since plumbing work was first put in, and the same fitting that is being put in now and is approved by the Inspector of Plumbing. Since that verdict in my favor, there has been a fair field and no favors, and I have not heard a pip from the Board of Health or the Inspector of Plumbing.

After the trial was over and I was sitting talking with my counsel in the court room, up came a counselor whom the Inspector of Plumbing has employed and said to my counsel, in my presence, "I think Bates and Keniley had better call it square now. Bates has won every time over to Dedham, and Keniley has won every time before the Board of Health. (That made me smile).

Pending the case just cited, which took nearly a year to reach and finally settle. I was annoyed and interrupted in my business in many ways by the Board of Health and the Inspector of Plumbing and I will cite one case in particular. I put in a long T Y branch, just what the plumbing ordinances called for, and I was ordered by the Board of Health to take it out or my license would be revoked at nine o'clock, May 7, 1901. I would not remove the fitting (as that was in strict compliance with the ordinance) neither was my license revoked. This was not all in this case: The Board of Health notified the builders of the house that the house could not be occupied until that fitting was removed, and those builders were obliged by the tyrannical action of the Board of Health to employ some other plumbers to remove that long T Y branch and put in a fitting that was not called for by the plumbing ordinance, and I was allowed to have my own sweet way because I was right.

I presume that the exposure of the unmitigated extravagance of the Board of Health of 1901, $7,737.36, as compared with the expenses of the Board of Health of 1885, $663.52, an increase of twelve hundred per cent., certainly demonstrates that the management of our Health Department is in a scandalous way. This Board of Health has been reprimanded and declared negligent in the discharge of their duty by Judge Avery and now it is up to you as Mayor from whom they received their appointment or holdover, as to what action you will take in the matter. The people are watching. A friend of mine in this city whose building was polluted with criminal plumbing made a complaint to the Board of Health, as he was very much wrought up over the condition of his plumbing after experienced, practical plumbers had condemned it.

He was preparing to bring action against the city for the condition of his plumbing when he was touched by political influence. He came to me and said, "Gus, I know I have asked you to help me in this matter, and I thank you for what you have done and I know you are right, but I have been given to understand that I cannot afford to antagonize certain political interests. If I did insist upon pushing the matter I would be annoyed and oppressed in a variety of ways, but if I would drop the matter and get into line I could have political office," and lo, and behold! he was elected to office. He also informed me that he was to run for Representative this Fall, but poor fellow—he has run his last race.

Now Mr. Mayor, create in any municipality the impression that a political pull will pass an order or pave the way for a nomination or appointment, or the payment of an unjust claim, and the seeds of political honesty will be scarce, but sooner or later there will come forth a harvest of corruption such as we are now harvesting in this city. Too many cheap politicians hold that it is legitimate fruit of the victory to make money out of the public treasury.

The city of Quincy spends many thousands of dollars in one way and another during the year without fair competitive bidding. This condition opens a wide opportunity for fraud as it is so easy to favor one dealer against another, so simple to reward one's friends and punish foes. This temptation some men will not resist.

With a large patronage under the control of a few men who are not directly responsible to the people' the danger is grave. Hundreds of men may be subsidized or coerced, political debts may be paid and favors distributed among political heelers through the control of such a source of patronage. This fact alone is deplorable but the loss to the tax-payers may be approximated in dollars and cents.

Respectfully yours,
G. B. Bates.

M'LEAN ISSUES WARNING

That Isthmian Traffic Must Not Be Obstructed

APPLIES TO BOTH FORCES

United States Naval Land Force In Panama District Will Probably Be Reinforced—Treaty Guarantee of Free Transit Will Be Made Good

Washington, Sept. 20.—Secretary of the Navy Moody yesterday made public the following cablegram, dated Sept. 19, received from Commander McLean of the Cincinnati, the officer in command of the United States naval forces on the isthmus:

"Have sent following communication to both parties: 'I have to inform you that the United States naval forces are guarding the railway trains and line of transit across the Isthmus of Panama from sea to sea; that no person whatever will be allowed to obstruct, embarrass or interfere in any manner with the trains or the route of transit. This is without prejudice or any desire to interfere in domestic contentions of the Colombians.'"

It was admitted by a high official of the navy department that this government is seriously considering a further reinforcement of the United States naval force on the isthmus, and that it is not at all unlikely that an additional force to operate along the line of railway will be ordered to the scene in a few days. It is understood that there is no present intention to order more warships to the isthmus, as the navy department considers the vessels already there, or under orders, ample to meet any emergency which may arise on the water.

It is stated in an authoritative quarter that the information furnished by Commander McLean to the navy department plainly shows that the naval force there is kept constantly on its guard to make good our treaty guarantee of free transit. So whatever additional force is sent will co-operate with the marines already there, and those enroute on the Panther, in a close watch on the railway.

Governor Salazar, who is the leading Colombian government representative on the isthmus, is barely 30 years of age. He attained his present position through gallant conduct during a siege of Panama several years ago. Partly from his youth and inexperience he has embarrassed the government to some extent on several occasions, notably when some months ago he issued an order to censor all the official foreign mail. By direction of his government he subsequently revoked the order.

Fighting Likely at Any Moment

Colon, Sept. 20.—Several hundred government troops were brought out yesterday morning and it was the intention of the authorities to have them take a train for Panama. Shortly after 8 o'clock 80 bluejackets from the United States cruiser Cincinnati, together with two quick-firing Colt guns, were landed in Colon. This action is believed to be due to the receipt of reliable information that a representative of the insurgent General Herrera is at San Pablo, a station on the railroad. Under these circumstances the government decided not to entrain the troops for Panama and they will remain at Colon.

In the meantime the railroad dispatched a special train with definite instructions from Commander McLean of the Cincinnati to General Herrera's representative at San Pablo, saying that insurgent troops would not be permitted to stop trains over the isthmus, or board them, as American marines were maintaining the traffic from sea to sea.

A large force of insurgents is said to be quite close to San Pablo. If this is so there is likely to be fighting at any moment.

The return of the special from San Pablo will bring further news of the situation.

For Strikers to Decide

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 20.—In order to set all rumors about a settlement of the miners' strike at rest, President Mitchell states that if any overtures are received from the operators they will be first submitted to a convention of the miners and the acceptance or rejection of any proposition made by the coal companies will rest with the men themselves.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Progress Somewhat Retarded by Continuation of Coal Strike

New York, Sept. 20.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Domestic trade continues active, high rates for money having thus far failed to check industrial operations or unsettle confidence. Stringency is considered only temporary and chiefly of importance to speculators, while large imports of gold promise relief. Crops are making encouraging progress, despite some injury from frost. Labor disputes are few, the anthracite coal strike being the only one that retards progress, and each week shows some increase in output. Fall distribution of merchandise has begun unusually early, while the volume of orders already placed indicates much the heaviest aggregate on record.

Traffic congestion causes complaint, yet railway earnings thus far available for September show a gain of 4.9 percent over last year's returns and 15.7 percent over 1900.

Official returns of foreign commerce during August show improvement in exports over the two preceding months and imports far surpassing the corresponding months in preceding years. This liberal buying in foreign markets testifies to well sustained domestic consumption, particularly as to iron and steel, but imports of coal are abnormal. It is most gratifying to find that the decrease in exports in comparison with last year's figures was all in farm products, a class of trade that may readily be regained, while there was an increase in other exports of over $3,500,000.

Light on Murder Mystery

New York, Sept. 20.—The mystery of the murder of Mrs. Annie Pulitzer, whose nude body was found in the Morris canal, has been cleared up by the discovery that the woman was killed in a flat on West Fifty-Eighth street. Captain Titus of the Detective bureau says that the murder was committed by a man named Hooper Young, who has recently been employed in a cheap restaurant. The woman's body was kept for a few days under the sink in the kitchen of the flat in which she was killed. Young is believed to have fled the city. Mrs. Pulitzer's character was not of the best.

Miraculous Escape From Death

Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 20.—Captain Unge of the engineer corps and Ragnar Wilkander, a civil engineer, made a balloon ascension yesterday in an attempt to beat the long distance record. In five minutes the balloon had travelled four miles and reached a height of two miles, when it exploded. The car dropped at a terrific rate in view of King Oscar and thousands of horrified spectators, until, nearing the ground, the remnants of the balloon opened out like a parachute and the two men reached the ground unhurt. The explosion of the balloon was caused by a too quick ascension.

Three Hours' Journey In Airship

London, Sept. 20.—Stanley Spencer, an English aeronaut, yesterday successfully accomplished a remarkable flight over London in an airship of his own invention. It is estimated that his ship travelled nearly 30 miles. From observations of those on the ground, Stanley seemed to have complete control of his vessel. He started from the Crystal palace at 4:15 and executed an easy descent three hours later at the little village of Eastcote. Spencer's airship has the appearance of a whale in general outline.

Boer Generals In Belgium

Antwerp, Sept. 20.—Generals Botha, Delarey and We Wet arrived here yesterday and were received with great enthusiasm by crowds of people estimated to have numbered 300,000. The demonstration was not marred by a single anti-British cry.

Dam Destroyed by Dynamite

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 20.—A dam on Solomon's creek, from which the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal company obtained water to operate its Maffet washery, was blown up by dynamite yesterday. Striking miners are accused of blowing up the dam.

To Succeed Henderson

Marshalltown, Ia., Sept. 20.—After the conference of Republican leaders yesterday C. E. Albrook, an attorney, was announced as a candidate to succeed Congressman Henderson.

THE FIRST STEP

Of the child is an event in the mother's life. How proud she feels when the attempt to walk is begun so early as to evidence childish courage and sturdy strength. Such pride should be enjoyed by every mother. But it often happens that the child is timid, weak and deficient in vitality, and clings to the mother's arms with no desire to walk or play.

Mothers should learn that to have strong children they must themselves be strong, for the child's strength is the gift of the mother.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription by expectant mothers gives them health and strength to give their children. It nourishes the nerves, strengthens the body and gives great muscular strength and elasticity, so that the baby's advent is practically painless.

"I have been using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and can say it is just what you advertise it to be, and can cheerfully recommend it," writes Mrs. Victor J. Hadin, of Leonardville, Riley Co., Kansas. "I began taking it just two months before baby came and was greatly benefited by its use. The doctor who attended me said I did about as well as any one he had seen (as I was sick only about three hours), and also that your 'Favorite Prescription' was 'the one patent medicine' which he did have faith in.

"We now have a darling baby boy, strong and healthy, who weighed nine pounds when born (July 28th). During this month he has gained three and one-half pounds."

"Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women.

Foot Ball Team.

A football team was organized in Wollaston last night by the prominent players of the vicinity who have been assured of the hearty support of the many followers of the game. Horace Taylor was elected captain and practice will begin under his direction on Monday. Games will be played on Saturday afternoons throughout the season at Merrymount Park with the strongest amateur teams in the state, the first game on October 4. Challenges should be addressed to manager Harry R. Osgood, 266 Farrington street, Wollaston. At an early date a full schedule for the season will be published.

Brockton's Big Fair.

One should not consider his vacation season ended for the year till he has been to the Brockton Fair. It will be held this year on Sept. 30 and Oct. 1, 2 and 3. If one hasn't been, his education is at stake until he has seen the fair. There one will see a continuous performance of stage events; trotting and pacing, including this year the track novelty, best two in three heats and more speed, instead of three in five; four-horse Roman chariot races on the half-mile track; a human torpedo shot out of a balloon; Schreyer coasting on his bicycle down an incline and into a tank from a great height; the horse show, attracting human and equine bluebloods; bicycle races; three fine bands to discourse harmony; the midway to present oddities of humanity, and the agricultural exhibit, the art department, the hall show and everything the eye can desire, right up to the Brockton standard.

—Hawks have been seen to follow in the wake of a moving railway train, to swoop down on small birds that were suddenly disturbed and frightened by noise, and therefore for the moment were off their guard.

THE LAUNCH.

Crowds Witness the Grand Event.

Not a Hitch in Arrangements.

Distinguished Guests Come from Afar.

The first war vessel ever built in Quincy was successfully launched this noon at 12.23, seven months ahead of time, from the yards of the Fore River Ship and Engine Co., and as she took her first dip into her native element a hearty cheer went up from thousands of patriotic throats.

Not only did the immense populace that witnessed the launch cheer and wave their hats, but the boating craft that was gathered in the river sounded their welcome from half a hundred whistles, while the whistle at the works chimed in merrily.

It was an animated scene, such a one as has never been seen before in Quincy. There was a large crowd at the launch of the seven-master some weeks ago, but that of today was fully as large if not larger, and is eftimated at 30,000 to 40,069.

The noble cruiser which may later be called upon by show of arms to defend the flag all Americans love so well, looked majestic and powerful. At her bow was the union jack while the stars and stripes flapped triumphantly in the breeze from the stearn.

From the jury mast was the white flag of the Fore River Co. and across her deck was the code signal flags. At her bow was a large platform draped with the American colors. On this were the distinguisned visitors and the band.

A few minutes past 12 o'clock a shrill whistle sounded, and immediately half a hundred or more hammers were heard driving home the first wedges. This was followed by another whistle, the signal to start the wedges that shonld set the cradle against her side.

Then came the signal to knock away the final blocks, and a signal to Miss Carlton to cut the cord which held the last block in place. As the taut cord fell there was a second or two of deathlike stillness. Then the cruiser began to move slowly toward the water.

As she started down the ways Miss Macomber holding the silver covered bottle, struck the bow a vigorous blow. The sparkling champaign flew, covering not only the bow of the vessel but the people near at hand as well.

It was exactly 12.23 o'clock when the Des Moines started, and two minutes later she was in the water, and the event that thousandss had travelled hundreds of miles to witness was over.

After the launch the guests to the number of 1000 were entertained at lunch in the mould loft.

GUESTS ARRIVED.

A Special Train Brings Iowa Party and Others.

The special train having on board the distinguished party from Des Moines, and the State officials of Iowa, arrived a few minutes before 11 o'clock, having followed the 10.28 train which was run in two sections.

The special was made up of three parlor cars. It was a brilliant party, the showy uniforms of the navy and army officials, together with the elaborate and handsome gowns worn by the ladies of the party, made an attractive picture.

Carriages were in waiting to convey the party to the works.

Dramatic Club.

At the meeting of the Ideal Dramatic club of Quincy on Thursday evening, the following officers were elected: President, Mr. M. D. Phelan; Vice President, Mrs. Herbert R. Holmes; Secretary, Mr. W. E. Peptiron, the Food Medicine,

Readily Assimilated by the Most Delicate,

Has many advantages as a preparation of iron, in that it does not cause constipation, nor disturb the stomach, nor injure the teeth, nor leave any inky or metallic flavor in the mouth.

A Specific for paleness, nervousness, weakness, the effects of overwork and all excesses, of close confinement in impure air, of care, anxiety and worry. It's the great strengthener.

A Lady Stenographer Holding a responsible position in a private office in Lowell, writes:—"I have now been taking Peptiron about a month, and am sure it it doing me good. There is no question about it, for the pallor of countenance has changed to the more healthful color. I am not so nervous and work seems to turn off more easily."

Peptiron is made in two forms: In a liquid—an aromatic cordial elixir—at $1 per bottle, also in chocolate-coated pills at 50c. or $1 per box. By C. I. HOOD CO., proprietors Hood's Sarsaparilla, Lowell, Mass., U. S. A.

CITY BREVITIES.

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

The Boston Floating hospital made its last trip for the season on Monday.

L. M. Pratt & Son are making an attraction display in their window today.

The F. D. Fellows Co. have put some attractive brass signs about their show windows.

Accounts on the estate of John Pederhen were allowed at Probate court this week.

The oldest private school in town is the Greenleaf, which enters on its 31st year next Monday.

The Wollaston W. C. T. U. will meet Friday, Sept. 26, with Mrs. George A. Brown, Farrington street.

Frank F. Crane closed his store today from 10 to 2 o'clock, in honor of the launching of the Des Moines.

The faculty and pupils of the Quincy Mansion school attended the launching today.

Miss Beatrice Smith and Miss Annie Marden of the Wollaston school are now at Mrs. J. C. Mitchell's, 81 Prospect avenue

Mrs. Jennie Margaret Crane was on Wednesday appointed executor of the will of James Smith, late of Quincy; bond $1600.

The members of the bar in the East Norfolk district have petitioned the County Commissioners for a new court room at Quincy.

The house numbered 1260 Hancock street on City Square, owned by Henry H. Faxon, looks very fine with its new windows and coat of paint.

Are you going with the multitude to the Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial Fair at South Weymouth next Thursday, Friday and Saturday?

The launching today was a better one for spectators than that of the seven-master, as there were more vantage points from which it could be seen.

The government inspectors at the Fore River Works kept open house this afternoon and entertained many of their friends at their offices in the office building.

Firemens' muster next Thursday, horse trots Friday, at the Meymouth Fair; $3500 in purses and premiums. Martland's band and the Rockland band will furnish music.

Theodore Hermanson, while riding a bicycle on Granite street last night ran into a team going the opposite direction. He was cut in the chin and his left knee injured.

Sister Mary Frederick of the convent of the Sisters of Mercy, Dover, N. H., is visiting her mother, Mrs. Collins of Madison avenue, South Quincy. She is accompanied by the Superior of the convent, Mother Euphrasia.

Sacrament of the Lord's supper will be observed at the United Presbyterian church Sunday, Sept. 28. Preaching on Thursday night by the pastor at 7.30 and it is expected Dr. Alexander will preach on Friday.

The two beautiful Boston ferns in Mr. Henry Emerson's show windows are fine large specimens. He evidently knows how to grow them and his success is the envy of many women passers-by.

The funeral of Mrs. Johanna Maboney was held from St. John's church this morning. Services were conducted by Rev. Francis A. Friguglietti, assisted by Rev. J. P. Cuffe and Rev. John J. Casey. Schmidts mass was sung by choir.

There will be an extra meeting of the Fragment society at the Unitarian chapel Wennesday afternoon, Sept. 24, at 3 o'clock. Plans for the coming fair will be discussed, and the committee in charge of the Sunday school table are requested to be present at this meeting.

Sunday, Sept. 28, will be observed at the Universalist church as Sunday school rally day. There will be a harvest concert at the afternoon service. It is hoped that all former members of the Sunday school will attend and it is expected that the services will be of special interest to them. In connection with the Sunday school rally there will be a harvest supper and social Sept. 30.

LAUNCHING.

The street railway gave excellent service at the launching today.

most vulnerable parts of her, are enclosed in a cylinder of which the lower part is protected by the element in which she floats, the upper by this armor, which is one and a half inches thick on the slopes and one half an inch on the flat, its value being not so much in its weight as its slant, which is sufficient to turn aside any shot.

This curved protective deck is no new thing, being common to our other naval vessels and indeed to most fighting ships of modern build. There are two other points of protection, one against gun shot, in which ships of the Des Moines type are unique, however. The first has its birth in the fields and farms about the city for which she is named. This is the protective belt of corn-pith cellulose. This substance, made of the pith of the corn stalk, is packed between the sides of the ship and her inner "skin" in such fashion that any shot piercing her at or below the water line will have to pass through it.

The valuable property of this cellulose is that the moment it is wet it rapidly swells and any water which might be entering the ship by way of a shot hole, would act upon the pith at the sides of the hole, swell it, and effectually plug the hole until such time as the vessel could make port and have her steel plate replaced or repaired. The belts of cornpith celulose on the Des Moines is estimated at 6720 cubic feet, so that in a fierce engagement shot after shot might enter her at or below the water line without danger of sinking the ship, whatever other damage it might do.

THE OTHER NOVELTY.

In the building of the cruiser is the sheathing of Georgia pine. This covers and is bolted to the hull without, making her look exactly like a wooden ship. The sheathing is put on in order that she may be coppered, giving her an advantage over painted steel ships which must be frequently docked or else they become foul with weeds and barnacles which cling to the bottom in such quantities as to greatly impede their progress.

Many a ship sails out of the home port as clean as a new pin, breasts the horizon line to the south, and makes the long miles of the rosy tropic seas at slower and slower speed, finally after a few brief weeks to bring up at the nearest dock with her bottom trailing weeds and bearing shell fish innumerable. This docking is expensive and must be avoided where possible. It is not possible to copper an iron ship direct. Galvanic action sets up from the salt in the sea water between the copper and steel, the steel corrodes, and the copper falls off. Hence slow speed, expense of coal consumption, or constant docking.

The new scheme, advocated by Rear Admiral Hichborn of the bureau of construction and repair, is to carefully sheathe the hull with Georgia pine bolted to the steel, the bolt heads recessed and puttied that they may not connect the copper and the hull, any spaces between the two filled with red lead, and the copper put on the outside in precisely the same manner that it has been applied to wooden ships for generations back.

Copper has the peculiar property of scaling off at the surface so that when weeds or barnicles fasten to it the point of contact becomes a minute scale and drops the parasite astern. Thus the hull stays clean a much longer time, never in fact becomes seriously foul, and economy in docking charges and saving of time are the result.

After the wooden sheathing is applied holes are bored in it at small intervals and a mixture of red lead and oil forced into these holes at a pressure of 15 pounds to the square inch. Thus all spaces into which water might leak and corrode are filled, and it is a noteworthy fact that the sheathing of the Des Moines is so well fitted and so firmly applied that but a few hundred pounds of lead have been squeezed in between the two.

Vessels of like size in English shipyards are expected to take many tons of this material; indeed in one English ship 100 tons of red lead are said to have been squeezed between the planking and the steel of the hull before the space was filled. Thus does the American shipwright in the cleverness of his workmanship far exceed his English brother.

The Des Moines
HAS TWIN SCREWS,

vertical triple expansion, or, to speak more exactly, three stage compound, engines, and water tube boilers. Steam is used at 275 pounds to the square inch and the grate surface is 300 square feet. She has a complete electrical equipment, including two electric winches for hoisting purposes. an engine-turning electric motor, 10 motors for ammunition hoists, incandescent and arc lights and lanterns, ventilating equipment and fans, signals, and so on, all operated by electricity. She has two masts fore and aft rigged and two stacks one aft the other. She will carry a 30-foot steam launch, a 30-foot launch for oars, two 28-foot cutters, a 28-foot whaleboat and a whaleboat gig of similar length and an 18-foot dingy.

Taken all in all the cruiser is a vessel that any city might be proud to build or to have named after her, for that she will do her namesake credit in action as well as appearence none can doubt. Naval warfare from Salamis down has been an issue of men far more than of ships. China and Spain have in the last decade again reminded the world that the strength of a navy is to be measured neither by tonnage alone, nor armor, nor guns. Our Yankee coinage, of idioms has made a proberb of our faith in the "men behind the guns." Their excellence is accepted as an attribute peculiarly American.

The enrapturing success with which the new complex machine, a modern cruiser, was used first in civilized warfare in 1898 was due, not merely to the American birth of its officers, nor on their special training, but in a large measure to the sturdy grit, plain horse sense, and cool efficiency of the able seamen who manned the guns and pointed them, who stood at the helm and signal halliard, who watched and handled boiler and engine—the strokers, the engineers, the plain men of all sorts who work or fight with equal coolness and efficiency.

These were the men who won the Santiago fight and the battle of Manila Bay. And it is such men as these that have laid the keel of the Des Moines, riveted her plates, balanced and valved her engines, and fitted her pine sheathing to such nicety that the result is a wonder and an eye opener to shipbuilders. Fifteen hundred of them swarm in and about the big yard of the Fore River works at Quincy, and it is they and men like them who are fighting the battles of the cruiser today. They are the men that stand behind the men behind the guns, and without their skill, wisdom, and patience the valor of the others could not prevail.

Robertson—Cummings.

Dr. Frederick W. Robertson, a popular young physician of Brackett street, East Milton, and Miss Louise Cummings daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Cummings, of Natick, were married on Wednesday evening at St. Paul's church, Natick. The church was beautifully decorated, autumn foliage and flowers predominating. While the people were gathering Mr. John H. Gutterson, of Weymouth presided at the organ and also played the wedding march. The bride was attended by Miss Ellen Fiske, and given in marriage by her father. She was beautifully gowned in a rich white silk cut en traine. Mr. Jesse B. Baxter of East Milton was best man, and the ushers were: Rev. A. A. Mulnix of East Milton, George E. Fisher of Natick, Dr. O. S. Mayhew of New Bedford and Dr. F. W. Sleeper of Boston. Rev. F. H. Bigelow rector of St. Paul's church was assisted in tying the nuptial knot by Rev. F. E. Emrich of South Framingham.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, after which Dr. and Mrs. Robertson left on a tour to the Provinces. On there return they will reside at East Milton where Dr. Robertson has built up a large practice and made a host of friends.

East Milton people were well represented at the church and at the reception. Some notably pretty gowns were noticed, many having new ones to honor the occasion.

Not Notified.

The hearing on widening the Hancock street bridge over the railroad near the Atlantic depot, to have been held in the Probate court room this morning by the County Commissioners, was postponed on account of the informality of the notice.

Mayor Bryant and a number of the city officials and citizens were present to urge the widening of the bridge. The chairman of the board announced that the hearing would have to be postponed. The reason was that the clerk neglected in his notice of the meeting to notify the street railway company, and that it would be necessary to issue a new notice for the meeting.

The Commissioners later visited the Quincy Point bridge.

After Absence of Over Four Years In the Arctic

ACCIDENT TO MACHINERY

Compelled Her to Make Homeward Passage Under Sail—Story of Expedition by Sverdrup, Preceded by a Controversy With Peary

Haugesund, Norway, Sept. 20.—The Arctic steamer Fram, homeward bound, with the Sverdrup expedition on board, passed Utsire yesterday and took a pilot on board.

Captain Sverdrup reports that for three years the Fram lay nearly motionless, imprisoned in the ice in Jones' sound, a channel between Baffin bay and the Arctic ocean. All the attempts to blow up the ice around the Fram proved fruitless, but in July of 1902 a heavy southern stream loosened the vessel from the ice.

The Fram left Gothaab, Greenland, Aug. 16, 1902, but an accident to her machinery compelled her to make the homeward passage entirely under sail. Members of the expedition shot 100 musk-oxen, which were eaten.

Surgeon Braskrus died while the Fram was in the north, and his body was buried in a hole cut in the ice. After the death of the doctor Captain Sverdrup took his place and attended to several cases of illness.

The crew of the Fram speak of their leader in terms of hearty praise.

Captain Otto Sverdrup was the captain of the Fram on Nansen's great voyage in Arctic waters north of Europe and Asia. He brought the Fram safely back to Europe. On June 24, 1898, Sverdrup sailed from Christiana, Norway, on the Fram with 16 men for northwest Greenland. The principal purpose of the expedition was to explore and map the northern coastline of Greenland and to make an attempt to connect cape Washington, the most northerly point known on the west coast, with Independence bay, discovered by Peary on the east coast.

This is the very work that Peary so successfully accomplished in 1900. Indeed, his plans so closely resembled those of Peary as to disturb the latter's peace of mind, and the jealousy which developed when Sverdrup first announced his intention to explore the region which Peary, with a certain amount of justice, held to be his particular preserves, increased with time and the crossing of the paths of the two parties. Peary's plan of campaign was spread broadcast over the world long before Sverdrup's intention to explore the region north of Greenland was made known.

It can readily be seen that Peary and his friends were greatly annoyed when it was announced that Sverdrup would work in that vicinity. So warm did the controversy become that in April, 1898, Sverdrup formally disclaimed any intention of interfering with Peary either in obtaining dogs, hiring Eskimos or in the nature of his explorations. He said in effect that his plan for exploring the region north of Greenland was formed late in 1896 before he had heard anything of Peary's intentions; that it differed from Peary's in that it was a purely scientific expedition, whereas Peary's watchword was, "the pole."

Sverdrup was to travel on skies, while Peary traveled on sleds and utilized Eskimos; lastly Sverdrup's experience in crossing Greenland on the inland ice and his journey on the Fram were cited as showing that he was capable of forming his own plans and depending on his own experiences in any work that he might undertake. Very little was known of the details of Sverdrup's plans beyond the fact that in a general way they seemed much like those mapped out by Peary. He started on the Fram in 1898. The vessel was provisioned for five years. Sverdrup was less lucky than Peary at the beginning, the Fram being frozen in a few miles north of Cape Sabine and sixty miles south of the Windward.

Foiled for the time being in his scheme for a far-north expedition, he turned his attention to the Ellsmere Hinterland, and with considerable success. Dr. Kann of the Stein expedition reported coming across his flags in the portion of that region visited by him and his associates. Peary met him early in 1899 returning to Etah for dogs in preparation for a contemplated journey round the north boundary of Greenland to Cape Bismarck on the east coast. This eastern coast of Greenland is entirely unknown and if he had succeeded in mapping it would have rendered a distinctive service to Arctic discovery.

Having secured his complement of dogs, he sailed north on Aug. 16, 1899, since which time until reported Thursday by Peary nothing had been heard from him. It will be seen that he preceded Peary north by nearly a year. When the Sverdrup and Peary parties separated in August, 1899, it was Sverdrup's immediate purpose to explore the land and water in and around Jones' sound beyond Cape Eden.

The Norwegian government, which owns the Fram, granted the captain permission to use her and presented him with a sum of money with which to fit out the vessel. Captain Sverdrup's crew included the following-named persons: Naval Lieutenant Baumann, astronomer; Lieutenant Ysachsen, cartographer; Dr. Svendsen, meteorologist; Dr. Bay, zoologist; Dr. Simmons, botanist; Dr. Schei, geologist, and nine seamen.

BELGIAN QUEEN DEAD

End Came Suddenly, With Husband and Family Absent

Spa, Belgium, Sept. 20.—Marie Henriette, Queen of the Belgians, died here suddenly last night. Neither her husband, members of her family nor her doctors were present at the time of her death. She was seated at a table eating a light dinner, when she was seized with an attack of syncope. Dr. Guillaume was summoned immediately, but her majesty was dead before he arrived. Two members of her suite were with the queen during her last moments.

King Leopold has left Bagneres-de-Luchon, France, for Spa, and other members of the royal family have been telegraphed for.

Queen Marie Henriette was a daughter of the late Archduke Joseph of Austria. She was born in 1836, and was married in 1853 to Prince Leopold of Belgium, son of King Leopold I, who ascended to the throne at the death of his father as Leopold II, in 1865.

The late queen was noted for her piety and charity, and was also a noted and brilliant horsewoman.

She had been ill for about three years past of a malady of the heart and of recent months her condition had been so serious that little hope of her recovery was entertained.

Murphy Made Grand Sachem

New York, Sept. 20.—Charles F. Murphy was last night elected leader of Tammany Hall at the meeting of the executive committee. A resolution declaring that "the position and duties heretofore occupied and performed by the committee of three be hereafter occupied and performed by Charles F. Murphy" was carried by a vote of 29 to 9. Frank J. Goodwin protested against W. S. Devery becoming the accredited representative of the Ninth district on the ground of fraud. The matter was referred to the committee on elections. After the meeting Devery made a formal demand for his credentials, but was unable to get any satisfaction.

Road to Moros' Stronghold

Washington, Sept. 20.—On the urgent recommendation of General Chaffee Secretary Root yesterday authorized an expenditure of $20,000 for immediate use in the construction of a military road in the island of Mindanao from Iligan to a populous stronghold of the moros. Although the main purpose of this road is to encourage friendly dealings with the natives, it undoubtedly will be of immense value in any military movement which may become necessary to secure the submission of the people to American sovereignty.

Peary's Foot Frostbitten

Washington, Sept. 20.—It is said at the navy department that the question of assignment of duty of Commander Peary, civil engineer, will depend in great measure on what his future plans as to exploration are. He will undergo an operation to one of his feet which was badly frostbitten in the far north, and is not expected to be ready for duty until the latter part of November.

England's Prompt Response

Washington, Sept. 20.—So far only one answer to the state department's identical note concerning the Roumanian Jews has come to hand. This was from Great Britain, and promises to look into the subject matter, which promise appears to have been kept by prompt issue of an invitation by Great Britain to Germany to open negotiations on the subject.

Firing Standard Below Par

London, Sept. 20.—A special order issued last night by Earl Roberts says that his experiences in South Africa brought to him a realization of the fact that British soldiers cannot yet take the fullest advantage of the admirable weapons which are furnished them. He criticises British officers for their lack of interest in shooting practice.

Earthquakes In Australia

Adelaide, Australia, Sept. 20.—A severe earthquake shoke experienced here last evening caused a panic among the people of the city. Buildings, including churches, were damaged, and several narrow escapes from death were recorded. Many northern towns experienced shocks yesterday.

Missing From the Massachusetts

Washington, Sept. 20.—The navy department was informed yesterday by the commander of the battleship Massachusetts of the disappearance from that ship of Lieutenant Owen. The officials of the department are not prepared to assign any reason for the disappearance.

Rewards For Capture of Boodlers

St. Louis, Sept. 20.—Governor Dockery yesterday authorized Circuit Attorney Folk to offer rewards of $300 each for the arrest and return of Delegate Kelly and former Delegates Hartman, Madera, Sheridan, Decker and Lehmann, indicted for bribery and perjury.

No Hebrew Blood In Roosevelt

Newport, R. I., Sept. 20.—Discussion over the lineage of President Roosevelt has brought out an official statement from him that he is of Dutch and Scotch-Irish origin, and not of Hebrew ancestry.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Sunday, Sept. 21.
Sun rises—5:30; sets—5:45.
Moon rises—8:09 p. m.
High water—1:15 a. m.; 1:45 p. m.

But few changes in the Atlantic atmospheric conditions have occurred during the last 24 hours. East of the Rockies the weather continues to be dominated by an area of high pressure. The weather in New England will be cloudy and unsettled.

TRAIN STRUCK CARRIAGE

Two Women Killed Outright and Man Soon Afterward Succumbs

Portland, Me., Sept. 20.—The Montreal express over the Grand Trunk bound toward Portland killed three people at the crossing at West Pownal last night. The victims of the accident were: Abel Bowie, aged 71; his sister, Rebecca Bowie, aged 64, and Addie Bowie, his daughter, aged 27.

The three were driving from Durham to North Pownal, where they had been visiting, with a horse and buggy. The train struck the buggy at the crossing and completely demolished it. The occupants were thrown from 10 to 25 feet and the two women were picked up dead. Mr. Bowie lived about an hour. They lived in this city. The crossing is particularly blind at this point and several accidents have happened there.

Prediction of Milk War

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 20.—Charles D. Sage, an officer of the New England Milk Producers' union and president of the section of which the Brookfields is considered the centre, says that a milk war is likely through failure of the union and the representatives of the big contractors to agree upon a winter price schedule. He predicts that after this month shipments from this section by car to Boston will stop. The farmers want 40 cents a can for milk delivered in Boston. The contractors offer 36½ cents.

Further Inducements Wanted

North Brookfield, Mass., Sept. 20.—Prospects do not appear good for an immediate reopening of the Bachelier shoe factory. Former operatives signed a petition to the company, promising to work for reasonable wages and to do all they could to avoid labor troubles. Business men signed a petition for the company to return, offering support of the movement to give free water and lower taxes. Yesterday the company announced that proper inducements to resume had not been made.

Coal For Employes at $6.50

Lowell, Mass., Sept. 20.—The price of coal has jumped to $12 in Lowell. The United States Bunting company succeeded in getting a surplus of 200 tons before the strike came on, and the employes of the company have been notified that every father of a family working in the mill, or any two girls working for the support of the same family, can buy a ton of the coal for $6.50, the price at which it was bought.

Chance to Return to Prison

Manchester, N. H., Sept. 20.—Henry Lloyd smashed a display window in A. E. Dumas' jewelry store yesterday afternoon and attempted to steal a tray of watches and diamonds. He was chased and caught. When asked why he did it, he said that it was his business. He says he finished a four years' sentence at the Connecticut state prison a week ago.

Stabbing Affray In Saloon

New Haven, Sept. 20.—James Flynn and John Laureo, an Italian, became involved in a quarrel in a saloon last night, during which, witnesses say, Laureo stabbed Flynn three times. Flynn was taken to Grace hospital, where he is in a critical condition. Laureo was arrested to await the result of Flynn's injuries.

Coal Thrown Overboard

Boston, Sept. 20.—Steamer Alderney, Louisberg, C. B., for Everett with coal, which touched bottom off Scituate yesterday, was leaking considerably upon her arrival here. She was towed to Everett. The Alderney threw overboard some 70 tons of coal while aground.

Smallpox Makes Its Reappearance

Nashua, N. H., Sept. 20.—Smallpox reappeared here yesterday after the city has been free of infection for months. The board of health is worried over the cases, which are well developed, the patients living in a thickly populated section.

Will Go to Highest Court

San Juan, P. R., Sept. 20.—Hobart S. Bird, editor of the San Juan News, was convicted of libel yesterday and sentenced to four months' imprisonment. The defendant was denied the right of testifying. He was charged with publishing libelous articles concerning former Judge Ramos, whom Bird was instrumental in forcing to resign the presidency of the district bench. The case will be appealed to the supreme court of the United States.

Tom Reed's Terse Comment

Washington, Sept. 20.—Ex-Speaker Reed, when asked what, in his opinion, would be the effect of Speaker Henderson's attitude to the Republican party, said: "Well, you know I am out of politics and I look to others for political forecasts, but I might say that some times a great conflagration may be started by a very little match."

Imported Coal Arrives

New York, Sept. 20.—The first consignment of Welsh anthracite coal, which large dealers and consumers have found it necessary to import on account of the coal strike, reached this port yesterday from Swansea, Wales. It is reported that orders have been placed in Wales for hundreds of thousands of tons of anthracite.

South Dakota Farmers' Loss

Huron, S. D., Sept. 20.—The most destructive prairie fire in the history of Beadle county is reported. Not a grain or hay stack is left standing in an area of 12 miles long by 5 wide, and many farmers lost their entire grain crops.

Heard Her Own Funeral Sermon

Paducah, Ky., Sept. 20.—Caroline Bacon, aged 70, of this county believes she is nearing the grave, and has had her pastor preach her funeral sermon so she could get the benefit of it.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 21—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—The fullness of God; how secured.—Eph. iii, 14-21.

In the topical references we have one of the most remarkable prayers to be found in the word of God. Paul was a man of prayer. He not only prayed for himself, but his prayers were constantly offered to the throne of God for Christian people everywhere and especially in behalf of the Christian churches in which he was interested. He wrote to the Romans that without ceasing he made mention of them in his prayers, and in this letter to the Ephesians we have an illustration of one of his best prayers offered in the behalf of a Christian church. This prayer consists of a preface of four petitions and the following doxology: "Now unto Him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto Him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. Amen."

As a consummation of all the petitions of this prayer Paul prays that the Ephesians may be "filled with all the fullness of God." This is a peculiar expression. It does not mean that it is possible for the Ephesians to contain the fullness of God. This would be absurd. They are finite; God is infinite. It would be absolutely impossible to confine infinity in the limits of finiteness. What Paul asks is that the Ephesians may be filled with the same sort of graces and perfections that are characteristic of God. They could not contain in themselves the perfect love that is contained in God, and yet to the measure of their fullness they could contain the same kind of love as characterizes God. The difference would be in the degree and not in the quality. The smaller vessel could be filled from the larger one and possess the same material contained in it, although it could not contain the same amount. In this sense Paul prays that the Ephesians may be filled with the fullness of God. He asks that they may have the graces of character and the qualities of disposition that characterize God, He possessing in perfection what they would possess in imperfection.

The question asked in the topic is, How is this fullness of God to be received? In the topical reference it is suggested by Paul that it is to be the result of the possession of the qualities which he has prayed for before. There are four of these petitions. 1. Paul prays that they may be strengthened with might in the inner man by the Holy Ghost. 2. He prays that Christ may dwell in their hearts by faith. 3. He prays that they may be able to comprehend what are the breadth and length and depth and height of the love of God. 4. He prays that they may be able to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge. The result of all these petitions is to be the fullness of God. They include the possession of the Holy Ghost, the indwelling of Jesus Christ and the comprehension of the love of God and of Christ. If, therefore, we want to know how we may be filled with the fullness of God, answer is found here. The Holy Ghost will strengthen us; then Christ must dwell in our hearts, and, being rooted and grounded in love, we must apprehend and understand the love of God and the love of Christ. Being thus possessed of God and thus understanding the character of God, we cannot but also possess the disposition of God. The Holy Ghost and the Lord Jesus Christ cannot dwell in our hearts without manifesting themselves in our dispositions and in our lives. Being of the same nature as God, they will impart this nature to us, and we will possess to the fullest measure possible the same disposition and the same character that God himself possesses.

BIBLE READINGS.

John i, 15-18; iii, 34-36; xiv, 1-6; Acts i, 1-11; I Cor. iii, 5-14; Gal. v, 19-26; Eph. i, 1-12; Col. i, 12-20; ii, 8-10; iii, 12-17.

Put Love In Your Heart.

Crowd what money you may into your purse you find your purse still empty. But with love in your heart all your drafts are honored. And though you who doubt love question its logic, I say that though love is illogical it is sufficient. For that love which was logical or just would come short at the hub. You think love is away up or down, somewhere out of sight and beyond use. But love, too, and in larger senses, is food and raiment and guards and beautifies the sources of life. Indeed there is no practical thing but love. Your bargains and sales are in the last degree ridiculous and useless. But when man dies for man, or when life commands the services of life in any of the humble byways of experience, the only practical work of the spheres has been accomplished.—Conservator.

Just This Minute.

If we're thoughtful, just this minute,
In whate'er we say and do;
If we put a purpose in it
That is honest through and through,
We shall gladden life and give it
Grace to make it all sublime;
For, though life is long, we live it
Just this minute at a time.

Just this minute we are going
Toward the right or toward the wrong;
Just this minute we are sowing
Seeds of sorrow or of song.
Just this minute we are thinking
On the ways that lead to God
Or in idle dreams are sinking
To the level of the clod.

Yesterday is gone; tomorrow
Never comes within our grasp;
Just this minute's joy or sorrow,
That is all our hands may clasp.
Just this minute! Let us take it
As a pearl of precious price
And with nigh endeavor make it
Fit to shine in paradise.

Perhaps It's Worms

The worried mother often wonders what ails a child who is cross and languid. She generally treats it for everything but the most probable cause—worms. Over 75 per cent. of the ailments of children can be traced directly or indirectly to worms. You can see the result in the languid looks, irritable disposition, restless sleep, variable appetite. What the child needs is

True's PIN WORM Elixir

If worms are present, they will be expelled. If there are no worms, it will act as a tonic—clean out the stomach and bowels through its gentle laxative properties. Given at regular intervals it will guard against worms. It has been in use over 50 years. It is purely vegetable. Harmless under any conditions for children or adults.

SEVENTY-EIGHT KILLED

In an Awful Panic In a Crowded Negro Church

TRAMPLED AND SMOTHERED

Congregation Thought Cry of Fire Had Been Raised and All Rushed For One Outlet, Where Struggling Mass Was Piled Ten Feet Deep

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 20.—Seventy-eight people known to be dead, and 80 injured, some perhaps fatally, is the result of a panic which occurred in the Shiloh (negro) Baptist church here last night during the evening session of the negro National Baptist convention

Fifteen hundred delegates were crowded into the church, which had only a seating capacity of 400, when the audience was thrown into a stampede by a conflict between two of the delegates in the rear of the church. The cries of "fight," which followed, the audience mistook for an alarm of "fire," and in the wild effort to escape, 78 persons were crushed to death, 80 more receiving injuries, some of which may prove fatal. The list of dead and injured included only negroes in attendance.

The disaster occurred at 9 o'clock, just as Booker T. Washington had concluded his address to the national convention of colored Baptists, and for three hours the scenes around the church were indescribable. Dead bodies were strewn in every direction and the ambulance service of the city was utterly unable to move them until after 1 o'clock this morning. The injured were attended to first and meanwhile dozens of dead bodies were arranged in rows on the ground outside the church awaiting removal to the various undertaking establishments, while more than a score were laid out on the benches inside.

Booker Washington had just concluded his address when Judge Billou, a negro lawyer from Baltimore, engaged in a dispute with the choir leader concerning an unoccupied seat. It is said a blow was struck. Some one in the choir cried "They're fighting." Mistaking the word "fighting" for "fire," the congregation rose en masse and started for the door.

One of the ministers quickly mounted the rostrum and admonished the people to keep quiet. He repeated the word "quiet" several times and motioned to his hearers to be seated. The excited congregation mistook the word "quiet" for a second alarm of fire and again rushed for the door. Men and women crawled over benches and fought their way into the aisles and those who had fallen were trampled upon.

The ministers tried again to stop the stampede, but no power on earth could stay the struggling, fighting mass of humanity.

The screams of the women and children added to the horror of the scene. Through mere fright many persons fainted and as they fell to the floor were crushed to death.

The level of the floor of the church is about 15 feet from the ground and long steps lead to the sidewalk from the lobby outside the main auditorium. Brick walls extend on each side of these steps for six or seven feet and this proved a veritable death trap. Negroes who had reached the top of the steps were pushed violently forward and many fell. Before they could move others fell upon them and in a few moments persons were piled upon each other to a height of 10 feet, where they struggled vainly to extricate themselves. This wall of struggling humanity blocked the entrance and the weight of 1500 persons in the body of the church was pushed against it. More than 20 persons lying on the steps underneath the heap of bodies died from suffocation.

Two white men who were in the rear of the church when the rush began escaped and realizing the seriousness of the situation rushed to a corner nearby and turned in a fire alarm.

A squad of police were hastened to the church and with the firemen finally succeeded in releasing the negroes from their pinioned positions in the entrance. The dead bodies were quickly moved and the crowd inside, finding an outlet, poured out. Scores of them lost their footing in their haste and rolled down the long steps to the pavement, suffering broken limbs and internal injuries. In an hour the church had been practically cleared. The sight which greeted those who had come to aid the injured was sickening. Down the aisles and along the outside of the pews the dead bodies of men and women were strewn and the maimed and crippled uttered heartrending cries. The work of removing the bodies was begun at once. The wails of the relatives of the dead who had waited on the outside could be heard for several blocks.

Broker Sent to Prison

Kansas City, Sept. 20.—Howard Page, a real estate broker, yesterday pleaded guilty to the charge of embezzling nearly $1000 belonging to J. A. Farnsworth of Massachusetts, and was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. Page has held positions of trust with important financial companies.

Unfortunate Children.

"When cases of neglect are put into court the agents of the different Catholic institutions are notified, so they may be present to look after the interests of all the children belonging to them. In cases of this character the usual rule is to have the case continued for six months; the children in the meantime are taken by these agents and cared for. They are placed in homes which are provided for that purpose, and kept until the case is again called. In the meantime the parents are kept under strict surveillance and their conditions noted from time to time. A record is made of their home, their habits, the kind of company they associate with, whether or not they are industrious. All these points are brought up. If this record is satisfactory, the children are returned on probation; if not the case is again continued for another six months. As a general rule, at the end of one year we can decide as to the chance of the reformation of the parents. If this is decided on adversely, the children are taken under guardianship from the Probate Court and placed in families. The Home for Destitute Catholic Children, on Harrison avenue, takes all children from three to ten years [Catholic] from the courts. This home is under the care of a superintendent and Sisters, and accommodates over 300. The visiting day is the first Wednesday in each month. The children seem to be contented and happy. St. Mary's Infant Asylum, at Dorchester, takes those under three years. The house of the Angel Guardian takes wayward boys from six to twelve, and the House of the Good Shepherd takes the same class of girls, and includes another home at the corner of Shawmut avenue and Camden street, which takes those whose board is paid. The Working Boys' Home, on Bennett street, gets its full quota. No charge is made for the care and support of these little ones, except in the one specified. The question is often asked as to the wishes of the children in regard to their return home. Several instances have been witnessed where they not only refuse to return to their homes, but refused to see their parents on the day set apart for visitors. Some have even returned voluntarily after being released. No one can blame them. Many never knew what a decent meal or a clean bed meant until it was furnished at the home. It is quite a transformation from a dirty, ragged street urchin to a well-clad, clean and respectable boy.

"The city of Boston also provides for destitute children, having a settlement in Boston in a home on Marcella street, where all such are admitted without regard to nationality, creed or color. There is another at Deer Island for habitual truants, both of the latter being under the direction of the Commissioners of Public Institutions. The State has several institutions for the care of children. Neglected children committed to the care of the State are sent to Arlington, and from there to homes in different parts of the State. There is a school for boys at Westboro, one at Lancaster for girls, and one for the feeble minded of both sexes at Waltham. The expense of these institutions is enormous, and only tends to show that Massachusetts recognizes the fact that the safety of our country depends on the education of the coming generations.

"The compulsory school law makes it obligatory with parents to send children between the ages of eight and fourteen years to school thirty-two weeks in each year under a penalty of $20 for each offence, and truant officers are employed to enforce this law. I do not intend to presume that the law is strictly enforced, but it is followed as near as time will permit. It is a troublesome job to look after this class of children, who prefer spending their time on the dump rather than in school. These children, as a rule, are bright and quick-witted, ever ready with an answer, and in the art of lying and stealing can discount some of their older associates. They take to all kinds of wickedness as naturally as a duck takes to water.

"The question, 'How do you account for all of this misery?' is often asked, and I have no hesitation in saying that in 90 per cent. of all the cases liquor is the direct cause. One of the officers stood one day on a street one hour and fifteen minutes and by actual count 107 women went into one liquor store, each carrying away beer in vessels of every description. The officer on that route said that the receipts in that one place the previous Saturday were $337. On the opposit corner was another of the same kind, while up the street 80 feet was still another, and all three in one of the most miserable localities in South Boston, while around the corner children were begging for something to eat.

"It seems to me if we could have a few laws made in this State, based on common sense, instead of being drawn to mislead, full of legal loopholes and quibbles, by which the ends to give you, your homes and families, the protection which you expect. The cases are not single where this law has caused a miscarriage of justice. I can cite cases where I know of persons who are under the Probation Officer, who have been see dead drunk by the said officers [in their own houses, it is true], yet nothing has been done toward their surrender. If this is the intention to encourage drunkenness as it seems at present, the sooner it is done away with the better. I am satisfied if this subject was faithfully and honestly investigated I would be borne out in my statements. A law relating to pawnbrokers should be made, so that parents could not pawn every movable thing in their houses, even to the taking of shoes and stockings from the feet of their children, and in one case the food and fuel furnished by an overseer of the poor, to satisfy their appetite for drink. The following are specimen cases:

"A man living in Malden: his wife died a year ago, leaving three children, ten, eight and three. He had a housekeeper, whom he did not pay, and finally, to get rid of her, starved her out. The children then had to care for themselves. The youngest had curvature of the spine and a tubercular abscess on his back. This was lanced and no care given it. The next was suffering with a syphilitic disease of the eyes. The house was filthy in the extreme—not a particle of food. The children, infested with vermin and nearly naked, were taken temporarily to the almshouse. In court they were all committed to Overseers of the Poor, with instructions to take the youngest to the Children's Hospital at once, the second to the Eye and Ear Infirmary for treatment and the eldest to remain at the almshouse. The father, a painter, earning $2.50 a day, and spending all in dissipation.

"Man and wife, with ten children, living in Stoughton, Mass; a bookkeeper; wife sick with consumption and the day before she died the husband threw her down a flight of stairs, then took her by the hair and dragged her back again. After her death the three eldest girls left home, ages seventeen, fifteen and fourteen. The eldest disappeared and later was located in the almshouse at Tewksbury, where she had given birth to a child by her father. Investigation showed that he sent two of his boys, thirteen and eleven, outdoors in January, barefoot in the snow, to saw wood; that he hit the thirteen-year-old with a stick of wood, breaking his arm, and let him remain so for nearly a week before having it set. The day after he buried his wife he attempted a felonious assault on the fourteen-year-old daughter, and previous to this on the fifteen-year-old daughter. His eldest child was a boy, twenty, who was in the Concord Reformatory, and said he had rather be there than with his father. The other children, thirteen, eleven, ten, eight, six and five, were put into court as neglected and committed to the care of the State. The man was tried in the Superior Court for incest and sent to State Prison for twenty-three years.

"Man and wife, living in Canton: man sent his wife to Boston for immoral purposes, took the money received by her each night and beat her if she did not bring as much as he wanted. After a while she ran away, leaving a girl seven and a boy nine. After she left, the father committed incest with the girl, and she ran away, saying if she had got to put up with that abuse she would drown herself. The man was tried in the Superior Court and sentenced to twenty years in State Prison, two weeks to be solitary. Boy and girl committed to State.

"I could give you many more illustrations, but it hardly seems necessary, and I will leave you to draw your own conclusion. Compare your own surroundings with the illustrations I have given and I will warrant that your comfortable homes will seem to you more cheerful than ever before, and let me assure you that however humble your homes may be, they are palaces in comparison to the hovels that exist in the slums of our large cities."

Mrs. Loring had with her several of the implements of torture that had been used upon these helpless children, and also showed many photographs of the children in the condition when taken from their homes and those taken after they had been removed and taken care of by humane people. What is there more beautiful than a child? I tell you we must arouse ourselves and do something for these children that are deprived of their rightful heritage.

—Lieut. R. E. Peary, the Arctic explorer, has sent a dispatch to Mr. Bridgeman stating that he is on his way home. He sailed with his expedition for the North Pole July 4, 1898. He does not state whether he has discovered it; but probably not.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. Death of Veteran.

Mr. Ephraim Thayer one of the oldest residents of Quincy passed away last evening at Marblehead after a few days illness. Since the death of Mrs. Thayer a few years ago he had made his home with his daughter Mrs. Clarence Underwood, and was spending the summer with the family at Marblehead.

Although a sufferer from a bullet in his side, received in the civil war Mr. Thayer was an active man, very erect in carriage and seldom confined to his bed by illness.

He belonged to the Paul Revere Post G. A. R. and always participated in the Memorial Day observances and enjoyed talking over war events with his comrades. He was a great reader and liked nothing better than a discussion over the events of the day.

He had formed many friendships about town and used often to drop in for a friendly chat and he will be missed.

Four daughters survive him. The remains were brought to Quincy today and the funeral will be held from his late home on Spear street.

Very Rare.

Johnson Bros. are always, seeking something unique in the way of window decorations, have in their window today a very suggestive exhibit. The main body of the window is filled with seasonable vegetables, in the center of which is a plate containing half a dozen pieces of black diamonds, otherwise known as coal. On this is a card reading "Very Rare."

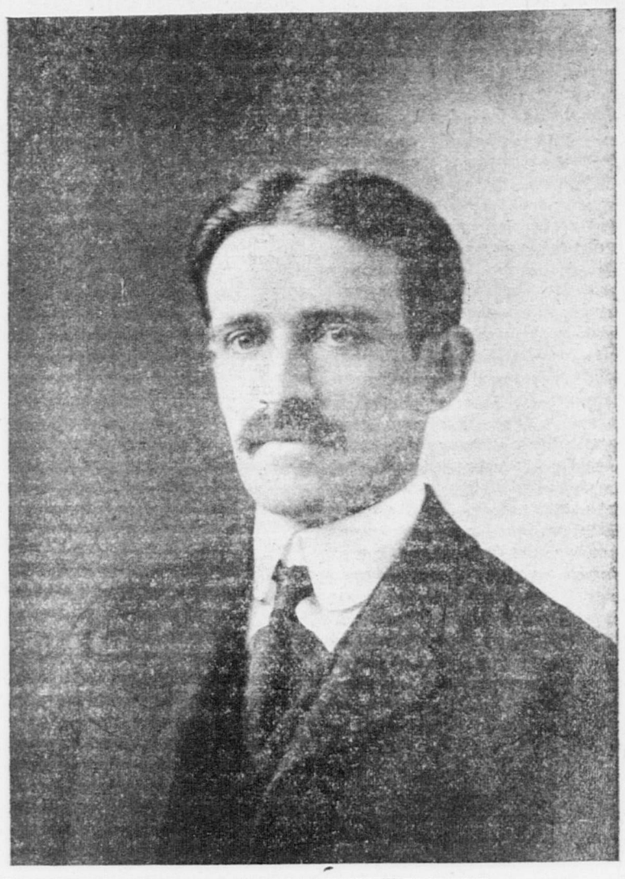
REPRESENTATIVE MCKNIGHT ENDORSED.



Editors of the Daily ledger:

From what can be learned, it appears to be the unanimous opinion among the Republican voters that Representative McKnight, who served this district so ably in the last Legislature should be returned, and there seems to be no question but what he will receive the full endorsement of the voters at the Republican caucuses next Wednesday, and that he will be one of the two gentlemen nominated.

People who followed closely, his career in last year's body, speak of him in the highest terms. Such endorsement coming unsolicited should carry weight with the voters.

Practical Politics speaking of him in a recent issue, says:

"Rep. McKnight of Quincy is out for renomination and re-election. There appears to be no good reason why his constituents should not look with favor on the proposition, for which, however, his friends are mainly responsible. In the committee room and on the floor of the house Mr. McKnight attended strictly to business and did not forget the interests of his own district. He thought and voted on his own judgment. He exercised discrimination throughout the session, and was influential with his colleagues. His district will certainly honor itself by respecting the record he made and returning him to the house." ****

Clark—Roberts.

A very pretty wedding took place Wednesday evening at 495 Summer street, Campello, says the Brockton Enterprise, the contracting parties being Miss Frances Elizabeth Roberts of Quincy and Mr. Ahira Harry Clark of Campello. The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and the bride and groom were married under a floral horse-shoe of dahlias. Rev. E. N. Hardy of Quincy performed the ceremony.

The bride was dressed in white muslin over white silk and carried a bouquet of bride roses. The bridesmaid was Miss Annie R. Clark, a sister of the groom, and Mr. Carl C. Loring of Brockton was best man. Mr. Stephen Bailey acted as usher.

About 150 were present from Quincy, Atlantic, Weymouth, Brockton, Abington and Campello.

Many beautiful and costly presents were received, some of which were silver, bric-a-brac, a gold watch and chain for the bride, brass bed from the Tubular Rivet and Stud Company of Wollaston, where the bride has been employed, and a handsome rocker from the members of Fraternal Lodge, I. O. G. T., of which the groom is a member.

The bridesmaid wore white muslin trimmed with pink ribbon, and carried pink dahlias.

Ice cream and cake were served during the evening, and at 10 o'clock the bride and groom made a hasty departure, unbeknown to their friends.

After a short wedding trip they will be a home to their friends at 495 Summer street, Campello.

Weymouth Fair.

The 38th annual exhibition of the Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial society will be held next week at South Weymouth. There will be a firemen's muster on Thursday when prizes to the amount of $700 will be distributed.

On Friday and Saturday there will be horse races and base ball and foot ball games.

There will be a balloon ascension parachute jump, stage attractions and music by Martland's band each day of the fair.

Quincy people always patronize well the Weymouth fair and they do not want to miss its attractions this year.

Swedish Rally.

A mass meeting under the auspices of the Scandinavian Republican club will be held this evening at 8 o'clock, in Faxon hall. The speakers will include prominent gentlemen of Quincy, Boston and Worcester. The public is cordially invited.

Tuesday, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Cain and Mrs. Marston cruised around Quincy bay in Mr. Francis Cain's new naphtha launch.

Dr. George Perkins of Quincy avenue has been entertaing M. R. Tuttle of Mattapoisett.

Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Loring, Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Baker and Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Miller and daughter were at Loring cottage at Fort Point Saturday and Sunday.

The Union Veterans will attend the muster at South Weymouth next Thursday.

A Great Attraction.

Now is the time that Boston is especially worthy of a visit. One of the chief attractions of this city, that boasts of so many, is the Mechanics Fair which will soon open. Beginning Sept. 22, for six weeks, this great industrial exhibition will hold forth. It is the first time in four years that there has been a Mechanics Fair. Never before in the history of the Mechanics Charitable Association has such an interesting and extensive exhibit been brought together.

Besides the most modern and complicated machinery and the products of same, all of which is an education in itself, there may be seen this year a variety of delightful entertainments, wonderful spectacular reproductions and other attractions, to which the low cost of 25 cents admits to all.

Universalist Convention.

The annual session of the Massachusetts Univeralist Convention for 1902, will be held in Worcester First church, Sept. 23, at 2 P. M. and closing on Thursday, Sept. 25.

The Council will consist of the ordained clergymen in the fellowship of the Convention, and, unless disabled by years or sickness, actively engaged in the ministry; of life members resident in the State and of two lay delegates from each parish. The annual sermon will be preached by Rev. F. W. Hamilton, D. D., of Boston. All meetings of the Convention are open to the public.

The First Universalist society of Worcester is glad that it is soon to have the privilege of welcoming the State Convention. To receive the hospitality of the parish it is necessary that those who are to be delegates shall signify the same as soon as possible to the Secretary, Mrs. L. L. Bullock, 921 Main street, Worcester. If any prefer to go to the hotels information concerning rates, etc., will be furnished them by Mrs. Bullock. Pleasant street cars take one from the Union station to the church.

Reduced railroad rates over the Boston & Albany, Boston & Maine, New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroads are for sale.

One Hundred Cars.

The launching of the seven-masted schooner informed the street railway the kind of a crowd that might be expected today at the launching of the Des Moines. The management determined that there should be no lack of cars today, even if everybody did desire to go down at the same time. Every motorman and conductor was ordered to report for duty this morning. Besides this extra cars were brought to Quincy from the Hingham, Braintree and Brockton car barns, so that this noon during the rush over one hundred cars were in service on the Quincy division.

Today's Court.

The continued case of Harry C. Cahoon, for the larceny of a boat from Mrs. Margaret F. Burns at Quincy, was called and he was fined $15. Appealed.

Ida Muse was arraigned for assault on Louis T. Muse at Quincy. Case continued until Oct. 25.

The continued case of William Crehan of Weymouth, was called, and again continued until Sept. 24.

Charles Daly was fined $3 for drunkenness at Weymouth.

QUINCY DAILY LEDGER.

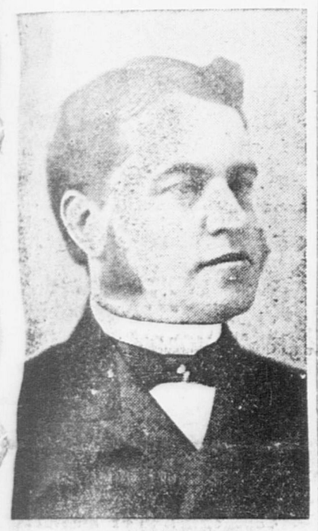
Vol. 14. No. 221. QUINCY, MASS., MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1902. PRICE TWO CENTS.

AN EVENTFUL DAY FOR THE CITY.

State Officials from Iowa, Representatives of Army and Navy, and Distinguished Gentlemen at Launching of the Cruiser Des Moines.

The friendship between Massachusetts and Iowa was cemented more firmly together last Saturday in the launching of the cruiser Des Moines at the works of the Fore River Ship and Engine Company in this city.

It was a fair daughter of Massachusetts who cut the rope holding in place the last block beneath the keel of the cruiser, and it was the beautiful daughter of Iowa who smashed a bottle of American champagne over her bows as she started slowly down the ways, and in clear voice said—"I christen thee Des Moines."



HON. JOHN L. BATES.
Lieutenant Governor.

The vast crowd cheered, the band played "Hail Columbia," a formidable steel-protected cruiser had been added to the United States navy and another event of historic interest had been added to many in the city of Quincy.

It also sent forth to the world that the good old commonwealth of Massachusetts can within her borders build anything that floats from the smallest skiff to the largest of warships. It was a revelation to the distinguished visitors.

There was not a hitch in the proceedings. Everthing went off like clock work, and the big vessel slid off the greased ways into her native element as graceful as a swan. As she struck the water the spray was thrown high into the air giving her a thorough drenching.

Thousands of invited guests were inside the yards while the Quincy and Weymouth shores were lined with sightseers. Every vantage point was black with humanity. In the harbor were tugs, and steam yachts in gala dress and hundreds of smaller craft.

These crafts kept as near the vessel as possible. Then someone from the stern of the cruiser shouted to the floating craft through a megaphone that the blocks were to be started, and for everybody to keep off the line. One warning was enough and danger from accident was averted.

As the cruiser slid into the water the bid hawsers tightened and she came to a stop and drifted until the tugs came alongside and towed her round into the basin.

The crowd were slow to move, however, and many wandered about the massive buildings to get a glimpse of the modern and powerful machinery.

Those fortunate enough to hold tickets to the lunch, made their way to the mold loft, and climbed the narrow stairway to the room where the lines of the cruiser were laid down. This room was filled with tables loaded with salads, fruit, cake and cream, and around these over 1000 were soon seated.

It was a notable gathering in many ways, and a picturesque one as well. Here were men foremost in the army and navy, distinguished statesmen, and fair daughters from many of the states of the union.

President Thomas A. Watson sat at the head of the table with Miss Carleton and Gov. Cummins on his right, and Miss Macomber and ex-Secretary John D. Long on his left. At the end President Watson using the hatchet that cut the cord, as a gavel wrapped for order and said:

PRESIDENT WATSON.

Thomas A. Watson, Esq., president of the Fore River Company, in opening the post prandial exercises said:

"During the days of wooden shipbuilding, Massachusetts held a position of proud preeminence. But as the forests disappeared and steel was substituted in construction, the state lost much of its prestige.

"With the launching here of the largest steel sailing vessel in the world a few weeks ago, and the launching of this cruiser today, Massachusetts is in a fair way to regain its proper place."

LIEUT. GOV. BATES.

Mr. Bates welcomed the visitors on behalf of Gov. Crane. He said in part:

I recall, some years ago, talking with a gentleman from Iowa, who told me, in speaking of the conditions there, that Iowa was Massachusetts as it used to be, and that I would be perfectly at home among her people. He referred to the large number of people who had gone from Massachusetts to that great state in the West, and I think he was right—that Massachusetts can claim an interest in these people, because they are the sons and the grandsons and daughters of the old Bay state. In welcoming them, we are welcoming them back to the home of their fathers.

His Excellency Gov. Crane wished me to express his regrets that it was not possible for him to be present on this occasion. He asked me to make you all feel, so far as it was possible for me to do so, perfectly at home, and I assure you, visitors from a distant state, that we have the warmest of welcomes for you in the heart of every citizen of Massachusetts:

I noticed that just as the vessel went down the ways, the band struck up the national hymn, and I could not help thinking that there was something of patriotism in this visit today—that it was patriotism that caused these people to come to witness this ceremony; that it was interest in the nation and interest in the navy, the right hand of power of the nation. And so today we welcome you, not only as citizens of Massachusetts to citizens of Iowa, but as fellow-citizens of the grand republic.

But one word more. As you go back to your fertile fields, to your marvellous crops and the industries of your great western people, remember that, while you may be representing Massachusetts, there is another Massachusetts still here on the shores of the old bay.

After referring to the progress made in ship building in Massachusetts, Mr. Bates concluded:

Welcome again, Gov. Cummins, and all your party. Thanks to you, Mr. President, and the great corporation you represent for the magnificent way you are bringing back one of the greatest industries of the state. And, heartiest of all congratulations to the two young ladies from the states represented, who have today so gracefully assisted in the exercises.

GOV. CUMMINGS.

Mr. President, Gov. Bates, Ladies and Gentlemen: It may be that the generous greeting I have just received from you was intended to give me

MISS CLARA N. CARLETON,
The Massachusetts Representative at the Launching of the "Des Moines."

spirit for this occasion. You may have thought that the people of Iowa are inexperienced in naval affairs. I beg you to dismiss from your mind this delusion. I am as familiar with launching as I am with any of the other implements of husbandry. (Laughter.) The difference is, and the only difference, that heretofore, instead of participating in the solemnity and majesty of introducing a cruiser to her native element, I have been concerned in setting afloat that article of usefulness which we know as the prairie schooner.

I beg, too, that you will remember that we have waves in Iowa. Not the waves of the sea, but the waves of golden grain, ripened by the most gracious smile that Providence bestows upon any empire. We have harbors, too,—not harbors for the noble ships that carry the name and protect the honor of the republic, but harbors in which the good men and women of Massachusetts who have sought fortunes elsewhere have builded their homes and erected their altars.

I would be dumb indeed if I could not bow and say "Thank you" for so generous and gracious a welcome from the old commonwealth of Massachusetts. It seems to me that I speak the spirit and express the sentiment of all who are here from our state when I say we have breathed again the spirit of the republic in entering your borders and in grasping the hands of the citizens of this old state.

We recognize it, Gov. Bates, as the home state, the state in which during POEM ON THE LAUNCHING.

S. H. M. Byers of Des Moines contributed the following poem, which was read by Mrs. Ella H. Durley, a newspaper woman of Iowa:

Oh, see the crowds beside the ship
And see them down the bay,
And listen how with eager lip
They're cheering her today!
For on the deck a bonny lass,
As bonny as can be,
Will break a glass and let her pass
Into the laughing sea.

And listen, listen, down below
The hammer's blow is heard;
A moment more and she will go,
She waits the master's word.
A little word—and, look, she moves,
Three cheers—and three times three,
As quickly down the sloping grooves
She slips into the sea.

Go out, O ship, on yonder tide,
With all your armor on,
And be the happy ocean's bride
Before the moon is gone.
Go out—what wings may be so fleet,
What ship so bravely manned—
To guard the ocean at our feet
As we will guard the land.

Go round and round our hundred isles
And ride the swelling foam,
Wherever God's great ocean smiles
Its billows are your home.
For Freedom's trumpet first was heard
In yonder ocean's thrill;
There listening nations caught the word
That burns o'er vale and hill

Forget not land, nor friends, nor fame,
Nor the proud name you bear;
In storm or wreck or battle's flame
Our hearts are with you there.
Sail proudly on o'er every wave,
And keep our stars unfurled;
One single shot from you may save
The freedom of the world.

O watcher on the briny deep,
O playmate of the sea,
With your weird sisters proudly keep
The vigils of the free.
And when at last your day is done,
In wreck or war's alarms,
With waving flag and booming gun
Sink in the ocean's arms.

IN THE CITY OF STRAITS

President Roosevelt Received Most Cordial Welcome

MADE CALL AT A HOSPITAL

Spoke Words of Cheer to Spanish War Veteran Who Is Dying—Two Children Almost Trampled Upon by Horses of President's Carriage

Detroit, Sept. 22.—President Roosevelt arrived in the city at 8 o'clock yesterday morning and found Detroit awaiting his arrival in gala attire. Flags were flying from every staff in the down-town section and the city was bright with bunting. Pictures of President Roosevelt greeted the eye at every turn. During the day the president was greeted with tumultuous cheers at his every appearance.

It was a restful day for the president, although his time was completely occupied. Immediately on his arrival he was driven to the Hotel Cadillac. At 10:30 o'clock he attended services at the Fort Street Presbyterian church, driving from there to General Alger's residence, where he was entertained at luncheon. He returned to the Cadillac soon after 3 o'clock, only to leave again in a short time for a drive about the city.

During the drive he called at St. Mary's hospital, where Thomas K. Doherty, a local veteran of the Spanish war, is dying of consumption. Doherty had expressed a wish to see the president and General Alger learned of it. Accordingly at luncheon President Roosevelt was asked if he would call on Doherty at the hospital. The president answered that he would be glad to do so. Doherty is unable to sit up and the president remained at his bedside for some minutes chatting with him and expressing words of cheer and hope. Last night the president dined at the Cadillac with a party of friends.

The chief executive occupied a carriage belonging to the police department on his afternoon drive. Captain Guyman, in police uniform, had the reins. Washington avenue was crowded with people and the air rang with cheers as the horses started up the avenue at a sharp trot. The president's party drove out Woodward avenue four miles to the boulevard which encircles the city. This was followed to its intersection with Jefferson avenue at the approach to the Belle Isle bridge. The intention had been to drive back by way of Jefferson avenue, but here the crowds on the watch for the president's coming were so great as to seriously impede the progress of the party and the carriages were turned into more secluded streets.

Two little girls had a narrow escape from being trampled upon by the horses attached to the president's carriage. They had darted out suddenly from the curb almost under the horses' feet. Captain Guyman was compelled to throw the animals back on their haunches to keep them off the children. The occupants of the president's carriage were brought to their feet in trembling anticipation of a tragedy and it was only by a hair's breadth that the little ones escaped. Then it was that the route was changed to less congested streets. President Roosevelt had suggested a change as soon as he saw the crowded condition of Jefferson avenue and the party had proceeded only about two blocks when the narrow escape of the little girls proved that his fears were well grounded.

Over a Hundred Killed

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 22.—Yesterday was a day of funerals in Birmingham and the remains of 38 victims of the panic in Shiloh church were interred in the various cemeteries. The death list is now known to number 105, and 100 of these have been identified. The police say that at least five bodies have been taken to private houses and have not been reported.

Irishmen Raised Objections

San Francisco, Sept. 22.—The presentation of "The Shaughraun" by Dennis O'Sullivan at the Grand opera house was hissed Saturday night by Irishmen, who declare the play is an unworthy representation of Irish character. The police ejected 20 or 30 men, who turned on them in the lobby, where a fierce battle raged for several minutes. Several arrests were made.

Flames and Explosions

Kingstown, B. W. I., Sept. 22.—There was an eruption of La Soufriere at midnight Wednesday, but no loss of life. A peculiarity of this eruption is found in the fact that no dust nor scoriae were emitted by the volcano. Flames were seen flickering above the crater and the sight was accompanied by internal and thunder-like explosions.

Soldier Stabbed to Death

Salem, N. J., Sept. 22.—Cornelius Weddle, a private in the Forty-Second coast artillery, stationed at Fort Mott, and a fellow-soldier became involved in a quarrel with John Ryan and William Lacey of this place and it is alleged that Ryan stabbed Weddle with a pocket knife. Weddle is dead. Ryan and Lacey were arrested.

Boxers Threaten Three Cities

Shanghai, Sept. 22.—Boxerism in the province of Sze-Chuen has not been subdued. The premises of the China Inland mission at Mei-Chóu has been destroyed, but no lives were lost. The Boxers are now threatening the cities of Tanlien, Hung-Yen and Kaiting-Fu.

IN MOTHER'S DEFENSE

Young Man Shoots and Kills His Father In Rhode Island

Woonsocket, R. I., Sept. 22.—Because he desired to protect his mother from violent treatment at the hands of her husband and also for the reason that he feared his own life was in imminent danger, William G. Bonin, aged 20, shot and killed his father, John B. Bonin, aged 42, at the Factory boarding house, of which his father was proprietor, at North Smithfield yesterday.

The act was committed in the presence of the young man's mother and five children in the kitchen and a passageway leading from it to a pantry, and after the deed was done the slayer attired himself in his best clothes and calmly awaited the arrival of officers, one of whom had been notified by his mother.

Last evening the young man appeared before Clerk Arnold of the Twelfth district court in this city, pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon with intent to kill, and was ordered to furnish $5000 bonds for his appearance on Oct. 4 for a preliminary hearing. His counsel will endeavor to obtain bail.

The elder Bonin was a furniture salesman in a store here. He served last year as a member of the First ward delegation in the Woonsocket common council. He was a member of the Foresters of America, Knights of Columbus, Modern Woodmen, United Workmen and the Catholic Foresters. The insurance he carried in these orders and their auxiliaries will aggregate $8000.

Liquor and jealousy figured in the affair, the elder Bonin having, it is said, frequently accused his wife of being unfaithful and threatening to kill her.

Made Acquaintance of Thugs

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 22.—Walter U. Stone of Marblehead came to this city yesterday to have a good time and shortly before midnight was found unconscious on Union street from the effects of a blow from a sandbag. His watch and money were gone and he was taken to a hospital. He says he went with two strange men to a room to get a drink, and he thinks the liquor was drugged, for he felt dizzy after drinking it and tried to escape from the room, which he did after a fight with the men.

Accounts Said to Be Mixed

Auburn, Me., Sept. 22.—Seth M. Carter of this city has been appointed receiver of the American Banking and Trust company of Auburn, in place of L. L. Small, who has had charge of the affairs of the company for six years. Small's present whereabouts are unknown, and the change in receivership is due to his continued absence. An examination of the books is now in progress and many of the accounts are said to be somewhat confused.

Shipping Interests Suffer

Boston, Sept. 22.—In maritime circles here the coal strike is causing much vexation. Many schooners formerly engaged in the coal trade to this port have been forced into the southern lumber and foreign trades. Many others have been idle for long periods. The towboats are doing very little business in the harbor since the strike and hundreds of sailors are forced into idleness around the city.

Italians In Fierce Quarrel

Boston, Sept. 22.—An Italian row, that may result in the death of one of the participants, took place in Battery street Saturday night, and Angelo Lasparda, 29, is under arrest for assault with a revolver upon Peter Labella, 36, while the latter is held as a witness. Both men are in the hospital under guard, Lasparda suffering from knife wounds that may prove fatal.

Sheriff Drew His Gun

Portland, Me., Sept. 22.—Deputy Sheriff Doughty arrested a young man for liquor selling at a place on Washington avenue Saturday night. A man in the crowd interfered and the prisoner, who had been handcuffed, ran away. Stones were thrown and the sheriff drew his revolver, threatening to shoot if more stones were aimed at him. This quelled the disturbance.

Block Signal Out of Order

Providence, Sept. 22.—Failure of a block signal system to operate led to a collision between two trolley cars in East Providence last night. They came together with such force that the forward vestibule of one car was wrecked and the motorman and conductor, who were in the vestibule, escaped by jumping. Three women were hurt, but not seriously.

Coghlan Going to Panama

Boston, Sept. 22.—Rear Admiral Joseph C. Coghlan flew his red two-starred flag from the Olympia yesterday and awaits orders to proceed to the Isthmus of Panama to assume charge of the affairs in that vicinity and to command the fleet of American warships assembling there. The Olympia is provisioned and coaled for three months.

Train Killed Man and Woman

New London, Conn., Sept. 22.—Albert Gardner, aged 30, and Mrs. Fred Bogue, aged 35, were killed yesterday between Poquonoc and Noank by an express train. Gardner's wife and the husband of Mrs. Bogue and a 5-year-old daughter of the dead woman were walking beside the track and witnessed the killing.

Crops and Forests Benefited

Denver, Sept. 22.—Continuous rainfall over the entire eastern slope of the Rocky mountains, from Montana to New Mexico, has saved late crops and allayed fears of a shortage of water. The ranges have been freshened so that grazing will be good during the early winter. Forest fires that have raged for a month have been put out.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

Pilgrimages Almost Daily to the City of Presidents.

Quincy will soon be as famous for pilgrimages as Plymouth and Concord, as parties come now almost daily. Surely there are many historic spots of National interest, and enterprises which are novel to many. A brief list is given below.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN ADAMS.

Franklin street, Quincy Adams, house built in 1681 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Patriotic societies admitted free, although contributions are welcome to defray expenses of keeping house open and in repair. Small fee asked the general public.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

Junction of Franklin street, Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

BURIAL PLACE OF PRESIDENTS ADAMS.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian), Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. In cellar is old town hearse, also box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams. At extreme end, under front steps are the vaults of the presidents, a massive stone door closing the entrance. Janitor can be found at Savings Bank building or at his home Maple place. No fee charged, but janitor may be paid for his trouble.

HANCOCK CEMETERY.

Hancock street, across from First Church. Many old stones, among the oldest that of Rev. John Hancock, father of the Patriot, who died May 7, 1744. Was fifth minister of First Church.

PRESIDENTS ADAMS MANSION.

Adams street, corner Newport avenue, Quincy. Residence of President John Adams and contains many family relics. Occupied by descendants. Not open to public.

JOHN HANCOCK BIRTHPLACE.

Adams street, junction of Dimmock and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence, was born.

MYLES STANDISH CAIRN.

Squantum heights, erected in 1895 by the Daughters of the Revolution, of Massachusetts, in memory of Captain Myles Standish and his men of Plymouth Colony, who landed here Sept. 30, 1621, guided by the indian Tisquantum.

SQUAW ROCK.

Pile of rock, on which is a perfect head of a squaw, frequently mentioned in early Squantum history. Near by is also Sachem's Knoll.

ABIGAIL ADAMS CAIRN.

Penns hill, erected June 17, 1896, by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son John Quincy, from the spot watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

DOROTHY Q. HOUSE.

Hancock street, corner Butler road, Quincy. Old Quincy homestead in which Dorothy Q was born. Has quaint old paper on parlor put on for wedding of John Hancock and Dorothy Quincy; also secret chamber and other interesting features. Private house, not open to public.

MYLES STANDISH SPRING.

On the beach to the left and back of Squantum Inn. Spring of fresh cold water, where Standish and his party breakfasted and thence started to explore the country around Boston Bay.

PRESIDENTS LANE.

Now Goffe street, leading from Adams street, near Mansion. Opened by John Adams to drive his cows to pasture.

Many other points of interest might be mentioned: Thomas Crane Memorial Hall which is the public library building; Merrymount, the home of Mrs. John Quincy Adams, where Morton erected his famous May pole in 1626; the soldiers' monument at Mount Wollaston cemetery with its tablets; the famous Quincy granite quarries, many of great depth; the granite yards where monuments and statuary are being cut, and the polishing mills where granite is polished; also the big ship yard now established at Quincy Point.

—In the four hundred years of Spanish rule not one schoolhouse was erected in Porto Rico. Since American occupation $200,000 has been expended for schoolhouses, and 126 American and a large number of native teachers are employed. Already 40,000 scholars are said to speak English. No wonder the American methods are being praised, even in Spain. So says the Advance.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. For sale by all Druggist.

THOUGHT TO BE YOUNG

Supposed Slayer of Mrs Pulitzer Under Arrest

DISGUISED AS A TRAMP

Was Walking Along Railroad Track In Connecticut and Was Captured Only After Strategy on the Part of Officers and Strong Resistance

Derby, Conn., Sept. 22.—The police have in custody here a man who answers the description of William Hooper Young, who is wanted in New York for the murder of Mrs. Annie Pulitzer. The man vigorously resisted arrest. Early last evening a telephone message was received by the local police informing them that a man answering the description of Young had been seen walking along the railroad tracks near Stevenson in company with a tramp. Officers Knapp and Pierce were sent in the direction of that town to intercept the men. Three miles above here two men were seen coming down the tracks. The officers slouched up to them and gave the impression that they were tramps. One of the men was recognized as a local character, Cunningham by name. The officers looked closely at Cunningham's companion and the resemblance to a photograph of Young which they had seen was so startling that they had no doubt as to his identity.

To capture him, however, it was necessary to proceed carefully, for the suspected man kept his right hand in his coat pocket and the officers feared that he carried a weapon. Finally Pierce produced a bottle of whiskey and asked the man to have a drink. The man withdrew his hand from his pocket and took the bottle for a drink. In an instant he was covered with two revolvers. He dropped the bottle and was about to put his hand back into the pocket when warned that they would shoot to kill if he attempted to draw a weapon.

The officers then closed in on the man and handcuffed him. The supposed murderer fought viciously and it was with difficulty that he was subdued.

During the scuffle Cunningham made his escape. The officers then took their prisoner to headquarters in Derby. When seen in a bright room the likeness to Young was more apparent than ever, despite the fact that a disguise had been attempted. The man was then searched and instead of finding a weapon on his person two pockets full of red pepper was found. He admitted that if he had had the chance he would have filled the eyes of his captors with the stuff. The prisoner demanded to know the reason for his arrest, and after some discussion among the officials it was decided to hold him temporarily on the charge of horse stealing.

That they have captured the man wanted in New York little doubt is expressed by the police. Despite his haggard appearance the prisoner has a look of refinement about him which does not become the clothes he wears. The nervous condition of the man is such that it would appear that he is on the verge of collapse and he is restless in a most exaggerated degree.

After continual questioning the prisoner said that his name was Edwards, and that his home was in New York state. Further questions he refused to answer. Pending instructions from Captain Titus the man will be held on the charge of horse stealing. He has not been informed that he is wanted for murder.

New York, Sept. 22.—The search for William H. Young, the man wanted for the murder of Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, whose mutilated body was found in the abandoned Morris canal near Jersey City Thursday morning last, has been unavailing. The entire police of this city and the surrounding boroughs have been bending all energies to locating Young and running down all clews which come to them. The chief development of yesterday came from Brooklyn and it leads the police to believe that the fugitive has escaped to the vicinity of Canarsie, L. I.

The story of this clew is that late Saturday night a man supposed to have been Young was seen in a lodging house in Brooklyn. When he applied for a room he was told there was none vacant and he was forced to be satisfied with a chair.

Presently two of the lodgers started down the stairs of the hotel after a last look at the stranger. At that the man supposed to be Young became nervous and arose to his feet. The lodgers also arose. Then the stranger dashed down the back stairs of the hotel to the yard with some of the lodgers after him. Vaulting the back fence, closely pursued, the fugitive fled up the street. The pursuers gaining upon him, the stranger halted, drew a revolver and brought the lodgers to a stand. Turning again he caught sight of a Nostrand avenue car bound for Fulton street and raced for it. Before the lodgers came up the car with the fugitive on board was blocks away.

Cars Running Under Difficulties

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 22.—The Hudson valley is still suffering severely from the motormen's strike, which has been in force over three weeks. The company yesterday operated cars on divisions in three counties, but each car had to be accompanied by a dozen or more National Guardsmen. The unruly element was very much in evidence yesterday in seven cities.

HIS HEART HARDENED

King Leopold's Disobedient Daughter Ordered From His Palace

Brussels, Sept. 22.—A dispatch to The Patriote from Spa says that when King Leopold arrived there he refused to speak to the Princess Stephanie, Countess of Lonyay, and compelled her to leave the royal palace. The princess consequently left Spa suddenly. She rode to the station in a hired carriage, and, amid demonstrations of sympathy from the people, she took a train for Brussels.

Princess Stephanie is the second daughter of the late Queen Marie Henriette and King Leopold. She married the only son of the Emperor of Austria in 1881 and was left a widow in 1889. She was married the second time in 1900 to Count of Lonyay. This marriage was against the wishes of King Leopold, who refused to permit it to be legalized. He has been very bitter against his daughter and courts friendly to that of Belgium have declined to receive the princess.

There are various versions of the quarrel between King Leopold and Princess Stephanie, his daughter, the most reliable of which is to the effect that the princess was in the death chamber when the king arrived at the palace. He refused to enter until she had left the room. The news of the quarrel spread rapidly and led to an affecting demonstration by the people when Princess Stephanie left Spa.

It is announced that King Leopold will return to France next Saturday, after the funeral.

Spa, Sept. 22.—A requiem mass for the late Queen of the Belgians at which the bishop of Liege will officiate, will be celebrated here today. Special trains will be run for the occasion from Brussels to bring members of the royal family who, after mass, will conduct the remains of the late queen back to the capital. King Leopold arrived here yesterday.

To Bring Message of Peace

London, Sept. 22.—General Booth conducted three farewell services at the Clapton congress hall yesterday. He asked those present to send a message that their American brethren, with the people of Great Britain, might stand up before the world as friends of the human family and that these two great nations should work shoulder to shoulder for the peace and happiness of the world. A mighty shout of "Amen" and a forest of waving hands greeted General Booth's words.

Seven Went Over Precipice

Geneva, Sept. 22.—Two French tourists, two guides and three porters, who were making an ascent of Mont Blanc, have fallen over a precipice and it is feared that they were all killed. A searching party has gone to their rescue.

Killed Child and Self

Springfield, Ills., Sept. 22.—Harry O. Williams abducted his 2-year-old son, Glen, from its mother at Auburn, and when pursued by officers, got out of his buggy, placed the child in the road and blew out its brains, and then killed himself.

Fighters Get Forfeit Money

Cincinnati, Sept. 22.—C. E. Lambertson, stakeholder of the McGovern-Corbett contest, which was to have taken place at Louisville tonight, has paid over the forfeit money, McGovern and Corbett receiving $1250 each.

No Friction With Jackies

Panama, Sept. 22.—As far as can be learned here there has been no friction whatever between soldiers of the Colombian government and the American bluejackets who are guarding the railroad line.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The world's record for a mile on a motor vehicle on a straight-away course was broken by F. A. Gately and W. E. Penvler on a motor tandem, who covered the distance in 44 2-5 seconds. The course was a section of the Norwood, Mass., highway and on a down grade.

While out gunning at Shirley, Mass., Fred Farmer, 20 years old, was shot and killed by the accidental discharge of his gun.

The expected assignment to duty of Naval Constructor Hobson has not materialized at the navy department, and he has been given more leave and placed on waiting orders.

The rifle range at Dracut, Mass., used by the militia for target practice, was totally destroyed by fire. The blaze is attributed to a cigar butt. Loss $2000.

The new St. John's Episcopal church at Beverly Farms, Mass., was consecrated by Bishop Lawrence. The new church is entirely free from debt. There was a large attendance at the service.

Rev. Albert R. Stuart, D. D., rector of Christ Episcopal church, Georgetown, D. C., is dead, aged 56. He had served Christ church for more than a quarter of a century.

Major James W. Smythe, aged 67, the oldest newspaper reporter in Woonsocket, R. I., is dead.

Walter Temple and Sidney Allen, lads, were drowned in a pond at North Attleboro, Mass. They were playing on a raft, when the timbers of which it was constructed separated.

Carl Anderson, 8 years old, was killed at Portland, Conn., by falling over the side of a quarry 125 feet to a pond of water below.

Captain Martin of the schooner American of Gloucester, Mass., reports that, while off Belle Isle, he lost two of his men, Edward Benson and John Frelich, by the capsizing of their dory while hauling trawls.

Five men were seriously hurt by the falling of a scaffolding at the works of the Randolph-Clowes company, brass manufacturers, at Waterbury, Conn. Peter Lawler's injuries will probably prove fatal.

Where American Independence Began.

The Rev. D. M. Wilson, formerly pastor of First church, has been busy this summer putting the finishing touches to a book about Quincy, which is to be published this fall by Houghton, Mifflin & Co. It is to be entitled "Where American Independence Began," and will be devoted mainly to the remarkable growth of patriots who have brought such fame to Quincy. There will be chapters upon John Adams and John Quincy Adams; upon the Colonial Colonels and Dorothy Q, and other Dorothys; and modern days will receive attention in a chapter upon Charles Francis Adams, and one on a perambulation of Quincy. Over thirty-five illustrations of persons and scenes will adorn the book, which promises to be one of the most attractive ever published about Quincy.

Sept. 30, Oct. 1, 2, 3, 1902.

These are the dates of the Brockton Fair, the greatest out-door show given in this country. To enumerate the attractions would be an endless task, but we can sum them up by saying everything good in the amusement line is sure to be seen at this big carnival. All roads lead to Brockton on the above dates and excursion rates are furnished by all roads leading to this Mecca of amusement. Just consider, $28,000 in purses and special attractions.

Father of Rev. J. E. Johnstone.

Captain Edward Johnstone, an inspector at the Custom house in Boston, and father of Rev. Julian E. Johnstone, one of the curates at the St. John's church, Quincy, was buried Saturday from his home at 736 East 3d street. Among the many personal friends of Rev. F. Johnstone to participate in the services were, Rev, John P. Cuffe, Rev. John Casey and Rev. W. J. Foley of Quincy.

In Five Days.

The English Steamer Vizcaina comes to the Fore River Works for a new shaft. The company made proposals to put in a new shaft in five days, all other proposals were for two weeks' time. This is the only yard on our coast that is so equipped that the work could be done in that short period of time. The Vizcaina will be the first English steamer to come to Quincy. She is a large vessel over 300 feet long.

The first great gathering of State Commissions will take place at the World's Fair grounds at St. Louis Sept. 30 and Oct. 1 and 2. The three days will be filled with public ceremonies and social functions, the main purpose to have all commissioners become acquainted with the progress of the Exposition, and select sites for state buildings.

HOSE REUNION.

The Old W. M. French Company at Squantum.

The second annual reunion of the old Washington M. French Hose Company was held Saturday afternoon at the Squantum Inn, and the event proved to be fully as enjoyable as the first reunion.

The party left City Square in a special car at 3 o'clock. Among the guests were Representative Frank E. Badger, ex-Mayor Harrison A. Keith, ex-Councilmen Harry S. Nicoll, Aubrey R. Keith, Elisha Packard and George H. Wilson, ex-Chief Engineer Walter H. Ripley and Frank C. Packard, ex-Chief of Police Amos L. Litchfield, Capt. John Cleverly of Boston, Capt. James T. Penniman, Capt. James E. Maxim, Capt. Charles N. Hunt and Capt. Ephriam H. Doane.

Dinner was served at 4 o'clock, after which Fred H. French, a son of the gentleman for whom the company was named, presided, and made the address of welcome. Capt. James T. Penniman the oldest member of the organization was then introduced and spoke briefly. Other remarks were made by Capt. Charles N. Hunt, Capt. John Cleverly and ex-Chief Engineer, Walter H. Ripley.

A business meeting was held during the afternoon at which the following officers were elected:

President,—Frederick H. French.
Vice President,—Frank C. Packard.
Secretary and Treasurer,—Jesse F. Curtis.

Council Business.

At tonight's meeting of the City Council, the appointment of election officers will come up for confirmation.

The Committee on Ordinances will report on the order for $2000 for the fire station at Houghs Neck; $1500 for the small pox hospital, and on laying out Faxon Park road.

The Committee on Public Buildings will report on the communication relative to the boundary lines between Quincy and Braintree.

The Committee on Streets will report on the order changing the location of tracks in City Square, and probably laying out Edison street and Rock Island road.

In the calendar are orders for $1000 for Assessors' plans, the loan order of $5800, and order for location of poles for the telephone and electric light company.

The Socialists.

The Social Democrats held an open air rally in City Square, Saturday evening, at which addresses were made by Levi H. Turner, David Taylor and E. J. Brophy.

This party also held conventions at its headquarters on Hancock street and nominated William M. Packard of Quincy for senator, and Daniel M. Coleman of Braintree as County Commissioner.

The World Hunting for an Apartment.

[From the Hull Beacon.]

What can I say! What can I do to convince families it is better to live in a house in the country? Has the world gone crazy on apartments? Has every woman conspired with another to do less and less housekeeping, and assume just as little care as possible? Now when a woman marries and has a family she should serve her husband and family to the very best of her ability, but women seem to want to be all hived up in a little flat, her children mingling with those that are not to the best interest of the young to associate with. The early training always remains with you, no matter what advantages come to you later, your early training has made the impression that is lasting.

My advice is, first, last and always, to live in the country; go to housekeeping immediately when you first marry. Don't board the first year, and have nothing to do, but go to housekeeping at once, and if in good health do your own house work, and if you know nothing of cooking at home with your mother, invest in Mrs. Lincoln's cook book, and study it instead of reading novels. Some of the pleasantest hours of my life have been spent with my newly married friends, and when supper came, or dinner it is now, we would have great pleasure in preparing the meal; the man of the house would help cook and set the table, and the more his wife knew about cooking, the prouder he seemed to be, and congratulated himself on what a treasure he had got in his new wife. A woman well taught at home will save a fortune for a man, and it costs just half to live without a servant that it costs with. You can have many a meal out of what the best girl would throw away, and fuel as well as food. The average servant thinks food and fuel of no account and costs nothing. Living in these little rooms, few in number, in flats is injurious to health. When the winter season is on, the tenants never can have the heat as they wish. It is either too hot or too cold, when if you were living in your own house in excessive cold weather you can shut the rooms off and only use one and have it very comfortable.

If you will only convince yourself how much better off you are to live in the country and grow with the place. There are troubled days for all, the rich and the poor alike, and it is comfort to have your neighbors' sympathy. I tell you, a near neighbor to your liking is a great comfort. Your pleasures and your sorrows are theirs. If your troubles are heavier than you can bear, the societies that you have helped to keep alive come to your assistance. None of us are sure of the future. I have seen great changes for better and for worse. We are all dependent one upon another, and if young people commencing life would only realize it early, worlds of trouble could be saved for yourself and your family.

"Familiarity breeds contempt." Why will women get so intimate in flats, and the landlord is the victim. I have seen my friends' (owners of flats) life made miserable by this class of tenants. Of all misunderstandings these women rows in flats are the worst. Keep house in a whole house of at least eight rooms, and keep to yourself, and if you have children, make them stay by themselves, and keep them occupied and don't pick up everything they tell you, and quarrel with your opposite neighbor on your floor.

I despise the apartment living. You see too much to disgust you, and you have to eat and smell your neighbor's dinner just the time you want things extra fine. That kind of life teaches you to live from hand to mouth, because you have no place to keep food. It astonishes me to see so many giving up their home and saying: "We are to live in town this winter. It is much more convenient. We shall take our meals out." If there is one thing I sincerely hate, it is continually moving to get a meal. When I am living on the European plan at the best kept hotel in Boston, I love to go to either of my homes and partake of a truly home meal. I am a firm believer in a home and housekeeping. Keep a family together, and make home so pleasant that all your family had rather come home than go anywhere else. If young people will only go to housekeeping, they will be astonished how soon they will own furniture, bedding and small things necessary to housekeeping. At the age of forty any family can own their own house and furniture if they have shown any degree of prudence. That is why I believe in the country; you can live more prudently. Temptations for spending are less. Too much leisure is not good for anybody. Employment for mind and body are essential to good health and in the country with plenty of air, you will find life worth living instead of a crowded, contracted flat in a city.

The Republican Councillor convention will be held at Union hall, Boston, Oct. 2.

CUT DOWN
YOUR COAL BILLS.

The most serious problem that has faced the buying public for years, is coal selling at $12.00 per ton.

Cut down your coal bills, use an Oil Heater to heat your living rooms, cook on a Blue Flame Oil Stove, or use a Glenwood Range or Parlor Stove; they consume from 25 to 33 per cent. less coal than any other stove in existence.

Call and look over our Oil Stoves and Heaters plan your winter heating on an economical basis.

BRAINTREE.

Many of the residences of Braintree are beautifully adorned with clematis in full bloom. Among those are Mr. N. R. Procter's, Mrs. Fanny Harra's Mr. G. W. Caldwell's and Mr. W. E. Davis'.

The town committee on new industries have called a public meeting to be held in the Town hall this Monday evening. There is great probability that a large manufacturing corporation may be induced to establish its plant in this town. In order that such a corporation would be received with a spirit of good will by our citizens, our readers are requested to attend the meeting. We have not been able to learn the business of this corporation but your committee are trying to draw in desirable enterprise.

The principal of Union school has received from Prof. Little's wife three beautiful pictures for the adornment of the school rooms.

A successful supper and entertainment was held in the Baptist church and lecture-room Wednesday evening. The supper consisted of the usual fare, baked beans, cold meats, pies, cakes, etc., and was enjoyed by all present. The entertainment comprised piano duets by Miss Elsie Stoddard and Miss Ibelle Mott of North Scituate; songs by Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Morrill; reading by Miss Bertha G. Saunders; and a Literary Salad participated in by all. The exercises were opened by singing "Nearer My God to Thee," reading of scripture and prayer by Rev. Mr. Whitehouse.

Messrs. H. A. Monk and E. H. Trupant attended, Wednesday, the seventeenth annual reunion of the Thirty-fifth regiment association held in Faneuil hall, Boston.

Miss Bertha Saunders read "The Curfew shall not ring tonight," at the Baptist church entertainment Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Davis, who have been spending the summer with Mrs. Davis' brother, H. A. Monk, roturned to Maine Wednesday.

While in town to play ball James Maguiness was the guest of his mother on Hancock street; Maurice B. Woodsum was entertained by his cousin Hon. B. H. Woodsum; W. J. Coughlan guest of W. L. Woodsum on Hancock street.

About $2,000 is to be spend by Mr. C. C. Mellen, on the upper floor of his block, to make the future home of Puritan lodge, I. O. O. F., attractive and comfortable.

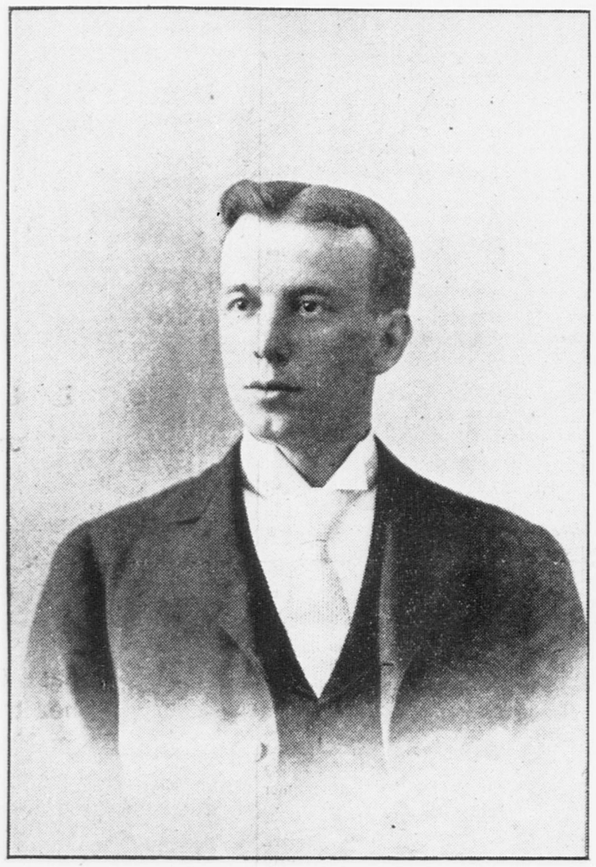
PROMISING CANDIDATE.

Ex-Councilman DeNormandie an Aspirant for Representative to the General Court.



Editors of the Daily Ledger:

Eugene F. DeNormandie, whose cut appears above for the first time in the local press hardly needs an introduction to the citizens and tax-payers of this city.

He was born among the hills of New Hampshire in 1865, just at the close of the civil war, but for more than twenty-five years has lived continuously in Massachusetts.

After completing his education he served for several years as principal of the High school at Wayland, Mass., later entering the Boston University Law School, pursuing the study of law for two years.

While a student at the law school he received a flattering offer to enter the employ of Messrs. Ginn & Co., one of largest school book publishers in this country, which offer he reluctantly accepted.

About two years later, his abilities having become recognized he was induced to leave Ginn & Co. and cast his lot with Leach, Shewell & Sanborn, with which concern he remained for seven years, rising by rapid stages from the position of New England agent to that of general agent and special editor.

For many years he has been a resident and taxpayer of Quincy, and since taking up his residence here he has been closely identified with public affairs, giving freely of his time and energy to promote the interests of his ward and city, and the welfare of the Republican party. For two years he was a member of the Republican Ward and City Committee, and for a like term of years a member of the City Council.

While in the latter body he was conspicuous for his independence of thought and action, his opposition to ring rule, and his earnest desire to promote the best interests of the city as a whole. He proved himself an able and ready debater, as well as a fearless champion of what he considered right. His record as a public official is well known to those who follow the acts and doings of the legislative branch of our city government.

Mr. DeNormandie is also well and favorably known in Masonic circles, being at the present time master of Wollaston lodge A. F. & A. M.

By his training, temperament and experience he is well fitted to serve as our representative in the legislature, and will doubtless receive cordial support at the caucuses Wednesday.

COMMISSIONER WRIGHT.

Renominated by the Democrats by Acclamation for the Office of County Commissioner.

The Democratic convention for Norfolk county was held on Saturday at Memorial hall, Dedham. Charles H. Shriver of Dedham was chairman and William T. Carroll of Hyde Park was secretary. Twenty-nine delegates were present.

Marshall P. Wright of Quincy was placed in nomination by James F. Burke of Quincy, and was unanimously nominated by acclamation.

The following county committee for 1903 was elected: Horace R. Drinkwater of Braintree, James M. Folan of Norwood, John W. Griffin of Hyde Park, Charles Warren of Dedham, Edward M. Phelps of Foxboro, William T. Shea of Quincy, John J. Collins of Avon, John D. Hardy of Weymouth, Michael McLaughlin of Holbrook, T. F. McGuire of Walpole, J. T. Flood of Randolph and G. Loring Briggs of Brookline.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

—A black walnut tree has been cut down in Maryland, near Washington, D. C., which, according to count of rings, was 180 years old. Seven logs were made, the butt seven feet in diameter, and 5000 feet of lumber will result. As the roots are valuable, it was grabbed out, and 24 days' work were required in felling it. It was bought from Mr. J. B. Merchant for $100, and the lumber has been sold by the purchaser, Mr. E. E. McClintock, for shipment to New York, and proabably exportation, for $200 per thousand board measure. It proved to be curly throughout, and will be used for veneers. The product, as estimated, will realize the gross sum of $1000, and ultimately as veneers very much more.

—This is the prescription Lincoln sent to a farmer friend who complained of being in poor health: "Do not worry. Eat three square meals a day. Say your prayers. Think of your wife. Be courteous to your creditors. Keep your digestion good. Steer clear of biliousness. Exercise. Go slow and go easy. Maybe there are other things that your special case requires to make you happy; but, my dear friend, these, I reckon, will give you a good life.

Sandberg for Representative.

A rally in the interests of E. J. Sandberg was held at Faxon hall Saturday evening, about 100 being present.

President Broberg welcomed those present, and introduced Julious Johnson as chairman.

Speeches were made by Frederick L. Jones, Chairman Burke of the Republican City Committee, Elisha Packard, Fred Peterson of Boston, Rev. J. Bjork, John P. Bigelow, Councilman Piper, Rev. H. Kennicksen and Senator Sprague.

The Ward Three men all took opportunity to advocate Harry S. Nicoll, as a running mate for Mr. Sandberg.

Candidate Sandberg also spoke and made a favorable impression.

Henry H. Faxon was in the audience but did not speak. It was reported that Mr. Sandberg had sent word to him that he would like to have Mr. Faxon make a few remarks but he must not say anything about city politics. Mr. Faxon was indisposed and contented himself with listening.

SAYS MIND WAS SOUND

Dedrick Denounces Reports to the Contrary

PEARY DENIED HIM FOOD

But He Will Make No Detailed Explanation Until Chief of the Expedition Makes His Report on Experiences and Work Accomplished

New York, Sept. 22.—Dr. Thomas L. Dedrick of Washington, N. J., who had disagreements with Lieutenant Peary, and left the latter's expedition on Aug. 27, 1901, arrived in New York yesterday after an absence of four years in the far north. Concerning the criticisms of his actions in the Arctic regions he was inclined to be reticent.

"I will not discuss in any way," he said, "any misunderstanding that I may have had with Lieutenant Peary and may or may not have been the cause of my leaving the ship."

"What about the intimation that the reason you left the party was because you were not exactly in a sound state mentally at the time?" he was asked.

"The report that I was mentally unsound," he replied, "is a malicious lie."

"Are you going to make a statement in regard to the affair?"

"At the proper time I will make a statement in full of the reasons that led me to pursue the course I did, both as to remaining in the Arctic and as to the charges about my mental status. Pending the report that Lieutenant Peary will make about the work and experiences of the expedition, however, I do not think that any person who is identified with the expedition, or may have been connected with it, should do any talking. It is very hard to have been maligned as I have been and not talk, but I shall nevertheless adhere to that determination on my part. Concerning my trouble with Lieutenant Peary and my experiences while living among the Eskimos, and the denial of food to me by Lieutenant Peary, even a little coffee without sugar, I shall say nothing at this time.

"The reason I remained in the Arctic was purely one of duty to the expedition, and was not for any monetary purposes. When I was a member of the expedition I contracted not to publish articles, and I shall not act otherwise now. There has not been a single day since I left the expedition, over a year ago, that I have regretted that step I saw fit to take, and the knowledge that I acted in an honorable manner has done much to mitigate the unpleasant experiences I had and the attacks made on me."

Dr. Dedrick said that he had heard of the assassination of President McKinley from a whaler last June.

He was met on his arrival by train from Boston by his four brothers. For the present he and Mrs. Dedrick are staying in New York.

H. L. Bridgman, secretary of the Peary Arctic club, who went to Sydney, C. B., to meet Lieutenant Peary on his arrival there on the Windward, also arrived yesterday.

What Sverdrup Found

London, Sept. 22.—Dispatches from Stavanger, Norway, say that Captain Sverdrup mapped, while he was in the north, an extensive district in the vicinity of lat. 81.37, lon. 110. He considers it probable that groups of islands of the same character as those already known stretch to the westward as far as the meridian of Behring strait. The Times considers that, as Lieutenant Peary met no land in his last attempt to reach the pole, Captain Sverdrup has probably discovered the last outlier between the American continent and the North Pole.

Gathered Canal Data

Washington, Sept. 22.—Attorney General Knox returned to Washington yesterday after his trip to Paris. He devoted his time while there to questions affecting the title of the Panama company and its right to dispose of the same, and has considerable data on the subject. He declines to make any statement on the matter for the press.

Trusts Have Nothing to Fear

London, Sept. 22.—The Daily Telegraph, in an editorial article this morning, expresses the belief that, in proposing to regulate trusts by amending the constitution, President Roosevelt has undertaken a task so colossal that the remedy will be more dangerous than the disease and that the trusts have nothing to fear for a long time to come.

Shot Girl and Killed Himself

Johnstown, Pa., Sept. 22.—David M. Gouchner shot and seriously wounded Miss Leorena Winnebrennor, aged 17, near her home in Conomaugh last night, and then sent a bullet into his own heart, dying instantly. Jealousy and a desire for revenge are given as the causes for the act.

An Old Artist's Fate

New York, Sept. 22.—J. C. Collins, aged 70, at one time a highly successful artist, was found dead yesterday in his room. The coroner's verdict is that death was due to the accidental turning of a gas jet, the escaping gas killing him as he slept.

Highland Lass a Smuggler

Halifax, Sept. 22.—The Canadian government cruiser Gladiator, with the schooner Highland Lass in tow, has arrived at North Sydney. The schooner was captured at Little Bras D'Or with $2000 worth of smuggled liquor on board.

FIRED ON DEPUTIES

Depredations by Mob In Search of a Non-Union Miner

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 22.—The mining town of Edwardsville, near here, was the scene of much lawlessness Saturday night and early Sunday morning. A crowd of men went in search of a man named James McGuire, who had gone to work in the mines last week. They threw stones at several houses, broke down the door in the dwelling where McGuire was supposed to live and committed other depredations. The mob also fired on the deputies at the Woodward mine. The officers returned the fire, but no one was wounded. Three arrests were made.

Strikers Have Actors' Sympathy

New York, Sept. 22.—President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers met a number of local labor leaders here yesterday and in the evening attended a theatrical benefit for the miners. The Actors' National Protective union gave the talent and the management donated the theatre for the evening. There was an immense throng in the theatre. The actors' union gave $100 for one gallery seat and sent word that Mitchell could have the services of the members of the union whenever he wanted to give a benefit for the miners in any city in the country.

Anthracite on the Move

Reading, Pa., Sept. 22.—There passed through this city Saturday night and yesterday three trains containing about 4500 tons of anthracite. One-third of this is said to have been recently mined and the remainder had been held in storage.

New York Convention Today

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 22.—Not in many years has there been on a night prior to the assembling of a New York state Republican convention such placidity as existed last night. Undoubtedly this is because by far the majority of selections for the state ticket have been practically agreed upon and the few offices in contention are being contested for in a friendly and quiet spirit. The ticket as far as constructed reads: Governor, B. B. Odell; lieutenant governor, G. R. Sheldon; comptroller, N. B. Miller; treasurer, J. G. Wickser; engineer, E. A. Bond; judge of court of appeals, W. E. Werner.

Consecrated as Archbishop

Rome, Sept. 22.—The consecration yesterday of Mgr. Guidi, apostolic delegate in the Philippines, as archbishop, was conducted by Cardinal Rampolla, who, after the pope, is the highest political personage in the Vatican. The entire diplomatic corps accredited to the Vatican, all the generals of the religious orders and a number of prominent friars were present at the ceremony. The function was most impressive, and the effect was heightened by the presence of numerous high prelates in their scarlet and purple robes.

Colonies Must Give Half a Billion

London, Sept. 22.—The Daily Mail says the government has decided that the new South African colonies are to be required to pay $500,000,000 toward the cost of the South African war. The colonies are, however, to be allowed ample time in which to make this payment. Mining profits will probably be taxed 10 percent more than they were before the war, and money will also be obtained by granting all kinds of concessions and mineral rights.

Treaty Frequently Violated

Vienna, Sept. 22.—It is said here that neither Austria nor Russia is willing to support the appeal made by the United States in behalf of the Jews of Roumania. It is admitted that the treatment of Roumanian Jews infringes the treaty of Berlin of 1878, but it is only one of numerous cases in which this treaty has been violated without the signatories protesting.

May Head Off Russia

Constantinople, Sept. 22.—The decision of the sultan to permit four Russian torpedo boats, which are in reality torpedo boat destroyers, to pass the Dardanelles, is considered here to be a violation of an internation convention, and action in the matter is expected from the other signatory powers.

Deputy Attorney General Out

New York, Sept. 22.—Job Hedges, deputy attorney general in the city of New York, has resigned that position. Hedges, who was at one time private secretary to Mayor Strong, says his business interests demand his resignation.

England Gets New African Port

London, Sept. 22.—The Johannesburg correspondent of The Daily Mail says that he understands that Port Matala, two miles from Lourenza Marques, Portuguese East Africa, has been leased to Great Britain.

A Champion With the Rifle

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 22.—A new world's record at wing shooting with rifle was established by Adolph Toepherwein yesterday, when he broke 986 out of 1000 clay targets thrown from traps.

Demand of Flour Millers

Minneapolis, Sept. 22.—The flour millers voted yesterday to give the mills until Thursday to grant an eight-hour day, and will strike if their demand shall not be complied with.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Tuesday, Sept. 23.
Sun rises—5:32; sets—5:41.
Moon rises—9:43 p. m.

GUESSED MAYOR'S WEIGHT.

Experience of Tom L. Johnson With the Weighing Machine Man.

Not long ago Tom L. Johnson walked past the postoffice and stopped before a man who conducted a weighing machine, says a correspondent of the New York Tribune writing from Cleveland. "It'll cost you a nickel to get weighed, gents," he shouted, "and if I can't guess your weight beforehand within three pounds I won't charge you a cent."

"Bet you the cigars he can't come within twenty pounds of my weight," said Johnson, turning to a friend.

This was overheard by the "barker," who didn't know the mayor. "Make way for the corpulent gentleman, my good people," he yelled, and Johnson elbowed his way through the crowd. The "barker" then punched the mayor in the stomach until he said, "Ouch!" poked him in the small of the back, felt of his thighs, pinched his legs, slapped his cheeks and finally made a guess of 265 pounds. Then he hustled his honor into the little basket until the machine groaned and squeaked. "See, gents," he said, "I guessed her right the first shot."

"You're all right," said the mayor. "Here's your nickel." And the crowd howled as Johnson walked off to buy his friend the cigars he had lost.

"Say, do you know who that man was you just weighed?" a man in the crowd asked the machine man.

"That big, fat fellow? Naw."

"Mayor Tom."

"The deuce you say!"

Then he dropped his machine, hurried after the mayor and offered to return his nickel, but Johnson threatened to deprive him of his license if he persisted in his generosity, and the incident was closed.

BLIND INVENTOR WINS.

Gets Favorable Decision Against Steel Trust on $5,000,000 Claim.

John Brislin, former roller, who helped Antone Vinnac, another roller, to invent and patent a table for carrying hot ingots of steel to and from rolls mechanically and in whose favor Judge Buffington has just given a decision against the Carnegie Steel company, is blind and is seventy-five years of age, says a Pittsburg special to the New York Times.

His partner, Vinnac, died two years ago. He left his interest to Brislin. If Brislin lives to secure his rights, he can recover at least $5,000,000 in royalties for infringements on patents. This would fall heaviest on the United States Steel corporation.

Brislin until recently was a janitor in the Bakewell building, but lost his place through loss of sight. John R. Bennett of Bakewell & Burns, attorneys for the Carnegie Steel company, says:

"The case will be appealed in the circuit court of appeals, which meets in Philadelphia in October. We will try to get it ready for this term of court. The court here held the first charge void and infringed. The second was held to be not infringed, and the suit as a whole was dismissed. We think we have good grounds for an appeal. The decision of the court of appeals will be final, and the case will probably be settled some time in the winter."

JUSTICE GRAY'S NOTIONS.

Late Federal Jurist a Great Stickler For Legal Forms.

The late Justice Horace Gray of the United States supreme court, who died a few days ago at his home in Lynn, Mass., was a great stickler for form in court and held strictly to what he called the old regime. At one time he had summoned to court a workman who was brought before him in his shirt sleeves. Justice Gray was shocked by the man's apparent disrespect for the court. Although the case was important, he adjourned the hearing and told the man to appear again properly attired.

While holding court in one of the western counties of his state the judge directed the crier to adjourn court. The unwary crier went through the usual formula, beginning "All persons having anything further to do" and ending "God save the commonwealth of Massachusetts." The judge detected the term "9 a. m.," whereupon he reprimanded the crier for using the language of an auction room and directed him to adjourn in due form again, "till tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock."

The Great "Specter" of Maine Woods.

The enormous moose that has been the wonder of all sportsmen and the terror of superstitious woodsmen since 1891, says a Bangor (Me.) special to the Philadelphia Press, has again been seen, and people who have always laughed at the stories of "the white moose" and "the specter moose" are beginning to believe that, after all, there is some kind of an overgrown freak wandering around between Lobster lake and Mount Katahdin.

A few days ago a Boston sportsman named M. A. Cushing came down from the Katahdin Iron works region and reported having seen the big moose. Mr. Cushing describes the moose as the largest by far that he has ever seen and of a dusty white color, except for a brown patch under the chin.

Sea Serpent Forty-eight Feet Long.

Japanese newspapers, files of which reached Victoria, B. C., by the Chinese mail, have accounts of the capture and killing of two sea serpents by Japanese fishermen. One was forty-eight feet in length and the other thirty-nine. The remains of a human being were found in the smaller serpent. The head of the larger contained forty-four fangs, and both wore single horns over two feet long and ears of like dimension.

The Home of Honest Values And New Ideas.

Try to pay $15.00 for your Suit, if you can. It gives you better tailoring all over, and a better variety of patterns. Not that the $10.00 and $12.00 Suit aren't good--they are better than most Suits at the price--but it pays to get as good a suit as you can afford.

A man put on one of our $15 Suits the other day, and the first friend he met asked. "Where did you get it made?"

You really cannot tell our ready-made Clothing from custom-made. Attention to detail in Suit-making does the business. We're ready for YOU any day. Our Suits are far better than our prices would indicate. Compare YOUR Ideas with OUR Goods. You will find our prices will suit your Purse. COME SEE.

FROM DIEPPE TO NEWHAVEN

By Zoe Anderson Norris

Copyright, 1901, by Zoe Anderson Norris

IT is always he and she. Whether it be Adam and Eve, John and Margaret or Darby and Joan, it is he and she.

When the trunks had been lowered into the hold and the hold covered over, she brought her steamer rug, flung it across one corner, propped herself thereupon, wrapped her cape snugly about her and sat swaying slightly with the movement of the boat, her feet dangling, her eyes on the waves, the clouds, the sea gulls swooping through rainbows of mist and out again, while he, pacing the deck before her back and forth and back and forth again, eyed her furtively.

"I HAVE MET YOU BEFORE," SHE SAID.

Others paced the deck. Some, entering the dining room, sat pale faced before various and sundry eatables brought by alert and black coated waiters. Some stood at the railings, looking back at the fine roseate hue of the receding coast of France.

Her belongings had been placed by a porter on the long seat at the side. By and by, leaping down, she went to look after them. Upon her return she found him comfortably ensconced in her vicinity, with a soft Scotch rug well wrapped about his knees and a soft felt hat drawn down.

For awhile, after the manner of two overgrown children, they eyed each other. Then:

"I have met you before," she said, with a lighting up of eyes in a smile.

"Yes," he assented; "at the studio of Mme. Lemaire in Paris. I recognized you instantly."

With that they talked for an hour or so of things of no earthly consequence, as is customary in such cases, after which they drifted into topics more deep.

"Do you believe," he asked, "in the supernatural?"

"Sometimes," she answered. "I think I don't believe in much of anything else."

"Then I have a story to tell. It is the story of a bag of bones. I had an uncle in the diplomatic corps in China. While there he came across the bones of a Chinaman. Whether he just found the bones or"—

"Perhaps," with a quick, bright glance, "he killed him. This begins to be interesting."

"Maybe. At any rate, with much pains and a good deal of expense, he brought this bag of bones over the seas with him to his country house in Scotland and, having brought them there, put them away and forgot all about them."

"It is the way of the world," she nodded. "We go to every sort of trouble and expense doing things we think we want to do, then wonder why in the name of common sense we ever went to the trouble of doing them."

"Just so. In due course of time he gave a house party, this uncle of mine, inviting some friends up from London for a week or two. He filled the house, as a matter of fact, from garret to cellar. But, first, I forgot to say that the servants had put the bag of bones in a box and the box in one of the spare rooms upstairs under the bed."

He shrugged his shoulders.

"That was the pith of the story," he said disgustedly.

"Never mind," encouragingly. "I'll imagine you told it where it ought to have come in. Go on."

"The house was so filled," he went on, "that upon the arrival of the last guest it was found necessary to put him in the spare room, which for some reason or other—you will pardon this story if it isn't very clear—was seldom used. Then the fun began. There were dancing and music and frolicking till all hours of the night, till 4 or thereabout in the morning, when, one by one, they commenced to go to bed. The guest of whom I spoke was the last to go. The rest had just about dozed off when he roused them by dashing out of his room, slamming the door behind him, running down the hall to my uncle's room and falling there prone upon the carpet, panting and white as any ghost.

"My uncle propped him up and threw water in his face. When he could speak, he told him how he had hardly got to bed before a tall Chinaman, besashed, bias eyed and pigtailed, arose from somewhere, he couldn't tell where, and stood by his side—stood there, looking reproachfully down on him out of the smallness of his narrowly elongated eyes that were cat-a-cornered.

"And that wasn't all. Though apparently substantial enough, so much so that he filled up the room, this Chinaman was transparent. He could see straight through him. Tables, chairs, mirrors, back of him, shaped themselves, mingling with the flaunting hues of his tarnished robe."

"Yes," eagerly, "and what happened?"

"Nothing of any consequence. As I said before, he dashed past him or through him, I have forgotten which, through the door, too, down the hall and into my uncle's room for protection."

"Something else should have happened," she mused. "It's not enough."

"It can't be helped. I'm telling the story as it was told to me. They put the guest somewhere else, and the next day, taking the box from under the bed, they stowed it away in the attic, where once more it was forgotten."

The passengers who had partly partaken of lunch came strolling out, walking rapidly up and down for air.

She observed them, thinking.

"It's a good story," she decided finally, "what there is of it, but it lacks finish. How would it do to finish it like this? Say his soul went wandering, with those bones of his out of hallowed ground. It couldn't rest. Isn't there some sort of myth like that in Chinese history? Let his comrades, bias eyed, yellow of skin, gaudy of gown and besashed like him, make an excursion to that country house of your uncle's. Let them rush into the attic some fine night and rescue the bag of bones. Then, carried back home, buried decently in his native land, his soul finds rest along with them. How's that for a finish?"

He hesitated. She answered her own question.

"It's no good at all," she complained. "How shall I finish it?"

"Must you finish it?"

"Of course, if it goes into print."

He turned a quick glance upon her.

"Is that what you do?" he questioned. "Write?"

"It's what I do," she answered ruefully.

"How interesting it must be," he mused, "to weave fiction, to make something out of next to nothing and to earn your bread thereby."

"Bread," she repeated wearily, "but not always the butter." And she stretched out two hands in a gesture which savored of despair.

He caught one, that nearest to him.

"And is it with this little hand that you write?" he queried, spreading open the fingers.

"I write with both these little hands," she answered, laughing.

"How's that?"

"I pound the typewriter."

"Of course I should have known."

"It rather takes from the charm of it, doesn't it?" wistfully.

"Nothing could do that," affirmed he, with conviction.

She fixed her eyes on a faroff sail.

"If I didn't know you were Scotch," said she, "I should say you were Irish and had kissed the Blarney stone."

"If I were Irish even, I should draw the line at that. It's a difficult feat. You must be held by your heels while you hang over a dangerous precipice head down to reach it. Everything depends on the man who has you by the heels, and men are not to be trusted. No; I shouldn't care to kiss the Blarney stone."

"BREAD," SHE REPEATED WEARILY, "BUT NOT ALWAYS BUTTER."

Shivering, she drew her cape about her throat.

"You are cold," said he. "We are nearing the British coast. The chill of the fog comes out to welcome us. Shall I tuck you in? Here, let me put my warm Scotch rug around you."

"I'm cold, but that's not what's the matter with me so much. It's that story. It worries me."

Throwing off the rugs, he sprang down and stood before her.

"Come, let's walk about," holding out his arms, then, laughing and remembering, taking her two hands to help her down, "and I will tell you another story, an old, old story, but the sweetest story in the world."

Walking arm in arm across the deck, they stood facing the sunset.

"An exquisite Turner effect," said he critically, "those blown about clouds. I wish I had my brushes and paints a minute."

"So that is what you do, then, paint?"

"Yes."

"Paint it on canvas, and I will paint it with words, then we'll compare."

"We will. But the story?"

"Yes. I had forgotten. The story."

"It's a very simple story of a man who walked up the gangplank of a boat one afternoon carelessly, unthinking, never once imagining what awaited him there"—

"If I'm guessing anywhere as to what this story is going to be," she interrupted, "I should think it was old. Why, it's so old"—

"Give me a chance to finish it—and who saw sitting wrapped in rugs upon the hold"—

Again she interrupted him.

"I was right in my guess," said she. "It's a love story. Stop. It won't do. Begin another. The market is drugged with them. The editor won't have them. Tell me something else. For the love of mercy tell me something else!"

"I will tell you this," he declared, "or none."

She sighed resignedly.

"Go on," said she.

"There's many a strange thing in life," he obeyed, continuing, "but the strangest of all is love. It is impossible to tell how it comes."

"Or where it goes," she added, laughing.

He waived the question.

"Like the wind," he murmured, "it bloweth where it listeth. From the first moment, catching sight of her sitting there, a picture in her fine plaid cape and her big tan hat shading the black of her eyes, with a fetching background of sea and cloud and spray, he loved her."

"'He loved her,'" she echoed, her gaze on the skies, turning from yellow to crimson, from crimson to purple, from purple to the soft, mellow gray of the night. "Loved her so soon?"

"Love does not calculate," said he. "It comes."

There was a moment of silence, during which he regarded her.

"You are sweet," he whispered.

"How do you know I am sweet?" she smiled back at him.

"How do I know it is commencing to be dark? How do I know we are nearing the coast of England? How do I know anything?"

The answer pleased her. Her fingers, which were resting lightly on his arm, pressed it.

They walked briskly across, facing the fog and the coast. In the darkness they were surrounded by ghostly figures, their expectant faces also toward the coast, some home going.

"Talk to me," he begged. "Tell me"—

"It is too soon. From Dieppe to Newhaven, four hours. It is much too soon," she reiterated.

"Have you forgotten the studio of Mme. Lemaire and how we met there? Besides, love does not count the hours. Listen to the fog horns. We are about to land. Talk to me."

"Well," she began and stopped.

He took her chin and lifted up her face to his. His eyes, like the lights on the coast, glowed burningly misty with the fog between.

"Well, what?" he insisted.

"Unless I do," said she, "this story, it seems to me, stands less show of being finished than the other one."

"The story," he frowned, "always the story! Drop it and live. They are commencing to land. We must look out for our luggage. Talk to me. Tell me you care for me."

"Well, then," she told him, "perhaps I do."

Ecclesiastical Headgear.

A story is being told of which Lord Rosebery is the alleged subject. On one occasion he went into a large Oxford street establishment to purchase a new hat, and while he stood bareheaded waiting to be fitted a bishop entered on the same errand and mistook the earl for one of the shop assistants.

"Have you a hat like this?" he asked, showing his own extraordinary headgear.

Lord Rosebery took it from him and examined it critically before he answered. "No," he replied at length, "I haven't got a hat like that, and if I had I wouldn't wear it!"—London News.

EVENTFUL DAY.

all the past of our great country there has constantly sprung that spirit and that enthusiasm which have taught the people of the West what the country is and what it could be.

Allow me to congratulate the officers of the company whose noble product is now floating upon the calm waters of your harbor. I am not able to liken this occasion to any that I have ever experienced, but I am sure that the energy and aggressiveness of the company that planned and built this noble ship will rescue, if rescue be needed, the reputation of Massachusetts from the oblivion into which it has fallen. (Laughter.)

We of Iowa are particularly proud of this ship, because it bears the name of our capital city, and we believe that it will go far not only to sustain the honor of the republic, not only to increase the reputation of the American navy, but to still further spread the name of what we believe to be the best capital city in this great country.

Iowa is a great thing! I dare not exploit its merit lest I excite the envy of the good people of Massachusetts. I will pass over her miraculous development of the last half-century, and come immediately to one thing in which Iowa and Massachusetts are alike, and concerning which I can utter in the same breath a eulogy on these two great commonwealths.

Let me state that the men and women of these two states are their most striking characteristics. I believe that in everything that tends to make life lovely and sublime, in respect to law and order, in the sanctity of home life, these men and women have no comparisons in all civilization. And if I may draw a moral from this and introduce a serious vein into these disjointed, disconnected utterences, let me say that the principal duty which the time has cast upon you is to see to it that this unique manhood and womanhood that so distinguish Iowa and Massachusetts, and so distinguish the united republic of which we are happy to be citizens—to preserve the distinction is the great duty of the citizenship of America.

And I cannot take my seat without doing what my heart prompted me to do first, and that is to say that in this launching, as in all other things, Iowa and Massachusetts stand side by side. because these two commonwealths have presented two of the lovliest and most beautiful of their sex to assist at this occasion.

GOVERNOR LONG.

The ovation of the day was reserved for Hon. John D. Long, recently Secretary of the Navy, who was next introduced and spoke in a happy vein.

The poem on the first page was next read, and closed the exercises.

AT THE ADAMS HOUSES.

Following the lunch and speeches at the Fore River works, carriages were taken for the birthplaces of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams. Here the guests from Iowa and other guests of the Fore River Company were entertained from two until three, members of Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution doing the honors at the John Adams birthplace and Mr. W. G. Spear represented the Quincy Historical society at the John Quincy Adams birthplace.

The guests were delighted with the old houses, especially the visitors from the west, where they have no old houses of this kind.

After seeing the birthplaces of the presidents a visit was made to the tombs of the Adamses under the First church. Again the visitors were delighted; the solidity and massiveness of the church; its quaint old solid mahogany pulpit and high backed pews; its pillars of solid granite at the entrance all appealing to them.

THE CRUISER.

A Technical Description of the New Warship.

The United States protected cruiser Des Moines is one of six sheathed and coppered cruisers authorized by act of Congress on March 3, 1899, being intended chiefly for the protection of American interests in foreign parts. The contract for the construction of her hull and engines was signed with the Fore River Ship & Engine Company of Quincy, on December 14, 1899, and her keel was laid August 28, 1900.

The Des Moines has a load waterline of 292 feet, an extreme length of 303 feet two inches, a normal displacement of 3200 tons; and a full load displacement 3500 tons. Her estimated speed, with 4700 indicated horse power, will be 16 and a half knots.

Her normal coal supply is 467 tons, but her full bunker capacity is 700 tons, which is sufficient to give her a steaming radius of 2600 miles at full speed, or 9800 miles at 10 knots an hour. She has two vertical, inverted, triple expansion, four cylinder engines, six water tube boilers, a grate surface of 300 hundred square feet, and two stacks set fore and aft, rising 70 feet above the grates.

The submerged portion of the hull of the Des Moines is sheathed with Georgia pine planks, bolted to the steel skin with 23,000 bronze bolts, and the twin screws, rudder, stem, and stern castings, and all out-board parts, are of bronze. Teak has been used for the keel, oak for the bilge keels. She will have a non-magnetic bronze pilot house to insure greater accuracy for her compasses.

The main battery will consist of 10 five-inch 50-calibre breech-loading rapid-fire guns, and the secondary battery will comprise eight six-pounder rapid-fire guns, two one-pounder rapid-fire guns, four Colt automatic guns, and one three-inch field gun. The guns will all be designed for smokeless powder, so that the five-inch guns will be more effective than the old six-inch guns using black powder.

Eight of the five-inch guns will be mounted on the gun deck in recessed ports; the two forward ones having a range from right forward to 60 degrees abaft the beam, and the two after ones from right aft to 60 degrees before the beam, while the four waist guns will have a range from 60 degrees before to 60 degrees abaft the beam. The two remaining five-inch guns will be located behind shields on the spar deck, one forward and one aft.

Four six-pounders will be mounted on the gun deck and four more on the spar deck; the two one-pounders will be mounted aft on the gun deck and the Colt machine guns on the top of the hammock berthing amidships. The amunition supply will be large in order to make the rapid-fire guns effective, comprising 250 rounds for each of the five-inch guns, and 500 rounds for each of the six-pounders.

The Des Moines will have two masts, fore and aft rigged, carrying 6000 square feet of canvas. She will carry a full electrical equipment for lights and power, including two search lights, deck hoists and an engine turning motor. Her foremast will have an attachment for wireless telegraphy. She will also have icemaking and evaporating installations. All the bulkheads on the gun and berth decks will be of metal, and where it is necessary to use wood for any purpose, it is to be treated with an electsic fireproof process before being worked.

A watertight or protective deck has been worked from stem to stern, sides sloping down to three feet below the waterline. This deck is five-sixteenths of an inch thick on the flat and from one-half to two and one-half inches thick on the slopes, the greatest thickness, of nickel steel, being abreast the engines and boilers, Above the watertight deck, covering the waterline from stem to stern, is an obturating belt, composed of about 6720 cubic feet of cornpith cellulose. All the propelling machinery, steering gear, and magazines will be below the watertight deck.

The cruiser will carry one 30-foot launch, four 28-foot cutters, one 23-foot gig whale-boat, one 28-foot whale-boat, one 20-foot dinghy, and one 16-foot dinghy. The contract price for hull and machinery is $1,065,000, the armament being supplied by the government.

—Says the Christian Advocate, The Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, wonderfully successful in writing books that sell, and equally noteworthy for impracticable heories, several months ago announced that he would try to improve the moral tone of the stage by dramatizing one of his stories and presenting the play with Christian actors. He now says that he will abandon the scheme for the present, for the time necessary to put his reform ideas into effect, and the expense of preparing any Christians for the stage, would be a burden and would interfere with his other duties. This is a wise solution. It would be only a worse failure than his attempt to edit a paper.

A KITCHEN APRON.

One That Is Serviceable and Easily Made at Home.

Without doubt every housewife has a kitchen apron of some description, but the style shown in the sketch below is becoming very popular. It may be bought ready made or very easily constructed at home. If new material is used, apron gingham, two widths are necessary, putting the selvages together in the side seams and leaving a space of six inches at the top not sewed for the armholes. If the person is rather plump for whom the apron is made, use three widths of gingham in the same way. By following the sketch closely there will be no difficulty in carrying out the design. It is only straight breadths of material gathered into a band; then shoulder straps, merely straight bands, connect the back with the front. The apron should be long to cover the gown well, as this apron is easily put off and on, making it indispensable to the young housekeeper who does her own cooking. Do not make a mistake and omit the ruffle around the bottom, for it protects the gown underneath by its fullness sticking out from the skirt.

A Mother Hubbard kitchen apron is very desirable during the preserving season. It may be made of a gingham dress skirt that has a passe waist by making the length of the skirt sufficient by adding a wide ruffle. The apron buttons down the back.—Exchange.

To Gain Flesh.

To gain flesh, eat a hearty breakfast and dinner and a light luncheon.

Bread, butter and stewed fruit and milk are necessary articles of diet. Let the bread be brown or gluten loaf, and have the milk hot, but not scalded; take some often during the day, but eat no solids between meals. Olive oil on fresh green salad and cream with baked bananas are fattening foods.

Before retiring take a warm bath to induce sleep, which aids in increasing flesh. Devote ten hours to sleep, and if possible rest for ten minutes every afternoon.

Spend one whole day in bed each month, sleeping as much of the day as possible. The only true way to rest is to lie down in a darkened room with closed eyes and think of nothing. Even five minutes of such rest is valuable; the muscles of the face relax, and one does not get a hard, set look, which adds many years to the appearance.

Take time to eat your meals. If you have not time to get a meal leisurely, go without it, as it will not injure you a quarter as much as it will to eat in a hurry.

Invaluable For Mending.

A very handy thing to have about the house is a strip of the rubber tissue such as is used in hospitals. Not only is this an excellent cure for scald or burn, a rheumatic muscle, a sore chest or tired, aching joints and feet, but it is a valuable adjunct to the mending basket. If there is a three cornered tear in Bobby's jacket or Belinda's skirt, draw the edges together, lay on a little snare of the tissue, cover this with a patch and press with a moderately hot iron until the tissue, which is of pure gum, is dissolved. If care is taken of this tissue, it will last indefinitely. It must not be kept in a hot room or shut up away from the air in a tight box or drawer. Put it between two sheets of paper and lay where the air can circulate around it. It is not expensive. Fifty cents will buy a strip over a yard long and a quarter wide, an outlay that will pay for itself many times over. It can be bought at almost any drugstore.

How to Spoil Children.

Laugh at their faults; encourage white lies; give them their own way; tell them pretty untruths; give them what they cry for; shout at the top of your voice to them; never encourage their efforts to do better; fly into a passion with them several times a day; punish them if they break some trifle by accident; don't enter into their games; when they ask for information, tell them to be quiet; let them think the streets are the best place to play; never take any notice of their childish sorrows; don't have any toys or playthings tossed around the house; don't bother yourself about whose house they go to; don't trouble inviting their companions to your house; always take part against their teachers and try to forget as much as possible that you were once young yourself.

Whooping Cough.

For whooping cough, 5 cents' worth of sirup of rhubarb and 5 cents' worth of castor oil, mixed, and given twice a day—half a small teaspoonful at a time—will often effect a cure. Another good remedy is powdered alum. Give four grains of this in a teaspoonful of sugar and water three times a day one hour before food. This dose may be given to a child one year old and upward, increasing the dose till eight grains are given. For a child of ten begin with eight grains and increase to sixteen. Let the child be in the open air as much as possible.

Surprise at Braintree.

Last Saturday evening Mrs. C. H. Stone went over to the home of Omer Wilton Hollis at Braintree to an orchestral rehearsal. Omer had just keyed up his violin and Mrs. Stone was seated at the piano when the door bell rang. The violinist went to the door and found there a couple of South Braintree friends whom he invited in.

Omer was completely surprised for instead of two friends there filled in about 75 people from Braintree, Quincy, Randolph, Stoughton and Somerville and all Omer could say was well, well, well. It dawned upon him that the celebration was intended for him for on the morrow (Sunday) it would be his birthday.

Ellsworth A. Hollis was also surprised by receiving a duplicate present to that which Omer received, a pair of box calf leather lined winter shoes.

Later in the evening the barn floor was cleared for dancing, the parlor organ was taken out and soon the dust began to fly. Mrs. Hollis, noted for her hospitality and party dinners, treated the gathering to ice cream, cake, fruit and confectionery, of which there was a great supply. Games, singing and orchestral music kept the party interested until the clock struck twelve. Then Omer was congratulated for reaching his thirty-fourth birthday without a hitch.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The attraction at the Castle Square Theatre this week will be the famous romantic play by the younger Dumas "Camille" this being its first production at this theatre. The play, and the novel upon which it was founded, have made the story of the heroine known the world over and few dramas of the last century have enjoyed more widespread popularity. It is a well known fact, in the life of young Dumas, that the novel and its subsequent dramatization were the events that made the foundation of his financial success and this play has been the cause of many a fortune in the dramatic world since then. The heroine was taken from one of his associates, Alphonsine Flessis, known in the world of Paris as Marie Duplessis, who was the daughter of a small farmer in Normandy and startled Parisian circles in 1843 by her beauty and grace just as the younger Dumas was at his wits ends to save himself from financial ruin. The cast of the leading characters will be, Armand Duval, John Craig; Mons. Duval, James L. Seeley; Messenger, Louis Thiel; Camille, Lillian Lawrence; Madame Prudence, Leonora Bradley; Nichette, Mary Sanders; Nanine, Izetta Jewel; Olympe, Jane Irving.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

For the week commencing Sept. 22 the special feature of the program at Keith's will be Wormwood's dog and monkey circus, claimed to be the most humorous and interesting animal act in the world, and a source of great delight for the juveniles. Other attractions include J. Aldrich Libbey and Katherine Trayer, in an operatic melange; Jess Dandy, the favorite Hebrew parody singer; F. O. Harrell, musical novelties and magic; Swan and O'Day, blackface singers and dancers; Decoursey brothers, wonderful athletes, and Albert Bellam and Lottie Moore in a comedy sketch. The biograph will have an entire new list of motion pictures, as usual. Underlined for the week of Sept. 29 is the noted English Pony Ballet of novelty dancers and singers.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

The attraction booked to follow "Fiddle-Dee-Dee" at Boston Music Hall this week is one that will be welcomed by all theatre-goers. Williams and Walker, who have been termed the "kings of colored comedians," come to the Music Hall on Monday next, September 22 with their big company of artists, presenting for the first time in Boston their very latest operatic comedy, entitled, "In Dahomey." Williams and Walker have always been great favorites with Boston audiences and their coming to Music Hall will be greeted with anticipatory pleasure by the patrons of this beautiful theatre. Daily matinees will be given every afternoon during the week at which the regular Music Hall prices will prevail. The great English play, "The Sign of the Cross," is announced to follow Williams and Walker.

YOUNG IS IN CUSTODY

Admits Identity and Is Said to Have Confessed

MIND HAS BEEN A BLANK

For the Last Few Days, According to His Story, and He Does Not Know Where He Has Been—Willing to Return to New York

Derby, Conn., Sept. 23.—William Hooper Young, for whom the police of New York have been searching in connection with the murder of Mrs. Anna Nelson Pulitzer, has been found. He has admitted his identity and is also said to have made a confession regarding the killing of Mrs. Pulitzer.

In the guise of a tramp, he had been wandering about the country when he was arrested Sunday evening by the Derby police on suspicion. Although his description corresponded closely with that sent out by the New York officers, the prisoner at first stoutly denied any connection with the murder, and even when he was confronted with a man who was formerly a fellow-workman, he still denied his identity.

But last evening, upon the arrival of a man with whom he was intimately acquainted, the prisoner acknowledged that he is William Hooper Young. He consented to go back to New York without the formality of requisition papers.

It was to Mac Levy, a physical culture instructor of Brooklyn, and Detective Hughes of New York that the prisoner admitted his identity. The suspected man up to that time had insisted that he was Bert Edwards of Portland, Ore.

Young's day spent in confinement had a marked effect upon him. He was highly nervous, and when he was questioned sharply by the detectives he trembled violently and almost lost command of his voice. His appearance was that of a man on the verge of collapse at this time, but a few hours of quiet restored his self-possession and when Levy arrived the prisoner was apparently calm and unconcerned.

During the interview with the officers which followed Young's admission of his identity, he is said to have made a confession regarding the crime. The exact nature of this confession was not made public. It was said that Young had spoken of an accomplice, but one of the officers, when questioned about this, replied: "If you say simply that a confession has been made, you will tell the whole story." From another apparently reliable source, however, came the information that Young did say that he had an accomplice.

In explaining the presence of red pepper in his pocket when arrested, and also in the trunk containing some of his effects and the clothes of Mrs. Pulitzer, which was sent to Chicago, Young said he had been taking doses of pepper in milk for his stomach. "I had heard that was good to sober one up," he added. He declared that for the last few days everything had been a blank to him, and that he did not know where he had wandered.

Shortly before 9 o'clock the officers withdrew from the prisoner's cell and left him for the night, the announcement being made that the man would not be taken to New York until today, as it was deemed best, considering his highly nervous condition, to allow him a chance to rest.

Refugees In Awful Plight

Geneva, Sept. 23.—Great indignation has been aroused at Basel by the arrival there of hundreds of Roumanian refugees, who have come in the hope of finding refuge in England or the United States. Most of them are utterly destitute and have no means of proceeding further on their journey. Some of them are in terrible condition, and a starving mother was found holding a naked baby to her breast.

Pearys Shaken Up In Collision

Halifax, Sept. 23.—A fast express from Sydney was in collision with a passenger train near Trenton last night. The Sydney flyer ploughed through the local train, derailing two cars, smashing a third one and injuring a number of passengers. Lieutenant Peary and his wife and daughter were on the Sydney train, enroute for New York. They escaped serious injury, but were badly shaken up.

MANGLED BY A TRAIN

Labor Editor of Boston Paper Meets Terrible Fate at Lynn

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 23.—John F. O'Sullivan, labor editor of The Boston Globe, and prominently identified with labor organizations, was killed by a train on the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn railroad here last night. O'Sullivan had an engagement to dine with John F. Hickey of this city last evening, and was also to address a meeting of the Metal Workers. He reached Lynn on the train arriving at 7 o'clock from Boston, and, having fallen asleep, was awakened when the train stopped in the depot.

O'Sullivan left the train, but being, it is supposed, only half awake, instead of going out through the station he went out through the train shed and when about 150 feet beyond the end of the shed fell upon the track, his head and shoulders lying diagonally across the rail. The yard is dimly lighted, and, as no one saw him fall, he lay there unnoticed until the arrival of another train, due at 8:22 p. m.

This train made a flying switch and Brakeman Cole, who was on the front end of the train, was the first to see the body lying upon the track. Both he and the conductor did their utmost to stop the train, but could not do so before the car had passed over the prostrate form, crushing the head beyond recognition, cutting off one arm, and terribly mangling the upper part of the body.

Boston Fireman Killed

Boston, Sept. 23.—The five-story brick block 394 to 400 Atlantic avenue was the scene of a stubborn fire last night that caused a loss of $50,000. The fire started on the fourth floor, occupied by the Chase-Shawmut company, manufacturers of electrical specialties, and caught, it is alleged, from an oil stove. While fighting the flames Ladderman Daniel Shea fell four stories, receiving injuries which resulted in his death. Ladderman Donahue was badly cut by flying glass.

Two Thought They Were Shot

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 23.—Henry Moody, wearing the uniform of the United States army, created great excitement last night by firing blank cartridges from his revolver on Andrew street. A large crowd collected, and several persons imagined they had been shot. Two of them fell to the sidewalk and shouted lustily for help, but they were soon convinced that they were uninjured. Moody was arrested.

Murder Remains a Mystery

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 23.—"I find," says Associate Justice Daly of the Middlesex district court, in his finding as to the cause of the death of Henry F. Kane, who was shot on the morning of July 4 in East Cambridge, "that Henry F. Kane came to his death by reason of two bullet wounds in the said Kane's chest, inflicted by some person unknown."

Threatened Murder, Killed Himself

Providence, Sept. 23.—Fred I. Remington of Pawtucket, 32 years old, sent a 22-calibre bullet from a rifle through his right temple, and death was practically instantaneous. He had been acting queerly of late, and had threatened to kill several others and then himself, but nobody paid attention to him. His wife had separated from him.

Big Bunch of Stowaways

Boston, Sept. 23.—Steamer Cambroman, which arrived here yesterday from Italian ports, brought 13 stowaways, the largest number found on any vessel at this port for several years. Most of them mingled freely with the steerage passengers and were able to elude detection until this port was reached. All are Italians.

Plot Against Czar Failed

London, Sept. 23.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Daily Express reports an attempt to derail the train upon which the czar travelled from Kursk. Rails were removed on the two routes which the czar might travel. In one instance the plot was discovered and in the other the train was wrecked. The czar reached St. Petersburg safely.

For Shooting His Sweetheart

Littleton, N. H., Sept. 23.—Five years in state prison was the sentence given yesterday to William C. Delaney, who shot Norah McKenna, his sweetheart, two months ago. He was indicted for assault with intent to kill.

Bostonians Pay $15 For Coal

Boston, Sept. 23.—Boston coal dealers again advanced the price of anthracite yesterday from $12 to $15 a ton. It is estimated that there are less than 25,000 tons of hard coal in retailers' hands here.

Negroes Appreciate Aid

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 23.—The National negro Baptist convention held its final session yesterday and adjourned. All the speakers touched upon the panic of Friday night, in which over 100 lives were lost, and were loud in their praise of the manner in which the white citizens have come to the relief of the distressed.

Returned Home to Die

New York, Sept. 23.—Edward T. Cobb, 49 years old, of Vanceoro, Me., said to be a millionaire mine owner recently returned from the gold regions of Australia, died yesterday from chronic nephritis. The body was taken to Vanceboro last night by his wife, whom he married in Australia.

DISARMING OF TROOPS

Before Crossing Isthmus May Result In a Protest

COLOMBIANS ARE OFFENDED

At What Appears to Them to Be an Infringement of Sovereignty Over Panama—Halt In Hostilities May Be Brought About by Naval Force

Washington, Sept. 23.—Officials of the Colombian legation here predict that a storm of disapproval will arise in Colombia as a result of Commander McLean's action in disarming the Colombian troops before their passage across the isthmus. It is stated here that Colombia's agreement with the Panama Railroad company specifically provides for the transportation of Colombian soldiers by the railroad when occasion arises and the commander's action is regarded at the legation here as a direct infringement of Colombia's sovereignty over the isthmus.

Commander McLean yesterday cabled the navy department:

"The United States guards and guarantees traffic and line of transit. Today I permitted the exchange of Colombian troops from Panama to Colon, about 1000 men each way, the troops without arms, in train guarded by American naval force in the same manner as other passengers, arms and ammunition in separate train guarded also by naval force in the same manner as other freight."

Commander McLean, in having the troops transported in a separate train from their arms, is acting apparently in accordance with his construction of that part of Secretary Moody's instructions, cabled on Saturday, which read:

"Any transportation of government troops not in violation of treaty, and which would not endanger transit or provoke hostilities, may not be objectionable. The department must rely upon your judgment to decide such questions as conditions may arise from day to day."

Naval officers say the commander evidently believed the transportation of troops, rifles in hand and cartridge belts full, might "provoke hostilities" while en route across the isthmus and create an interruption of traffic.

A belief, which has grown so strong that it no longer can be disregarded, is held in Central and South American diplomatic quarters here in regard to this latest and, in point of numbers, almost unprecedented dispatch of naval force to this isthmus. This belief (and it should be stated that the impression prevails in spite of emphatic expressions of high officials of the United States government to the contrary) is that the large naval force which has been sent to keep traffic open across the isthmus will prevent, by its very presence, the continuation of hostilities along the railroad on any extensive scale, and soon bring them to a halt altogether; that the force has been sent there in anticipation of an early signature of the Panama canal treaty, and that it will be kept there to maintain order and quiet along the strip from Panama to Colon, which, by the terms of the prospective treaty, the United States is to control.

The following dispatch was received at the Colombian legation here last night from Governor Salazar, of the department of Panama:

"Rebels have retreated to Agua Dulce. Railway traffic perfectly free. The interior of Colombia completely pacified. Today additional reinforcements reached Colon from Barranquilla. Rebels admit hopelessness of their cause."

The legation officials assert that the retreat of the rebels to Agua Dulce marks practically the collapse of the rebellion.

"If" Rebels Get Isthmus

San Jose, C. R., Sept. 23.—General Vargas-Santos, chief of the Colombian revolutionary junta in New York city and one of the directors of the revolution, who arrived here last month from New York, will remain in San Jose, having found the city strategically valuable for his purposes. He says that if the isthmus falls into the hands of the revolutionists, which he hopes will soon come about, he will then be ready and willing to make peace with the Colombian government, provided all interests in Colombia are represented and considered in the negotiations to this end.

Hay's Good Offices Sought

St. Louis, Sept. 23.—Ardashes H. Kelelian, president of the Armenian National union, composed of 20,000 Armenians in this country, has written a letter to Secretary Hay, requesting his intervention with the European powers in behalf of the Armenians in Turkey.

Terrible Torture of a Cat

Bath, Me., Sept. 23.—John Ellers pleaded guilty in court yesterday to wilfully torturing and mutilating a cat and was bound over to the superior court. Testimony showed that, while intoxicated, Ellers had broken every bone in the cat's body and dug out its eyes.

Baer's Men Ready to Yield

Pottsville, Pa., Sept. 23.—A delegation of mine workers called at the offices of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company last night and submitted a proposition to return to work if they could have assurances that President Baer will adjust all local differences at the collieries. The delegation will have a conference with the officials today.

Gompers Blames Operators

Washington, Sept. 23.—President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor says that the striking miners in the Pennsylvania coal fields are prepared to hold out for months. He says the miners are disposed to make concessions, but the operators have refused all overtures from them and that the men now "are not going to yield."

American Contribution of $100,000

Rotterdam, Sept. 23.—General Botha, in a speech here yesterday, said he had received $100,000 in aid of the destitute Boers from Arthur White, an American, and appealed to others to follow his example, as the Boer generals' purpose of obtaining further compensation for property destroyed had failed. They had no intention of changing the peace conditions but they appealed for assistance for the 16,000 wounded and for those who had lost everything.

Roumania Is Defiant

London, Sept. 23.—The Vienna correspondent of The Times says he fears there is little doubt that the Roumanians have resolved to accept the consequence of setting at defiance the signatory powers and the public opinion of the civilized world and to continue the persecution of the Jews in order to compel them to seek asylum abroad.

More Marines at Colon

Colon, Sept. 23.—The United States auxiliary cruiser Panther, from the League Island navy yard, with a battalion of marines on board, has arrived here. Efforts are being made to secure suitable quarters here for the American marines.

Hannahan Succeeds Sargent

Chattanooga, Sept. 23.—John J. Hannahan was yesterday elected grand master of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen to succeed Frank P. Sargent, recently appointed commissioner of immigration. Hannahan has been vice grand master of the brotherhood for the past 17 years.

Piled Up Liquor Fines

Belfast, Me., Sept. 23.—Liquor dealers of this county were given a surprise yesterday when County Attorney Foster, in completing his term of office, increased the usual fine to $220 and demanded payment at once in every case brought to his attention.

Steamers Grounded In Fog

Sturgeon Bay, Wis., Sept. 23.—Two passenger steamers, the City of Marquette and the Sheboygan, went ashore in the fog yesterday. The passengers on both boats are safe.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

OLD THIRTY-NINTH.

The Regiment Has a Reunion as Guest of Co. D.

The annual reunion of the 39th Mass. Regt. Association was held Monday afternoon at the Squantum Inn, where the association were the guests of Co. D.

The roll call showed the several companies to be represented as follows: Co. A, 11; B, 8; C, 11; D, 10; E, 8; F, 4; G, 6; H, 10; I, 16; K, 13.

Col. Charles H. Porter presided at the after-dinner exercises, and brief addresses were made by Gen. C. L. Pierson of Boston; Captain—J. J. Cooper of Taunton; Rev. Dr. C. A. Eaton of Cleveland, O.; Julius M. Swain of Jamaica Plain, and Captain Charles N. Hunt of Quincy. An original poem was read by E. H. Bradshaw of Newtonville.

The secretary's report showed the following deaths since the last reunion: George W. Burnham, Essex; Sidney Smith, Roxbury; George H. Northey, Somerville; William E. Deane, Taunton; Albert Hersey, Hingham, B. S. Sweatland, Dorchester; Jonathan F. Griffin, William Felch, Charles W. Jennison, Natick; John McCarthy, George W. Deane, Loring W. Searles, Woburn.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President,—William L. Hicks of Roxbury.

Secretary,—Col. Charles H. Porter of Quincy.

Treasurer,—Julius M. Swain of Jamaica Plain.

CITY COUNCIL.

Order to Change Schoolhouse Plans.

City Square Double Tracking.

Two Favorable Reports on Houghs Neck Matters.

Councilmen Elcock, Hughes and Nickerson were the absent members at Monday night's meeting of the City Council.

ELECTION OFFICERS.

The Mayor appointed Edward Twitchell an election inspector in place of James P. Casey, who could not serve. This amendment prevailed and the appointment of election officers was confirmed.

The auctioneers bond of Charles H. Johnson was approved.

PETITIONS.

John C. Ballou in a petition stated that the culvert on Rogers street carried the drainage onto his land and he asked that an appropriation of $150 be made to carry the culvert through his premises. To Committee on Sewers and Drains.

The Quincy Electric Light Co. petitioned for the location of one pole on South Central avenue. To Committee on Streets.

The Old Colony street railroad petitioned for an extension of time to build the new location granted them to connect its line on Washington street with the new bridge.

This was laid on the table until later when it was taken up.

Councilman Newcomb stated that the company were already to build but could not do so until the bridge was completed. He then offered an order granting them an extension of time until June 1, 1903. Adopted.

The Old Colony street railway petitioned for permission to use a Trail on the new bridge at Quincy Point.

Laid on the table until later when the petitioners were given leave to withdraw.

BRAINTREE BOUNDS.

The Committee on Public Grounds reported that it had agreed with the town of Braintree where the bound should be placed and that the expense would be borne jointly by Quincy and Braintree. The report recommended reference to the Executive department. Adopted.

ROCK ISLAND ROAD.

The Committee on Streets reported an order for $700 for laying out Rock Island road. To Committee on Finance.

CITY SQUARE.

The Committee on Streets reported an order granting the street railway a change of location in City Square. Ordered to a second reading.

The order calls for a double track on Hancock street from Dr. Gordon's to the Ledger office, and a double track on Washington street between Hancock and Temple streets.

TO BE REMOVED.

The Committee on Ordinance reported favorable on the order for $1500 for the removal of the old French house for a small pox hospital. Passed.

HOUGHS NECK FIRE STATION.

The same committee reported favorable on the order for $2000 additional for a fire station at Houghs Neck.

Councilman Whiton said he had been informed that the Chief said that $3,300 would take care of Houghs Neck for the next twenty years. He moved to lay on the table. Lost.

Councilmen Fallon asked what the first appropriation was. He was informed by the clerk that the amount was $4000, of which $650 was for land.

Councilman Fallon objected to the order. It was extravagant. It pays to go a little easy on the fire department.

It was nonsense building a two-way house at the seashore. There were plenty of hydrants there and a stream from one of those was strong enough to put out any fire and to knock many of the buildings off their foundation.

The order was passed, Councilman Fallon voting no.

A TRANSFER.

Councilman Freeman offered an order authorizing the City Auditor and Treasurer to approve and pay bills for work on Quincy avenue to the amount of $1,088.60, and to transfer that amount when received from the street railway. Adopted.

Carl E. Carlson was granted an auctioneer's license, and his bond approved.

BLOW OUTS.

Councilman Bass offered a resolution that the Mayor be requested to direct the street railway to encase all circuit breakers or blow-outs on their cars.

Upon his motion this was referred to the special committee having in charge the matter of through car service to Boston.

FAXON PARK ROAD.

GEORGE E. ADAMS.

A Popular Candidate for Representative.

Mr. Adams is well known throughout the city, having taken an active part in city affairs, serving in the City Council for two years from Ward Two, and being a member of the Republican Ward and City Committee for several years.

He was born in Quincy and his family have always been closely identified with local interests, both when Quincy was a town and while a city. His grandfather, Bryant B. Newcomb was for many years selectman and member of the School Committee, and his grandfather, Ebenezer Adams, held the same offices. The last representative to the legislature from Ward Two was his uncle, Capt. Thaddeus H. Newcomb.

Mr. Adams is a graduate of Harvard college and is a member of the Massachusetts Bar, practicing law in Quincy and Boston.

He is also well known in military circles, having enlisted in Co. K 5th Massachusetts Volunteers at the outbreak of the war with Spain, and being commander of John A. Boyd, Camp 2, Legion of Spanish War Veterans.

He is well qualified from experience and education to represent Quincy in the Legislature.

G. A. R. Funeral.

The funeral of Ephraim F. Thayer was held Monday afternoon from his late residence on Spear street. The services were quite largely attended, the Grand Army being present in a body. The services at the house were conducted by Rev. George A. Strong, after which the remains were escorted to Mt. Wollaston cemetery by Paul Revere Post which performed its burial service at the grave.

TODAY'S COURT.

The continued case of William Buchan was called and he was sentenced to six months in the house of correction.

John McConnell was arraigned for drunkenness at Milton. Case continued until Friday.

Wilbrod B. Dalpe was arraigned for larceny of less than $100 from Charles H. Brooks. Case continued until Oct. 7.

The continued case of Norris W. Higbee and Lizzie Sweipberg for lewd and lascivious cohabitation at Quincy was heard, and they were held in $500 each for the grand jury.

Eczema

How it reddens the skin, itches, oozes, dries and scales!

Some people call it tetter, milk crust or salt rheum.

The suffering from it is sometimes intense; local applications are resorted to—they mitigate, but cannot cure.

It proceeds from humors inherited or acquired and persists until these have been removed.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

positively removes them, has radically and permanently cured the worst cases, and is without an equal for all cutaneous eruptions.

HOOD'S PILLS are the best cathartic. Price 25 cents.

BILLHEADS PRINTED AT PATRIOT OFFICE.

CHECK FOR $100.

To Encourage the W. C. T. U. to Renewed Efforts for Temperance.

Henry H. Faxon recognizes the woman as a valuable help in fighting intemperance, and the following letter is self explanatory:

Mrs. Katherine Lente Stevenson, President Massachusetts W. C. T. Union,

An examination of the vote on the question of License and No-License reveals the fact that ten years ago there were only 58 cities and towns in this State which declared in favor of the saloon while today there are 103 such places.

This is an alarming growth in the influence of the liquor power, and I believe that it is largely due to the lack of political activity on the part of the temperance forces.

License municipalities multiply rapidly when the administration of a No-License vote is placed in the hands of officials who are not in sympathy with that policy. What is true in regard to a city or town is also true in matters of State. It is folly to petition a rum-mortgaged legislature to enact temperance laws.

Although the members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union are deprived of the power of the ballot their influence is far-reaching and cannot be ignored even by politicians. There are many ways in which your organization can make its strength felt in opposition to those candidates for office whose voice and vote will not be used for the protection of the home and the destruction of the saloon.

Numerous victories for pure politics have been won through the activities of good women. Therefore, at this time when the battle is on in Massachusetts and all about us, let me urge you to rally your members to the work of electing to office those men who have defended our cause, and relegating to obscurity those who have been untrue to our interests.

I inclose check for $100 to be expended in the promotion of temperance politics. Yours very truly,

Henry H. Faxon.

Quincy, Sept. 22, 1902.

THE SHAFT READY.

Steamer Vizcania Having a Hurry-up Job at Quincy Point.

British steamer Vizcaina, which arrived in Boston ten days ago from Progreso, Mex., was towed to Quincy Monday by the tug William H. Gallison, where she will receive a new tail shaft.

An examination of the old shaft disclosed a fracture, and the shaft was condemned by Lloyd's surveyor Murphy. The steamer is under charter to proceed from here to Philadelphia to load a cargo of coal for Havana, and she has already cleared at the custom-house.

Her owners are anxious to get her away as quickly as possible, and when the Fore River Ship and Engine Co., agreed to fit her with a new shaft in five days, the contract was immediately closed.

While the cruises Des Moines was being launched Saturday, the ingot from which the new shaft was to be fashioned was put in the furnace, and at 4 o'clock Sunday morning it was forged and taken to the machine shop. It was planed and finished at ten o'clock Monday morning and was in waiting for the vessel which is now at Quincy Point undergoing repairs. It is one of the quickest jobs of the kind ever attempted at this port.

Through the Berkshire Hills and over the Fall River Line, Boston to Albany, to New York, to Boston. Starting Thursday, Oct. 9. For $5.00. Secure a descriptive leaflet. A. S. Hanson, Gen. Pass. Agent, Boston & Albany R. R., Boston.

Surprise Party.

A surprise party was tended to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Merrill of Woodbine street Wollaston, Friday evening Sept. 19, by about fifty of their friends who took possession of the house and proceeded to enjoy themselves as only the members of a surprise party can.

After Mr. and Mrs. Merrill had recovered from their astonishment, they were called into the parlor, where Mr. G. A. Wardwell, in behalf of the assembled guests, presented them with an elegant couch.

Although Mr. Merrill denis being a public speaker he nevertheless responded in a very pleasant manner.

Piano selections were given by Miss Connors of Neponset, and Mr. Metcalf of Watertown. There was singing by Miss Connors, Mr. Rowe and Mr. Mc Kay.

Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served, and at a late hour the guests departed satisfied with the pleasent evening spent, and wishing Mr. and Mrs. Merrill many happy returns of the day.

The continued case of William Buchan was before the court. He was charged with the larceny of a bicycle which he sold to James R. Qualey for $3. In court the first day Buchan claimed that the wheel was given him and that if he had time he could prove it.

The court gave William the time. When the case was called Chief of Police Pierce of Milton appeared with one of his townsmen who had lost a wheel. Buchan then said he stole the wheel but would not have done so if it was not for liquor. If the court would be lenient he would never steal again. The court said six months in the house of correction.

VIEWS OF BERESFORD.

Noted British Admiral Talks on Military Affairs.

THINKS BRITISH FORCES IMPROVED

Both Army and Navy Better Since War in South Africa—Submarine Boats, He Says, Are an Unknown Quantity—Uneasiness In Great Britain About the Shipping Combine.

Lord Admiral Lord Charles Beresford of the British navy, who arrived in New York the other day, was asked for his opinion on various topics and talked at some length on armies and navies, naval maneuvers and the shipping combine. He said:

"I have no more criticisms to make on our army and navy. They have improved greatly since the South African war. I think the world learned by the Boer war of what great value movable heavy guns are. No country had ever been able before to do what we did—take heavy guns from warships and use them in the field.

"The latest additions to our navy, submarine boats, are largely an unknown quantity. What we have to be careful of is not to underrate them or, then again, overrate them. We have five of these vessels, I think, and are using two types, one of which is the Holland. If the submarine boat turns out to be a success, it means the key to the situation in the channel as far as England is concerned. The only trouble with them now is that they are not able to take care of themselves. They have to be carried on warships from place to place. Warships in action need all the room they can get.

"When you ask me about the shipping combine, I must confess that we are a little frightened. Not at the probabilities, however, but at the possibilities of such a combination of interests. It is ridiculous to talk of England forming a rival combination. We cannot compete with your railways, and it is well known that it is the through rate that pays. England would not establish a bounty or subsidy on her ships, for if she did you could put up a million of pounds to every thousand of ours. Then again you have 80,000,000 people here and unlimited means.

"Naval fighting is like army fighting. On shore you have the infantry, which can be compared with the small vessels. The field guns can be likened to the cruisers and the heavy artillery to the battleships. Forage wagons take the place of transports, and so on.

"It is not true that we are short of men in the British navy. We can get all the men we want. Our burden of antiquated ships is also greatly exaggerated. We have a few old timers, but are gradually getting rid of them. I must admit, however, that France has gone ahead of us in the fact that she has taken her old ships and remodeled them.

"I cannot make any comparison as to the superiority of guns over armor, or vice versa. While a shell might be able to penetrate a plate of armor set in a direct frontal position, a slight deflection of the armor plate would render the shot almost useless. That is why, in time of war, so few of the shells fired at a vessel cause great damage. Small armor cannot be recommended too highly, however. A bursting shell, which used to kill a great number of people, has been rendered less dangerous by this small armor, which catches the flying pieces.

"The target practice in which our battleships the Majestic and Terrible sunk the Belleisle taught us a lot about the different types of battleships and their respective usefulness. Fixed mortar batteries are, in my opinion, of no value shooting at a moving target. No, I do not think they could hit a ship moving at the rate of eighteen knots an hour or even at fourteen knots."

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. RELATIONS STRAINED

Differences Between Venezuela and England Reach an Acute Stage

London, Sept. 23.—The Associated Press is in a position to announce that diplomatic relations between Great Britain and Venezuela are on the verge of being severed. Almost any hour may bring the announcement that the British minister at Caracas has been given his passport, with corresponding action towards the Venezuelan representative in London. The cause of the crisis does not seem to be confined to any particular incident, but consists of various differences.

The view of the foreign office is that affairs have reached a stage where it is impossible to deal satisfactorily with Venezuela in any matter which may come up. In proof of this contention the foreign office instances the report of United States Minister Bowen at Caracas, announcing that the Venezuelan government had protested against the British flag being raised over Patos (or Goose) island, over which the Venezuelan government claimed sovereignty. According to the British government's understanding Patos island belongs to Great Britain just as much as Trinidad, and no question as to its ownership has ever arisen. Inhabitants of the island have recently been shot or otherwise endangered through the action of Venezuelans. For purposes of protection the local West Indian authorities ordered the British flag to be prominently displayed on the island, hence the protest, which the foreign office says is only one of many.

Operations Against Moros

Manila, Sept. 23.—Captain Pershing's courier reached General Sumner at Camp Vicars yesterday. The captain reported that he first moved on Goanan, where the troops took three Moro forts. They then pushed on to Baynbao and captured two forts. From Pantuan to Sanir the column was frequently fired upon. Captain Pershing communicated with the principal sultans, but they refused to recognize the Americans. When the courier departed Captain Pershing had planned to attack Macin. General Sumner has forwarded additional rations to Captain Pershing so as to permit him to keep in the field if Macin offers serious resistance.

Accident Was Unavoidable

Washington, Sept. 23.—The report of the naval board of inquiry which met to investigate the circumstances attending the accident to the cruiser Brooklyn in Buzzard's bay, during the recent joint maneuvers, was received at the navy department yesterday. The court says that "the ship was carefully, properly and skilfully handled, and the taking her in and out, to and from the position of her anchorage and by the channel used was entirely justified." It recommended that no further proceedings be had in the matter.

Sheldon Wants Nomination

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 23.—The Republican state convention opens at noon today and lasts for two days, nominations being made tomorrow. An interesting rumor was to the effect that the name of George R. Sheldon for lieutenant governor would be withdrawn and that Lieutenant Governor Woodruff would again be presented. Mr. Sheldon, after listening to the story, said: "I do not intend to withdraw and my name will be presented to the convention."

Devery Forces Won

New York, Sept. 23.—Assembly district conventions were held last night by the Democrats in many of the districts in this city to elect delegates to the state convention. In the Ninth district William S. Devery heads the delegation. An attempt was made to shut the Devery forces out of the building in which it was necessary by law to hold the convention, but Devery was successful in preventing the consummation of the plan.

Corean Treasury Is Low

Seoul, Sept. 23.—The celebration of the anniversary of the coronation of the emperor has been postponed in consequence, it is officially stated, of the spread of cholera, but it is alleged that the real reason is lack of funds.

The Montgomery on Duty

Washington, Sept. 23.—United States Minister Powell at Port au Prince announces the arrival at Cape Haytien of the cruiser Montgomery, Commander Patch. She takes the place of the Cincinnati, now at Colon.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Lieutenant Colonel Constantine Chase of the artillery corps died suddenly at Fort Trumbull, Conn.

Estimates have been framed aggregating between $11,000,000 and $12,000,000, for the rural free delivery service in the United States during the next fiscal year.

At a special town meeting at Manchester, Mass., it was vited to accept the gift of a memorial chapel from Miss Susan E. Crowell, to be built in Rosedale cemetery at her expense, as a memorial to her brother, the late Benjamin F. Crowell.

The jury in the case of Thomas Micue of Waterville, Me., indicted for felonious assault on Ida M. Ronco, returned a verdict of guilty.

Chester Luce was killed on the railroad crossing at Winthrop, Me., by a train. The horse attached to the vehicle in which he was riding also was killed.

Professor Ruthardt, probably the most noted strictly Orthodox theologian in Germany, died at Leipsic. He was 80 years old.

Steps are being taken, on the initiative of Germany, with the view of holding an international conference of the powers on the subject of wireless telegraphy.

RIOTOUS OUTBREAKS

Result In the Ordering Out of More Troops In the Anthracite Region

Harrisburg, Sept. 23.—Governor Stone issued an order this morning directing the Thirteenth regiment to report at once to General Gobin for duty in the strike region. The Thirteenth's headquarters are at Scranton and the regiment will be quartered in its armory at that city temporarily.

The authorities apprehend serious trouble today, and if there should be another outbreak the Ninth regiment, with headquarters at Wilkesbarre, will probably be ordered out.

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 23.—Sheriff Schaft of Lackawanna county last night telegraphed Governor Stone to send troops to his assistance as the result of continuous outbreaks of violence in this vicinity. The worst of last night's outbreaks occurred at Archibald. A crowd of 200 strikers ransacked the quarters occupied by the 40 men employed at the Raymond washery of the Ontario and Western company, while the men were at work, and, meeting with the men as they were returning, drove them back to the refuge of the washery. The mob then returned to the colliery proper, drove out the engineers, firemen, pumpmen and guards and took possession of the breaker. The plant of the Crescent Electric Light company, which is supplied with steam from the breaker, had to shut down and the whole region around was left in darkness. In the attack on the breaker two men were shot.

Deputy Sheriff McCandrew was attacked and shot at by a mob at Olyphant. The steam pipes of the Pennsylvania Coal company's colliery at Old Forge were blown up with dynamite last night. Two colored cooks at the William colliery were rescued by deputy sheriffs from a crowd that was threatening to lynch them.

Lines Still Tightly Drawn

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 23.—The opening of the 20th week of the coal strike showed very little change in the situation. If anything the lines are more tightly drawn. At the offices of the coal companies it is claimed that the output of coal at the collieries and washeries in operation is growing all the time, but no figures are given out. The strikers claim they are not frightened over the amount of coal being sent to market

Sharkey Held For Fish's Death

New York, Sept. 23.—At the inquiry into the death of Nicholas Fish, banker, clubman and diplomat, the coroner's jury found that death was due to a fall caused by a blow struck by Thomas J. Sharkey. Sharkey was held in $10,000 bail for the action of the grand jury.

To Give Millions to Charity

Bombay, Sept. 23.—A prominent Bombay parsee has announced his intention of devoting his fortune of nearly $5,000,000 to charity. He will give his property in trust for the benefit of persons in any country deprived of their means of subsistence by sudden calamities.

Cholera In Egypt

Washington, Sept. 23.—Vice Consul General Smith, at Cairo, yesterday cabled that since the 30th ultimo there have been 7235 cases of cholera and 6651 deaths in all Egypt, but that the general condition is now improving.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 23.—Elbert S. Roos, the last of the Henderson-Ames company directors to receive sentence for complicity in the fraudulent state military clothing deal, was yesterday fined $2000.

How long will it take the man to fill the sack if he does not stop the leak? To attempt to nourish the body when the stomach is diseased is like trying to fill the sack with the hole in it. When the stomach and other digestive and nutritive organs are diseased, there is a constant loss of nutrition. Enough is eaten but the body loses flesh,—plain proof that the food eaten is largely wasted because it is not digested and assimilated.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It stops the leaks by which nutrition is lost, and enables the building up of the body by the nutrition derived from food. The gain in weight proves the cure.

"Three years ago I was taken sick with what the doctor called nervousness and indigestion," writes Mrs. Warren E. Parker, of Orange Street, Nantucket, Mass. "He gave me medicine for the trouble, but I could not eat even a little toast or oatmeal without suffering severely. In a few months I began to have distressing pains right in the pit of my stomach. I called the doctor again and he said I had catarrh of stomach; gave me medicine but it did not do any good. I lost 28 pounds in three months. I then commenced taking Dr. Pierce's medicines and soon began to feel better. I have taken six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' two of 'Favorite Prescription' and six vials of Dr. Pierce's Pellets. I have gained ten pounds. Can eat everything."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation.

OUR MORAL GRANDEUR

Heightened by Glorious Work In Spanish War

HARD TASKS LEFT BEHIND

But Great Duties Now Confront Administrative Branch of Government—President Wants to Prove Our Friendship For Cuba

Detroit, Sept. 23.—President Roosevelt's two days visit to Detroit came to an end last evening at the conclusion of a banquet tendered him in Light Guard armory by the Spanish war veterans, the opening of whose third annual reunion he attended in the morning.

When the president arose to begin his address he received an ovation. The men on the floor stood up and cheered again and again, while the clapping of hands from the gallery was like the crackle of musketry. The president said:

"The war with Spain, though from it such great consequences have flowed, was itself but a small war, and in the presence of the veterans of the Grand Army, all we can say is that we hope that we of the younger generation showed a desire to come up to the standard set by our fathers, the men of '61 to '65.

"The war itself was an easy one. The tasks left behind us, though glorious, have been hard. You, the man of the Spanish war, who fought in Cuba and Porto Rico and in the Philippines, won renown for the country, added to its moral grandeur and to its material prosperity; but you also left duties to be done by those who came after you. In Porto Rico the duty has been merely administrative and it has been so well done that very little need be said about it. In the Philippines the problem was one of extreme difficulty. But after three years of bitter fighting peace has been won by the valor of our soldiers and civil government has been introduced, so that the islanders have now greater opportunities for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness than ever they had enjoyed before during their recorded history.

"With Cuba the matter is different. We pledged ourselves solemnly at the outbreak of the war with Spain to give Cuba independence. The world at large sneered at the pledge and even some of our own people scoffed at the thought that we intended to keep it. But we have kept it in good faith and with a keen regard for the welfare of the Cubans.

"Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines have relations of varying intimacy to us; and they have either been admitted within our economic system or have been given some of the benefits thereof. Cuba, though independent, also stands in a peculiar position toward us, and should receive in similar fashion a measure of benefit from and partial inclusion within our system. The questions that ordinarily concern us as of prime weight in a tariff matter do not come in here as of primary importance. We must remember that in dealing with this island, especially now that we are about to build the isthmian canal, and our interests in the West Indian waters have become so great, we must shape our policy with a far-sighted regard for the future.

"I do not believe a particle of harm will come to any American interest from the adoption of a reasonable measure of reciprocity with Cuba. I am certain that the adoption of such a measure will be in the interests of our people as a whole. Above all, while fully acknowledging the high mindedness and moral sincerity of those of my associates with whom on this point I differ, I yet feel most strongly that by every consideration of a generous and far-sighted public policy we are bound to prove to Cuba that our friendship with her is of a continuing character and that we intend to aid her in her struggle for the material well being which must underly healthy national development.

"You, men of Michigan, belong to a country mighty in war and mighty in peace—a country of a great past, whose great present is but an earnest of an even greater future. The world has never seen more marvelous prosperity than that which we now enjoy, and this prosperity is not ephemeral. We shall have our ups and downs. The wave at times will recede but the tide will go steadily on. This country has never yet been called upon to meet a crisis in war or a crisis in peace to which it could not prove equal, and decade by decade its power grows greater and the likelihood of its meeting successfully another crisis becomes even more assured. I preach the gospel of hope to you, men of the west, who, in thought and life, embody this gospel of hope, this gospel of resolute and confident belief in your own powers and in the destiny of this mighty republic.

"No great destiny ever yet came to a nation whose people were laggards or fainthearted. We know there are dangers ahead, as we know there are evils to fight and overcome, but we feel to the full that pulse of the prosperity which we enjoy. Stout of heart, we see across the dangers the great future that lies beyond, and we rejoice as a giant refreshed, as a strong man girt for the race. Now we go down into the arena where the nations strive for mastery, our hearts lifted with the faith that to us and to our children and our children' children it shall be given to make this republic the greatest of all the peoples of mankind."

ABSCESS ON HIS LEG

Compels President to Submit to Surgical Operation

FEAR OF BLOOD POISONING

Rendered Immediate Action Imperative—Caused by Bruise Received In Accident at Pittsfield—Western Trip Is Suddenly Abandoned

Indianapolis, Sept. 24.—President Roosevelt's western trip came to an untimely end in this city yesterday. He was found to be suffering from a swelling in the leg, between the knee and ankle, and which required immediate surgical attention, and instead of being taken to the train to continue his journey to Fort Wayne and Milwaukee, he was conveyed to St. Vincent's hospital, where he was operated on. The operation occurred at 3:45 o'clock and lasted only a short time. Then he was taken to a private room in the hospital to rest.

After taking a light luncheon at 7:30 p. m. he was conveyed on a stretcher to his train, which had backed up near the hospital and at 7:50 the train left for Washington.

The whole movement had been carefully planned at the Columbia club before it was carried out. The necessary orders to the police and the soldiers were not given until the last moment, and in this way the knowledge that something was amiss was confined to those who had an official interest in the president's movements. The first public knowledge of the true state of affairs came in the form of a bulletin which was issued by Secretary Cortelyou.

After the president entered the operating room of the hospital he sat down and waited for instructions from the physicians and surgeons. "I am awfully sorry I cannot continue my western trip," said he, "can't you let me go ahead with it after this thing is over?"

One of the surgeons said: "It is my opinion that you would be very indiscreet to continue on your feet as would be necessary in your speech-making trip, after the operation. This is by no means a serious thing and there is absolutely no danger of serious consequences from it if you are careful and stay off your feet until the trouble is over. But you should by all means discontinue your trip."

"Very well, then, it will have to be that way," said the president resignedly. Now, what do you want me to do?"

He was told simply to remove his shoe and the physicians would be required to bare the leg only. This was done. The president walked to the operating table alone and laid down.

The operation was begun without delay. The pain caused the president to mutter several times, but he said nothing that was distinct except to ask for a glass of water before the needle had been removed. After the operation was over he made several laughing remarks concerning trivial matters.

After being taken to an upper room from the operating room the president was served with a light luncheon and chatted pleasantly to those in the room. Then a blanket was thrown around him, and, escorted by a company of infantry, he was carried on a stretcher to the car a block away by four negro porters from the train. He bade good-bye to the nurses as he was being carried out of the hall to the elevator and thanked them for their kindness. He did not talk during his trip to the car. Senator Fairbanks, Governor Durbin and other prominent citizens were at the train and bade him good-bye.

At the conclusion of the operation the physicians authorized the following statement:

"As a result of the traumatism (bruise) received in the trolley accident at Pittsfield, Mass., there was found to be a circumscribed collection of perfectly pure serum in the middle third of the left anterior tibial region, the sac containing about two ounces, which was removed.

"The indications are that the president should make speedy recovery. It is absolutely imperative, however, that he should remain quiet and refrain from using the leg. The trouble is not serious, but temporarily disabling."

This statement was signed by George B. Cortelyou, secretary to the president.

The swelling of the president's leg which made an operation necessary was occasioned by a bruise he received at the time of the trolley car accident at Pittsfield, Mass. Beside being injured in the face and across the eye, the president at that time received a blow on the inner part of the left leg, between the ankle and the knee, but he paid no attention to it, ignoring it as being a slight bruise, not worth talking about. For several weeks he took no heed of it, but finally it began to pain him.

After starting on his western trip he determined that perhaps Dr. Lung who was aboard the train, should examine it. The doctor did so and pronounced it to be a serious matter. When in Detroit the doctor finally declared that something should be done, and after consulting with Dr. Richardson, another member of the party, it was decided that, in order to avoid the possibility of blood poisoning, it probably would be wise to have an operation performed. The president was very much averse to anything of the kind.

At Logansport Senator Beveridge boarded the train and after a consultation with him it was decided that he should summon several of the best physicians of Indianapolis to meet the president and with this end in view the senator telegraphed to Drs. Oliver, Cook and Jameson to be at the Massachusetts avenue station. When the train pulled into the station the doctors were there and they were taken by the senator immediately into the president's car.

The physicians accompanied the party to Tomlinson hall and it was thought by those who noticed them that they were present as members of the reception committee. The trip to the Columbia club followed without any feature that would give even a hint that the great western trip of the president was at an end, and it was a gay throng that marched into the club to take luncheon and have a short rest, but instead of going into the dining room the president was taken in a private room, where, unknown to the bustling crowd inside and outside of the club, he was made the subject of a serious consultation by the physicians. His leg was bared and the swelling examined. After a considerable time the physicians arrived at the verdict.

Said Dr. Oliver: "In order to avoid possible blood poisoning setting in, it will be necessary for the president to submit to a slight operation," and in this view all the other doctors concurred. The president demurred, but his objections were overruled by the argument that a man in his position could not afford to take chances. The verdict of the doctors being thus pronounced there was nothing left to be done but to carry out their mandate.

In the meantime many of the reception committee were eating dinner and after the lapse of an hour or more the president himself went into the dining room and took lunch with a small party at one of the tables.

He then was escorted to the gallery of the club, facing the monument, where he made a short speech in a clear voice and seemed to be the last person in the world who would be supposed to be suffering from any physical ailment. He then retired within one of the rooms of the club and the active part of carrying out the change in the program was begun.

Secretary Cortelyou requested Colonel Harrison to notify the members of the reception committee that the president would not be escorted to the depot. The colonel carried out the request, replying to questions that the president was resting or that it had been decided to take him away in the carriage without a formal escort. The orders were given to the captains of the militia and the heads of the police, and at 3:15, everything being in readiness, the dash to the hospital was made.

It was learned last night that the determination to abandon the trip was reached Monday and notices to this effect were sent out from Detroit and Indianapolis to those interested in the places the president was to visit. No inkling of this decision was made known to the members of the president's party on the train excepting to his physicians and secretaries until Secretary Cortelyou issued his announcement.

The president did not speak to Dr. Lung, his official physician, of the pain in his leg until a few days ago. The pain became so intense Monday that it was decided to take no further risks by continuing the trip.

The president regrets exceedingly that he has been compelled to abandon his trip. He has received a large number of telegrams of condolence.

Filipino "Saints" Bagged

Says He Was Assaulted

Fall River, Mass., Sept. 24.—John Hughes, a deck-hand on a coal barge, is at a hospital suffering from a fractured skull and other injuries received in some unknown manner. He was found by the crew of a New Bedford electric car, lying beside the track, unconscious and bleeding. He said that he had been assaulted.

PRESENCE OF A WARSHIP

May Be Required at Santa Marta, Colombia

CONDITIONS ARE DISTURBED

Report That Railroad and Telegraph Communication Has Been Cut Off—Insurgents Intercept Supplies and Have the Town at Their Mercy

Washington, Sept. 24.—The Colombian revolution has broken out in a new place, according to information received at the navy department yesterday. An American fruit company transmitted to Secretary Moody a cablegram from its agent at Santa Marta, a place on the north coast of Colombia, near the mouth of the Magdalena river, saying that conditions there were very much disturbed; that the telegraph and railroad communication had been interrupted and requesting the department's intervention.

The dispatch was sent at once to the state department and our consul at Barranquilla, a place near Santa Marta, was called on for an immediate report concerning the situation. This report is expected today and until it is received no action looking to the dispatch of a warship will be taken by the navy department. In case the conditions of affairs at Santa Marta should demand the presence of a vessel the navy department has decided to send the gunboat Marietta, now at La Guaira, but the condition of affairs at the latter point is such that if the Marietta is obliged to leave, the Montgomery at Cape Haytien will be ordered forthwith to La Guaira and the latter's place on the Haytien coast will be taken temporarily by the San Francisco, which will sail from Norfolk today. Rear Admiral Coghlan, whom will have all the warships in West Indian waters under his immediate control, is expected to sail on his flagship, the Olympia, from Boston within two weeks. On his arrival at Cape Haytien the San Francisco will return to Norfolk for general repairs.

Six hundred marines have been mobilized at Norfolk to be sent to the isthmus aboard the Prairie, now at Boston. The Prairie is ready to sail whenever she may receive notification. The mobilization of these marines is in the nature of a precaution, and unless they are needed it is not the intention of the navy department to embark them for the south.

Situation Reported Critical

Kingston, Ja., Sept. 24.—The British steamer Antillian, which has just reached here from Colon, Colombia, brings a report that the situation on the isthmus was extremely critical when she left there last Sunday. The rebels were then reported to be massed near the railroad between Colon and Panama and the government was sending troops, according to these reports, from Panama to Agua Dulce to cut off the rebels' retreat should they be beaten on the isthmus. The main rebel army under General Herrera was reported Sunday to be within seven miles of Colon.

Officers of the Antillian say business at Colon has been suspended and that the privations there are great. The government soldiers at Colon are mainly youths and are apparently unable to stand the hardships of a campaign.

Americans Bring Good Cheer

Colon, Sept. 24.—Three companies of United States marines, who arrived here on the auxiliary cruiser Panther, reached Panama yesterday. Another company, consisting of 80 men, will be kept in Colon. The men of this latter company will be used to guard the daily trains across the isthmus. The confidence of foreigners on the isthmus has been greatly restored by the arrival of American men-of-war and the landing of troops.

Boers Appeal to Charity

Amsterdam, Sept. 24.—The Boer generals have issued a manifesto in the shape of an appeal to the civilized world for charitable contributions, because they have failed to induce Great Britain to grant further assistance. They say: "We solicit the hearty cooperation of all existing committees in the various countries which we are on the point of visiting with the object of obtaining a satisfactory organization."

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

Good Afternoon.

The chances for the relection of President Roosevelt should improve with Morgan as an enemy. It is votes and not money that counts.

The enrollment of the Somerville public schools is 10,895, not twice as many as Quincy, yet the population of Quincy is 25,000 and Somerville 63,000.

We have all sorts of callers at our new down stairs office, among the latest being some school girls who came in to ask if we had any girls' tops for sale. We have been wondering since what the difference is between a girl's top and a boy's top and also what kind of a store they thought they were in.

The Bridge Piers.

The building of the centre pier, upon which the new draw bridge at Quincy Point will swing, is quite an interesting operation. The large wooden mold was first sunk in position. Then comes the work of filling it with concrete, which is now being done. Sand cement and small rocks are used in making the concrete. The three ingredients are thrown into a revolving mixer or screw, into which a small stream of water is continually flowing. This screw mixes the material which works out at the end and drops into a large metal car. When this car becomes full it is hoisted and then lowered into the pier mold, until it touches the bottom. The bottom of the car is then released. It makes no difference how much water is in the mold, the work goes on just the same the water being gradually replaced by concrete. As an enormous amount of concrete will be required to fill the mold, it will be some days before it is completed.

Was Charged With Dynamiting.

And Was Indicted by Grand Jury This Month.

Charles Carlson who is under indictment before the grand jury and whose case was to come up for trial at Dedham today, has disappeared. The circumstances surrounding his disappearance are such that it is feared he has made way with himself.

Ever since the notice was served upon him that he had been indicted, he has been despondent. Sunday morning his wife found him sitting up in bed writing a note. She asked him what he was doing and received a reply that he was simply doing a little writing.

Noticing a discoloration on his hands and mouth she asked what it was. Carlson informed her that he had tried to take poison and someone had pulled his hand away, and but for that he would have been dead.

Later Sunday he gave his wife the note. In this note he said he saw no way out of the matter. He did not want her to suffer this winter and he did not know what he should do as jail was staring him in the face. The tone of the note indicated that he intended to make way with himself.

He appeared all right, however, later in the day, and reported at Dedham Monday and Tuesday, but the case was not reached. This morning he got up about 4 o'clock and left the house and has not been seen since.

At that time he had on a flannel undershirt and a pair of trousers. That was the last seen of him, and it is believed that he has drowned himself in one of the numerous quarry holes near his home.

According to reports, Carlson has tried to make way with himself before but was discovered in time to prevent his carrying out his intentions.

The first time was about three years ago when he tried to end his life by taking paris green. A little later he attempted to hang himself in his cellar, but was cut down in time.

Friends are now searching for him and they believe that his body will be found in some quarry hole.

The crime with which Carlson is charged is wilfully blowing up the house of George K. Ellis with dynamite. The affair took place on the morning of July 4. Ellis alleged that he saw Carlson light the fuse that was attached to the stick of dynamite. Ellis also swore that he saw two young men with him. All three were arrested and tried in the local court.

The two young men were discharged. Carlson was held in $1000 for the grand jury. Since that time he has been out on bail, his bondsmen being Carl F. Carlson, Gus Livendale and Gus B. Bates.

Field Driver at Work.

Numerous complaints have come to the police of late about cows that have been allowed to run at large at South Quincy, especially in and about the public playground. The cows have not only broken down trees but have made a nuisance of the place. This morning three cows were pastured there and word was sent to the police. Officer Barry, who holds an appointment of field driver, took the cows in charge, and the owners will have a bill to pay. Officer Barry says that he intends to be after people who permit their cows to run at large, and as he generally means what he says it would be well for owners to take warning.

The playground at South Quincy is not the only place that the cows have been running at large, but in the vicinity of Quincy avenue as well, where flower beds and trees without number have suffered.

Since Officer Barry started in this morning to round up stray cows he had up to noon succeeded in capturing twenty, all of which are confined in the pound at the City poor farm.

As it will cost the owners something to get their milkers out of pound the chances are that there will be less cows roaming at large in the future.

SCAVENGER CASE.

On Trial at Dedham for Maintaining Nuisance.

The celebrated case of Charles L. Prescott, City Scavenger, against whom Henry H. Faxon secured an indictment for maintaining a nuisance, is occupying the attention of the Superior court at Dedham today. The indications are that the case cannot be finished today.

The case was called shortly before adjournment Tuesday afternoon. Eighteen witnesses were sworn for the government. These included some city officials and employes, also some of the ex-officials, physicians and well known citizens who had accepted invitations during the past summer from Mr. Faxon to take a ride and see the dump on Quincy avenue.

Edward J. Lennon, the Inspector of the Board of Health, was the first witness. He had known Mr. Prescott for twenty years. The dump is on Quincy avenue. He had known the place for three years. During the time from April 1 to Sept. 1 his attention had been called to the place and he had visited it six times during that period. The vault and cesspool contents were turned out, and up to Sept. 1, there was no precaution taken to cover it up. Inspector Lennon was on the stand at adjournment.

BETTS AND FISHER

On Trial for Fraudulent Use of the Mails.

The trial of Fred E. Betts and John M. Fisher began in the Federal court Tuesday on the charge of using the mails in a scheme to defraud.

The prosecution was represented by District Attorney Moulton and Assistant District Attorney Casey.

The defendants have separate counsel, Betts being represented by C. W. Bartlett and Harvey Pratt, and Fisher by Herbert L. Baker.

Each defendant plead not guilty on nine indictments, each of several counts. A jury was then impanelled.

Lawyer Casey outlined the case and told what it was expected to prove.

George A. Warner of Chicopee, a traveling agent, testified he knew Betts and Fisher only through correspondence. Witness said he sent them $100 in June, 1901, after correspondence.

In July he sent Fisher and Betts $50. This was done to cover his margin. July 13 he received a letter from J. M. Fisher & Co., ordering him to send $75 more for his margins. He did not comply with this request. Never received a cent profit, and never got anything for money invested with Fisher & Co. Have turned over $450 and never received any part of it back.

On cross-examinanion by Attorney Pratt: Never had much knowledge of stock brokerage, although I knew about the stock exchange, and what it meant to buy stocks outright, as well as on the margin. The money that I sent to Fisher & Co., was invested in Tennessee Coal and Iron, so I understood. Then they called on me for another $50 to cover the margin. Then I decided that I would not send any more money for Tennessee Coal and Iron.

"What did you understand had become of your money after that?" asked Mr. Pratt.

"I understood that it was a d—m humbug," said the witness. and the spectators broke into laughter.

Court adjourned for today.

Private Schools.

While Quincy's public schools are of the highest grade in excellence, private schools find a place here. At the Greenleaf school, the methods of its first work thirty-one years ago have changed to modern ones and the school opens with its Principal Miss Wright and with Miss Grace Burke, graduate from Radcliffe as a teacher in advanced studies. Miss Jane Reed has already done work there and she continues, awhile as a trainer and worker with the little ones. Miss Eleanor P. Randall also enters, and these three assistants being of our Quincy young ladies and well known, make a pleasant prospect every way, for a new year.

The home school at the beautiful old Brackett place has a special corps of teachers already, the Quincy Mansion school is well established and both of these are home schools with the best of what this implies.

The classic Adams Academy and the Thayer Academy supplemented by the Woodward Institute, make a list that stamp Quincy as a fortunate city, and that hold inducement to strangers not only to send their children here as pupils, but to take up a residence among us to be able to receive the advantages these private schools afford.

☞The Quincy bowling alleys on Granite street have been leased by Messrs. Ferris & Littlefield and are being thoroughly renovated and put in first class condition. In connection with the alleys will be a finely equipped Pool Room with three first-class tables. They will be opened about October 2, and announcement of opening night will be made in these columns. tflwp

—Sea lions, seals, walruses and pelicans are fed on fish when in captivity; monkeys, young lions and hippopotami drink milk. A full-grown hippopotamus will absorb 15 quarts of milk in a day. Polar bears live on bread, monkeys like fruit as well as milk, snakes require rabbits, chickens and ducks. A kangaroo eats nearly 200 pounds of bread a week.

☞Pupils wishing to enter the Kindergarten or advanced classes in Sloyd at The Brackett Homestead School are requested to register on or before Saturday, 27 September, as the classes are now being formed. Twenty registered on Saturday last. The wood exhibit may be seen at the school until 1 October.

LOST HIS MEMORY.

Strange Case of Man Who Did Not Know Who He Was.

J. L. Maynard, son of George P. Maynard of East Weymouth, lost his identity while in Boston Saturday night, and for forty-eight hours he could not tell his name, who his parents were, or where he had been.

His case has no parallel in medical authorities. Saturday night he walked into police station 1, in Boston and asked them to tell him who he was, where he was, or what he was doing. He was sent to the City Hospital.

All day Sunday he read the papers and seemed to be enjoying himself, but the physicians said there was nothing to do but to wait until memory returned to him.

Word was sent out from Police headquarters and this happened to meet the eye of his father who thought the description familiar and went in to see if it was his son.

As soon as Maynard saw his father his mind was completely restored. He was taken home and is now apparently all right. He says he can not explain the matter, but that he had not used stimulants and in this the police confirm his statement.

Maynard is quite well known in Quincy. He was employed for a number of years as conductor on the street railway, but of late had been employed by Gallagher's Express Co.

Exhibit.

The exhibit at The Brackett Homestead school on Friday last was largely attended from 3 to 9 P. M. The new work displayed in wood, leather and brass by Mrs. Wilbur, the teacher of Sloyd. Little models to be copied by little people fascinated the children, while fine work in exquisite design was shown in the boxes, chairs, frames and other useful articles.

Mrs. Dodge's portrait of little Constance Fryer was much admired, as was also her sketch of Town river and marshes.

Irene Dasha's "Apples" and "Wood Scene" received much praise and the sketches by Dorothy Dodge showed excellent style.

Miss Flint's china in variety of design and coloring was very much appreciated.

At five o'clock there were piano solos by Misses Marsh and Dasha and songs by Bertha Carlson. In the evening there was music by Mr. F. Stuart Mason, violinist, Mr. J. Edward Greene, bass and Miss Carlson.

Secret of Her Age Revealed.

The mystery of the age of Miss Harriet Blaine Cole of Cranbury, a cousin of the late James G. Blaine, was solved the other day, says a Trenton (N. J.) dispatch, when her effects were sold at auction. The eccentric woman would never tell her age and had cut the date of her birth from the family Bible in the house.

She died recently, leaving a fine collection of old books and bric-a-brac, which was sold at auction. Among the books sold was a small Bible which contained her name and the date of her birth, establishing her age as ninety-five years. Her boast that no one would ever know her age while she lived was correct, but her assertion that even when she was dead it was not to be learned proved incorrect. Among the books and papers sold were some autograph notes from James G. Blaine.

Music That Leads to Divorce Courts.

"The kind of music that is provided for the people is largely responsible for the marital infidelity now so conspicuous," said the Rev. Chester Gore Miller in a recent sermon at St. Paul's Universalist church, Jamaica Plain, says a Boston dispatch. He was referring particularly to social conditions in New York city. Mr. Miller continued:

"It is not the words so much, although they help, but the character of the music that is responsible for this condition. It is the same thing in all the concert and music halls, practically the debasement of music.

"Music in itself is not bad, but this one kind over and over again all the time has its influence on the people. Its sensuous strains finally fill the habitual listener with new desires."

PATIENT TOO LONG.

Quincy Point Sends Two Petitions to State Boards.

Quincy Point is getting wrought up over the dilly dallying tactics of the city government, and have this month taken two matters to state officials.

One is the schoolhouse. They see little prospect of a new Washington school in the immediate future, and therefore they have again called the attention of the State Board of Police to the unsafe and unsanitary condition of the present building, and hoped it will be condemned and doors locked.

Another is an alleged nuisance between Chubbuck street and Broadway. The sewage from the new houses in the vicinity of Broadway which flows upon the ground and into the pond has become almost unbearable, and is regarded as unhealthy. Efforts to have the Quincy Board of Health abate the nuisance have been unavailing and a petition has been sent to the State Board of Health.

The Brockton Fair.

The Brockton Fair "the fair that every one talks about," will open its gates this year on Sept. 30 for its four days carnival of amusement. Everything will be bigger and better then ever, and many novelties never seen before at any fair will be introduced. Sympathy In London

London, Sept. 24.—The London newspapers this morning publish long and detailed reports of the operation on President Roosevelt. They express considerable surprise at the unexpectedness of the operation, as well as sympathy for the president, although it is believed to be a trifling matter. Incidents of the late President McKinley's death are recalled and some anxiety is expressed. The Daily News says it cannot be wondered at if some unnecessary alarm is felt by the public when it is remembered that the policy of "allaying anxiety" is universally adopted when the health of heads of states is in question.

Better Off Than Filipinos

St. Petersburg, Sept. 24.—The first comment here on Secretary Hay's note to the powers on the subject of Roumania's treatment of Jews appeared yesterday. The St. Petersburg Zeitung says: "One may well rejoice if American intervention betters the sad lot of the Roumanian Jews. However, one doubts the unselfishness of the American step, since the Roumanian Jews are probably much better off than the Filipinos."

NEWS IN BRIEF

A severe earthquake shock was felt at Quito, capital of Ecuador. It was followed by a violent storm.

The American-Hawaiian Steamship company of New York has purchased harbor frontage at St. Thomas, D. W. I., for the establishment of a depot for oil and fuel.

Former President Steyn of the Orange Free State, who has been ill for a long time past, has left The Hague for Clarens, Switzerland.

Hiram A. Huse, of Montpelier, Vermont state librarian, died of angina pectoris after an illness of 28 hours. He was born in Randolph, Vt., in 1843.

Major J. W. Powell, director of the bureau of ethnology at the Smithsonian institute, Washington, died at his summer home at Haven, Me. He had been critically ill there for some days.

Senator Gallinger was chosen chairman of the New Hampshire Republican state committee, to serve throughout the coming campaign.

For Killing Policeman

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 24.—October 18 has been set as the date for the trial of George Carter and Edward Blake, who were indicted for murder in causing the death of Police Officer Cornelius O'Keefe in Everett last spring, while the officer was attempting to arrest one of the men upon suspicion.

Press Asked to Settle Strike

Lowell, Mass., Sept. 24.—The board of aldermen last night adopted resolutions calling upon the press of the United States to take measures to settle the coal strike and prevent the poor people from the threatening calamity.

IT IS SAID.

That No One Is Predicting the Result of the Caucuses.

That the Republican caucuses will be largely attended.

That city politics will enter largely.

That there is a strong anti-administration feeling.

That it is on the increase daily.

That the administration is in the minority.

That nevertheless it will win.

That it is united on two candidates.

That it has played politics and got the opposition to put up five men for Representatives.

That this will divide the opposition.

That the opposition will thereby be defeated.

That Freeman and McKnight will win.

That Badger should be renominated.

That Atlantic needs him to get the boulevard appropriation from the State.

That a vote for DeNormandie would be a vote against the present city administration.

That he made a good fight at the State House for cheaper gas.

That Sandberg and Nicoll are a strong team.

That they may combine their forces.

That they may not.

That Adams is becoming a strong anti-administration man.

A LESSON IN POLITICS

Platt Promises to Deal It Out to Woodruff

CANDIDACY OF SHELDON

For Lieutenant Governorship Has the Endorsement of the Boss, Despite Protests of Governor Odell, Who Finally Comes Out a Victor

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 24.—The difficulty in the Republican convention over the candidacy of George R. Sheldon for the lieutenant governorship assumed such proportions yesterday afternoon that Governor Odell was summoned from Albany for consultation. He left the state capital for this place on a special train at 8:30 o'clock last night.

It has developed that Governor Odell yesterday requested Sheldon to withdraw from the race for the nomination for second place on the ticket. The governor gave as a reason that he was of opinion that Sheldon's candidacy would jeopardize the success of the whole ticket. The governor added that he had selected Sheldon for the place and was his close personal friend, but had reached the conclusion that it was best Sheldon should retire. Sheldon consulted with Senator Platt and, gaining the senator's support, informed the governor he could not comply with the request.

Governor Odell then sent to Platt and asked him to use his influence to get Sheldon to retire. Platt announced that he would not make the request and that Sheldon was in to stay. Shortly after the adjournment of the convention in the afternoon, Lieutenant Governor Woodruff made this statement:

"I have no personal animosity against Mr. Sheldon. I believe that the objections that have been raised to him are of the gravest sort and that they jeopardize the state ticket. I have no personal ambition. I am not and will not be a candidate. I am interested in the success of the state ticket alone, irrespective of individuals. I am the unit voter for the largest county in the state, next to New York county. We carried our primaries and have united the party. I believe that Kings county should have some say in nominating a ticket. We were promised this. Platt broke his word to us, and named Sheldon without consultation. I believe he did it for the best interests of the party, but he was mistaken. I have no candidate, but I believe there are up-state men who could fill the place acceptably and aid the ticket. I have no motives other than the success of the party to which I belong."

When shown the statement of Woodruff, Platt said: "Perhaps we can give Woodruff a little lesson in politics as well as in good manners. Why should the leader of any one delegation be offended because a man desired to be a candidate? Is Kings county to control situations? Sheldon is a candidate and is not to be withdrawn at all. Tell Woodruff that for me.

"Woodruff could have many things. He has had them. He has refused some lately and it is ill-advised of him to seek to make trouble. His concern for the party is very touching, but there are others of larger experience who are equally interested and more capable of judging."

When the news of this trouble between the leaders became public in its entirety the previous apathetic attitude of the rank and file of the delegates to the state convention changed to one of the liveliest interest. By 6 o'clock in the evening Governor Odell was being urged by his personal friends to come to Saratoga and settle the controversy, but to this request he at first answered that he had signified what his wishes in the matter were and that the convention could work out the situation itself. His esteem and regard for Sheldon was as great as ever but because of certain revelations he had become convinced that Sheldon could not help and would only hurt the ticket.

Governor Odell's friends then began to work actively to get Sheldon to retire and as a result of agitation telegrams began pouring in from all sections of the state asking delegates not to vote for Sheldon on the ground of his business affiliations. Leaders from up the state were apprised of the fact that the governor was averse to Sheldon's nomination and towards 9 o'clock the news was known about hotel corridors. About that time Governor Odell, in response to a query from Woodruff as to his attitude on the Sheldon matter, sent a telegram saying that he (Odell) would not run on the ticket if Sheldon's name was on it. Odell's father and brother then went to the telephone and told the governor that he must come to Saratoga and straighten out the matter.

Senator Platt, Governor Odell and George P. Sheldon were in conference for a period of two hours. At 2 o'clock this morning Governor Odell left the room and announced that Sheldon had withdrawn from the contest. The indications are that Senator Higgins of Cattaraugus will be the nominee for lieutenant governor.

Crowded Out by Yankee Product

Berlin, Sept. 24.—The German match making business, in which about $8,750,000 of capital is invested, has been brought within measurable distance of ruin by the output of the American Diamond Match company's new factories near Manheim.

GROWTH OF ENDEAVORERS

Touched Upon at Farewell Reception to Retiring Secretary Baer

Boston, Sept. 24.—Such an outpouring of Christian Endeavorers has not been seen in Boston for a long time as that at the Union Congregational church last night, at the farewell reception to John W. Baer, the retiring secretary of the united society, who is to take up home mission work as a secretary for the Presbyterian board. Rev. F. E. Clark, the president of the united society, and Mrs. Clark also were present.

Dr. Clark told how his eight months in Europe had been spent mostly off the beaten track of travel. In England, Endeavor is already strong. In Germany it is well established. In France it has made a good beginning, especially in Paris. So his efforts were put forth in Iceland, Finland, Roumania, Bulgaria and the Balkan states.

Mr. Baer said that never in his life had the principles of Christian Endeavor seemed so vital and full of promise as now. His 12 years of travelling among the churches had convinced him that there was nothing in the churches that so made a man's heart thump with the life beats of the religion of Christ as the young people. He assured his Endeavor friends that he was not leaving them. He would be an Endeavorer as long as he lived.

An Unknown Suicide

Fall River, Mass., Sept. 24.—The body of an unknown man was found yesterday on a small raft made of two pieces of board, on the west side of Stafford pond, with a bullet hole through the brain and a revolver clenched in the right hand. The body was that of a man about 25 or 30 years old. Several English and Canadian coins were found upon his person, a gold ring set with four diamonds, three loaded cartridges, and a pair of bone cufflinks. The money was in a chamois skin purse, with a brass plate bearing the name of G. or Y. Brenna.

Bad Summer For Potatoes

Boston, Sept. 24.—Director Smith of the weather bureau reports that the summer's weather has produced a beautiful growth of potato vines in New England, but the growth aboveground is at the expense of the potatoes. The rank growth of the vines made them particularly susceptible to blight, and the moist condition of the soil increased the ravages of the rot. The information is added that the sweet corn crop for canning has been a failure, and that the total yield of apples in New England will be considerably below the average.

Brothers Convicted of Crime

Boston, Sept. 24.—Julius C. Peterson was yesterday declared jointly responsible with his brother, Carl J., for the six cases of breaking and entering charged against them. Carl, in the effort to shield his older and married brother, testified that he (Carl) was alone to blame, and that he alone should be punished. The government contended that in reality Julius was the chief offender. Both men will be sentenced later.

Moore's Property Tied Up

Boston, Sept. 24.—An attachment was placed yesterday by John E. Crowley on certain real estate of Michael J. Moore, a lawyer, who has been missing for several days and against whom charges of embezzlement have been made. The property is assessed for $19,900. Part of the estate has been transferred to Moore's sister and the balance has been mortgaged to Moore's wife.

Killed by Electricity

Woburn, Mass., Sept. 24.—Frank Harkins, 17 years old, was playing around an electric arc light pole last night when the light went out. Harkins took hold of a wire which connects the weight used for lowering the light and which was at that time charged with electricity. When he touched the ground he completed the circuit and received 2500 volts, causing his death.

Crosby and Douglass Decline

Boston, Sept. 24.—No lieutenant governor on the Democratic ticket will be named for some days. John C. Crosby of Pittsfield has declined to reconsider his declination to accept the nomination and William L. Douglass of Brockton will not stand. A new man will be selected after conference with Mr. Gaston, nominee for governor.

Worthy Mate For Star Pointer

Readville, Mass., Sept. 24.—Dan Patch, the famous pacer, went against the world's record of 1:59 1-4, made by Star Pointer on the Readville track five years ago, yesterday, and in a magnificent performance equalled the record. The coincidence is that the record figures are held by the same track, which is an elliptical mile.

A French Naval Visitor

Boston, Sept. 24.—The French protected cruiser D'Estrees is anchored in Boston harbor. She is a vessel of 2800 tons, with a speed of 22 knots and can steam 12,000 miles at reduced speed without replenishing her bunkers. She represents the latest tpye of French war vessel. She put in here to obtain supplies.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. For sale by all Druggist.

STRIKE DISTURBANCES

Continue to Be of a More or Less Serious Character

Harrisburg, Sept. 24.—General Gobin was ordered by Governor Stone last night to send the first battalion of the Twelfth regiment to Lebanon to assist the sheriff in preserving the peace where the iron and steel workers of the American Iron and Steel Manufacturing company have been on strike for nearly five months. A few weeks ago the company started up several of its rolling mills with non-union men, all of whom were negroes, taken there principally from the south. The presence of the negroes greatly excited the strikers and there has been more or less disorder ever since.

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 24.—The calling out of the Thirteenth regiment had a quieting effect upon the riotous strikers. The only serious affair yesterday occurred at Olyphant, when two brothers were ambushed and shot down in the road. One is probably fatally wounded. The other will recover.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 24.—If the lawless outbreaks in the Wyoming region continue, Sheriff Jacobs will undoubtedly follow the example of Sheriff Schadt of Lackawanna county and call upon Governor Stone for troops. Several squads of deputy sheriffs were kept busy yesterday suppressing disorders.

A culvert on the Bloom division of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western road near Lackawanna station was blown up by dynamite last night. Considerable coal has been going over this road of late.

Wajclack Mojowsky, a striker, was shot through the body just beneath the heart, by a guard at the Raymond colliery in Archibald yesterday. Physicians say he will die. The wounded man says he was looking for a lost cow in the woods near the colliery when a man with a rifle in the breaker stockade shot him.

A Saving of Powder

Washington, Sept. 24.—With a view of making the coming winter maneuvers in the Caribbean sea approach service conditions as nearly as possible, Secretary Moody has issued instructions to the commanders-in-chief of the north Atlantic, European and south Atlantic squadrons which will eliminate the almost endless firing of official salutes, which takes place ordinarily in time of peace when ships meet at sea. The order was issued on the recommendation of Admiral Dewey and the general board.

Disgusted With the Venture

Halifax, Sept. 24.—A story of hardship and privation is told by Messrs. Bates and Gellaney, two students who accompanied Colonel Glasier on his expedition to Labrador and who passed through here last night on their way to Boston. They characterized the expedition as purposeless and stated that in consequence of no preparations being made for such an undertaking that it suddenly collapsed and they had to make their way back as best they could.

Sultans Refuse to Yield

Manila, Sept. 24.—Captain Pershing, operating against the Moros in the island of Mindanao, has found the Moro position at Macin to be strong and has delayed his attack on it. He must throw a pontoon bridge across the swamp and possibly receive reinforcements before engaging the enemy. The Sultans of Macin regard the position as impregnable and have refused to treat with Captain Pershing.

A Curiosity of the Deep

New Bedford, Mass., Sept. 24.—Whaling bark Platina of this port, Captain McKenzie, captured a pure white whale which made 100 barrels of oil. In his 25 years of whaling, Captain McKenzie writes that he never before saw a white whale. The Platina had been only three or four days out from Barbados when the big fellow was captured.

Slate Already Prepared

Boston, Sept. 24.—Republican caucuses are being held all over Massachusetts today. There is no special interest in the election of the delegates to the state convention. The state ticket will be John L. Bates for governor, Curtis Guild, Jr., for lieutenant governor, all the other officers being slated for a renomination.

Previous Testimony Corroborated

Portland, Me., Sept. 24.—The trial of Charles A. Plummer, formerly a deputy sheriff and head seizer for the late Sheriff Pearson, for accepting bribes from Frank D. Ford, a liquor dealer, was continued in the superior court yesterday. The evidence was a corroboration of that given in the lower court.

Fatal Automobile Accident

Tours, France, Sept. 24.—Count and Countess de Cartries, a lady friend and an engineer, were thrown from the count's motor car near Limerey yesterday. The engineer was killed and the other members of the party were seriously injured.

The Macedonian Uprising

Sofia, Sept. 24.—Advices from Macedonia show that the insurrectionary movement there is increasing. The railroad and telegraph lines are damaged in many places.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Thursday, Sept. 25.
Sun rises—5:34; sets—5:38.
Moon rises—11:59 p. m.
High water—5 a. m.; 5:30 p. m.

The disturbance that was central over the middle slope for the past three days is moving slowly east-northeastward. In the Atlantic states, the northwest and the extreme west the weather has been fair. There will be rain in New England.

TROOPS OUT IN FORCE

To Preserve Order In Anthracite Coal Strike Region

SITUATION GROWS CRITICAL

By Reason of Assaults and Destruction of Property by Strikers—Governor Will Call Out Additional Force If the Disorders Continue

Philadelphia, Sept. 25.—Of the 10 anthracite coal producing counties of Pennsylvania state troops are now camped in five. Despite the presence of the troops in these districts, rioting and general lawlessness continues in the entire hard coal territory from Forest City, Susquehanna county, on the north, to Williamstown, Dauphin county, on the south, a distance of more than 100 miles.

The section of the strike region in the vicinity of Forest City, which has been comparatively quiet ever since the strike began, was greatly wrought up yesterday by crowds of strikers interfering with and beating men who had returned to work and as a result the sheriff of Susquehanna county last night asked Governor Stone for troops to assist him and other civil authorities to preserve the peace.

At the present there are four full regiments, two companies of another and two troops of cavalry in the field. The Thirteenth regiment is camped at Olyphant, six miles north of Scranton; the Ninth is quartered at its armory in Wilkesbarre; the Eighth regiment and the Second Philadelphia city troop are under canvas on the top of a hill overlooking Shenandoah; one battalion of the Twelfth and the Governor's troop are in the Panther creek valley and one battalion of the Twelfth is preserving order in the city of Lebanon, where the iron and steel workers are on strike. If the disorder continues Governor Stone will be compelled to call out additional soldiers.

While there has been no big general riot, the disturbances have been of such a serious nature as to cause the authorities much apprehension. Every effort is being made by the sheriffs in the several counties affected and the troops to prevent disturbances from growing to such an extent as to cause bloodshed. Reports are coming in from every section of non-union men and others being either shot or clubbed. Houses of workmen have been burned or dynamited and attempts have been made to hold up coal trains and derail them.

Coal is being shipped from many parts of the coal field to market, but compared with the normal output the quantity is insignificant. The output for this week will be considerably less than the average normal production of one day, which is about 300,000 tons. The strikers claim that very little of the coal is freshly mined and that it is mostly coal "washed" from the culm banks or has been stored at various points previous to the beginning of the strike.

Boies' Letter of Acceptance

Waterloo, Ia., Sept. 25.—Former Governor Boies yesterday made public his letter accepting the Democratic nomination for congress in the Third Iowa district, now represented by Speaker Henderson. The letter is devoted entirely to the trusts and the tariff, and the only adequate remedy for the evil with which trusts are charged is declared to be the removal of the tariff on trust-made products.

Macedonian Leader Arrested

Sofia, Sept. 25.—General Zontcheff, president of the Macedonian committee, who succeeded in escaping from custody, returned here yesterday and was immediately rearrested. Zontcheff succeeded Sarafoff as president of the Macedonian committee after the latter had been accused of misappropriation of funds and of being the chief agent in the kidnapping of Miss Stone.

To Be Buried Beside Her Son

Brussels, Sept. 25.—The will of Marie Henriette, Queen of the Belgians, was opened yesterday. It directs that she be buried beside her son and that there shall be no public lying in state. The queen bequeathes her 12 horses to her private secretary, Baron Goffinet. The other bequests made by her majesty were of a private character.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Friday, Sept. 26.
Sun rises—5:35; sets—5:36.
Moon rises—12:32 a. m.
High water—6 a. m.; 6:30 p. m.

The western disturbance is still moving slowly eastward. Rain has continued in the central valleys, the middle Atlantic and west portion of the south Atlantic states. The temperatures have fallen considerably in New England, where there will be rain.

Successful Wireless Telegraphy

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 25.—Successful tests were had yesterday by wireless telegraphy between the naval academy and Washington. The Slaby-Arco, or German system, was used in the tests, which were under the supervision at this end of Lieutenant Hudgins, who recently returned from Europe with three systems to be tried by government experts. It is stated that the United States ship Perry will be installed with a plant.

A Volcanic Phenomenon

Kingstown, Sept. 25.—At 6 o'clock last Sunday night the crater of La Soufriere emitted a huge offlorescing cloud which spread while rapidly ascending, changed from black to grey and then to silver color, coruscating quickly and suddenly until it appeared as if a red cauliflower had bloomed on its crest. This cast a glare over the city, but proved harmless. The eruption lasted about 15 minutes.

Nearly Four Million Endeavorers

Boston, Sept. 25.—The executive committee of 15 trustees of the United Society of Christian Endeavor met yesterday. Secretary Baer turned over his official office. Treasurer Shaw will temporarily conduct the correspondence of the secretary. President Clark gave a glowing account of his European tour. There are now 62,000 Christian Endeavor societies, with nearly 4,000,000 members.

Inquest In Pulitzer Case

New York, Sept. 25.—The inquest into the death of Mrs. Anna Pulitzer was begun last night in Jersey City. Nothing important was brought out at the brief session. The case went over until Oct. 8. The latest development in the case is the identification last night of Young as the man who bought the trunk in which the clothing of Mrs. Pulitzer was shipped to Chicago.

Tariff and Trusts Left Out

Peoria, Ills., Sept. 25.—Elihu Root, secretary of war, was the speaker at last night's meeting of the Illinois League of Republican clubs. His address was confined entirely to the recent troubles in the Philippines and Cuba and not once during the evening did he mention the tariff or the trusts. He made an earnest defense of the army.

Keller's Leave Cut Short

Washington, Sept. 25.—As the result of reports that he was in California in the interests of the opposition to the re-election of Representative Loud of that state, the leave of absence for nine months recently granted to President Keller of the National Association of Letter Carriers was cancelled yesterday by the postoffice department.

Due to Bad Management

Washington, Sept. 25.—The Havana floating dry dock was injured more seriously than was anticipated from the brief cable reports received at the time of the accident last week. From the advices at hand it is the opinion of officers of the department that the accident was due to bad management in docking the pontoons.

Train Severed His Head

Buffalo, Sept. 25.—John H. Williams, superintendent of the United States Tube company, was beheaded by a Lackawanna train last night, shortly after he left the company's office.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

RESTING COMFORTABLY

President Experiences No Ill Effects From Journey

A VACATION OF TEN DAYS

Will Probably Bring Him Around to Normal Condition—Intends to Make an Extended Tour of the Northwest Next Spring and Visit Pacific Coast

Washington, Sept. 25.—President Roosevelt returned to Washington at 6:30 last night from Indianapolis. He stood the journey remarkably well and when he was carried in a wheel chair from the railroad car to his carriage he was in excellent spirits and appeared to be free from any pain. With Mrs. Roosevelt he was driven directly to the temporary White House, where, according to the present arrangements, he will remain until the wound is healed and he is able again to be on his feet. The president was taken to his room on the second floor of the house and made comfortable and his wound dressed. Later he was reported to be resting easily and the expectation is that within 10 days the president will be himself again.

The trip home from Indianapolis was an uneventful one. He remained in bed all day and executive business on the train practically was discontinued. Few letters or telegrams were written or received. The president slept soundly all through the night until 8 o'clock in the morning. Even the noise in the depot at Pittsburg, where the train remained in the early morning for about 20 minutes, failed to awaken him.

When Dr. Lung went to the president's stateroom shortly before 9 o'clock he found his patient in rare good humor and excellent physical condition, barring the wound on his leg. The slight fever which the president had Tuesday afternoon had disappeared and his temperature was normal. In fact he felt so well he told the doctor he would like to get up and go into the parlor of his car, but Dr. Lung strongly protested against this.

The president's leg is tightly bandaged and Dr. Lung does not look for a recurrence of the swelling, although this would be nothing unusual and would cause cause no alarm. After eating a hearty breakfast the president called for a book, remarking that as he was an invalid he proposed to enjoy himself. He was propped up in bed with his left leg on a pillow and spent most of the day in reading.

The running time of the train was slow in order to reduce the jar and as few stops as possible were made. Wherever the train stopped crowds gathered about the president's car, but there was no cheering. All the people seemed anxious to secure the latest information regarding the president's condition and the members of his party who stepped from the train were plied with questions.

After dinner the president expressed a desire to see the members of his party and they went into his stateroom, a few at a time. He chatted pleasantly with all of them and expressed his great disappointment at not being able to continue the trip. He made known his determination to visit the northwest next spring, when he will extend his trip as far as the coast, during which time he will visit all the states in which he intended to stop on the trip just ended.

When the train bearing the president rolled into the station here there was a large number of people around the railroad station awaiting its arrival, but a special detail of police and detectives kept them in the rear so that few were able to see him.

The president took his infirmity good-naturedly and extended a happy greeting to several persons whom he recognized as he was being wheeled to his carriage. As he was lifted into the carriage he was given hearty applause by the bystanders. Mrs. Roosevelt already had taken her place in the vehicle and they were driven to the temporary White House. Drs. Lung, Rixey and Urie remained with him some time after he was taken to his room.

There is an accumulation of business demanding the president's attention and he will be able to dispose of much of it without serious personal inconvenience. Mr. Roosevelt expects to review the parade of the Grand Army two weeks hence, but it is not yet known whether he will remain here during the entire interval between now and then.

To Stir Salvationists

London, Sept. 25.—General Booth of the Salvation Army, who sails for New York Sept. 27, made a farewell address last night in Exeter hall. General Booth said he would visit 25 cities in the United States and 11 in Canada. He said the most direct object of his trip was to stir the Salvationists to more thoroughness and heartiness.

MANY WERE DUPED.

Forwarded Money to Betts and Fisher But Got No Return.

A number of witnesses were examined at the second day of the trial of Fisher and Betts in the United States District court on the charge of using the mails to defraud.

F. N. Hoar of Winchendon was the first witness. He testified to receiving a circular from J. M. Fisher & Co. That he sent $100 and subsequently received a call for $50 more, which he also sent. Witness invested $170 in all, and had not received a cent in return.

John Quincy Adams of Shamokin, Pa., said he had sent the firm $150 and received nothing.

Lucy Hill, a Fall River physician, objected to stating the amount she had invested for which no return had been made.

E. E. Tufts of Camden Me. invested $50 and got no return.

At noon Daniel S. Baxter of Quincy, who had been one of Betts surety for $5000, withdrew his bond, and a new bond, was immediately given by John H. Dinegan.

Hotel Greenleaf.

One thing that Quincy has long felt the need of is a place where it was possible to obtain a good meal at a reasonable cost. There have been restaurants and lunch rooms, but in every case something has been lacking and the popular demand has gone unprovided, until Mrs. W. Rollins Abrams assumed some weeks ago the management of The Greenleaf. Mrs. Abrams had a number of years' experience in this line, and it soon became evident to the guests at the hotel that they would hereafter be well provided for.

In providing for the table there are certain things necessary to have it meet the approval of the public. These are good food, well cooked and well served. All of these are found at The Greenleaf and there are few days when its dining room is not well filled. Regular dinners are served for fifty cents, and supper and breakfast at thirty five cents or $5 per week which is not unreasonable considering the character and quality of the meals served.

There are now 25 permanent guests at the hotel, and a glance at the register shows that it has a large transient trade. The house has recently undergone a thorough renovating, and today no better hotel can be found outside of Boston.

Lost Two Fingers.

Master Reginald Smith of Norfolk Downs, was examining a cartridge to find out its mysterious capacity for sound. Not hearing or seeing anything remarkable about the tiny thing, Master Smith drove a nail into the percussion cap, and when the report died away, two of Master Reginald's fingers were gone. It is not always that the gentlest things as well as the sweetest are done up in small parcels.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

CARLSON SUICIDE.

The Alleged Dynamiter Found Hanging to a Tree.

An extra edition of the Ledger issued at 3.45 Wednesday, announced that the body of Charles Carlson, who was under indictment for dynamiting, and who had been reported as missing, had been found hanging to a tree.

Carlson left his home at 4 o'clock Wednesday morning and his wife heard him go out of the rear door leading from the kitchen. As he did not return and having in mind the note that he gave her Sunday, indicating that he contemplated suicide, she made a search for him, but found no trace. Word was then sent to the police. Friends searched for him all day, but it was not until 3.30 that his body was found by John Weeden, Oscar Johnson and John Kalberg. The three young men entered a short piece of woods on Fletcher's field, and while walking along a path they came abruptly upon the body of Carlson hanging to a tree.

One knee touched the ground and the other leg was out as though he had braced it against something. His hands were extended and at first sight it looked as though he was clasping the tree. But for the rope about his neck and over a branch of a tree it would appear that he was kneeling as if in prayer.

A hasty examination by the police showed that life was extinct and that he had been dead some hours.

On the left side of the head was a gash that had probably been made with a knife which was also found near the foot of the tree.

A tumbler was also found containing the remains of some liquid, and it was evident that he had tried two methods to make way with himself before hanging.

Medical Examiner Fraser of Weymouth viewed the remains later and decided that the man had died by suicide. Dr. Fraser also said that the tumbler had contained carbolic acid, and that his mouth and lips had been burned by this liquid.

There was quite a crowd of curiosity seekers gathered about the tree, among whom was George K. Ellis whose house had been blown up. He said he was sorry that Carlson had come to such an end, but that nevertheless he had blown up his house.

Carlson's body was given in charge of Undertaker Hall and was buried at Mt. Wollaston cemetery today.

Carlson was 44 years of age and was employed as a quarryman. He leaves a widow.

Beautiful Flowers.

Funeral of Mrs. Martha A. Jones of 10 Pleasant street on Wednesday was conducted by Rev. G. A. Strong, assisted by members of church choir. The floral offerings were very profuse and beautiful among which were: pillow, with "mother; flat wreath, with ribbon marked "sister;" harp, J. Fletcher and family; broken wreath and sickel, with ribbon marked "Our Martha," from the nieces; standing wreath from nephews Calvin and Warren Fletcher and family; open book marked "finis" from Mr. Thomas Robertson; wreath, from Mr. Charles Mullen; wreath, from Mr. A. Cheves; sheaf of wheat, Mr. and Mrs. Pond of Somerville; horse shoe, Mr. C. T. Furnald and the Misses Peterson; and flat bouquet from Mr. and Mrs. Gauthier, Annie Matthewson, Mr. and Mrs. Jilbert, reapers circle, Miss Cheves, Mrs. Wm. Parker, Mrs. Charles Purdy, Mrs. A. Goodrich and others.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. For sale by all Druggist.

The qualifying round for the championship of the Wollaston Golf club will be played on Friday and Saturday, 18 holes. Competitors can play on either day. The first 16 scores will play two rounds of match play at 27 holes and the four survivors will play a round robin for the championship, all 27-hole matches.

Now that yachting, open car trips, and vacation jaunts are about passed, a helpful and pleasant change will be to renew again our loyalty and duty to church work. We never needed this more than now, and our clergymen in Quincy are earnest and meet in council and are stimulated in their work, and our presence at Sunday services should be a pleasure as well as duty.

SCAVENGER CASE.

The Government Rested Yesterday---Going to Jury Today.

The government finished its case Wednesday in the trial at Dedham of Charles L. Prescott, the city scavenger, for maintaining a nuisance at Quincy, and the case will probably go to the jury today.

Henry H. Faxon, the complainant in the case, did not testify.

At Wednesday's hearing, Thomas J. F. McQuarrie of Quincy, characterized the place as a "regular common nuisance." James Oliver of Quincy had to close the doors and windows to keep the odors out. Mrs. Augusta A. Harlow testified that the odor made her sick at her stomach for two days. Albert C. Hall found it hard to keep his men at work because of the odors. Dr. Samuel B. Everett, secretary of the state board of health, testified that premises of the nature described by witnesses were a menace to the public health.

John S. Gay, chairman of the Quincy board of health, testified that his board had found it necessary to dispose of certain sewage matter and Prescott had the contract. Prescott was supposed to furnish the place. Visited the dump and "found it in fairly good condition." Did not give Prescott permission to handle matter so as to be offensive to the public. James Ryan, foreman for Prescott, testified that he put in lime, ashes, loam and street scrapings at the dump, Alert and Young.

Francis P. Loud, our genial letter carrier, returned to his duties this week, after a week's vacation, which he took to celebrate an important anniversary. As a birthday came last Monday and as he took his first old folks' dinner at Weymouth during the week, it is easy to compute in figures, Mr. Loud's age, but his slender figure and alert step counts him as still a young man at heart. It is pleasant where an old time townsman reaches such a birthday so gracefully, and our wishes for another ten years' activity go out to Mr. Loud.

—Mrs. Thomas Gould of East Boothbay, Me., recently ripped up a pincushion that had been in use for 50 years, and found 452 needles of all kinds and sizes, just as perfect and bright as the day they were new.

That old copybook maxim finds its most forceful application in the waste of vitality, which is called "burning the candle at both ends" A woman is often tempted beyond her strength by domestic or social demands. Some day she awakens from this waste of strength to the woeful want of it. She has become weak, nervous and miserable.

For weak, nervous, run-down women, there is no better tonic and nervine than Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It restores the appetite, quiets the nerves and gives refreshing sleep. It cures local diseases peculiarly womanly which undermine the general health. It makes weak women strong, sick women well.

"No doubt you have forgotten me, but after you read my letter you will remember me," writes Mrs. Annie E. Moring, of 238 7th Avenue, S. W., Roanoke, Va. "In the year 1897, I wrote to you for advice, which you gave me free of charge. When I wrote to you I was a wreck; I could not walk straight for pains in my abdomen; could not sit down, lie down, or get any ease at all. I had what was called the best doctor here, but did not get any better until I went through a course of your medicine. I took eight bottles each of 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and ten bottles of the 'Pleasant Pellets.' I tell you the medicine made a cure of me."

Weak and sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Brockton's Festival.

The dates for the Brockton Fair are Sept. 30, Oct. 1,2,3. This is called the greatest and best of all fall festivals, where there is every year every form of outdoor entertainment, and where the horseman, the lover of bicycling, the admirer of vaudeville, the man interested in agriculture, or the woman who cares for the domestic arts, and the mere man of the world who loves to watch a huge and interested crowd, all assemble to enjoy themselves, and go away to come anothe day. Every year, without fail, the Brockton Fair is a perceptible improvement over all its predecessors. This year will be no exception. In addition to all the other features, on the last day there will be the finest firemen's muster and playout of sporting hand engines seen in New England in years. Lovers of trotting will be interested in some best-two-in-three races for purses aggregating $9,100. Four-horse Roman chariot races on a fast half-mile track will be another novel thriller. The horse show, one of the great features of the fair, will be as fine as ever. A monster balloon will throw out a torpedo, which in turn will emit a human being and drop him to the earth. It would take a column to enumerate all the Brockton Fair attractions. The main thing just now is not to forget the dates.

Republican caucuses were held throughout the state Wednesday for the choice of delegates to the State, Councillor, Congressional and County conventions, and in all cities and towns except Boston for Senatorial delegates. Towns also elected delegates to Representative conventions, but districts wholly within cities like the Quincy double district voted directly for candidates.

In Quincy there were seven candidates for the two places, each ward having a promising son, while the Wollaston ward put forth two. None of the candidates received a majority of all the votes cast, but E. J. Sandberg had a good lead over all rivals.

The next four are closely bunched, between 422 and 377, and any one could have won had they known in advance the combination.

In Ward One Sandberg and McKnight led in the order named.

In Ward Two, Adams and DeNormandie.

In Ward Three, Nicoll and Badger.

In Ward Four, Sandberg and Nicoll.

In Ward Five, Freeman and De Normandie,

In Ward Six, Badger and Freeman.

Thus Sandberg the leader was in first or second place in only two wards, and Freeman in only two. De Normandie, Nicoll and Badger also secured honorable mention twice, and McKnight and Adams only once.

The summary above affords an interesting study, the leading man in each ward being marked with an asterisk, and the second man with a dagger. A report of each caucus follows:

WARD ONE.

The Ward One caucus was not as large as expected by some, but nevertheless a representative one, as 293 vote were cast. Frank F. Prescott was chairman and Henry J. Matthews secretary. They were assisted in checking the names and counting the ballots by W. T. Isaac, A. G. Dolliver, Jessie F. Curtis, Archibald Macleod and A. H. Gilson.

The fact that E. J. Sandberg was the star man in the ward surprised many. John McKnight was a close second. The vote for the others was much smaller and rather close.

The result of the balloting was declared within five minutes after the polls closed.

The votes for delegates ranged from 194 to 153. The vote for representatives is given elsewhere, and the delegates elect are:

State,—Charles A. Howland, Charles C. Hearn, Isaac M. Holt and Edward L. Goodridge.

Councillor,—Otto Gelotte, Edgar G. Cleaves, Albert G. Dolliver and Henry P. Furnald.

Congressional,—John O. Hall, Russell A. Sears, Isaac M. Holt and William T. Isaac.

County (favorable to W. E. Badger),—Chas. M. Jenness, Archibald F. Macleod, Henry P. Kittredge and Arthur W. Stetson.

Senatorial,—Eben W. Sheppard, Albert G. Dolliver, Edward Johnson and Archibald F Macleod.

WARD TWO.

Adams and DeNormandie were the favorites at the Quincy Point caucus, with McKnight as third man, and Nicoll as low man.

Ex-Councilman Hultman was chairman and Elijah P. Barrows, secretary. The tellers were: Arthur C. Sampson, Melville Holmes, Rollin Newcomb and Edwin Newcomb.

The vote for Representatives is in the summary for the city, these delegates were elected:

State,—Thaddeus H. Newcomb and Arthur W. Newcomb.

Councillor,—George E. Adams and Eugene C. Hultman.

Congressional,—Rollin H. Newcomb and Edwin W. Newcomb.

County,—John S. Gay and Thaddeus H. Newcomb.

Senatorial,—Thaddeus H. Newcomb and George P. Mead,

WARD THREE.

The South Quincy ward always has reputation of standing by it own ward candidate, and when the returns of the caucus were announced it was seen that this caucus was no exception to the rule, for it had given Harry S. Nicoll, its candidate for Representative, 220 votes, while Edward J. Sandberg the second man received 140. The other condidates received less than one hundred votes.

The vote of this ward for Mr. Nicoll put him up among the possibilities until Ward Five and Six were heard from. They gave him but a small vote.

John C. Murray was chairman of the caucus and Frank A. Carlton secretary. The tellers were: William Pratt, J. Kennedy, M. Campbell, Daniel Tinney, David Drummond, John P. Bigelow, George Clark and James Tenney.

The vote for Representatives is given elsewhere by wards. The following delegates were elected.

State,—James Thompson, John P. Bigelow, and Thomas W. Smith.

Councillor,—James W. Pierce, William J. Williams and Alonzo L. Litchfield.

Congressional,—John P. Bigelow, Frank L. Carlton and John G. Roberts.

County (favorable to W. E. Badger),—Walter E. Piper, Alfred O. Diack and Thomas W. Smith.

Senatorial,—Frederick L. Jones, Alexander Falconer and Oscar F. Frisk.

WARD FOUR.

There was a large vote at the West Quincy caucus, due largely to the fact that there were two sets of delegates seeking election for every convention but the county. The number of votes cast was 288, and in every case the first or ward committee's list won out. The ward gave its candidate for Representative a good vote and made his nomination sure.

William H. Teasdale called the caucus to order and Tobias H. Burke was elected chairman and Thomas J. Lamb clerk. The tellers appointed were Virgil W. Fuller, Alexander Shirley, Arthur W. Loud, Gene McCormick.

The Representative vote is given in another column. The vote for delegates was as follows:

State,—James F. Allen 172; and William H. Fuge 164.

Second list,—Jonas Shackley 96; and Eric A. Carlson 85.

Councillor,—Andrew Anderson and 163; Albert G. Farnham 170

Second list,—Michael Owens 107; and Charles Laudine 82.

Congressional,—Thomas F. Burke 173; and William H. Teasdale 176.

Second list,—J. Leonard Ferguson 101; and William Gelotte 81.

County,—Hiram W. Campbell 209; and William E. Badger 219.

Senatorial,—Alfred Johnson 142; and Alexander Shirley 139.

Second list,—William P. Barry 102; and John C. Kapples 101.

WARD FIVE.

The fact that two Wollaston men were seeking nomination for Representative was enough to bring out a large number of voters at the caucus. Both Mr. Freeman and Mr. De Normandie were early on the scene directing their lieutenants, and seeing to it that every vote possible was got out. There was no excitement about the polls which were kept open half an hour longer than the advertised time.

In this ward it was the fight of last year's municipal caucuses over again, and the vote when announced showed the result to have been on the same lines as last year, and that Freeman had received nearly one hundred more votes than De Normandie. The result also showed that there must have been bullets thrown and it was rumored about the polling place that friends of both gentlemen were shooting bullets.

Richard R. Freeman called the caucus to order and Charles R. Sherman was elected chairman, with William Howard, clerk. The tellers were: Albert G. Olney, J. P. Thomas, Enoch S. Thomas and James P. Casey.

The vote for Representatives is given elsewhere. These delegates were elected:

State,—Eugene H. Sprague, Walter S. Pinkham and Edward E. Jameson.

Councilor,—Walter F. Nichols, Herbert Y. Follett and William M. Chase.

Congressional,—Henry O. Fairbanks, George E. Thomas and Charles G. Farwell.

County,—Charles M. Bryant, Walter J. Welington and Richard R. Freeman.

Senatorial,—Henry O. Fairbanks, Walter J. Wellington and Sidney F. Copeland.

WARD SIX.

Although the Atlantic ward had a candidate seeking renomination for Representative in Frank E. Badger its caucus was not largely attended. The number of votes cast was 150 and of these Mr. Badger received 111 the second man receiving but 62 which goes to show that bullet shooting was practiced here as in other wards.

Ralph W. Hobbs was chairman and Arthur Beale clerk. The tellers were L. F. R. Langelier, Edwin R. Thorpe, and Herbert S. Fairclough.

The votes for Representative is given elsewhere. These delegates were elected.

State,—Thomas Gurney and Benjamin T. Thomas.

Councillor,—Daniel McGrath and Charles R. Hendrie.

Congressional, — Herbert D. Gearwar and Elwin R. Thorpe.

County,—James H. Cunningham and Herbert F. Barker.

Senatorial,—Ralph W. Hobbs and Roger H. Wilde.

Politics Elsewhere.

The Adams-Foss contest for the Republican nomination for Congress in the new Eleventh district may depend on a recount of votes. Claimed by Foss.

Dr. George B. Pierce secured the Republican nomination for senator in the Dorchester district.

Only one Boston ward in the Tenth Congressional district elected pledged delegates; those of Ward 20 being favorable to W. W. Towle.

Speaker Myers was renominated for the House.

All the Hyde Park delegates are pledged to Wilbur H. Powers of that town for Senator, to succeed Hon. Eugene H. Sprague.

Heart Beats

that are too fast or too slow, too strong or too weak, are not the kind that come from a healthy heart. Remember, every heart that pains, flutters, palpitates, skips beats, and every heart that causes fainting spells, shortness of breath or smothering, is weak or diseased, and cannot keep the blood circulating at its normal rate.

"My heart was very weak and kept skipping beats until it missed from one to three beats a minute. Well knowing what the result would be if this trouble was not stopped, I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, and two bottles brought the heart action to its normal condition."

FRICTION SWEPT AWAY

After Platt Had Been Side-Tracked by Odell

BOSS IS BADLY BEATEN

Governor Not Only Forced Withdrawal of Sheldon's Candidacy, but Completed Assertion of His Leadership by Revising the Platform

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Completing yesterday in three hours a state ticket, and promulgating a platform of principles, without the least indication of friction and amidst much enthusiasm, the state Republican convention adjourned sine die. The candidates with three exceptions are at present state officers. The planks in the platform which attracted most attention were those protesting against combinations and trusts and the declaration for improved canals. The ticket:

For governor, B. B. Odell; lieutenant governor, F. W. Higgins; secretary of state, J. F. O'Brien; treasurer, J. G. Wicksor; attorney general, H. B. Coman; comptroller, H. B. Miller; engineer, E. A. Bond; judge of court of appeals, W. E. Werner.

The platform also endorses the administration of President Roosevelt and Governor Odell; calls attention to the abolition of the direct tax rate; discourses on the economy that has characterized the administration of state affairs, considering the largely increased responsibilities; congratulates President Roosevelt for laying the foundation of local government in the Philippines; endorses the relief of the furnished local education in the state; calls for good roads and improved canals; endorses the constitutional amendment allowing the legislature to regulate the hours of labor for workingmen; calls for the preservation of the protective tariff in the interest of the workingman; favors legislation to get more speedy results in supreme court actions; favors a high standard of state care for the insane with a care to careful expenditure; favors appropriations for the forest preserves and favors recognition of the veterans of all wars.

The friction which developed Tuesday and which threatened to result in a party breach had entirely disappeared yesterday and the leaders talked in the most harmonious way. Senator Platt said that if he made any aspersions on Woodruff he had forgotten them. Woodruff failed to remember any criticism of Platt.

Governor Odell left early in the morning after having effected the retirement of Sheldon, and the delegates almost as a unit approved of the decision. Senator Higgins, who was named by the convention for lieutenant governor, was the original candidate of Platt.

Sheldon said after the convention: "I have positively no grievance. My business connections, it would seem, bid fair to lay the ticket open to criticism had I been nominated, particularly in view of the fact that before the convention such criticisms had begun to be made."

When Governor Odell forced the withdrawal of Sheldon's candidacy for lieutenant governor he over-rode Platt and all his following among the machine leaders as he has never over-ridden them before. Every one of them believed that Platt would never agree to the elimination of Sheldon. He said so. Quigg went blitherly acout calling the governor's action a fool's errand. Platt was first stubborn. Then the governor informed him that if Sheldon was not removed from the ticket he himself would not run for governor. Platt whined and yielded. Then by way of completing the assertion of his leadership the governor revised the platform and returned to Albany. Not a delegate, the correspondents at Saratoga agree, now doubts the leadership of Odell. For the moment Platt is down, broken, humiliated. It is long since he has experienced so obvious a defeat.

Foss and Adams Tied

Boston, Sept. 25.—Although caucuses were held by the Republicans last night in all the wards of the city to elect delegates to the state, congressional, county and senatorial conventions and to elect representatives to the general court, interest in the congressional contest in the Eleventh district far exceeded that evidenced in any other fight in the entire city.

In this district Eugene N. Foss, a tariff revisionist, and Melvin O. Adams, a lawyer, had conducted as sharp a contest for the congressional nomination as has ever been seen in this city. East had stoutly claimed that the other could not muster enough delegates to secure a nomination in the convention, and these claims seem to have been proven true, as the returns indicate that the result is a tie, each candidate securing 53 delegates.

As the caucuses were nearly all held during the evening, the returns did not come in until a late hour, but this morning the results indicate that Rufus B. Dodge has won in the 3rd, A. P. Gardner in the 6th, W. S. Greene in the 13th and W. C. Lovering in the 14th.

British Major Charged With Fraud

Dublin, Sept. 25.—Major C. J. Studdert, a man of high standing, his two sons and two others, after a prolonged hearing on the charge of fraud and conspiracy in connection with yeomanry horse purchases in Ireland, were yesterday committed for trial at the next assizes of Clare county.

COREAN MONARCH DEAD

According to a Dispatch From Seoul to a Paris Newspaper

Paris, Sept. 25.—In a dispatch from Seoul, Corea, the correspondent of The Figaro says it is reported that the Emperor of Corea is dead.

A dispatch to The Associated Press from Seoul, Corea, dated last Monday, said the celebration of the anniversary of the coronation of the emperor, Yi Hieung, had been postponed in consequence of the spread of cholera there, but the real reason of the postponement was alleged to be lack of funds.

Yi Hieung succeeded his predecessor to the throne in 1864. He assumed the title of emperor in 1897. It was reported in 1898 that the emperor and Crown Prince of Corea had been poisoned. They both recovered. It was then believed that the poisoner was a lady of the emperor's household, and she was supposed to have been actuated by jealousy or political motive.

Violated Oath of Neutrality

Capetown, Sept. 25.—Max E. Henschel, a German subject, has been convicted of treachery and sentenced by a military court at Pretoria to 10 years' imprisonment at hard labor. Henschel, after having taken the oath of neutrality, had started for Germany, carrying with him a number of Kaffir curiosities. When the curiosities were examined at the frontier, certain documents addressed by Commandant Beyers to Messrs. Kruger and Leyds were found. The prisoner pleaded ignorance as to the contents of the documents, but admitted that he had been promised $5000 for delivering them.

Cuba May Retain Records

Washington, Sept. 25.—Mr. Quesada, the Cuban minister at Washington, says in regard to the removal of military documents from Cuba by the United States that Secretary Root promised to allow all the records of the United States military administration in the island to remain there, except those which are needed at Washington to close up accounts. The records which are not necessary to the settlement of accounts here, it is said, will be left at the disposal of Cuba until the island government no longer has any use for them.

To Contest Stratton Will

Denver, Sept. 25.—I. H. Stratton of Pasadena, Cal., has decided to contest the will of his father, Winfield S. Stratton, which left the bulk of his estate, estimated to be worth from $10,000,000 to $12,000,000, for the establishment of a home for poor sick people at Colorado Springs. Under the provisions of the will, young Stratton forfeits the $50,000 which his father bequeathed to him by making a contest.

Boers Excite British Press

London, Sept. 25.—The tone and contents of the manifesto of the Boer generals, which was issued in the form of an appeal to the civilized world for contributions to assist destitute Boers and help in the education of Boer children, excite the utmost resentment of the whole British press. It is regarded as a manifesto of hostility to Great Britain and a blunder which the Boers will live to regret.

Chief and Three Wives Lost

San Francisco, Sept. 25.—Schooner Louisa D has returned to this port after a cruise among the Marshall and Gilbert islands. Captain Moore tells of a tidal wave which visited the Marshall islands and took several lives. A schooner owned by Moses, a chief of the Marshall islands, was wrecked, and Moses, his three wives and eight soldiers were lost.

Five After Henderson's Seat

Newhampton, Ia., Sept. 25.—The Third district Republican convention reassembles here today to nominate a candidate to succeed Speaker Henderson on the ticket. Five candidates are in the field and a lively contest is in progress. A movement looking to the renomination of Speaker Henderson, despite his protests, was abandoned.

Smith Defends His Course

Indianapolis, Sept. 25.—General Jacob H. Smith, in an address on the Philippines before the national encampment of the Spanish-American war veterans, made his first public utterance on the Samar campaign. He defended his course, and was cheered at the conclusion of his address.

FELL FOUR HUNDRED FEET

Aeronaut's Assistant Killed In Ascension at a County Fair

Taunton, Mass., Sept. 25.—The 30,000 people who attended the fair of the Bristol County Agricultural society yesterday witnessed a tragedy which for a while threatened to cause a panic. The Stafford Balloon company had been furnishing some thrilling spectacles this week. On Tuesday the canvass balloon with which the ascensions were made caught fire, and gave the crowd a scare. One ascension was made safely yesterday by Professor Stafford alone. At 4:30 o'clock a triple ascension by Professor and Miss Stafford and Louis Girard, their assistant, was planned.

No sooner had the balloon been freed, when it was seen that something was wrong. The woman cut loose at once, and did not leave the ground. The balloon shot up rapidly, and had gained a height of about 400 feet, when Stafford's parachute was seen to drop. It spread and Stafford alighted safely, but his parachute had barely left the balloon when the latter ripped in halves and collapsed. There was a frantic motion on Girard's part as he tried to cut loose, but the lines refused to part, and he fell to the earth, the wrecked balloon burying him in its folds. He was unconscious when freed from the cloth, and died 20 minutes later. An examination showed that his spine was broken in two places.

Pugilistic Democrats

New Haven, Sept. 25.—The delegates to the Democratic state convention assembled here last night to transact business preliminary to the convention proper today. The proceedings of the night wound up with a scandalous fracas which developed in the New London county caucus during a debate involving the endorsement of one or the other of the two candidates for governor. Loud talk gave way to bellowings, hot words were followed by scuffles, and then came fisticuffs. No one was seriously injured but the caucus went to pieces in perfect pandemonium.

Verdict For Nearly $8000

Farmington, Me., Sept. 25.—United States Senator William A. Clark of Montana yesterday began a suit in the supreme judicial court to recover from Fred L. Badger of Badger Bros., granite quarry owners, the sum of $7000, alleged to have been wrongfully obtained from the plaintiff in the purchase of a granite quarry at North Jay. The jury returned a verdict for Senator Clark for $7843.50, this sum being the amount for which suit was brought, with costs.

Clam Digging Shut Off

Newport, R. I., Sept. 25.—Fishermen who have been digging for clams along the shores of Portsmouth, especially in front of the naval coaling station, have been ordered to stop taking clams from the government property. For years this practice has been in vogue and comes under the state laws of fishermen's rights, which the state strongly upholds. The fishermen will have the matter brought before the authorities in Washington.

Miss Maxfield's Story

Belfast, Me., Sept. 25.—Mae Maxfield, the young woman who mysteriously disappeared from a Providence depot two weeks ago, and finally was found by her father in Brooklyn, claims that she was drugged by a woman on the steamer City of Lowell and for 10 days was very ill in a palatial Boston residence. Finally she escaped and went to her fiancee at Brooklyn, after which she informed her father of her whereabouts.

War Munitions Being Shifted

Newport, R. I., Sept. 25.—While there may be nothing significant in the fact that a considerable amount of smokeless powder, gun cotton, and other supplies have been sent from the torpedo station to the naval magazines in the vicinity of New York, it is presumed by many that the trouble about the Caribbean sea may have something to do with the shipments.

May Have to Beg Coal

Boston, Sept. 25.—The French cruiser D'Estrees put in here for supplies, and what she needs most is coal, but her commander finds that there is a decided scarcity of the article at this port. The cruiser may make a request for coal upon the Boston navy yard, which as a matter of international courtesy, will be complied with.

Auto Records Broken

Providence, Sept. 25.—At the second annual race meeting of the Rhode Island Automobile club yesterday George C. Cannon clinched his title to the steam championship of the world by driving a car of his own construction in 1:05 1-4. He also set a new world's record for steam cars for five miles at 6:05 flat.

Lord Derby and The Rajah Win

Readville, Mass., Sept. 25.—At the New England breeders' meet here yesterday Lord Derby captured the $10,000 purse in the 2:07 trot while the other big purse, $7000 for the New England Futurity for foals of 1899, was won by The Rajah.

Wicked Youngster Put Away

Portland, Me., Sept. 25.—Michael Ridge, aged 12, was sentenced to the reform school during his minority yesterday, because of a search and seizure case on which he was arrested Tuesday and two suspended sentences for larceny.

Saxonia's Big Passenger List

Boston, Sept. 25.—Steamship Saxonia arrived yesterday with 2260 passengers on board. Nearly all the third-class passengers, 1847 in number, were Scandinavian immigrants bound for Canada and the northwest.

THE LAWLESS SPIRIT

Continues to Prevail In the Anthracite Region

MINER CLUBBED TO DEATH

Mob Danced Around His Body and Sang—State Prepared to Maintain Large Army In the Field For an Indefinite Period

Philadelphia, Sept. 26.—While there was considerable disorder and many acts of violence in sections of the hard coal regions yesterday, the lawlessness was not so general as it was earlier in the week. The presence of additional troops and a drenching rain storm assisted greatly in the preservation of peace.

Near Wilkesbarre a coal and iron policeman was almost clubbed to death. Reports from other parts of the region show that petty cases of violence continue to occur. The lower anthracite region is comparatively quiet, most of the lawlessness occurring in the vicinity of Scranton and Wilkesbarre.

General Gobin is keeping many of his soldiers on the move, either shifting their camps or sending out companies to scatter crowds. A company of the Thirteenth regiment was sent to Forest City yesterday and had a brush with a mob upon its arrival, but no one was hurt.

President Mitchell says the troops will help to keep the men firmer in their determination to stand out against the operators. The coal companies claim they are daily placing more men at work, and the shipment of coal continues in small quantities.

The situation at Lebanon, where negroes took the places of the iron and steel workers in the plant of the American Iron and Steel company thereby causing riots and the killing of one person and the injuring of others, continues quiet. The first battalion of the Twelfth regiment, stationed there, has the situation well in hand.

Mob Rejoiced at Murder

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 26.—James Winston, aged 48 years, was killed, and his son-in-law, S. J. Davis, was severely injured by a gang of Hungarian strikers, who waylaid them on their way to work yesterday. The affair took place almost within sight of the camp of the Thirteenth regiment. Lewis got away, but Winston had his skull crushed with a club and fell unconscious. While he lay prostrate and dying the crowd jumped on him, kicked him in the face and beat him with clubs. After dancing about their victim, clapping their hands and singing the crowd left him.

Governor Stone's Attitude

Harrisburg, Sept. 26.—Governor Stone was asked yesterday if he would declare martial law in the coal regions. He said: "Without discussing the power of the government to declare martial law, it will be wholly unnecessary to resort to that remedy. The National Guard has been sent into the coal regions to suppress tumults, riots and mobs where the civil authorities are unable to suppress them. They will not interfere with the civil authorities, but are there to aid and assist them in preserving order. There is now a surplus in the treasury and the state is prepared to maintain a large army in the field for an indefinite time. I have no hesitation in expressing my disapproval of tumults, riots and mobs and all acts of violence, and my determination to suppress them and preserve order regardless of consequences and regardless of cost."

This Woman Had Nerve

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 26.—Mrs. George Marshall, colored, armed with a shotgun, safely escorted a hunted non-union men through a crowd of 100 strikers late last night. When the crowd began to avenge itself by bombarding her husband's hotel, Mrs. Marshall fired on the nearest group and peppered a dozen men with birdshot. This scattered the mob.

Anthracite From Wales

New York, Sept. 26.—Four thousand tons of Welsh coal, chiefly large-sized anthracite, reached here yesterday. None was offered for sale, as all had been contracted for before the order was placed by the local company which made the importation. All day the office of the company was besieged by coal dealers, eager to obtain some of the coal. The price at which the Welsh coal is quoted could not be learned.

Reading Company Moving Coal

Reading, Pa., Sept. 26.—From Wednesday morning until yesterday afternoon the Philadelphia and Reading company reports show that it has brought down 4800 tons of coal. All of it was sent to tidewater points. About 10,000 tons of washery and mined coal is promised by the end of the week.

ALLEGED WIFE BEATER

Charged With Having Abused His Wife In a Frighttul Manner

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 26.—Andrew J. H. Bickford was arrested yesterday afternoon charged with assault with intent to kill upon his wife. The affair took place Wednesday night, but was not reported until yesterday, and Bickford refuses to say anything aout it. Mrs. Bickford is terribly bruised, and is believed to be internally injured.

Bickford's father keeps a boarding house, and his son worked for him. According to the statement of George Cady, Mrs. Bickford's father, Mrs. Bickford was playing whist with her mother, Bickford's mother and another guest, when Bickford came in and called her up to their room. As soon as they entered, Bickford, it is said, locked the door, knocked his wife down, and kicked her repeatedly. She became unconscious, in which condition she remained until yesterday morning. When she recovered consciousness she sent for her mother, and a doctor was called, who found her body covered with bruises, her ear cut, and bearing evidence of having been terribly maltreated.

He pronounced her condition critical, but could not say whether or not she would recover. A warrant was sworn out by Cady and Bickford was placed under arrest. Cady says that his daughter has frequently been abused by her husband, and that he has been arrested before.

The couple were married last Easter, Bickford being about 30 years old and his wife 35.

Investors' Faith Shattered

Boston, Sept. 26.—Young men who felt that they were investing in a "sure thing" without possibility of losing and a strong probability of winning took the witness stand in the United States district court yesterday, at the trial of Fisher and Betts, indicted for using the mails in a scheme to defraud, to tell their stories of disappointment in their dealings with J. M. Fisher & Co. Each told about the same story as regards the result. They put up money for investment, forfeited it with margins and lost it all.

Hub Coalbins Empty

Boston, Sept. 26.—One coal dealer last night said: "Beginning tomorrow, not one pound of coal will be sold for domestic purposes in Boston, regular customers of the coal companies included. Unless the situation brightens, we shall be unable to keep the factories going." Yesterday afternoon the Metropolitan Coal company, the largest concern in the city, refused to sell a half ton of coal at any price to a prospective customer.

Boom For Beverly

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 26.—The United Shoe Machinery company made known yesterday its decision to establish a mammoth plant here and to discontinue their old plants at Boston, Winchester and this place. A plot of 150 acres has been secured and a plant costing $500,000 is to be erected. The company employs 5000 men and the payroll is between $40,000 and $50,000 a week.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

SALAZAR'S OBJECTION

To Landing of American Marines on Isthmus

HOLDS M'LEAN RESPONSIBLE

"For Whatever May Happen" as a Result—Meanwhile Our Commander Is Having Additional Forces Sent Him From Our Seaports

Panama, Sept. 26.—Traffic across the isthmus is free and part of the revolutionary army having retreated to Agua Dulce the danger of a battle on the isthmus is believed to be removed.

In a communication sent to Commander McLean, of the United States cruiser Cincinnati, forwarded through the American consul, Governor Salazar has endeavored to demonstrate that the Colombian government has here all the forces necessary to protect the lives and property of all foreigners and to guarantee their rights under the laws and international treaties.

The governor adds that he is desirous of having pointed out to him a single case where the lives or property of foreigners have been menaced, and, consequently, he holds that the landing of United States marines was not justified; says he considers it an attempt to assume the sovereignty of Colombia, protests against it, and states that he will hold Commander McLean responsible for whatever may happen as the result of the marines landing.

In the meanwhile 250 American marines remain here to protect American interests.

The government entertains great hopes of the new cruiser Bogota, recently acquired by it in the United States and expected here shortly. It is believed that when the Bogota begins operations the revolutionists will lose their prestige at sea, which government officials declare to have been their greatest strength.

To Increase M'Lean's Force

Washington, Sept. 26.—Secretary Moody was more fully advised of the situation on the isthmus yesterday afternoon by another and a longer cablegram from Commander McLean, at Colon. It was said at the department that the commander's report was to the effect that conditions on the isthmus, while not seriously disturbed now, are such that the United States forces at present there cannot be withdrawn or diminished.

After the receipt of this dispatch it was announced that the Brairie had been ordered to leave the Boston navy yard at once, going thence to League Island, to take on a party of enlisted men, and then proceeding to Norfolk, where she will be ready to start at any moment, with the marines assembled there, for Colon. Orders also were sent to the Olympia, which is to convey Admiral Coghlan to the Caribbean, directing that repair work be expedited so that she will be ready to sail about the first week in October, instead of the latter part of that month, as was anticipated.

Ordered to Panama

Newport, R. I., Sept. 26.—Twenty marines from the training station have been detailed for duty with the additional marine battalion to be sent to Panama. Orders by telegraph were received from the navy department yesterday afternoon, and one hour later the marines were ready to leave in heavy marching order.

Prairie Starts For Norfolk

Boston, Sept. 26.—The Prairie, the big auxiliary cruiser which is to take a battalion of 600 marines and a field battery to Panama from the Norfolk navy yard, sailed this morning. She should arrive at the Norfolk government docks Sunday morning.

Charges Unfounded

Washington, Sept. 26.—The civil service commission has dismissed as unfounded charges of violation of the civil service law recently filed against Representative Borring and Messrs. Edwards and Young of Lebanon, Ky. The charges alleged the levying of political assessment in contravention of the law.

Noblemen Were Poor Shots

Vienna, Sept. 26.—During a shooting party organized near Budapest by Count Zichy in honor of Grand Duke Nicholas Constantinovich of Russia, eight beaters were wounded. The grand duke was responsible for injuring five of the men, while Count Zichy's brother wounded the three others.

Big Mines Full of Water

Washington, Sept. 26.—Captain Baird, U. S. N., who is superintendent of the state, war and navy departments building, has been obliged to purchase soft coal for use in the building. He caused an investigation to be made of the situation in the anthracite region and says that it will take three months to pump out the largest mines and have them in full operation so that the demand for coal can be met. On account of this information he consulted the comptroller as to whether he would be allowed to purchase soft coal and such permission was granted.

The direct nomination law for Representatives was very satisfactory in this city at the Republican caucuses, bringing out a large vote and getting the sense of the voters. At the last State election 1943 votes were cast for the Republican candidate for Governor, W. Murray Crane, and at the caucuses this week over 1400 votes were cast. With seven candidates for two places it could not be expected that any one would receive a majority of all the votes.

The lead of Mr. Sandberg was decisive, and it is to be regretted that of the second nominee Mr. Freeman was not, as others may be tempted to run on nomination papers.

It might be a good idea, as in golf and tennis to provide that there shall be a preliminary round and finals where more than three candidates enter for one place, or more than four for two places.

In a case like the Republican caucuses this week, in Quincy, second on final caucuses could be held two days later at which only the first four candidates should be allowed to enter. In this case, Messrs. Sandberg, Freeman, DeNormandie and McKnight. Then a majority instead of a plurality vote would be obtained for the nominees which would be more satisfactory. The second caucuses would simply take the place of the conventions of the past.

The following figures show that the caucuses were representative ones of the party:

	Vote cast.	Republican Vote.
Ward One,	293	452
Ward Two,	160	252
Ward Three,	291	367
Ward Four,	288	238
Ward Five,	265	401
Ward Six,	150	233
	1,447	1,943

Compulsory arbitration by National legislation should be the panecea for all labor troubles which effect the people at large like the coal strike. Without such a law public opinion should be exerted to bring about arbitration. The differences of the coal miners and operators must be speedily adjusted in justice to all.

GOT NO RETURNS.

The Sams Story By Investors with Betts and Fisher.

Ernest E. C. Stevens of Charlestown, a 22-year-old clerk in the employ of Houghton & Dutton, was one of the unfortunates who invested with Betts and Fisher. At the trial Thursday he said he lost through John M. Fisher & Co. $150 in cash and Winona stock certificates that had cost him $350, which he pledged as collateral security for the recovery of his $150. He said that in consequence of certain literature he had received from John M. Fisher & Co., he called at their office and saw Mr. Fisher, to whom he paid $100 to be invested in "pool No. 8" on the assurance that he would get a profit of between 500 and 600 per cent.

Later, he said, he received a call for $50 to protect his holdings in pool No. 8. He saw Fisher to whom he expressed his fear of losing this $50 along with the other money, if he put it up, but was told that it would be all right and there would be no more calls for a re-margin. A few days later he received notice both by mail and telegraph that more money was needed, but was told by Mr. Fisher, on communicating with him by telephone, that probably the amount called for would not be required.

A short time after he received a letter, in which he was informed that the company was very sorry that he didn't decide to respond to their call, and that they were forced to close him out to protect themselves. In consequence of this notice, he wrote Mr. Fisher a letter, to which he got the following reply:

We are very much surprised at the unkind, unjust and unreasonably pessimistic view you take of life in general and stock brokers in particular.

Because you have been unfortunate enough to make a small loss on the market, we don't think it is a justification on your part for making the absolutely false statments that you have concerning ourselves. Our methods were right, as we have proved in the deals we have operated for those who were wise enough to take their holdings through the little reaction caused by the deplorable death of our beloved President. Since you were not wise enough to take this course, it is not strange to us that you are trying to relieve your own feelings, and trying to justify yourself by condemning other innocent parties. We trust you will be able to take a better view of the matter in the near future, and if you find yourself in a position to enter the market again, we would be glad to offer you our services."

After receiving this consoling letter the witness testified that he went to Fisher and asked if there was any way that he could get his $150 back. After some talk, a transaction was completed whereby he gave to J. M. Fisher & Co., a collateral security for an investment which was to result in the return of his money, 50 shares of Winona copper stock, which had cost him $7 a share, but which was then selling at $3; receiving in return a guarantee that none of the said collateral would be lost, providing he allowed J. M. Fisher & Co. to manage it at their own discretion.

After the arrest of Fisher and Betts, he said he went to Mr. Fisher and demanded his stock, but was put off from time to time, and was finally told that he could not have it, because it was in the hands of the United States authorities. He said he never succeeded in getting it back, and claimed that J. M. Fisher & Co. owed him $500. This witness was still on the stand at the time of adjournment.

Other witnesses told similar stories Thursday of investments, and calls on margin, viz: Melvin Fall of Salmon Falls, N. H., J. F. Phillips of Woods Hole, Joseph Jackson of Lawrence, Edward C. Aiken of Manchester, N. H., and Mildred Ann Chambers of Philadelphia. None ever got back a cent.

NO LEGAL COUNT.

A Job for the Board of Registrars.

To Determine Representative Candidates.

May Result in Recount of Ballots at Caucuses.

Chap. 537 of the Acts of 1902 provides in Section 2 that the Boards of Registrars shall determine who are the Representative candidates elected under the direct nomination law at the caucuses of all parties. The executive clerk of the Republican State Committee claims that said board shall actually make a count of the ballots, and furthermore that the caucus officers are not required to make the count.

Under such an interpretation there has been no legal count of the votes at the caucuses of any of the political parties in Quincy this fall. Candidates who desire a recount hope the above interpretation is law.

Section 2. All ballots and returns for such candidates shall be returned by the clerks of the several caucuses as ballots and returns of elections in such cities are returned, and the city clerk with the registrars of voters, or in Boston the election commissioners, shall determine and tabulate the results of all such ballots and returns, shall certify to the facts required by law in certificates for nomination of representatives to the general court, and shall file such certificates with the secretary of the Commonwealth on or before the Thursday designated by law therefor. The secretary of the Commonwealth shall place on the official ballots to be used at the state election the names of all candidates for representatives nominated as aforesaid; and the city clerk, or in Boston the election commissioners, shall place on the official ballots to be used at municipal elections the names of all candidates nominated as aforesaid.

CITY BREVITIES.

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

New moon Oct. 1.

Autumn has begun.

The last Friday of September.

The Squantum Inn will close next week.

The City Council will not meet next week.

Rather chilly without a fire and without coal.

Next Wednesday will be the first day of October.

The steam roller is at work on Standish avenue.

Tomorrow the night will be longer than the day.

Henry H. Faxon will be 79 years old on Sunday Sept. 28.

An eight-page Ledger tomorrow with original illustrated story.

Dr. Adams and family have returned from a long visit to Vermont.

Mr. Boyce and family have taken the Miller house on Arlington street.

The work on Mrs. George Lovering's house on Willow street is progressing rapidly.

Mrs. A. P. Richardson of Walpole, N. H., is the guest of Mr. Walter Crowell of Davis street.

Miss Bessie Keller of Billings street has returned from an extended visit to relatives in Maine.

It was seventeen years ago last Wednesday that Quincy accepted the gifts of Merrymount and Faxon parks.

Work has been commenced tearing down the old car barn in City Qquare preparatory to erecting a new building

The next regular meeting of the School Committee will be held in their rooms Tuesday evening, at eight o'clock.

Frederick L. Jones attended on Thursday at Marblehead the 32d reunion of the old 23d Massachusetts regiment.

The building at the corner of Willard street and Bates avenue has been moved to the rear of the lot, making a great improvement.

Dr. George R. England has rented the dwelling part of his house to George Ewell, but will live with the family and continue his business as a dentist as usual at the old stand.

The officers of the Ward Five caucus wish to correct the impression that there were many bullets cast in that ward. As a matter of fact, out of the 265 ballots casts, there were not over 16 blanks for Representative.

MILTON.

Geerge Clements, driver of Hose 2, says that he is not alone a fireman for he can raise potatoes on his farm that take the prize for size. He is exhibiting them to his friends this week, and some of them when weighed tipped the scales at two and one-half pounds.

Miss Annie Tinker has returned from an extended visit to Derbey Line, Vt.

A whist party was held by the Thursday Evening club this week.

A special town meeting was held Thursday evening to take further action with reference to the purchase of the Milton Water Company plant. At the meeting held July 14, the treasurer was authorized to issue bonds to the amount of $315.000. Since then it has been found that with the premium offered for them they will produce a larger sum than necessary. This meeting was to authorize the treasurer to borrow such portion of said sum as may be necessary for the purchase of the property. The treasurer was so instructed.

Trial Next Week.

The torpedo-boat-destroyer Lawrence has been hauled up on Hanley's marine railway this week to have her bottom scraped. She is now most ready for her goverment trial which will be held as soon as the examining board arrive from Washington. It is probable that the trial will take place some day next week. The speed required by the government is 28 knots. As she has made 28.02 knots at an unofficial trial she may be expected to do even better than that when she uses hand pick coal which she will do on her goverment trial.

NOT GUILTY.

The Verdict in the City Scavenger Case.

H. H. Faxon Was Complainant.

Scavenger Had Been Indicted for a Nuisance.

The jury returned a verdict of not guilty this morning in the case of the City Scavenger. Charles L. Prescott, for maintaining a nuisance.

The case was given to the jury Thursday afternoon at 4.30, and when the court adjourned they were still out. The court sent word to ask if they had agreed or wanted any further instructions. Word came back that they had not agreed but desired no further instructions from the court.

A little after 7 o'clock the jury reached an agreement and placed its finding in a sealed envelope which was opened when the court came in this morning.

It is thought that this case will have an important hearing on the case of Mr. Prescott against Mr. Faxon for libel.

District Attorny French was assisted in conducting the case for the government by John W. McAnarney, Esq., while the defendant was represented by H. Douglass Campbell, Esq., of Boston.

Both sides had about twenty witnesses and it was a hard fought battle and a great victory for Mr. Prescott. The jurors were out four hours on the case.

County Delegates.

According to the published lists of Republican delegates to Norfolk County convention none outside of Quincy were instructed for Commissioner, but Mr. Rich, an aspirant, heads the Hyde Park list and other candidates evidently have delegates. It is believed, however, that Bridge of Quincy will receive the nomination.

The delegates elect, as far as known are:

Avon,—F. P. Lathrop and Z. W. Thayer.

Bellingam,—Addison Bullard.

Braintree,—John Kelley, Charles M. Lothrop, Philip H. Sullivan, Henry M. Storms and Foster F. Tupper.

Cohasset,—G. W. Pratt and M. B. Tower.

Foxboro,—Horace Smith and Forrest Basset,

Franklin,—Horace M. Grant and W. Hosie.

Dedham,—Henry D. Humphrey, Arthur D. Montith, E. S. Morse and Barry L. Wardell.

Norwood,—Tyler Thayer, D. W. Hunter, Geo. H. Bateman and F. L. Fisher.

Hyde Park,—Frank B. Rich, Geo. W. Chapman, Lester P. Winchenbaugh, Edward S. Fellows, Clifford H. Bullard, Charles E. Palmer and George E. Edwards.

Westwood,—Ernest F. Schlusemeyer.

Needham,—Henry T. Childs and Edwin M. Grover.

Stoughton,—Thomas Stretton, J. Elmer Talbot and W. Hartley Gay.

Medway,—Daniel Woodman and Winfred Stickney.

Randolph,—Royal T. Mann and Charles H. Thayer.

Norfolk,—L. C. Ware.

Weymouth,—W. B. Clapp, S. P. Nash, N. W. Gardner, Thomas Fitzgerald, G. B. Bailey and Gordon Willis.

Brockton's Show.

There were 110,000 men, women and children in attendance at the Brockton Fair last year and they will probably all go again this year and carry their friends with them. Every one of these same individuals will tell you that this same Brockton Fair is the greatest show on earth and makes all the other shows look like "wooden money." The best that money can procure is none too good for the patrons of this fair and they always see the best. The dates of the Fair this year are Sept, 30, Oct. 1, 2, 3, and you should jot them down at once.

—The honey-producing industry of Evansville, Ind., has reached such magnitude that the city council is considering an ordinance declaring the bees a nuisance, and requiring the owners of hives to move them outside the city limits. It is said that 75 persons have colonies of bees in the city, and the bees produce $10,000 worth of honey every year.

—Europe not only produces more than one-half of the world's wheat crop, but consumes almost the entire world's surplus. North America, on the other hand, raises between one-fourth and one-fifth of the world's crop and is the world's greatest surplus exporter.

VENEZUELA'S APOLOGY

For the Misuse of the Stars and Stripes on One of Her Warships

Willemstad, Sept. 26.—Details have been received here of the closing of the incident arising from the action of the Venezuelan warship Restaurador in hoisting the American flag, approaching Ciudad Bolivar under those colors and then opening fire on the town. It was through United States Consul Goldschmidt at La Guaira that the news was transmitted to Minister Bowen at Caracas, and the latter called on Foreign Minister Baralt, presented the case to him and obtained his promise that satisfaction would be accorded by Venezuela.

About 16 hours later the government of Venezuela expressed its regret at the occurrence and orders were forwarded to the commander of the Restaurador to hoist the American flag and salute it. The foreign warships at anchor off La Guaira were therefore surprised, the whole matter having been kept secret, to see the Restaurador hoist the Stars and Stripes and then fire a salute of 21 guns.

Never before has the Venezuelan government acted so promptly and so satisfactorily as the result of diplomatic representations.

When the United States gunboat Marietta visited Ciudad Bolivar many people there took her for the Restaurador, as the two vessels are similar in appearance and are painted the same color. The American flag at the Marietta's foremast, however, showed that vessel's nationality. The Marietta was expected to return to Ciudad Bolivar and the captain of the Restaurador took advantage of this expectation when he hoisted the American flag over his vessel to avoid bein fired on by the revolutionists.

Fake Story Excited London

London, Sept. 26.—Great excitement was created in London last evening by a story sent out under a New York date, saying it was supposed that an anarchist attempt on the life of President Roosevelt was involved in the wrecking of the Golden Eagle Hotel at Washington with dynamite and the subsequent suicide of the perpetrator of the outrage. The newspapers here got out "specials" and flaming placards, with the result that half of the population of London went home believing that the assassination of the president had been attempted.

Shaw Will Not Resign

Washington, Sept. 26.—Regarding the published report that he had resigned, Secretary Shaw said: "I denied this rumor in Chicago. It would seem unnecessary to repudiate a story that has no author and is built upon a false assumption and is enlarged upon simply to fill space. The president and the secretary of the treasury are in thorough harmony."

Buencamino Repudiated

Manila, Sept. 26.—The directors of the Federal party have passed a resolution repudiating the statement made by Felipe Buencamino before the congressional committee in Washington that he represented the Federal party. Buencamino has resigned as a director of the party and purposes to appeal the matter to the members of the party at large.

MORE GOLD FOUND.

Councilman Meyer Again in Great Luck.

Was Excavating for Foundry.

Gold Said to be under All Quincy Quarries.

A vein of pure gold quartz has been found in Quincy. This time by workmen blasting out a ledge near the factory of the United States Standard Scale Co., at Wollaston.

Some four days ago work was commenced excavating for the foundation for a foundry. In digging the cellar if was necessary to blast out a ledge of rock. The man having this in charge happened to be one who had mined gold in California.

He was not long at work before he discovered that a vein of pure gold ran through the rock. Some fine specimens have already been found but not enough to warrant mining it.

The miner says the ledge is composed of slate and win rock, and is exactly the same as that in which gold is mined.

In speaking of the recent find of gold while digging for the sewer on Adams street, he said that found was what the miners called candle stick gold but this was the pure metal.

The men are now at work drilling holes in the ledge and it would not be surprising if when the rock was split open by the blast that a much larger quantity of the precious metal would be found, and further developments are awaited with interest.

It is not strange that gold should be found in Quincy as it is said by men familiar with gold mining that beneath every quarry in Quincy there is a vein of gold, although but little has yet been found.

—A Kansas man has struck a new way of getting a living. He has a flock of 600 turkeys, which, in consideration of board for himself, he moves from one farm to another, where they clean up the grasshoppers with which the farms of that section are infested.

CONNECTICUT CONTEST

Ends With Nomination of Cary For Governor

STRUGGLE OVER PLATFORM

Results In Rejection of Kansas City Doctrine—Declaration Against Protection of Monopolies and Duty on Trust-Produced Articles

New Haven, Sept. 26.—The Democratic state convention adjourned at 5:15 o'clock last night after a session lasting all day. A full state ticket was nominated and a platform was adopted and the convention, which had promised to be one of the most bitter in the history of the party in this state, closed in great harmony. The ticket nominated follows:

Governor, M. B. Cary; lieutenant governor, E. K. Hubbard, Jr.; secretary of state, A. B. Calkins; treasurer, P. Hugo; comptroller, E. G. Kilduff; attorney general, N. E. Pierce; congressman, H. S. Cummings.

The platform which was finally adopted occasioned a heated debate in the committee room, but once presented to the convention as recommended by the committee it was adopted without debate. A strenuous struggle had been made in committee for endorsement of the Kansas City platform. The committee refused to mention the Kansas City document or doctrine and the fight practically ended there.

The platform says: "We have no sympathy with the Republican policy of fostering and protecting monopolies by legislation and at the expense of the people. We believe that the prices of beef, coal and other necessities of life have been raised through illegal combinations and by means of special privileges conceded to monopoly by the party in power; and we, therefore, demand the immediate repeal of all tariffs upon trust-produced articles, so as to prevent monopoly under the plea of protection. We also demand the most stringent enforcement of all existing laws against trusts and the passage of such new laws as are required to supplement and give potency to existing statutes."

Reciprocity with Cuba is favored and an immediate reduction of the tariff on Cuban imports is urged. Other plans protest against the granting of ship subsidies, favor the election of United States senators by popular vote and demand legislation to prevent "government by injunction."

A later effort of the Kansas City platform supporters to get the matter before the convention was cleverly smothered and it was never heard from again.

The feature of the convention proved to be the contest between Cary and Thayer for the nomination for governor. This nomination was the only one requiring a ballot, all others going through by acclamation in record time. The gubernatorial ballot occupied 90 minutes of time and Cary received 320 votes of the 556 cast.

Trust Evils Will Be Remedied

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 26.—The Michigan fall campaign was opened here last night by Senator Beveridge of Indiana. He said in part: "Trusts are the outgrowth of our commercial system. They are necessities of modern life. The industrial combination is a necessity. We admit that these trusts have evils and these evils must and shall be remedied. The light of publicity must be cast upon them and the evils of raised prices and watered stock must be done away with forever."

Picalilli Politics

Butte, Mont., Sept. 26.—F. A. Heinze, whose delegation was turned down in the Democratic convention at Bozeman on Tuesday, announces that he intends to form a new political party in Montana. It will be his aim to fuse Populists, the Labor party, Socialists, Heinze Republicans and what followers he has in the Democratic party in an effort to overthrow United States Senator Clark. A meeting to bring about this fusion was held in Butte last night.

Foss Beats Adams

Boston, Sept. 26.—The returns from the new Eleventh congressional district show a victory for Eugene N. Foss over Melvin O. Adams which is, it is claimed by the Foss managers, more likely to be swelled in dimensions by recounts than to be reduced. Of the 106 delegates to which the convention is entitled, Foss has 56 and Adams 50.

Alger's Strong Endorsement

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 26.—After a long and laborious session the Republican state convention yesterday endorsed the senatorial candidacy of General Alger, former secretary of war, and nominated Judge William L. Carpenter for justice of the supreme court, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Justice Charles D. Long.

Nominee For Henderson's Seat

Hampton, Ia., Sept. 26.—Judge Birdsall of Wright county was nominated on the second ballot in the Third district Republican convention to succeed David B. Henderson, speaker of the house of representatives.

Employers' Lack of Interest

Minneapolis, Sept. 26.—The national convention of employers and employes came to and end yesterday. The leaders, however, are disappointed at the lack of interest shown by the large employers of labor in the twin cities.

Long Conference Without Result

Boston, Sept. 26.—A difference of 3½ cents a can in the price of milk, the New England Milk Producers' union demanding 40 cents, and the contractors refusing to pay but 36½ cents, was the question discussed for eight hours yesterday at a conference between the parties at issue in this city, without reaching any agreement. The meeting adjourned until today.

$60,000 to Be Distributed

Boston, Sept. 26.—Counsel for the contestants of the will of Cecilia Tully yesterday informed Judge Knowlton of the supreme court that they waived their appeal. In this way some $60,000 bequeathed under the will to various Roman Catholic institutions and charities become at once available.

The Jackson Poisoning

Rockland, Me., Sept. 26.—Judge Campbell will go to Washington, Me., next Monday and hold the hearing on the death of Warren Jackson of Cambridge, Mass., who died as the result of drinking an ounce of aconite instead of rhubarb in the general store of James L. Burns.

Treasurer Swan's Stealings

Boston, Sept. 26.—The expert accountants who have been investigating the state of the Arlington town treasurer's books submitted their findings yesterday. The shortage left by Roland Swan, the former treasurer, who is now in prison, is placed at $30,000.

Gets $1000 For Loss of Child

Providence, Sept. 26.—A jury yesterday awarded Guiseppe Di Prete $1000 damages for the loss of his 3½-year-old boy, who was killed by an ice wagon belonging to the Crystal Ice company. It was alleged that the driver of the vehicle was negligent.

Worthy of Consideration

London, Sept. 26.—Following the failure to bring about the conference between Irish landlords and tenants proposed by Captain Taylor, a prominent landlord of Andrahan, Captain Taylor suggests that the leaders of the landlord and tenant organizations meet and outline solutions of the crisis and then adjourn while their respective plans "are hammered out on the anvil of public opinion."

Lieutenant Owen Shows Up

Washington, Sept. 26.—Lieutenant Owen, who has been missing from the battleship Massachusetts some time, was at the navy department yesterday. The officer left this city for Brooklyn to resume his station aboard the Massachusetts. The commanding officer will institute an investigation to learn the reasons for Owen's absence.

Emperor's Death Doubted

Washington, Sept. 26.—The rumored death of the Emperor of Corea fails to find confirmation in any official quarter here. The suggestion is thrown out that a mistake probably has occurred through the postponement of the celebration of the emperor's birthday and accession to the throne.

Stromboli Volcano In Eruption

Rome, Sept. 26.—The volcano on Stromboli island, off the north coast of Sicily, has been active for several days past. A large conical mass has appeared on the edge of one of the craters and a fissure at the base of this crater is pouring out lava and flame to a height of 300 yards.

Woman's Sphere.

They talk about a woman's sphere as though it had a limit;
There's not a place in earth or heaven,
There's not a task to mankind given,
There's not a blessing or a woe,
There's not a whispered yes or no,
There's not a life or birth
That has a feather's weight of worth—
Without a woman in it.

MAKING GOOD PROGRESS

President Obeys Doctors' Injunctions to Remain Perfectly Quiet

Washington, Sept. 26.—Dr. Lung remained at the White House throughout yesterday. At 4 o'clock Surgeon General Rixey saw the president, after which it was announced that President Roosevelt had passed a comfortable day with no appreciable change in his condition.

The president was resting very comfortably when his physicians called to see him late last evening. He is complying strictly with their injunctions to give his injured leg complete rest and good results are apparent already.

Tower Goes to Germany

Berlin, Sept. 26.—President Roosevelt has chosen Charlemagne Tower, ambassador to Russia, to succeed Mr. White as ambassador to Germany.

CHARLEMAGNE TOWER.

Notifications of this decision and that Mr. White's letters of recall had been issued by the state department have reached the foreign office here. The appointment of Mr. Tower had been expected here for several weeks. He will probably not have his farewell audience of the emperor until about the middle of November.

Victory For the Infantry

Fort Riley, Kas., Sept. 26.—Army maneuvers yesterday consisted of an exercise of each regiment in the formation and conduct of advance guards and rear guards. Two forces, one of cavalry in blue and the infantry in khaki, were employed. The cavalry occupied the field designated as the enemy's country. The cavalry was a heavy loser in the engagement, owing to the fact that the infantry got into position before the cavalry could dismount.

Leniency Cost a Life

Bridgeton, N. J., Sept. 26.—Samuel Greenage, colored, aged 28, shot and instantly killed Constable Buck yesterday while under arrest. Buck allowed Greenage to take an unloaded gun along. Greenage finally jumped from the buggy, slipped a shell into the gun and fired. Buck fell dead in the buggy. Greenage then ran and, meeting his wife, who had caused his arrest, fired at her, slightly wounding her. He escaped.

Denies Existence of Will

Colorado Springs, Col., Sept. 26.—The first legal step in the effort of I. H. Stratton to break the will of his father was taken here yesterday when the son filed a suit in the county court, setting forth that he intends to contest the instrument filed as the will of his father and further denying that W. S. Stratton died possessed of a will.

Russians In Fatal Duel

Paris, Sept. 26.—A duel with pistols was fought yesterday near Versailles. At the first fire one duellist was shot through the head and died later. Both men were sons of wealthy merchants in Warsaw. The cause of the duel was trivial, one of the men having refused to shake hands with the other after a quarrel.

Boris' Estimate of Americans

Paris, Sept. 26.—The Matin publishes an interview with Grand Duke Boris of Russia, in which he expresses the highest opinion of the American people. "There are no idlers in that country," he said; "everybody works, millionaires and sons of millionaires, like all the rest."

Putty and May In Argentina

Buenos Ayres, Sept. 26.—It is believed that the marriage of Putnam R. Strong and May Yohe, who arrived here Sept. 7, will take place next Saturday. It is said, however, that the couple still have certain obstacles to overcome and the ceremony may be postponed.

A Thousand Killed by Earthquake

Berlin, Sept. 26.— A dispatch from Kashgar, Eastern Turkestan, says that an earthquake wrecked many villages in the northern part of the province, the total of persons killed being 1000. The dispatch says no Europeans lost their lives.

Against Liquor For Africans

Capetown, Sept. 26.—Prime Minister Sprigg announced in the assembly yesterday that he intends to introduce a bill for the total prohibition of the sale of liquor to natives.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Saturday, Sept. 27.
Sun rises—5:36; sets—5:34.
Moon rises—1:06 a. m.
High water—7 a. m.; 7:30 p. m.

The disturbance over the middle Mississippi valley still persists, but with diminished intensity and the rain has extended to the entire Atlantic coast, at the same time continuing as far west as the Mississippi valley. There will be showers in southern New England; fair in northern portion.

WHO FOR MAYOR ?

A Contest for the Republican Nomination.

Probably Packard vs. Bryant.

The Nomination to be Made by Direct Caucus Vote.

Aside from the Representative contest, the City election overshadows the State election, but nominations for the former will probably be made the same week as State election and therefore the preliminaries cannot longer be postponed. That there will be a contest for the Republican nomination for Mayor is very evident. Mayor Bryant will undoubtedly seek the regular nomination, but he will not have a walkover. It seems to be generally admitted that the present executive is in the minority this year as he was last year. Therefore, his only chance of success will be in a division of the opposition.

Like the recent Representative contest, the nominations for Mayor will for the first time be made by direct caucus vote, without the intervention of delegates and a convention. The candidate for Mayor who receives the largest vote at the six ward caucuses of the party will become the candidate of that party.

If more than one candidate seeks to butt up against the present executive, the opinion seems to be that Mr. Bryant will be renominated, but if the anti-administration men can unite on any worthy candidate, that gentleman will probably be the next Mayor of Quincy.

The same gentlemen who were mentioned as Mayoralty candidates last year are again before the public. Ward Three seems to think Frederick L. Jones, the candidate last year, should have another chance, while others believe it is Elisha Packard's turn. Senator Sprague is the choice of many but it is understood that he will not enter the field.

Because of the many assurances of support from the workers, and the encouragement given by the rank and file, Mr. Packard has notified his friends that he is a candidate for the nomination, and seems to be gathering strength daily. Mr. Packard made one of the best Councilman the city ever had, says a Ward One voter. He looked after the little things and was responsible for many improvements. He was always a great vote getter, and can depend on hearty support at any time. Some changes are wanted in officials and methods at City Hall, and Mr. Packard can be depended upon to make them. He is a successful local business man of Ward One, and would conduct the city business on a business basis. He was born in Quincy and has an interest in the city and its good name.

Candidates at large for the City Council will be nominated in the same way as the mayoralty candidate, and many believe it will result in stronger candidates at large. In the past the voters have had nothing to say as to the nominations for Councilmen at large, but now it will be different. Any thirty voters of the city can place a candidate for the nomination on the caucus ticket, and all the voters of the party will take part in the selection of five candidates. They will undoubtedly have a list of more than five to select from, perhaps ten, fifteen or even twenty-five. There is a feeling that greater care must be taken in the election of Councilmen.

Candidates for School Committee at large will be nominated in the same way. The member whose term expires this year is James H. Churchill of Ward Six. The terms of Dr. Thomas J. Dion and Dr. Frederick J. Peirce elected by Wards Four and Six also expire this year.

Weymouth Fair.

The Weymouth fair had another large attendance yesterday, fully 5000. The purse of $200 in the 2.23 trot was won by Budweiser owned by Mr. Newburt, in three straight. In the 2.40 class Yellow Boy owned by Mr. Billings, after taking sixth and third places, won three straight heats and the purse of $100. In the 2.28 trot and pace, Clint R, owned by Mr. Cameron, took the first, third and fourth heats.

The Norfolk Club defeated the Deweys at base ball, 10 to 8.

A ballon ascension by Richard Trussell was one of the attractions.

A GENERAL ALARM...

By Everett Holbrook

BUT one idea could find lodgment in my brain—Nellie had refused me. I don't know how the party broke up or the guests got out of the house, for while it was happening I was walking round and round the big table in the library of her father's residence saying softly to myself that Nellie had refused me.

Her brother Tom came into the library just as I was beginning my third mile around the table.

"Hello, old man!" said he. "What are you doing in here?"

I simply stared at him.

"You look all played out," he continued, "and I don't wonder. Leading a cotillon is no picnic, and you worked like the Old Harry in a gale of wind tonight. None of that in mine, thank you. I can't stand the responsibility. And, by the way, what's the matter between you and Nell?"

HE TOOK ME BY THE ARM AND LED ME UPSTAIRS.

"Why?" I asked stupidly.

"Well, I noticed you didn't dance with her much," he replied. "You were with Grace Curtis most of the time."

"Did you think so? I didn't notice. I was more or less rattled tonight."

"Better go to bed," said he. "You'll be all right in the morning."

"I think I'll go back to the city," said I.

"Nonsense!" he cried. "Your room's all ready for you. Come along. Don't even bother to say good night to the people. I'll fix it all up for you."

He took me by the arm and led me upstairs. I was in a trance. We passed his father and mother and his aunt in the hall, and I can't remember that I said a word to them. Probably they thought I had been counteracting the fatigues of the cotillon by too liberal recourse to the sideboard.

Tom led me into my room, cast a glance around to assure himself that all was right and then walked to the door.

"Good night, Jack," said he.

I opened my mouth to say good night, but what I really said was, "Nellie refused me." However, he had closed the door and did not hear me.

I sat down on the edge of the bed and held my head in my hands. Beyond a doubt I was hard hit. If I had not been so sure of her, if I had been able to understand why this catastrophe had come, I would have had a clearer mind. As it was I was utterly confused. I could not even remember what she had said to me. I retained only a general impression of a sudden impulse on my part when I had found her alone in the library and of a great sense of defeat following upon a reckless, delightful exaltation of spirit.

Out of this confusion a single rational idea was at last evolved. It was the conviction that I couldn't possibly meet her on the following morning. I must flee.

It was too late to catch a regular train back to the city, but I could get a milk train about 3 o'clock and bribe the conductor to let me ride. I had done it two or three times before when I had been at the Renhams, playing cards with Tom and his friends.

It would be necessary to explain this departure, and so I sat down and wrote a wild, grotesque lie to Tom about an early engagement in town. I put the note into my pocket, intending to push it under the door of Tom's room, and my mental condition will be understood when I state that I then removed my evening clothes and packed them, with the note, into my "grip."

I put on a business suit which I had brought for use the next day and sat down to wait until it should be certain that all the servants had gone to bed. About 2 o'clock I went out to reconnoiter. The house was absolutely quiet. With my dress suit case in my hand I stole along the hall, passing the door of Nellie's room with a strange feeling as if she had gone away, almost as if she lay dead within.

Beyond Nellie's was the chamber where Tom had slept for so many years, where he and I as boys had struggled to keep awake on the nights before the Fourth of July that we might begin the celebration of the nation's birthday precisely on the stroke of 12. Tom was the best friend I had in the world, and I believed most heartily that he would feel almost as bad as I did when he came to know that Nellie and I had made an end of our love story in the first chapter.

The door of that room was ajar, and I might have tossed my note in, but I had forgotten all about it. I went on and down the broad staircase, which creaked for the first time in my long experience with it and seemed to wake alarming echoes in all parts of the house. I remembered that the front door creaked upon its hinges and also that it was secured by a cumbrous lock that would not fasten itself behind me. I resolved, therefore, to go out by a side door which had a spring lock.

This exit was from what might be called the basement of the house, and to reach it I must descend another flight of stairs. At the foot I found a locked door, but the key was in the lock. I tried to turn it and in my nervousness let it fall to the floor, and it jumped into a corner where I could not find it.

I felt like a burglar who had mistaken his vocation, and this thought reminded me with startling suddenness that the house was protected by a burglar alarm. It is amazing that I should not have thought of this before. The big gong over the door in Tom's room had long been familiar to my eyes, though I had never taken the trouble to learn just how the doors and windows of the house were connected with it by the electric wires.

I knew in a general way that every door and window had its wire and that the whole system was controlled by a switchboard in Tom's room. Every night the trap was set at least for the lower parts of the house, and I was on the point of being caught in it.

Two courses were possible. I might try a drop from an upper window, trusting that the alarm was set only for the lower floors, or I might steal into Tom's room and turn off the current upon the switchboard. I chose the latter alternative.

It was more burglarious climbing the stairs than descending. My hands and even my knees began to shake with nervousness, and for a few minutes the interest of the adventure relieved my mind of the burden of my grief. I forgot Nellie in the excitement of running away from her.

Tom's room was unillumined save for a gleam from the hall and a glow from a window where a curtain was flapping in the wind of the night. It happened, however, that the ray from the crack of the door fell directly upon the switchboard. This was fortunate, but I would have liked a little light on the bed so that I might make sure that Tom was asleep.

The sound of heavy breathing was reassuring, and I stepped softly into the room. When I had crossed to the switchboard, I set down my dress suit case and then nearly fell over it with a noise that was augmented by the rolling of a big chair which I grasped to steady myself.

For a few seconds I crouched upon the floor, listening, but there was no sign that all this disturbance had reached the ears of the sleeper.

Presently I stood up and examined the switchboard. There were many switches and all pointed downward except one which was at the end of the line. I judged from this that the current was "on" for only the lower floor of the house, and so, with confidence, I turned the switch.

If the last trump of doom is as loud as the noise which ensued, I shall be too much scared to answer it. That gong sent forth a sound that would have deafened a boiler maker.

The sleeper wakened and yelled, but the voice was not Tom's. It was that of his aunt, Miss Agatha Renham, a maiden lady from way down east who was a guest in the house. Tom's room had been assigned to her, and Tom had been transferred to a less luxurious apartment on the floor above.

Panic seized me at the sound of Aunt Agatha's trumpeting. I forgot that there was any such thing as an excuse for me. I gave myself up for lost. Prompted by an insane impulse, I sprang into a closet, the door of which stood ajar, within easy reach. Once within, I clung frantically to the doorknob, while the sweat of agony drenched my forehead.

Aunt Agatha screamed but once. She was a woman of magnificent nerve, and it was only the sudden and unusual awakening that alarmed her. But the gong seemed to be wound up for all night, and its brazen voice shook the house.

Despite the gong and the fact that I was shut up in a closet I could hear an increasing outcry. I heard Nellie in the room behind me beseeching some one to tell her what was the matter. After an interval her father's deep and dignified voice came rumbling through the partition. He seemed to be reassuring his child by informing her that nothing was the matter except a few burglars.

The next intelligible sound came from Aunt Agatha.

"Tom," she screamed, "don't you dare to bring that gun into this room! I'm more afraid of it than of forty burglars."

So it seemed that Tom had appeared upon the scene armed with his Winchester. I heard him shouting my name at the door of my room. Immediately he was back again at Aunt Agatha's door.

"By jingo, this is queer!" he called. "What do you suppose has become of Jack?"

"Isn't he in his room?" demanded the elder Renham, and his voice was so close that I shivered. Evidently he was at the board trying the switches to see where the alarm originated.

"Never mind the gong, father!" cried Tom. "The burglar's downstairs. That's where he is. And I'll bet a hundred that Jack's already down there looking for him."

"For heaven's sake, be careful, Tom!" called his father. "Don't shoot Jack by mistake or let him shoot you!"

"Don't fire at all, Tom!" This in Nellie's voice. "If you think it's a burglar, just tell him to go away. Ask him if he's Jack. Be sure, Tom! Do not shoot till you've asked him if he's Jack!"

These somewhat incoherent remarks seemed to be flung after Tom, who, I judged, must be upon the main stairway. The gong had stopped ringing, and I could hear more plainly.

"You stay with me, Nellie," I heard Aunt Agatha say. There was a pause, and then she called from her door to Mr. Renham, who seemed to be standing at the head of the stairs holding communion with his son below. "George, what does Tom say?"

"He says the door into the basement hall is locked and the key's gone, probably on the other side," responded Renham. "He's afraid Jack chased the burglar down there and the burglar locked the door."

A long and wild cry from Nellie greeted this alarming statement.

"Oh, Aunt Agatha," she wailed, "the burglar has got Jack locked down in the basement, and he's killing him!"

There was the sound of a struggle and of Aunt Agatha's voice commanding Nellie not to go somewhere, undoubtedly to my rescue.

"Let me go!" screamed the girl. "I love him. This is my punishment, my just punishment. I told him I didn't love him tonight because I was jealous of Grace Curtis, and now he's dead and will never know.

These words came to me with such overwhelming force that I forgot everything else, and I came out of that closet as though propelled by a spring. Nellie had escaped from her aunt, who was pursuing her along the hall, and the room was empty. When I reached the hall, the two women were on the stairs. I could see only the backs of two servants who were hanging over the banister rail.

Joy had restored my wits to me, and I could recognize an opportunity. I dodged back into the room and got my dress suit case, which I thrust into my own apartment without being observed. Then I walked calmly down the hall to the head of the stairs.

The servants saw me and yelled at the tops of their voices: "Mr. Alden's up here! He's safe! He isn't murdered!"

The next instant Nellie came flying upstairs and ran straight into my arms. Neither of us found it necessary to say a word.

"Why, confound it, Jack, where were you?" yelled Tom from below. "I looked into your room."

"I was hunting for the burglar," I responded calmly.

"That's what we're all doing," he replied. And we continued to do it for a large part of the night, but we didn't get a clew. The affair is wrapped in mystery to this day. Not even Nellie knows.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

Pilgrimages Almost Daily to the City of Presidents.

Quincy will soon be as famous for pilgrimages as Plymouth and Concord, as parties come now almost daily. Surely there are many historic spots of National interest, and enterprises which are novel to many. A brief list is given below.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN ADAMS.

Franklin street, Quincy Adams, house built in 1681 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Patriotic societies admitted free, although contributions are welcome to defray expenses of keeping house open and in repair. Small fee asked the general public.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

Junction of Franklin street, Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

BURIAL PLACE OF PRESIDENTS ADAMS.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian), Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. In cellar is old town hearse, also box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams. At extreme end, under front steps are the vaults of the presidents, a massive stone door closing the entrance. Janitor can be found at Savings Bank building or at his home Maple place. No fee charged, but janitor may be paid for his trouble.

HANCOCK CEMETERY.

Hancock street, across from First Church. Many old stones, among the oldest that of Rev. John Hancock, father of the Patriot, who died May 7, 1744. Was fifth minister of First Church.

PRESIDENTS ADAMS MANSION.

Adams street, corner Newport avenue, Quincy. Residence of President John Adams and contains many family relics. Occupied by descendants. Not open to public.

JOHN HANCOCK BIRTHPLACE.

Adams street, junction of Dimmock and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence, was born.

MYLES STANDISH CAIRN.

Squantum heights, erected in 1895 by the Daughters of the Revolution, of Massachusetts, in memory of Captain Myles Standish and his men of Plymouth Colony, who landed here Sept. 30, 1621, guided by the indian Tisquantum.

SQUAW ROCK.

Pile of rock, on which is a perfect head of a squaw, frequently mentioned in early Squantum history. Near by is also Sachem's Knoll.

ABIGAIL ADAMS CAIRN.

Penns hill, erected June 17, 1896, by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son John Quincy, from the spot watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

DOROTHY Q. HOUSE.

Hancock street, corner Butler road, Quincy. Old Quincy homestead in which Dorothy Q was born. Has quaint old paper on parlor put on for wedding of John Hancock and Dorothy Quincy; also secret chamber and other interesting features. Private house, not open to public.

MYLES STANDISH SPRING.

On the beach to the left and back of Squantum Inn. Spring of fresh cold water, where Standish and his party breakfasted and thence started to explore the country around Boston Bay.

PRESIDENTS LANE.

Now Goffe street, leading from Adams street, near Mansion. Opened by John Adams to drive his cows to pasture.

Many other points of interest might be mentioned: Thomas Crane Memorial Hall which is the public library building; Merrymount, the home of Mrs. John Quincy Adams, where Morton erected his famous May pole in 1626; the soldiers' monument at Mount Wollaston cemetery with its tablets; the famous Quincy granite quarries, many of great depth; the granite yards where monuments and statuary are being cut, and the polishing mills where granite is polished; also the big ship yard now established at Quincy Point.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. For sale by all Druggist.

☞The Quincy bowling alleys on Granite street have been leased by Messrs. Ferris & Littlefield and are being thoroughly renovated and put in first class condition. In connection with the alleys will be a finely equipped Pool Room with three first-class tables. They will be opened about October 2, and announcement of opening night will be made in these columns. tflwp

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 28—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Missions; missionary heroes. "Cheerful amidst adversity."—Acts xxvii, 22-26.

The roll of Christian missionary heroes is a long one. It begins as far back as the time when the disciples were sent out on their first missionary tours by Christ Himself. It reaches its highest Scriptural climax in Paul, the apostle to the gentiles, and it comes down through Ulfilas, the missionary to Germany; the abbot Augustine, the missionary to England, and St. Patrick, the missionary to Ireland, Judson, Livingstone, Moffat and a Carey to the patriarch Paton of the New Hebrides and the thousands of other missionaries who are serving their Master in foreign fields today.

Christianity is essentially a missionary religion. The mission of the Christian church as marked out by its head and founder is worldwide in its scope. All nations are to be led to Christ, and the only way in which this can be done is for the disciples of Christ to go as missionaries and tell all men the story of Jesus and His love. This has been done in accordance with Christ's commands from the very earliest days. It has been done in the face of difficulties and hardships and sacrifices that are incapable of apprehension and description. In connection with these various missionary enterprises and missionary leaders there have been many heroic deeds and thrilling instances. Paul himself passed through many thrilling episodes and performed many heroic deeds in his missionary labors. Thrice he was shipwrecked. The topical reference is taken from the record of one of these shipwrecks, and it places the great apostle before us as a hero indeed.

While others were discouraged and downhearted Paul's faith in God was undaunted and he alone was able to call upon the others to be of good cheer, and revealed to them the fact that they were to escape destruction. In this respect as in many others Paul has been the ideal missionary. In Africa, in China and in Japan and in the islands of the sea many missionary heroes have displayed the finest qualities of heroism under the most trying circumstances, and many of them have not failed to heroically give their lives when called upon to do so as martyrs for the cause in which they were interested and for which they labored.

The missionary heroes teach us many useful and important laws. Their heroic courage should inspire us with the willingness to serve God under any circumstances that may present themselves to us. New plans and new methods, if they assure success, are not to be abandoned simply because of the prejudices of some against them. Wherever God calls us to labor we should be willing to go and to use the most successful method possible in the prosecution of His work. This has been the principle of our missionaries, and with cheerfulness they have met every adversity that has come to them in carrying forward their plans.

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. lii, 7; Nah. i, 15; Matt. v, 11, 12; xxviii, 18-20; Rom. ix, 1-5; x, 14, 15; Acts i, 6-14; viii, 26-40; xv, 25, 26; xvi, 8-12; I Cor. iii, 5-10; ix, 19-22; II Cor. xi, 23-33; II Tim. iv, 6-8; Heb. xi, 36-40.

A Duty That Comes to All.

In Christ we are new creatures—we are Christians. Our hearts are put right. We are brought into tune and placed in right relations to the infinite. We cease to look afar off and to serve as with an eye service, but live the right life because of the inherent love of purity and righteousness, and thus we realize true living. And one saint of this type will carry more life to heaven than a whole drove of saints driven that way by fear or led on by the lure of promise. Now, this putting the loves right and changing the inner dispositions and working for results through the development of Christian principles is not easy nor speedy. It demands refined instrumentality. It takes patience. It calls for skilled workmen who have an enthusiasm for the deeper and diviner essences. The injunction of the wise man is the secret also of holy living. We are to "keep the heart with all diligence." This is the duty that comes home to all, and from this will spring the noblest principles and the best kind of religion.—Universalist Leader.

Hidden Things.

There are richer stores of wealth by man unfound, thoughts deeper than line of man can fathom; there are stores of knowledge to which no Newton can attain, of wisdom of which the wisest of men fail to perceive. Yet these are known to God, who hides them from the prying ken of man in Christ, the keeper of His treasures. He has the key, and when He will He opens the door of His treasure house. The light of His countenance illumines all things. He takes therefrom fitting ornaments of grace wherewith to deck His beloved ones. He removes the veil from their eyes that they may perceive His glory, for His presence brings joy, comfort and cheer.—Friend.

Christian Endeavor Statistics.

The latest statistics as compiled and recently announced by General Secretary John Willis Baer of the United Society of Christian Endeavor show that there are in the United States 44,052 Christian Endeavor societies and in foreign lands 18,140, making a total enrollment for the world of 62,192 societies. A substantial growth is demonstrated for the past year. Among new societies organized are twenty in Persia and three in Manila. The Philadelphia union—the largest city union in the world—reports the addition of thirty-nine new societies.

Mark a New Policy In Diplomatic Service

A MORE STABLE SYSTEM

Requiring Appointees to Begin at the Bottom of the Ladder and Earn Promotion Rather Than a Reward For Political Service

Washington, Sept. 27.—The diplomatic transfers announced as the result of the resignation of Andrew D. White, American ambassador to Germany, are so extensive and so uniformly in the line of promotion, while the new minister is placed near the foot of the diplomatic ladder, as to suggest the beginning of a new policy in our system of foreign representation.

One of the most frequent criticisms of the American diplomatic service has been its lack of that permanency which insures special training and secures results. Under our political system it is perhaps too much to expect that the diplomatic service shall be of stability great enough to withstand the accession to power of an opposing party; but there has been heretofore a tendency to make even the most important foreign posts the reward of political service alone, and to appoint the men to a station commensurate with his service at once rather than give him foothold and leave him to earn promotion. It will be interesting to note further progress along the line hinted at by yesterday's announcement.

Charlemagne Tower, present ambassador to Russia, who succeeds Ambassador White at Berlin, was born in Philadelphia in 1848. During his vacations Mr. Tower travelled abroad, and later devoted himself to the study of history, language and literature. It was then he had his first taste of the diplomatic service, becoming an attache of the American legation at Madrid, while Daniel E. Sickels was United States minister to Spain.

Robert S. McCormick, who from the Vienna embassy is promoted to be ambassador to Russia, is a Chicago newspaper man who has acquired in his profession a wide knowledge of men and affairs which was supplemented by service as secretary of the American legation in London under Robert T. Lincoln.

Bellamy Storer, who quits Madrid for Vienna, secures the most marked promotion of the diplomats affected, his rank rising from that of minister to that of ambassador. He was born in Cincinnati in 1847. In 1897 he was appointed minister to Belgium, a post which he hed until 1899, when, on renewal of diplomatic relations between the United States and Spain, he was transferred to Madrid.

Arthur S. Hardy, who goes from Berne to Madrid, has been in the diplomatic service since 1897, having served as minister to Persia, to Greece, Roumania, Servia, and to Switzerland. He is better known, perhaps, as an author than a diplomat. He was born at Andover, Mass., in 1847.

Charles P. Bryan, who exchanged a post at Rio Janeiro for that left by Mr. Hardy at Berne, was born at Chicago in 1856. While at Rio Janeiro Minister Bryan has done skillful work, especially in preventing tariff discrimination against the United States.

David E. Thompson of Nebraska, who enters the diplomatic service next November as minister to Brazil, was born in Michigan 57 years ago, and removed to Nebraska in 1872. He secured work as a brakeman for the Burlington and Missouri railroad, and gradually rose to the post of division superintendent. The eating-house concession along the Burlington line in Nebraska is said to have laid the foundation for his great fortune. In March, 1901, he was nominated for United States senator, but after a long deadlock the legislature elected two "dark horses."

A Two-Cent Telephone Rate

Wilmington, Del., Sept. 27.—Josiah Marvel yesterday filed a deed of trust for $100,000,000 for the International Telephone company, a proposed rival of the Bell system. The deed of trust includes plants already secured, patents covering the manufacture of switchboards and general telephone apparatus, and the franchises the concern expects to secure. It is proposed to furnish telephone service at 2 cents a message.

Starts With $25,000,000 Capital

Philadelphia, Sept. 27.—The Record says that the project to consolidate 60 percent of the spinning and weaving mills in the south under the control of a holding corporation has finally materialized. The cash capital involved in the enterprise now amounts to $25,000,000. This will be increased as fast as additional mills come into the combination.

President Getting Along Nicely

Washington, Sept. 27.—The condition of the president's injured leg shows steady and satisfactory progress towards improvement. There is only a slightly perceptible change from day to day, as the healing process is naturally slow and tedious.

Steel Trust's Big Dividend

New York, Sept. 27.—The United States Steel corporation is mailing checks today for the quarterly dividend on its common stock, due Sept. 30, and the checks will be payable Sept. 29. The sum of the quarterly dividend is $5,083,025.

A DRAMATIC ENDING

To Actress Biggar's Fight For Estate of Millionaire Bennett

Long Branch, N. J., Sept. 27.—The fight of Laura Biggar, the former actress, for the millions of the late Henry M. Bennett, the theatrical manager, came to a sudden ending yesterday before Justice Heisley here. The claimant, through counsel, abandoned the suit and announced she would be satisfied with the 60 percent of the estate given her by the will. Hardly had this been done than counsel for the heirs opposing the Biggar claim showed they had been more than prepared for this step, and warrants charging conspiracy were served on Samuel Stanton, the former justice of the peace of Hudson county, who testified that he had performed the marriage ceremony between Miss Biggar and the Pittsburg millionaire, and Dr. C. C. Hendrick, at whose sanitarium in Bayonne it was alleged that Miss Biggar's child was born. A search is now in progress for Miss Biggar herself and she may also be presented to the grand jury to answer a similar charge. Stanton and Hendrick were at once arrested and held in $5000 bail and are now in the jail at Freehold.

About $60,000,000 Released

Washington, Sept. 27.—Secretary of the Treasury Shaw and prominent financiers are trying to relieve the financial stringency, which two days ago threatened to assume the proportions of a panic in the stock and money markets. On Thursday Secretary Shaw offered to anticipate the government interest due up to April 30 next. This would release about $20,000,000. Yesterday Secretary Shaw offered to buy up the 5 per cent bonds of 1904, of which there are $19,400,000 outstanding. The action of the secretary, aided by New York financiers and banking institutions, has considerably relieved the money market. The amount of money released through the offers of Secretary Shaw, the steel trust, the house of Morgan & Co. and the New York sub-treasury would amount, it is estimated, to about $60,000,000.

Four Hundred Lives Lost

Syracuse, Sicily, Sept. 27.—At least 400 lives were lost in a cyclone which swept over the island of Sicily yesterday. The cyclone was accompanied by a cloudburst and violent submarine agitation between the island and the mainland. The towns of Catania and Modica were almost devastated, and here the greatest loss of life occurred. For 24 hours before the cyclone burst over the island a violent storm raged on the eastern coast of Sicily. The path of the cyclone was 124 miles long, and everything in the line of the storm was destroyed.

Gamblers Fleeced Gamblers

Paris, Sept. 27.—Le Soir says the police of Paris have been watching for some time past the doings of several well known American jockeys and their friends who met nightly in a place where card play for high stakes was indulged in and where victims are said to have been plucked. Yesterday the police made six arrests. Four of the prisoners were released, but the magistrate told them to hold themselves at his disposition. The magistrate has summoned several American jockeys for examination.

As to Roumanian Jews

London, Sept. 27.—Thus far the British government has received no replies from the signatories of the Berlin treaty to its note supporting Secretary Hay's initiative in the question of the treatment of Roumanian Jews. The government of Roumania, however, has explained that the government is not in a position to prevent the emigration of Jews and asks whether the views of the British government coincide with those of Secretary Hay.

Preservation of Forests

Concord, N. H., Sept. 27.—A forestry conference, the results of which are expected to be of great importance for the future welfare the state, was held in this city yesterday. The entire day was devoted to the discussion of the situation in New Hampshire, and a program for work was mapped out. An authoritative announcement of the chief features of this program will be made later.

Pardoned by the President

Washington, Sept. 27.—The president has granted a full and unconditional pardon to William Dinkella, convicted in 1880 before a United States consular court in Japan, of the murder of Charles H. Abbott on the American ship Centennial, while lying in Hiogo harbor. Dinkella has been in prison for more than 22 years.

Disasters Off Labrador

St. Johns, Sept. 27.—A severe gale has been raging along the coast for the past few days, doing much damage to property. Three more Labrador fishing schooners have been lost with their cargoes, but the crews escaped. A fourth schooner has been lost and the crew of seven of this vessel perished.

A Boy's Presence of Mind

Baltimore, Sept. 27.—John Gregg, the 12-year-old son of the station master at Principio, discovered that a culvert had been washed out by floods yesterday and notified the telegrapher in the nearby block tower in time to stop a Washington-New York express train with many passengers.

FORCIBLY DETAINED

Claim of a Lynn Woman Whose Husband Had Jumped Bonds

Salem, Mass., Sept. 27.—Samuel Erizan, an Armenian barber, was arrested last night upon two warrants, one charging him with assault upon Mrs. Charles Weir and the other charging himself and wife with forcibly confining Mrs. Weir against her will.

Several weeks ago Policeman Tivnan was called to Creek street to suppress a street row between Weir and Erizan. During the fight which ensued Tivnan was stabbed in the groin. Weir was taken into court, but was admitted to bail, and Erizan went his bonds. Before he came to trial, Weir jumped his bail and he is now supposed to be in Scotland.

Mrs. Weir went to Boston, but Erizan succeeded in getting her to Salem, as she claims, by force, and she says she has been locked up in Erizan's house for five days past.

The police received a complaint yesterday and found the woman at the house. They found a mark on her arm, which she says was caused by Erizan biting her, and she also claimed that he had taken letters directed to her and had compelled her to send a cablegram to her husband in Scotland, and threatened to hold her a prisoner until her husband returned here.

After hearing her story, the lawyers who defended her husband took Mrs. Weir before a justice, and a warrant was sworn out for Erizan. Mrs. Weir had been seen in the Erizan house by neighbors during the past few days, but they had no suspicion that she was a prisoner.

Money Not a "Gaming Implement"

Salem, Mass., Sept. 27.—A decision considered decidedly novel in legal circles was down yesterday by Judge Bell in the case of the commonwealth vs. gaming implements, taken by the police at a recent raid made on a gaming place in Lynn. The question at issue was as to the disposition of money captured by the police at the raid. Judge Bell held that the money did not come under the list of "gaming implements" and he ordered the restitution of the money to the men arrested for gambling.

Death Followed Tenderloin Trip

Boston, Sept. 27.—A young woman died under somewhat mystifying circumstances at a hotel here yesterday, and the police detained two men who had been her companions. Last night the body was identified as that of Jennie Bryant and the medical examiner ascribed death to alcoholism. The men were released. With the men the young woman had taken a trip through the Tenderloin district and at one time she smoked opium. Afterwards she went to the hotel and died there.

Milk Deadlock Continues

Boston, Sept. 27.—After another long conference yesterday, lasting until well into the night, between the New England Milk Producers' union and the contractors in an effort to fix a price to be paid for milk during the coming winter, an adjournment was taken until today without reaching an agreement. The contractors made an offer amounting virtually to 37 cents a can, while the producers insisted upon 40 cents.

Auto and Wagon Collided

Watertown, Mass., Sept. 27.—A steam carriage operated by Stephen Sullivan bumped into a wagon in which were Felix Bellevue and Miss Abbie O'Neil here last night, and Miss O'Neil has a fractured collar bone and symptoms of internal injuries. Bellevue was bruised in the mixup. The automobile was wrecked, but Sullivan was not hurt. It is claimed that Bellevue was on the wrong side of the street.

Objection to Piece Work

Providence, Sept. 27.—A strike of 25 iron moulders which began in the foundry of A. Carpenter & Sons' company yesterday spread to two other concerns. The difficulty is over the matter of a minimum wage scale. The abolition of piece work, the union officials state, will be necessary before the men are allowed to return to work.

Granger Convicted of Assault

Augusta, Me., Sept. 27.—After a trial extending over three days, a verdict of "guilty of assault" was returned by the jury in the case of James Granger, who was charged with manslaughter in causing the death of Albert W. Heseltine. Heseltine came to his death through stab wounds.

Had Thirteen Months' Voyage

New Bedford, Mass., Sept. 27.—Brig Leonora arrived yesterday from a 13 months' voyage to Desolation, having 2970 barrels of sea elephant oil on board. The brig had a terribly rough voyage to Cape of Good Hope, losing two boats.

Scallops Will Be Plentiful

New Bedford, Mass., Sept. 27.—In anticipation of the scallop fishing season, which opens next Wednesday, an inspection of scallop grounds along Cape Cod and the sound waters shows that the crop promises to be unusually abundant, and the quality prime.

Coal Arriving at Boston

Boston, Sept. 27.—Bituminous coal to the amount of 14,000 tons has been received here this week, and several thousand tons of coal is due today on barges reported off Cape Cod. In addition 2100 tons of washed hard coal, mostly screenings, is due here.

Old Man Sent to Prison

Dedham, Mass., Sept. 27.—Five years in the Dedham house of correction was Judge Fessenden's sentence of George M. Hanks, aged 61, who pleaded guilty to 12 counts on an indictment for indecent assault.

"He Won't Die

Of consumption" is a remark often made of a fleshy man. The remark expresses the popular recognition of the fact that the sign of consumption is emaciation, loss of flesh. On the other hand, a gain in flesh is a sure sign that wasting diseases are being cured.

Emaciated people with obstinate coughs, bleeding lungs, night-sweats and weakness, have been perfectly cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The several steps of the cure were recorded in ounces and pounds of increasing weight. When there is gain in flesh the wasting disease is being surely cured.

Mr. Will H. Whitmire, of Arkton, Rockingham Co., Va., writes: "Our son contracted a deep cold about the first of July, 1899, and had a terrible cough. We called a doctor and he pronounced it irritation of the bronchial tubes, with asthmatic trouble, and he informed me that my son was liable to die at any time. He told me that if we could keep the bronchial tubes open, he might cure him; but after treating him several weeks and my son growing worse all the time, I concluded to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets.' I had seen several almost miraculous cures brought about by the use of these medicines, and of course I had wonderful faith in them. He used three bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' at home and one vial of the 'Pellets,' and was then well enough to go to West Virginia, taking a supply with him. I am just in receipt of a letter from him from which I quote: 'I am well and hardy and getting very fleshy.'"

☞ Why wouldn't it be a good idea for the Home Missions to take the coal strike in hand and endeavor to convert both sides to Col. Wright's theory of the best method for settling labor troubles? They might not succeed in ending the strike, perhaps, but might be instrumental in impressing it upon some minds that there is such a thing as religion and that these coal men stand badly in need of it.—Lynn Item.

☞ Instead of condeming and antagonizing the teachers, parents should co-operate with them; by carefully watching their children, and by conferring with the teachers, they can ascertain whether the former are working up to the limit of their strength or beyond it, or whether, on the other hand, they are slighting their work. This, I am satisfied only comparatively few parents do systematically, and much of the dissatisfaction which is expressed against the schools is really the fault of the parents; and, furthermore, the bitterest and most vehement complaints come from parents who really understand least about the matter.—Dr. R. C. Newton.

—German schools are going to teach the use of both hands. No more right hand only nonsense. Back in the misty past savage men fought hand to hand. To protect the heart the left hand was kept in reserve. So men grew to use the right hand and the practice was kept up long after it was necessary. It became but a custom, and like almost all customs, it survived its usefulness. Why silly insistence on training only the right hand ever got into school systems is a mystery, unless it be that in practice school systems always were way behind advanced educators. He that can use two hands equally well has as much advantage over his poor one-handed fellow as a two-eyed man has over the one-eyed man. "In a nation of blind men," says Rousseau, "he with one eye is a king." Just so. And similarly among one-handed folk the ambidextrous has much in his favor. Let the United States follow Germany in this matter.—Boston Home Journal.

THE MEDALS READY.

Many Volunteers from Quincy Entitled to Them.

The medals which the last Legislature authorized for the Massachusetts minute men of 1861 are ready at State House and many will come to Quincy. The last Legislature passed a resolve appropriating $3000 to be expended under the direction of the adjutant general, in the preparation of medals to be distributed to the members of the Massachusetts volunteer militia of the 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th and 8th regiments, third battalion, and first battery of light artillery, and to those general and staff officers selected by the Governor, who responded to President Lincoln's first call for troops on April 15, 1861, and who were mustered in and served honorably.

"In case of the death of any of the persons above described," the resolve says, "the medal may be presented to his widow, child or such other representative as the adjutant general may select.

The adjutant general's department is sending out application blanks to the minute men or their representative. The applications when filled out must be addressed to the Adjutant General, State House, Boston.

On the bar from which the medal itself hangs is the inscription, "Massachusetts Minute Men, 1861."

The face of the medal bears the raised seal used by Gov. Andrew when he made the call in 1861. On the reverse side is the inscription, "The Commonwealth of Massachusetts to the members of the Massachusetts Volunteer militia who were mustered into the U. S. service in response to President Lincoln's first call for troops, April 15, 1861."

The medals are of heavy bronze. The name of each soldier entitled to one will be inscribed on the face about the Andrew seal, together with the regiment to which he belonged.

There are 3,812 names on the lists of soldiers who are entitled to this distinguished souvenir of the Civil war, including Co. H., Fourth regiment of Quincy, Capt. Franklin Curtis.

Co. H includes the following: Capt. Franklin Curtis, 1st Lieutenant Edward A Spear, 2d Lieutenant Benjamin F Meservey, 1st Sergeant Charles F Pray, Sergeant Matthew M C Chubbuck, Sergeant John Williams, Sergeant Robert Monk, Corporal Wm H H Lapham, Corporal Thomas Smith, Corporal William S. CUT DOWN YOUR COAL BILLS.

The most serious problem that has faced the buying public for years, is coal selling at $15.00 per ton.

Cut down your coal bills, use an Oil Heater to heat your living rooms, cook on a Blue Flame Oil Stove, or use a Glenwood Range or Parlor Stove; they consume from 25 to 33 per cent. less coal than any other stove in existence.

Call and look over our Oil Stoves and Heaters plan your winter heating on an economical basis.

Try to pay $15.00 for your Suit, if you can. It gives you better tailoring all over, and a better variety of patterns. Not that the $10.00 and $12.00 Suit aren't good--they are better than most Suits at the price--but it pays to get as good a suit as you can afford.

A man put on one of our $15 Suits the other day, and the first friend he met asked. "Where did you get it made?"

You really cannot tell our ready-made Clothing from custom-made. Attention to detail in Suit-making does the business. We're ready for YOU any day. Our Suits are far better than our prices would indicate. Compare YOUR Ideas with OUR Goods. You will find our prices will suit your Purse. COME SEE.

Asthma and Hay Fever Cured.

The truly marvelous cures of Asthma, which are being effected by Dr. Schiffmann's Asthma Cure certainly call for notice.

Rev. G. L. Taylor, of Washburn, Ill., says: "Some 7 years ago my wife used several packages of your Asthma Cure which resulted in a permanent cure."

A Hay Fever sufferer writes: "I have been a sufferer from Hay Fever for over 20 years, and it seemed harder every year. The first night I used your Asthma Cure I was greatly relieved. It cured my cough after using a few times. I shall recommend it to all sufferers of Hay Fever." Mrs. Martha Simerson, Laingsburg, Mich.

Sold by all druggists at 50c and $1.00. Send 2c stamp to Dr. R. Schiffmann, Box 895, St. Paul, Minn., for a free trial package.

THE SOCIAL REALM.

The weekly rehearsal last week Friday evening of chorus the connected with the Congregational church of East Milton was in the nature of a reception to Mr. Paul Babcock and bride who are spending their honeymoon at his father's Mr. Josiah Babcock. They were married at Belle Isle, La., Sept. 10. Until his going South a year and one-half ago Mr. Babcock was an active and valuable member of the chorus. Miss Emily F. Baxter in behalf of the members presented the happy couple with a picture and later in the evening sang two solos which were very appropriate to the occasion. "Because I love you, dear," and "The Morning and Evening Star." The company then adjourned to the dining room where cake and ice cream were served after which the room was cleared and the young people engaged in dancing Virginia Reel and several round dances. It was a very enjoyable evening for those present.

The South Congregational Society of Braintree will hold a reception in the chapel next Wednesday evening to welcome the pastor, Rev. C. F. Hill Crathern and wife back from Europe. All friends of the society are cordially invited to be present.

Miss Edith M. Tarbell of Hunt street returned last Monday from Mason, N. H., where she has been the guest of Miss Harriet E. Hosmer for five weeks, having spent one of the pleasantest of summer outings.

* * *

Mrs. Annie Winlock of Royal street sailed Sept. 16 for England.

* * *

Rev. and Mrs. Leon H. Austin, nee Carter, who are spending their honeymoon at Stockbridge, Mass., are expected home next week, and will receive their friends after Oct. 1.

* * *

Mrs. Macdonald and son of Braintree, have returned from Nova Scotia where they have been sojourning throughout the summer.

* * *

Miss Amy Keith Jones of Chicago, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George I. Jones, is to spend the winter in Boston, making her home with Mrs. Nellie French Crowell of Monadnock street, Dorchester.

The Junior Friday club resumes its meetings on Monday afternoon Sept. 29 when Miss Clara Merrill will be the hostess and Mrs. Harry E. Russell will have charge of the program. The Victorian reign will be taken up for study this season and on Monday the subject will be the young Victoria and reform ministers—Peel, Melbourne.

Mrs. Sprague and Miss Ethel Sprague have returned to their home at Braintree having spent the summer in their cottage at Bayside.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Wheeler of East Milton have returned from Janesville, Wis.

Killed at Shipyard.

The first fatal accident at the Fore River Works since they were established in Quincy, happened yesterday afternoon. The victim was James Robia aged 28 years of 31 Water street. Robia was at work upon the battleship Rhode Island when he was struck on the back of the head by a large piece of casting which fell from above. He was taken to the emergency hospital at the works and later removed to the City hospital in the Police ambulance.

At the hospital it was found that his skull had been fractured. He died about 9 o'clock in the evening. Robia has a young wife who arrived from Italy two weeks ago. She was nearly frantic when she heard her husband was dead and refused to be comforted.

No Endorsement.

Now comes George W. Imlay, recording secretary of the Central Labo Union, who says: "I wish to rectify a statement in Monday's paper that the Central Labor Union of Quincy and vicinity endersed any candidate for Representative. They never did."

The item probably referred to, appeared in Tuesday's Ledger at the request of one of the candidates, as follows:

"The committee of the Central Labor Union of Quincy appointed to interview the several candidates for Representatives have reported in favor of John McKnight and Richard R. Freeman."

If the report was turned down, why was not a statement to that effect made before the caucuses.

—Europe not only produces more than one-half of the world's wheat crop, but consumes almost the entire world's surplus. North America, on the other hand, raises between one-fourth and one-fifth of the world's crop and is the world's greatest surplus exporter.

NO INVESTMENTS.

Made by J. M. Fisher & Co. through New York Exchange.

The trial of Frederick E. Betts and John M. Fisher was continued yesterday, and the court adjourned until Monday. The same tale of investments, and calls for more on margins, and no returns were told by Hugh Brown, aged 84, of Dorchester; Pierce N. Stagg of Washington; Amos Sanford of New Haven; and Mildred Ann Chambers of Philadelphia,

Orrin Towne of Somerville, a deputy internal revenue collector, testified that he talked with Frederick E. Betts, Oct. 1, 1901, about his transactions in M. O. P. Mr. Betts told him his transactions were all made through the Consolidated Exchange in New York, and a man named Thomas Gwynn was his broker. He furnished the witness with a statement of his transactions through this broker, which statement was produced in court.

This witness was cross examined by Atty. Bartlett, who sought to discover to what department or phase of the internal revenue machinery the information contained in the statement he got from Betts would apply, but he was not successful, as the witness knew nothing about that.

James E. Courtney, a clerk in the Consolidated Exchange, New York, said he kept account of the transaction of Thomas Gwynn on the Consolidated Exchange, and no purchases or sales of Missouri Pacific through that exchange in August, 1901, nor from Sept. 3 to Oct. 7, 1901. The statment furnished by Betts showed numerous transactions through Thomas Gwynn on the Consolidated Exchange during these periods.

To Atty. Bartlett, the witness said he did not know it was a custom among brokers to deal through other brokers on the street, so that their own names do not appear.

Miss Hattie M. Jackson, employed as mail clerk in the office of Fisher & Betts at 89 State street, was the last witness. She said she was hired by L. H. Bailey, the nature of whose duties in the office she did not know. She did not know what Mr. Betts did in the office.

WANTS A RECOUNT.

Eugene F. DeNormandie Has Asked for It in All Wards.

Eugene F. DeNormandie, one of the Ward Five candidates for Representative to the General Court, who was apparently defeated by 16 votes for the Republican nomination at the caucuses, has notified the various caucus secretaries today that he desires a recount of the votes for Representatives.

Mr. DeNormandie has proceeded under the caucus act of 1898, Chap, 11, Section 98.

Under this section recounts are to be made by the chairman and secretary of the caucus, in the presence of candidates or their agents.

Coal Going Higher.

It is predicted that within a week coal will be quoted at $25 per ton. Many probably noticed in a Boston paper yesterday that a Boston man had purchased 100 tons in Manchester, N. H., for $15. per ton. The gentleman was C. T. Anderson, well known in Quincy, who reports that he has sold it all at wholesale for $20.

Some coal dealers refuse to sell more than a ton of coal to a retail customer at $15 per ton, yet they will sell fifty or more tons to an out of town dealer at less than $15.

Braintree Likely to Have a New Large Industry.

At a meeting of the Citizens of Braintree, very largely attended, held on Monday evening September 22, 1902, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved: That we, as citizens of the Town of Braintree, extend to the directors of the corporation contemplating the establishment of a manufacturing plant on the water front of our town, a most hearty welcome; that we assure them, we shall on all occasions show our good will towards them and use our influence in all legitimate ways to forward their enterprise and to demonstrate that Braintree is the best town and has the best location in Massachusetts for their industry that could be selected.

The following committee of twelve was selected to co-operate with the present committee representing the town, to the end that all possible efforts may be made to induce the directors of the corporation in question to establish its works in our town:

Philip H. Sullivan
George O. Wales
Thomas A. Watson
B. Herbert Woodsum
Elmer E. Abercrombie
Joel F. Sheppard
Benjamin F. Dyer
Albion C. Drinkwater
John Kelley
Henry W. Mansfield
Will W. Mayhew
George E. Hussey.

This new corporation ask no favors of Braintree except her good will. They employ over 700 men, do an annual business of $1,500,000, and have no stock for sale. Braintree should be pleased to have them locate at "Seven Oaks" East Braintree.

The reason why this large growing corporation desires this ideal location is on account of the water privileges, the proximity to the works of the Fore River Ship and Engine Co., and the possibility of excellent railroad accommodations.

Braintree is unanimous in welcoming the company to East Braintree.

Brockton's Carnival.

The Brockton Fair, which has been aptly called "the queen of the fall festivals," will be the great outdoor attraction on September 30 and October 1, 2 and 3 this year.

This annual outdoor entertainment is the best in New England and probably in the country. The managers of the Brockton Fair spend money lavishly to keep their fair ever a little better than it was the year before, and they agree to surpass all efforts this time.

On the last day a novel attraction to many will be a firemen's muster, at which some of the best hand engines in New England will throw streams for prizes aggregating $1000.

The horse show, handsomer and more complete than ever; the vaudeville show, varied and sensational and costly; the trotting and pacing, in which some of the fastest campaigners in the country are entered; a "human torpedo" parachute drop; three superb bands; a fine agricultural fair; the lively scenes on the Midway: the crowd, an attraction in itself (over 50,000 persons on the big days)—all these are good reasons why you shouldn't miss the Brockton Fair.

A REMARKABLE SECT.

Strange Mania of the Doukhoborsti In Canada.

THINK IT SINFUL TO EAT MEAT.

Religious Ideas of Russian Colonists In Manitoba May Cause Them to Perish This Winter—They Turn Their Animals Out to "God's Hill" and Will Not Use Them In Farm Work.

A special to the New York Times from Yorktown, Manitoba, says: Strange fancies sometimes take possession of religious sects, but the strangest of all is probably the distressing mania that has enthralled 5,000 Russian Doukhoborsti, who have located in western Manitoba. In the Swan river district the government is apprehensive for the remarkable craze that has taken possession of those colonists.

It is well known that the Doukhoborsti are adverse to shedding blood. This is the reason they emigrated from Russia, and it is also the reason why the Canadian government exempted them from military duty as inducement for their location on the prairie lands of the west. As to what they should eat, this was purely a personal matter; but, as it appears, it was one of the features that was overlooked by the government that will cause immense trouble.

In this country a man may eat what he chooses, and if his religion dictates that he shall conform to a vegetable diet such beliefs are respected. All might have been well had this state of affairs been confined to vegetarianism, but the Doukhoborsti religion does not appear to be a finished product. It has been constantly undergoing changes. From the belief that it was a sin to eat meat it seems a long jump to reach the conclusion that it is wrong to eat animal products, but these people have now given up eating milk, butter, cheese, eggs, etc., and the cows, oxen, goats and fowl are increasing and multiplying and waxing fat while the people are on the verge of starvation.

Having reached this absurd position, it was but a step to another and more ridiculous one. If it were wrong to eat the flesh of animals, the same line of reasoning made it comparatively easy to condemn the use of leather harness made from the hides of God's creatures, and then followed the condemnation of woolen clothing, because wool grows on the bodies of sheep, which also belong to the Lord. The next step was still more sweeping in its effect on their economic condition. It was wrong to make servants of any of the lower animals, to use them for beasts of burden or for any other purpose.

They had the courage of their convictions and at once turned out their horses, cattle and sheep, driving them to "God's hill" to forage for themselves, placing all the burdens of farm life on their own shoulders. For all drawing purposes, such as hauling heavy loads on wagons, men take the place of horses and oxen. Twelve or fourteen men hitched to a plow suffice for this purpose, and it is the only method employed by them in the cultivation of the soil. Women, even, are employed in this manner, though when coming into town men only are seen hauling the wagons and buggies. Every day in the streets of Yorktown dozens of men may be seen drawing wagons, hauling what little produce they may have for sale and carrying back to their farms flour and other necessities.

The Doukhoborsti are clad exclusively in cotton clothes and wear rubber boots or shoes knit or woven with binder twine, which they buy for the purpose. Their food consists of bread and water and such vegetables as they grow and wild berries and herbs which they gather. Their farms are neglected and their stock, of which they had much, is running wild in the hills, where it will all die during the winter or be appropriated by those who are not of their religious faith and who will at least give the stock shelter.

With the advent of cold weather starvation and disease must certainly follow, and they appear to know this, for they have been in correspondence with authorities in southern California, Nevada, Arizona and Australia, with a view to emigration to a warmer climate where the conditions would enable them to subsist on the soil without trespassing on the possessions of the animal kingdom. It is needless to say that no one wants them, so they are still in Manitoba, an elephant on the hands of the government that brought them from Russia a few years ago to develop the prairie land of the west.

Kitchener's Autograph Estimate.

That Lord Kitchener's modesty is equaled only by his brusqueness was proved the other day during his stay with Lord Londonderry at Wynyard park, says a London cable dispatch to the New York Herald. The hero of South Africa has been pursued by an army of autograph hunters and snapshotters. Finally to one young man who had served in South Africa Lord Kitchener turned and said impatiently: "Young man, make your own autograph worth something. Mine is worth nothing."

Millionaire John W. Gates is neither so old nor so wealthy as Millionaire Russell Sage, but he gets a swifter run for his money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

FILTHY MECCA.

The Holy City Is the Dirtiest Spot In All Islam.

Mecca, the holy city of the faith, is called by many names. Some call it "the Mother of Purity," "the Citadel of Arabs," "the Holy Mosque." Others speak of it as "the Mother of Compassion," "the Supreme Sanctity," "the Guardian Angel of Ajem." The devout never utter the word Mecca without adding to it some adjective of praise, such as "the blessed," "the exalted," "the great," "the highly esteemed," and so on. The town itself is about two miles in length and one mile in breadth.

The dirtier the pilgrim keeps himself the more respected he is as a pious Moslem. Consequently Mecca, being as it is the most sacred city of the faith, is literally the filthiest in Islam. The most important streets measure about ten yards in width. The rest are mere lanes, wonderfully and picturesquely crooked and some six feet wide. The streets were crowded with tents, camels, mules, asses, horses, pariah dogs and a motley crowd of pilgrims, unspeakably disheveled and unwashed, while the lanes were absolutely filled with every kind of offal and refuse. Mecca, which lies in a hollow, would be a regular cesspool were it not for the pariah dogs, lean, snarling brutes of a bright yellowish color, that serve the purpose of scavengers, and the fierce, dry, Arabian sun that is the sole sanitary inspector in the country. The din the dogs make at night is indescribable. A pack of jackals would be quiet in comparison.

Hair Needs Exercise.

One reason why so many men are bald, according to a foreign medical journal, is because they allow their hair to die through want of exercise. Under the skin which covers the head are several muscles, it explains, and these are never stirred into activity, the result being that they do not perform their proper function, and consequently the skin is insufficiently nourished and the hair gradually dies.

"Women," it continues, "do not become bald, and the reason is because they spend much more time combing and arranging their hair than men do. During this operation the skin on the head is stirred into activity, and as a result the muscles remain active and the hair flourishes.

"It is evident, therefore, that the best way to prevent baldness is to rub the skin frequently and vigorously, for unless this is done the muscles will be unable to supply it with the proper amount of nourishment."

John Randolph's Appearance.

Washington Irving when secretary of legation in London was much amused at the rollicking good humor with which William IV. began his reign, and he once tried to give a lesson in dignity to the Duke of Sussex. He had to accompany an eccentric friend of meager and limping figure, who persisted in wearing an extraordinary nondescript garb instead of the prescribed court dress to St. James'. The ushers demurred; the foreign minister smiled. The Duke of Sussex stopped Irving as he passed and whispered, moving his thumb jerkingly up and down, "Who's your friend Hoky Poky?" "That, sir," replied Irving emphatically, "is John Randolph, United States minister to Russia and one of the most distinguished orators of America." It was all in vain. Some time afterward Irving was dining with the duke, whose first laughing inquiry was, "And how is our friend Hoky Poky?"—Temple Bar.

Mackay and Florence.

On one occasion William J. Florence at the end of a not very prosperous engagement in San Francisco announced a benefit for himself and his wife. John W. Mackay happened to be in town at the time and wrote to Florence for one orchestra seat. It was duly sent, as a matter of course, and Mrs. Florence remarked to her husband that, considering the friendship existing between the two men, she thought Mr. Mackay might have taken a private box at least. "Wait," said Florence, "he has not paid yet, and I am in no hurry." The benefit took place, Mr. Mackay came from Virginia City to occupy the seat he had taken, and a day later he sent Florence a check for $1,000.

Kindly Disposed.

The man who had dropped in to see him was smoking a cheap cigar.

"I think you will find it comfortable," said Uncle Allen Sparks pleasantly, "if you'll sit over there by that open window. There is no draft from it, as you will see from the fact that the smoke from your cigar goes out through it."—Chicago Tribune.

VIA THE HOOSAC.

A Beautiful Trip to New York City Down the Hudson River.

"The Hoosac Country," the "Deerfield Valley," the "Berkshire Hills" and the "Hudson River" comprise the territories in the East where delightful scenery and natural grandeur is seen at its best. To do adequate justice to any one of these superior sections would require a volume, and then it would not be justly appreciated, for a visit is the only way to really learn its merits and estimate its grandeur.

Starting from Boston, October 2, the tourist passes through historic Cambridge, Waltham, Concord and any number of interesting towns, journeying along until he reaches that ever favored and sightly section, the Deerfield valley, a snug retreat close to the Hoosac mountain, entrance to which is gained by means of that mighty structure, the Hoosac Tunnel.

On reaching the tunnel, the cars are lighted and immediately darkness, as of night, envelops the passenger, accompanied by the noisy din of the train as the echo in this mountainous cavern rebounds on the ear. At length the train emerges and the bright light of day at first seems to dazzle the beholder but immediately he grows accustomed and perceives scenery, and such scenery as might gladden the heart of any tourist, the Hoosac mountains in all their mighty majesty rise upon each side, the high peaks of Greylock and the Taconic range towering above the rest and showing more prominently because of the view of the Berkshires which greet the sight-seerer on his arrival at Williamstown, the seat of Williams College and situated in the heart of these famous hills.

After leaving Williamstown, the trip to Albany, N. Y., is through a territory whose scenic conditions are unmatched save by the territory just traversed. Arriving at Albany, the capital of New York state, and one of the most interesting, and at the same time, one of the handsomest residential cities in the East, there is much to see. The boulevards and long and wide streets lined with sumptuous residences, the Capitol, one of the greatest buildings in the country, and a score of other sights and scenes are here to interest and instruct the visitors.

Leaving Albany the trip continues down the Hudson River, that famed of famous regions, where Irving, Cooper and a dozen other writers derived inspiration for their tales and narratives. On the west side are the palisades, a sight to be viewed by every tourist; the beautiful "Catskill Mountains," the home of Rip Van Winkle, and in the distance the giant Adirondacks. On the eastern shore are the historic towns of Fishkill, Poughkeepsie, etc., while on the other shore are "West Point," Newburgh, Cornwall and a dozen other interesting villages and haunts. The autumn foliage gives an appearance to this region far more beautiful than the summer garb, and early in October is the time to enjoy it. If the trip down the Hudson is taken on the night boat, the loss of the scenery is almost made up by the pretty appearance of the nearby shores as the flashing searchlight from the steamer is turned on them.

When the traveler arrives at New York City, his destination, enjoyment and amusement at the great Metropolis can be had to his heart's content.

This is the excursion which the Boston & Maine Railroad will run on October 2d leaving Boston on special train at 8.55 A. M., arriving in Albany at 3.40 P. M., leaving Albany on the steamer "Adirondack" at 8.00 P. M. that night, arriving in New York City at 6. A. M. the following morning, or, if you prefer, stop over night in Albany October 2d, and leave on the steamer "New York" at 8.30 A. M. October 3d, arriving in New York City at 6.00 P. M. the same night. Tickets will be good returning October 3d or 4th via the Fall River Line Steamers. If you desire to stop longer in New York City you can do so by presenting your ticket and $2 at the Fall River Line office pier 19 foot of Warren street, New York City.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

—"Whether you fight or work, don't make too much fuss about it. The noise and sizzle of the locomotive are not force. All force is silent. Bear in mind that it is the empty wagon that rattles most when in motion. The sound of the drum is due to the fact that there is nothing in it."

INDIAN SEEKS SENATORSHIP

Congressman Curtis of Kaw Tribe Would Go Up Higher.

An Indian is now a candidate for a seat in the United States senate. He is Congressman Charles Curtis of Kansas. Through a most romantic career he has climbed the ladder of fame from a poor Indian lad to a position of prominence among national lawmakers. He started out in life as a jockey on the race track, then trained broncos, drove a hack, swept out a law office in pay for an opportunity to study law, was admitted to the bar, elected county attorney and then went to congress.

Mr. Curtis, says the Omaha World-Herald, belongs to the aboriginal race and is proud of the fact that his Indian forbears were here when Columbus thought he was discovering a new world. His mother was a member of the Kaw tribe. Mr. Curtis' mother died when he was about three years old, and he went to live with his Indian grandmother near Council Grove, Kan. This Indian grandmother is mentioned in the treaty with the Kaw tribe in 1825.

By this treaty she and her sisters were given what is known as "Kaw Mile Four," the tract of land upon which the city of North Topeka is now built. In the homestead on this tract of land Congressman Curtis was born in 1860, and his fine new house marks the place of his birth forty-two years ago.

Of one incident of his childhood Mr. Curtis has a very vivid memory. He was eight years old and was coming home from school in Council Grove when he saw a war party of naked Kaws, painted and in war feathers, mounted on their ponies, swoop down from a hill overlooking the town and dash through it toward a hill on the other side. Mr. Curtis, urchinlike, wanted to know the why of all this, and one of the chiefs paused long enough to tell him that they were on their way out to fight their hereditary enemies, the Cheyennes, and to hold them back from the town till they could fortify it a little.

In a barn near by a large number of Kaw Indians gathered, and when the Cheyennes swept down through the town they passed this barn. A fierce shower of arrows stopped them, however, and, leaving many of their braves wounded and dying, they retreated, leaving the Kaws victors. This was the last fight between these two tribes. Mr. Curtis' father thought this was rather too strenuous a life for his young son, so he sent for him to go back to Topeka.

DEVERY ON HIS VICTORY.

Declares He Will Occupy No "Cold Seat" In Tammany Hall.

"I've licked them fellers Sheehan an' Goodwin an' done 'em up brown," said ex-Chief of Police Devery to a New York Journal reporter in speaking of his victory in the Democratic primary elections in New York. "They said I wouldn't get no more'n 500 votes. I got close on to 1,700, an' the next time they won't get a look in. Now, I'm a-goin' to be the people's leader. An' I ain't a-goin' to occupy no cold seat in Tammany Hall neither, same as they gave to Sheehan when he was in the Hall. If they try to make the seat cold, I'll make it hot for 'em.

"Now let's see if Hill an' McGuire an' Gene Wood are a-goin' to keep me out of the state convention. I'll be there with both feet an' push in the door if necessary. I won out, even if I was up ag'in the dirtiest, trickiest politician in the state of New York. Sheehan tried all kinds of four flushin' to beat me. Him or his people even went so far as to send out circ'lars forgin' my name to 'em, askin' the people to vote for Sheehan. The people saw through the trick and came out strong for me. Another dirty trick was to frighten off about 600 of my votes by fake challenges an' business men that couldn't get to the polls. Aw, well, forgit it. I'm the leader now, an' it don't make any difference."

A Great Exhibition.

The exhibition to be held in New York under the auspices of the Professional Woman's league promises to be by far the greatest ever undertaken by that organization. An impression of the magnitude of some of these features may be obtained from the statement that on one, a reproduction of a street in Venice, it is intended to expend at least $30,000, writes the New York correspondent of the Pittsburg Dispatch. Agents have been sent to scour the world for novelties of this kind, while many arrangements already made provide for unique methods of conducting the exposition proper. In view of the recent termination of the war in South Africa no booth in the street is likely to be more popular than that typifying the Transvaal. Here will be presented a scene of dreary desolation, a kraal on the side of a sandy kopje, a shot riddled house in the middle distance, a pair of half starved horses being outspanned by a woman, while the others dispute a poor breakfast of mealies with a hungry cur.

Perkins and the Banana Syndicate.

During his short career in Wall street George W. Perkins has probably managed more and larger syndicates than many a banker in a lifetime, says the New York Times. He is very fond of bananas and generally eats some for his noontime luncheon.

The other day he was standing in front of a fruit peddler's cart selecting some large, ripe samples of the fruit when a friend of his came along and hailed him.

"Hello, Perk," he said, "is the syndicate going into bananas?"

"No," replied Perkins laughingly; "but the bananas are going into the syndicate."

Perhaps It's Worms

The worried mother often wonders what ails a child who is cross and languid. She generally treats it for everything but the most probable cause—worms. Over 75 per cent. of the ailments of children can be traced directly or indirectly to worms. You can see the result in the languid looks, irritable disposition, restless sleep, variable appetite. What the child needs is

THE SALAZAR PROTEST

Against McLean's Action Apparently Lacks Foundation

TRAFFIC ON THE ISTHMUS

Would Have Been Interrupted but For the Presence of American Marines—Complaint Has Not Yet Been Submitted to the State Department

Washington, Sept. 27.—So far neither the state department nor the navy department has been informed officially of the protest of the Panama governor. If Governor Salazar, in making the security of the lives and property of foreigners his ground for protest against the presence of the American marines did so on the assumption that the transit was safe against interruption, then the officials here are not inclined to the same view. They point out that there would have been an interruption of traffic on the isthmus on Wednesday, when the 300 insurgents attempted to capture a Colombian officer aboard one of the trains and were only prevented by the presence of the American marines.

Mr. Concha, the Colombian minister, received a cablegram yesterday from Governor Salazar reciting the fact that he had lodged a protest with Commodore McLean regarding the landing of the marines on the isthmus from the Cincinnati, as reported in Thursday's dispatches, the governor regarding Commander McLean's operations as having the appearance of an attempt to exercise acts of sovereignty in Colombian territory.

The legation officials have not been advised whether the governor made application to the United States naval forces for assistance in keeping open the railroad transit or whether this was taken on Commander McLean's own initiative. They are inclined to think it was not altogether the act of landing the marines that has met with the protest and criticism, but rather the manner in which the authority has been exercised, particularly in the disarmament of veteran soldiers of Colombia before permitting their transit over the railroad.

The legation officials do not expect to present Governor Salazar's protest to the state department unless instructions directing such a step be received from the Colombian government. They have contented themselves up to this time in simply presenting to the department a statement of conditions as they appear to exist at Panama, compiled from information they were able to obtain. Their opinion is that matters will be smoothed out without further friction.

Five Stowaways Escaped

Boston, Sept. 27.—When the steamer Cambroman arrived here from Italian ports Monday 13 stowaways were reported to the immigrant officers. Two of these were released, being Americans, and the others ordered returned. The steamer sailed on her return today, and five stowaways have escaped. The steamship company will have to pay a fine of $300 for each escaped stowaway, unless they are found.

Heart Overpowered by Poison

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 27.—Dr. Willard Humphreys, head of the department of German in the university, who took an overdose of chloroform hydrate in an effort to gain relief from a severe toothache, died yesterday. Since Monday morning three physicians and several assistants employed their skill to save the professor, but the heart failed to respond properly.

Russia Fulfilling Agreement

Washington, Sept. 27.—The state department has received a cablegram from Minister Conger at Pekin, stating that the evacuation of Manchuria has been begun by the Russians, who already have returned the railway. It is stated that the territory up the Liao river will be evacuated completely by Oct. 8, as stipulated in the agreement.

Would Not Evict Women

Nantes, Sept. 27.—Commandant Laduric of the Ninteenth infantry, who refused to obey an order to aid in closing unauthorized schools, has been dismissed from the service. Laduric declared that his conscience forbade him to participate in anti-religious measures and evicting women, which he did not consider to be duties of the army.

Mayor Won't Get Salary

Minneapolis, Sept. 27.—Mayor Ames was cut off the September pay roll by the city council last night, despite the advice of the city attorney that the absent executive is entitled to his salary. Mayor Ames tendered his resignation several days ago, but it has not been acted on. He is under indictment on several bribery charges.

Says Police Are Criminals

Philadelphia, Sept. 27.—President Mitchell of the mine workers took up at length the charges of lawlessness on the part of the miners in a speech here last night. He made the counter charge that the operators are guilty of lawlessness in the employment of professional criminals as coal and iron policemen.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Confidence In the Future Not Shaken, Despite the Drawbacks

New York, Sept. 27.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Notwithstanding the disarranged money markets, almost a fuel famine and some damage to crops, industrial and commercial activity continues unabated, and the magnitude of plans for the future indicates that confidence has not been shaken. Injury to crops by frost has no more than offset the increased acreage, while high prices fully compensate producers.

Pressure in the iron and steel industry has been somewhat alleviated by larger receipts of coke and liberal imports of pig iron. Some idle plants have resumed and now operate from day to day with the constant menace of an interrupted movement of fuel, which would suspend operations.

A further slight advance in footwear quotations indicates that healthy demand has made it possible for manufacturers to secure compensation for the recent sharp rise in materials. Most shops have considerable business in sight, and there is a good demand for spring samples.

Although cotton goods are firmly held, the market is quiet, as buyers are content to take only such quantities as are needed for immediate distribution. The situation is not satisfactory for producers, owing to the high price of raw material. It is too early for supplementary orders in men's woolens and worsteds, yet there is some extension of original purchases and the tone of all staple lines is firm, while in some instances advances over opening prices are asked. No concessions are possible in the wool market, which has increased in activity at the east.

Crooked Doings of Police

Minneapolis, Sept. 27.—The trial of former Superintendent of Police Ames, charged with extortion, was begun yesterday. County Attorney Boardman declared that Ames had made an official tour of the tenderloin district and notified the women not to pay any more money to Irwin A. Gardner, now under conviction for bribery. Subsequently, he said, Ames sent word around that the monthly payment to the police was to be made at the pawnshop of one Cohen. Addie Mills, the state's principal witness, told her story, which bore out the county attorney's assertion.

Putting Up the Bars

Montreal, Sept. 27.—Commissioner of Immigration Sargent of the United States has made arrangements with the Canadian Pacific railway to send Chinese only to designated points hereafter to be selected. Those who attempt an unlawful entrance or present unsatisfactory evidence or right to enter will be put on board the steamer which brought them over and sent back to China at the expense of those who brought them.

Death of General Lippitt

Washington, Sept. 27.—General Francis J. Lippitt, a lawyer and veteran of the Mexican and Civil wars, died here yesterday, aged 90. He was born in Providence, was captain of the First New York volunteers in the Mexican, and in the Civil war served as colonel of the Second California infantry. He was breveted a brigadier general. General Lippitt was a well known writer on military topics.

INCREASE OF OFFENSES

By Soldiers Due to Abolition of Army Canteen

THEY YIELD TO TEMPTATION

Offered by Saloons of the Lowest Type Outside of Military and Municipal Control and Give Cause For Many Trials by Court Martial

Washington, Sept. 27.—Brigadier General Funston, in his annual report for the department of the Colorado, points out that the percentage of trials by court martial of enlisted men has nearly doubled during the past year. He says:

It is therefore plain that there has been a deplorable increase of offenses in general and of desertion in particular. In my opinion there are two principal causes for this state of affairs; first, resentment of unaccustomed limitations and restrictions felt by men returning from field service to the monotony and routine work of garrison life; second, the abolition of the canteen feature of the post exchange.

Since this action was taken saloons of the lowest type have been established just outside the boundaries of the various reservations. Their proprietors are, in almost every case, unprincipled scoundrels who leave nothing undone to debauch the soldiers and obtain their money. Being in all cases outside the limits of any city the proprietors of these resorts are subject to no municipal police regulations and sell liquor regardless of hours and whether the buyer is already intoxicated or not.

Gambling is universal in these "dives" and they are frequented by dissolute women. The soldier whose desire for a drink would ordinarily be satisfied by a few glasses of beer in the canteen of the post exchange goes to one of these resorts and does well if he escapes before he has spent or gambled away all his money, overstayed his leave, or engaged in an altercation. As a rule the local authorities regard the existence of these places with indifference or approval as it causes the soldier to spend his money in the community. The efficiency of the army or the ruin of a good soldier is nothing to them.

There can be no reasonable doubt that most of the trials by general court martial and summary courts, at least so far as this department is concerned, are directly traceable to this cause. Since I have had command here there has taken place the ruin and degradation of several non-commissioned officers of long service and fine record. In short, the recent legislation by congress on this question, so far as this department is concerned, has had no effect except to lower the discipline of the army, ruin scores of good soldiers and fill the pockets of a lot of saloonkeepers, gamblers and prostitutes.

No Trace of Blood Poisoning

Indianapolis, Sept. 27.—A microscopic examination of the excretion of President Roosevelt's wound has been completed by experts, who agree that no trace of dangerous matter was found in the serum. The doctors who performed the operation to relieve the abscess on the president's leg expressed the conviction at the time that there was no danger of blood poisoning, but as a matter of precaution the serum was submitted for examination to the three microscopic experts.

The Foss-Adams Fight

Boston, Sept. 27.—When the time for filing petitions with the election commissioners for a recount of votes cast at the recent Republican caucuses expired last night, petitions had been received for a recount in every ward of the Eleventh congressional district, in which a spirited fight for the nomination was made between Foss and Adams with the result that Foss, on the face of the returns, secured 56 delegates to 50 for Adams. The recount will begin on Monday.

Comparatively Quiet Day

Philadelphia, Sept. 27.—No disturbances of moment occurred in the strike region yesterday. There was a small riot at Centralia, where some strikers attacked non-union men who were on their way to the mines, and Sheriff Knorr asked Governor Stone to send troops to quell the disturbance. Thus far no troops have been sent.

A Murderer Murdered

Columbus, Ga., Sept. 27.—At Upatoc last night, during a quarrel, Arthur Comer shot and killed his wife. Shortly afterward J. W. Murphy, Mrs. Comer's father, hearing of his daughter's tragic death, went to Comer's residence and shot him dead with the same weapon Comer had used to kill his wife.

Gaston's Possible Running Mate

Boston, Sept. 27.—Indications now point to the selection of Godfrey Morse of this city as Gaston's running mate on the Democratic state ticket. He has consented to stand if acceptable to Gaston. He was a candidate for nomination in the Eleventh congressional district, but withdrew in interest of harmony.

PURE SUNLIGHT AND AIR.

Places Here Which Shame the Old World's Favored Climes.

We have often heard of "sunny Italy" or the "clear light" of Egypt, says the Desert; but, believe me, there is no sunlight there compared with that which falls upon the upper peaks of the Sierra Madre or the uninhabitable wastes of the Colorado desert.

Pure sunlight requires for its existence pure air, and the old world has little of it left. When you are in Rome again and stand upon that hill where all good Romanists go at sunset, look out and see how dense is the atmosphere between you and St. Peter's dome. That same thick air is all over Europe, all around the Mediterranean, even over in Mesopotamia and by the banks of the Ganges. It has been breathed and burned and battle smoked for 10,000 years.

Ride up and over the high tablelands of Montana—one can still ride there for days without seeing a trace of humanity—and how clear and scentless, how absolutely intangible, that sky blown, sunshot atmosphere! You breathe it without feeling it, you see through it a hundred miles, and the picture is not blurred by it. Once more ride over the enchanted mesas of Arizona at sunrise or sunset, with the ragged mountains of Mexico to the south of you and the broken spurs of the great Sierra around about you, and all the glory of the old shall be as nothing to the gold and purple and burning crimson of this new world.

Movable Drops In Diamonds.

It has long been known that diamonds, especially the class known as "rose diamonds," are likely to explode if subjected only to what would seem a very ordinary degree of heat, such as strong rays from the sun, etc. It is now believed that the explosions are the result of the rapid expansion of certain volatile liquids inclosed in cavities near the center of these precious stones. A great many diamonds, even though cut, mounted and worn as gems of perfection, are still in an unfinished condition—that is, the liquid drop from which the stone is being formed has not as yet deposited all of its "pure crystals of carbon." These movable drops may occasionally be seen with the naked eye.

When this is the case, a strong microscope will give the drop the appearance of a bubble in the fluid of a carpenter's level. It is also highly probable that besides the liquid mentioned these cavities may contain gases under great tension. This being the case, one may readily comprehend how a very small amount of heat would cause the liquid and gas to expand to such a degree that the diamond would give way with all the characteristics of a miniature explosion.

Something He Had Forgotten.

"So you enjoyed your continental trip, did you?" inquired the simple old gentleman. "I haven't been over in fifty years, but my recollections are still vivid. I remember once standing on Mont Blanc, watching the sun sink behind the blue waters of the Mediterranean, while to my right the noble Rhine rushed onward to the Black sea, and the Pyrenees, still holding the snows of winter, were on the left. I remember while standing there"—

"But, Mr. Grey," feebly interrupted his listener, "I was on Mont Blanc myself, and really—you'll excuse me—but you really must be mistaken in your geography."

"Mistaken?" returned the old man lightly. "Not a bit of it. But I forgot; it's different now. You know, my dear boy, that since my day the entire map of Europe has been changed by these awful wars, and so of course you can't appreciate what it was fifty years ago."

Ancestry of Shoemaking.

There is nothing vulgar about the ancestry of the shoemaking trade in the United States. The first shoemaker came over in the Mayflower. His name was Thomas Beard, and he had an income from the London company of $100 a year and received fifty acres of land on which to settle. Seven years later the city of Lynn was founded, and ever since it has been making shoes for the world. Philip Kertland, a native of Buckinghamshire, was the first shoemaker of the city of Lynn. In George Washington's day Lynn had 200 master workmen and 600 journeymen shoemakers, turning out every year no less than 300,000 pairs of fine shoes.

Navigating the Elbe.

A curious means of moving boats is employed on the river Elbe—a chain 290 miles long at the bottom of the stream, which is too swift to navigate in the usual way. The boats are 180 feet long and provided with 200 horsepower steam engines which turn a drum fastened on the deck. The chain comes in over the bow, passing along on rollers to the drum, around which it is wound three times. The chain is then carried to the stern, where it drops back into the water. The steamers tow five barges containing 1,500 tons.

Logical.

"I could have married either Whipper or Snapper if I'd wanted to, and both of those men whom I refused have since got rich, while you are still as poor as a church mouse."

He—Of course. I've been supporting you all these years. They haven't.

Two Signs.

"To snuff a candle out accidentally is a sign of marriage."

"Yes, and to turn down a lamp intentionally is a sign of courtship."

Perhaps the reason a woman doesn't keep a secret is because she's afraid some other woman will tell it first.—Chicago News.

Trolleys to the Blue Hills.

Whatever may be the difference between rival companies or the people of Milton as to the route to be followed, there seems to be no question, says the Transcript editorially, that something should be done to open the Blue Hills Reservation to the trolley lines. The most beautiful part of this great public reservation has practically been beyond the touch of the people. Access has been possible from Readville or in the summer months by park carriages from the Brockton trolley line, and the owners of private carriages have had the park at their disposal at all times, but this does not meet the purposes for which this most varied of all the park reservations in the neighborhood of Boston was established.

The address of President Elliot before the American Park and Outdoor Art Association admirably summarized the lines on which the development of public parks should proceed. The principle is in brief that of bringing the parks nearer the people by utilizing the cheaper means of communication. As it is impossible to secure such large natural areas of park lands near the homes of the people who would enjoy them most, the remedy is to open the great woodland parks to the people by means of electric lines. That this can be done without spoiling the natural beauties of the parks has been proved in other instances.

That the people of Milton are in favor of electric communication between the park and Boston has been proved by an overwhelming vote upon the question, and the securing of a reserved space in the boulevard could have but one intention. For some years the people of Milton and of Boston have been wating to see the opening of an electric line which should afford direct entry to the reservation. The matter is now in the hands of the Railroad Commissioners, and there should be no further unnecessary delay. There should be a line of electrics which will take the people of Boston directly to the entrances of Blue Hills Reservation, and whatever line may be selected, or whatever company may have the privilege, the line should be completed as soon as possible that the people may come into their own.

Boys' Brigade.

On September 16th the Boys' Brigade of Atlantic elected their commissioned officers for the year, and on September 23d examinations were held for non-commissioned officers. Owing to the promotion of Captain George Geekie to the Regimental staff and the sad death of Sergeant A. P. Wilde, the company had two vacancies to fill.

The new officers in Co. B, 3d Regiment are as follows:

First Lieut. David G. Moffatt promoted to Captain; Second Lieut. Russell G. Hammond promoted to be 1st Lieutenant; Second Sergeant M. L. Blake to be First Sergeant; Corporal S. W. Nichols to be Second Sergeant; Sergeant Chas. N. Kolstad remains Third Sergeant; Corporal Horace Jenkins remains Corporal; Corporal George Coleman remains Corporal; Private Wm. G. Geekie to be Corporal.

Instead of having military drills one night each week as has been the custom, they are going to have each month two nights for military drill; one night for religious meeting, and one or two nights for civil government or debating.

Mr. Chas. Alden, president of the Quincy Common Council, will have charge of the civil government and debating.

The Rev. J. H. Whitaker will hold the religious exercises.

Commander Walter F. Blake is military instructor.

—The magnitude of the Escurial, the great Spanish palace, may be inferred from the fact that it would take four days to go through all the rooms and apartments, the length of the way being reckoned at 23 Spanish leagues, which is about 120 English miles.

BRAINTREE.

The W. R. C., No. 102 of East Braintree and Weymouth, visited the Soldiers' Home at Chelsea, Tuesday. Upon their arrival they were met by the matron and escorted through the several departments where all the comforts of home were apparent. After lunch the corps and veterans convened in the assembly hall where a fine musical and literary program was furnished by the corps. Those participating were Mrs. Nellie Nolan Carroll and Mr. P. J. Fennell with Miss Cate as accompanist, Mrs. J. Morrill, S. V. P.; Mrs. Flora Bicknell, P. P., Mrs. F. A. Richards, President Ladies' Aid, Mrs. Andrew Cully, P. P., and Mrs. B. J. Loring. This corps is noted for its excellent entertainments and benevolence to all mankind.

The school committee and school teachers of Braintree are indebted to President T. A. Watson of the Fore River Ship and Engine Co. for special invitations to the launching of the Des Moines.

The Democratic Representative Convention for the Sixth Norfolk District (Braintree and Weymouth) was held at eight o'clock Thursday, Sept. 25th, at the Town Hall, Braintree.

A full delegation was present and Horace R. Drinkwater was nominated by acclamation for re-election.

Mrs. George W. Clapp of West street has gone to Concord, N. H.

Mrs. Josiah Holbrook has been very sick the past week but is now on the road to recovery.

The subject of Rev. Mr. Norton's sermon at the South Congregational church last Sunday was: "Thou shalt love."

The following engineers and friends from Braintree attended the meeting of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers in Waterville, Me., last Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. M.T. Call, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Call, Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Lane, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Tirrell, Mr. and Mrs. George Burnham, Mrs. Louis Tirrell, Mr. William J. Tirrell, Mr. L. M. Howard, Mr, George H. Rowell, Mr. Cyrus Fenderson.

Mrs. H. A. Penniman went with the Field Class in Geology to Waverley last Saturday. The lecture by Prof. George H. Barton was on "Stream action, water-falls and headwaters," and was illustrated on the spot.

Mrs. Page and daughter Kate of Franklin street attended the wedding of Charles S. Page and Miss Carrie Stevenson in Mattapan, Wednesday evening.

Mr. C. W. Studley of West street is confined to his bed on account of an accident which came to him Thursday morning in East Milton. He was stepping into his milk team when the accident happened. His bruises are on the back and left arm.

Rev. F. R. Griffin will exchange pulpits Sunday with Rev. E. C. Butler of the First church, Quincy.

Dr. Ernest Wales has been appointed Resident Physician in the Eye and Ear Infirmary, Boston, beginning Oct. 1st.

Alfred Southworth, George H. Arnold and Rev. F. R. Griffin attended the annual Universalist state convention at Worcester last Wednesday.

Mr. MacDougall, our new superintendent of schools, is organizing a new course of study to be immediately adopted.

Brockton's Festival.

The dates for the Brockton Fair are Sept. 30, Oct. 1,2,3. This is called the greatest and best of all fall festivals, where there is every year every form of outdoor entertainment, and where the horseman, the lover of bicycling, the admirer of vaudeville, the man interested in agriculture, or the woman who cares for the domestic arts, and the mere man of the world who loves to watch a huge and interested crowd, all assemble to enjoy themselves, and go away to come another day. Every year, without fail, the Brockton Fair is a perceptible improvement over all its predecessors. This year will be no exception. In addition to all the other features, on the last day there will be the finest firemen's muster and playout of sporting hand engines seen in New England in years. Lovers of trotting will be interested in some best-two-in-three races for purses aggregating $9,100. Four-horse Roman chariot races on a fast half-mile track will be another novel thriller. The horse show, one of the great features of the fair, will be as fine as ever. A monster balloon will throw out a torpedo, which in turn will emit a human being and drop him to the earth. It would take a column to enumerate all the Brockton Fair attractions. The main thing just now is not to forget the dates.

Teachers' Reception.

A pretty reception was tendered to Mise Alice Gibson, Miss Bertha T. Davis and Miss Ethelwyn Wallace, new teachers in the Braintree High school, by Principal W. E. Severance, Miss Bessie A. Roberts and Miss Miriam A. Thayer (old teachers) in Monatiquot hall last evening.

The corps of teachers received in front of the stage and the following young men assisted as ushers: Louis Hathaway, Clifton Woodsum, Ernest Woodsum, Walter Robbins, George Gammons, Bennie Healey, Roger Lakin, Louis Howland, Norbert Shay and George Billings.

Following the reception dancing was enjoyed, Mr. Stewart Mason of Weymouth presiding at the piano. Fruit punch was served in the alcove by young ladies of the High school. The occasion was well attended and a pleasant evening was the result.

First Game Next Saturday.

The Wollaston Football team has made a good start with its practice. A large number of candidates for positions on the team have come out this week. The material now in the field promises well for a successful season.

The first game will be with Hingham A. A. on October 4th in Merrymount Park. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance at the first game to give the team strong support both financially and otherwise.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Wormwood's dog and monkey circus will be continued as the novelty feature of the Keith vaudeville the week of Sept. 29. Other attractions will be: R. J. Jose, the favorite contra tenor vocalist; Eddie Girard and Jessie Gardner, in the eccentric comedy, singing and dancing sketch, "The Cop and the Soubrette;" the English Pony Ballet, a double quartet of novelty dancers; Hollis and Howard, in illustrated songs; the SaVans, in an Irish dialect comedy sketch; Mon. Hellman, clever magician and illusionist, and Yackley and Bunnell, musical comedians. This is one of the best lists of entertainers put forward for some time.

PARK THEATRE.

The change of bill at the Park theatre beginning Monday, Sept. 29, will bring forward Robert Buchanan's strong emotional drama, "Alone in London," which has always been well received by Boston playgoers. "The Runaway Wife" has been heartily appreciated by large audiences this week, and the same favor undoubtedly awaits "Alone in London" next week. This play, which is one the best known of Mr. Buchanan's melodramatic successes, will then receive its first stock company production in Boston. The cast will be an excellent one, and will include all the leading members of Mr. Payton's stock company.

"Alone in London" will be followed week after next by Frank Harvey's popular drama, "Women Against Woman."

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The selection of the modern society comedy "The Importance of Being Earnest," as the attraction at the Castle Square Theatre next week ensures a series of most amusing performances for its patrons. The play will be recalled as one of the brilliant successes of the Empire Theatre company, of New York, a half dozen seasons ago, and commendable enterprise has been shown by the Castle Square Theatre management in securing its first production at popular prices. The story of the play deals with duel indentitles in the most amusing way and its scenes and incidents are constantly mirth provoking. Two love stories are woven into the plot and the epigrams of the play have been compared to those of the Sheridan period. The several characters have been assigned as follows: John Worthing, John Craig; Algernon Moncrieff, George E. Mack; Rev. Canon Chasuble, John T. Craven; Merrimam, William J. Hasson; Lane, Lindsay Morison; Lady Bracknell, Jane Irving; Hon. Gwendolen Fairfax, Lillian Lawrence; Cecily Cardew, Mary Sanders; Miss Prism, Leonora Bradley. The usual distribution of boxes of choice chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

"The Sign of the Cross," Wilson Barrett's spectacular drama of Rome and the persecution of the early Christians, comes to Boston Music Hall Monday the 29th. This unique play has made a profound impression among priests and clergymen, both in England and in America. Probably no drama ever written has attracted so much attraction among people who do not as a rule attend theatrical performances. The scene is laid in Rome at the time when Nero's progligate luxury and inhuman cruelty were furnishing material for some of the blackest pages of the world's history. While the piece teaches a strong lesson of the beauty of the Christian faith, it is full of powerful scenes and incidents and magnificent stage effects. The company is under the management of Mr. Fred G. Berger, who was for years associated with the late Sol Smith Russell, and it is the only one presenting the play in America. Mr. Berger has bought the American rights of the piece and the production, both as regards the excellence of the company and the beauty and completeness of the scenery, costumes and appointments, is fully up to the high standard set by Wilson Barrett when he presented it at the Lyric Theatre, London, where it was the leading theatrical attraction of the English metropolis for over two years.

STORY BY MITCHELL

Refutes Utterances of Coal Operators' Spokesman

SAYS THEY ARE INCORRECT

Regarding Fair and Just Wages, the Number of Working Hours and the Restriction of Output by the Miners —No Malice Toward Employers

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 29.—Some of the local coal operators, after being shown a copy of the statement issued by President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers yesterday, say it will be probably the last he will give to the public before the ending of the strike. They claim his appeal is made up of generalities and that he endeavors to win public sympathy by making a plea for child labor. One operator said the condition of child labor in the coal region is much better than it is in the manufacturing districts of the country; that the wages paid are better and the working hours short. At strike headquarters Mr. Mitchell's latest deliverance is termed a "ten strike," and that the facts and figures he presents are irrefutable.

At strike headquarters it is claimed that there will be no change in the situation this week, which is the 21st of the strike; that the strikers are as firm as ever and that there will be no desertions from the ranks to make it possible for the coal companies to start up any new collieries. President Mitchell's statement says, in part:

"It is not my intention to point out the innumerable instances in which Mr. Baer has erred in statement and allegation. Mr. Baer states 'that the wages paid in the anthracite coal regions are, compared with the wages paid in like employment, fair and just.' By 'like employment' Mr. Baer must refer to bituminous coal mining. I am willing and prepared to demonstrate that wages in the bituminous coal fields are from 20 to 40 percent higher than those paid for similar classes of work in the anthracite fields. Moreover, the anthracite mine worker labors under the further disadvantage of being more liable to be killed or injured, the casualties being 50 percent greater in the anthracite than in the bituminous mines.

"There are other statements of Mr. Baer which are equally incorrect; among these is his assertion that 'the miners only worked from four to six hours per day;' and his further assertion 'that the lowest scale of wages was 85 cents for boy slate pickers.' If Mr. Baer desires I shall gladly furnish him with the names and addresses of thousands of slate pickers, each of whom received much less than 85 cents per day, and I shall be willing to have the returns verified by the companies' pay rolls.

"The next misstatement of Mr. Baer to which I shall give notice is that which claims that 'for some mysterious reason' the miners restricted the output of the mines. Mr. Baer claims that in this manner the product of the collieries has been reduced about 12½ percent, and that in the case of the Reading company it amounted to more than 1,000,000 tons.' The fact is that instead of a loss of 1,000,000 tons there was an increase in the year 1901, from the mines operated by the Reading company, of 838,243 tons; and a total increase from all the anthracite mines of 9,000,000 tons. (See report of Pennsylvania state bureau of mines.) Even a paper so avowedly and bitterly hostile to the Mine Workers' union as the Engineering and Mining Journal admits that 'virtually the only restriction on output was a shortage of cars.'

"Since the very inception of this strike the aims, objects and ideals of the United Mine Workers of America have been wilfully distorted by a small army of critics. We therefore take this opportunity to repeat specifically that we do not seek to interfere with the management of the coal properties or with the proper discipline of the working force; but we do demand:

"First—An increase in wages for men employed on piece work.

"Second—A reduction in the hours of labor for men employed by the day.

"Third—Payment for a legal ton of coal.

"Fourth—That the coal we mine shall be honestly weighed and correctly recorded; and

"Fifth—We favor incorporating in the form of an agreement the wages that shall be paid and the conditions of employment that shall obtain for a specific period. As to the reasonableness of these demands we have proposed to submit to and abide by the award of an impartial board of arbitration.

"There could be no grosser perversion of truth than the assertion of the operators that the Mine Workers' union is a lawless organization. During the past 20 weeks the whole power of the union has been exerted to preserve the peace among a voluntarily idle population of 750,000, and it is a tribute to the activity of our officers and the loyalty and self-restraint of our members that we have been more successful in allaying violence than the coal and iron police in inciting it. The officers of the union are as severe as the operators in their earnest condemnation of any and every act of violence upon the part of a striker.

"The public should be made aware, however, that the operators and a certain section of the press are by no means discriminating in the fixing of responsibility, and that crimes of violence are laid at the doors of strikers when the imported guardians of law and order, the armed coal and iron police, are clearly and unmistakeably at fault.

"Mr. Baer assumes that the pumpmen, engineers and firemen were called out 'so that 'the mines would be destroyed and with their destruction 140,000 men with their wives and children dependent upon their labors would be deprived of work for a long time.' The truth is that the strike of the pumpmen, engineers and firemen was called in their own interest absolutely, and by their own request.

"Mr. Baer states that 40 percent of the coal produced is sold in the market below the cost of mining; but he fails to say that the larger portion of this 40 percent is made up of grades of coal for which the miners received no compensation whatever. Indeed, up to a few years ago, or before the installation of the washeries, the miners were docked for loading this very coal which brings small prices now in the market.

"Mr. Baer claims that the average pay per working day in his mines is $1.89. Admitting, for the sake of argument, the correctness of his figures, this would make, upon the average number of working days in 1901, a grand annual total of $368 per employe, or an average of $7.05 per week; thus, as a result of the strenuously opposed and bitterly regretted advance wrung from the operators by the strike of 1900, the average adult employe of the Reading Coal and Iron company is permitted to spend upon himself, his wife and his children the munificent sum of $1.01 per day.

"In closing this statement I desire to say that we have entered and are conducting this struggle without malice and without bitterness; we believe that our antagonists are acting upon misrepresentation rather than in bad faith; we regard them not as enemies but as opponents, and we strike in patience until they shall accede to our demands or submit to impartial arbitration the differences between us. We are striking not to show our strength, but the justice of our cause, and we desire only the privilege of presenting our case to a fair tribunal. We ask not for favors, but for justice, and we appeal our case to the solemn judgment of the American people.

"Involved in this fight are questions weightier than any question of dollars and cents. The present miner has had his day; he had been oppressed and ground down; but there is another generation coming up, a generation of little children prematurely doomed to the whirl of the mill and the noise and blackness of the breaker. It is for these little children we are fighting. It was with a quaking of hearts that we asked for our last pay envelopes; but in the grimy and bruised hand of the miner was the little white hand of a child, a child like the children of the rich, and in the heart of the miner was the soul-rooted determination to starve to the last crust of bread and fight out the long dreary battle to win a life for the child and secure for it a place in the world in keeping with advancing civilization."

New York, Sept. 29.—Petitions are being circulated throughout the country by the members of the various organizations comprising the American Federation of Catholic societies asking President Roosevelt to use his good offices to end the coal strike. The petition does not ask the president to interfere in a political way. It simply asks him to use his good offices as the first citizen in the land to bring about a settlement.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Rev. Robert L. Nourse, who was stricken with paralysis in the pulpit of the First Congregational church at Washington several weeks ago, died at his home in Falls Church, Va. He was 82 years old and was widely known as a lecturer and campaign orator.

Sidney L. Willson, United States pension agent at Washington, is dead. He was appointed by President Arthur. He served during the Civil war in the Union army and lost both legs at Gettysburg.

The badly mangled body of an unknown man about 35 years old was found beside the track at Salem, Mass. From papers found in the pocket it is believed his name was Napoleon Revet.

Ernio Johnson, professional bicyclist, committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart at his home at Cleveland.

Captain John Mullin, a retired Salem, Mass., shipmaster, is dead, after a long illness. He was born in Salem in 1825. He had commanded many vessels.

The death occurred at Hampton, N. H., of Trial Justice Charles M. Lamprey, a prominent man in town affairs. He was 69 years of age. He was a writer of some note and an authority on local history and traditions.

THE BONE IS EXPOSED

In Another Operation on President's Leg

SURGEONS USE THE KNIFE

Because of Rise In Patient's Temperature and Increase In Local Symptoms—No Evidence of Blood Poisoning—Speedy Recovery Predicted

Washington, Sept. 29.—Another operation was performed yesterday on the abscess on the left leg of President Roosevelt. In the former operation a simple needle was used to relieve the trouble, but yesterday the surgeons with a knife made an incision into the small cavity, exposing the bone, which was found to be slightly affected. The president's case has been progressing satisfactorily, but it is believed by the physicians that the further operation will hasten his complete recovery.

While none of the doctors is willing to be quoted, they give the most positive assurances that there is not the least cause for alarm, and say that there is every indication of a speedy recovery; that the area of bone affected is very slight and will not result in any impairment of the president's limb, and that there is no evidence whatever of any matter that would produce blood poisoning. They confidently expect that the president will be on his feet within a reasonable time and with his robust constitution to assist recovery soon will be himself again.

Dr. Newton M. Shaffer of New York, a bone specialist, joined the president's physicians in their morning consultation yesterday. It was noticed that there had been a slight rise in the president's temperature and a slight increase in local symptoms, and the conclusion was reached the the patient's recovery would be hastened by making an incision of the wound for the purpose of relieving the slight tension of swelling which was present and also to drain the wound.

The operation was performed between 2 and 3 o'clock in the afternoon. An application of cocaine was used to allay the pain. The president stood the operation very well and subsequently expressed his satisfaction at the successful result. Dr. Rixey, surgeon general of the navy, performed the operation, assisted by Dr. Lung, the president's regular physician. Besides Dr. Shaffer, Dr. O'Reilley, surgeon general of the army; Dr. Stitt, in charge of the naval museum of hygiene and medical school, and Dr. Urie were in consultation.

The physicians take a roseate view of the president's prospects for getting out again. He has become somewhat restive because of his close confinement and the physicians are considering the advisability of permitting him to take a ride in a few days. The physicians say the question is now simply one of the healing of the wound and reiterate that this will be hastened by the operation performed yesterday.

Dr. Shaffer called at the temporary White House last night for a special visit and found the president in the best of spirits. The doctor remained in Washington over night. Late in the evening Dr. Shaffer, while he declined to discuss generally the president's case, authorized the statement that there need not be the least cause for anxiety or alarm regarding his condition, but said he could give every assurance of the belief that the president would soon recover.

Warm Welcome For Sverdrup

Christiana, Sept. 29.—Escorted by warships and numerous pleasure steamers Captain Sverdrup's Arctic expedition, on the Fram, entered Christiana harbor yesterday. The Fram was saluted by the fort and welcomed by thousands of spectators as she entered the harbor. President Markham of the Royal Geographical society of Great Britain, who is now here, regards Captain Sverdrup's expedition as the most important since the Franklin Arctic expedition.

Meetings Won't Mine Coal

Boston, Sept. 29.—Mayor Collins, in a statement given to the press, declares the coal famine to be the greatest peril Boston has faced in many years. He adds that he knows of no remedy. Public meetings, he said, would pass resolutions, but such would not mine a pound of coal.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The cost of living will be high this winter, but that is no reason for worrying oneself into nervous prostration. Look your prospects in the face, make your plans wisely, retrench where you can, live simply, shut up such part of the house as can't be heated, and keep a song in your heart and serenity on your brow.—New Bedford Standard.

☞ If Mr. Schwab of the United States Steel corporation really wishes to have a good rest he should dismiss his train of servants, stop doing things to astonish the natives of the countries he visits and get back to some quiet town in Pennsylvania and live as he used to live before he had more than enough money for a bare living. A return to accustomed conditions of plain living is the best rest for a man who has risen rapidly to power and responsibility.—Boston Transcript.

☞ That is rather a radical proposition of the Boston parson that the United States shall "take the coal fields by eminent domains," and run the mines as a public function. Such utterances are easier made than carried out, and it may be asserted with confidence that such a step would be beset by grave legal difficulties under our constitution, forbidding as it does the taking of private property by congress except by "due process of law." The right of eminent domain has not yet been exercised in this drastic manner, and if the attempt were made, it would be fought by the owners with a very fair prospect of success.—Lowell Courier.

☞ Abram S. Hewitt, who is a friend of the coal operators, has recently been quoted as saying that "if the same spirit of sacrifice which has sent our missionaries into every heathen land had been shown in the coal regions and the same efforts had been made to establish and maintain the school house, the church, and above all, the Sunday school, if the hospital for the sick and the comfortable refuge for the unfortunate had been carefully provided, if reading rooms and night schools and rational places of amusement had from the outset been maintained for a growing and restless population, the coal regions today might have been a paradise on earth instead of a disgrace to civilization."

True, perhaps, but whose the blame? Surely not the coal miners, for they have never had the opportunity to provide these things. Surely not the benevolent and philanthropic men of the country, for they have been told during the last few months that the affairs in the coal regions were none of their business. Whose the blame, but the men "to whom God in his infinite wisdom has given control of the property interests there." Mr. Hewitt should preach his sermon to a congregation of coal barons.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ The Quincy bowling alleys on Granite street have been leased by Messrs. Ferris & Littlefield and are being thoroughly renovated and put in first class condition. In connection with the alleys will be a finely equipped Pool Room with three first-class tables. They will be opened about October 2, and announcement of opening night will be made in these columns. tflwp

WITH GOOD WISHES.

Dinner to James McPhee Who Goes to Bath, Maine.

A very pleasant party of men of the Hull department of the Fore River gathered at the Continental Hotel, Boston, on Saturday evening, the occasion being a dinner and presentation to Mr. James McPhee, late assistant foreman ship fitter, who left the Fore River works for a more lucrative position with Sewall ship building works of Bath, Me.

Dinner was served from 6.30 to 7.30, after which a very pleasant evening entertainment was commenced. A prominent part of the program was the presentation to the guest of the evening, Mr. McPhee, of a beautiful gold watch. The presentation speech was very ably made by Mr. T. Bird, who succeeds to the position left vacant by the resignation of Mr. McPhee. Songs and recitations were then indulged in till about 11.00, after which the party of 58 left for Quincy. Friends of Mr. McPhee were present from Chicago, Philadelphia and Bath, Me.

Mr. L. Ingham was chairman of the committee of arrangements and was assisted by Peter Hynes, G. L. Haupt, T. Bird, D. Scouler and Phil O'Neil.

Thayer Eleven.

The Thayer Academy foot ball team will go to Andover Saturday to play Andover academy.

The football outlook at Thayer is bright at present, as two of last year's regular team and almost the entire second eleven have reported for practice. Although but 18 candidates came out at Capt. Remick's call, nearly all of them have had experience at the game, the greater number having played on one of the academy teams in past years.

Coach Townsend is rapidly getting the aggregation into playing form. The indications are that the team will be rather light, but its speed and experience will doubtless offset its lack of weight.

Capt. Remick will play his position of the past two years, right half-back. Arnold, another academy veteran, will look after right tackle as in past years. Kelly, who captained the second eleven last year, will again bid for quarter-back, and though rather small, he is the leading candidate for the place.

Though the team is not yet picked it will undoubtedly be made up as follows: Shaw, centre; Beals and Whipple, guards; Arnold and White or Vinton, tackles; Shipman and Shea, ends; Kelly or Littlefield, quarter-back; Remick and Kingsbury, half-backs. Full-back is the place in doubt, as Thompson and Uniac are almost equally strong.

New Charges.

Frederick E. Betts, John M. Fisher and Miss Ella E. Bailey were before Commissioner Fisher in the Federal court, Saturday, says the Herald, on the charge of conspiring to use the United States mails in a scheme to defraud. This charge was preferred against these defendents a few weeks ago, long after the first two had been arrested on another charge.

Asst.-Dist.-Atty. Casey asked that the hearing be continued until Oct. 18, as the trial of Fisher and Betts is now going on in the district court, and he wished to have that case disposed of before the new charges, with the new defendant, Miss Bailey, were taken up. His request was granted.

Quincy Laborer Murdered.

Falippo Danedrea, an Italian employed on the Metropolitan sewer at Houghs Neck, was murdered in Boston Saturday night by Gaetano Oteri, an Italian barber at 454 Hanover street. Danedrea, as was his custom, went to Boston at the end of the week, his family residing there.

Trouble arose over a small sum of money which led to the shooting, Oteri fired five shots in all. Death occurred before the injured man reached the hospital. Oteri was arrested.

Danedrea was 43 years old and leaves a widow and three children.

Warren Mitchell.

By the death of Warren Mitchell there has been removed from our midst a young man whose loss will be deeply felt by many outside of his own family. Some of his friends and acquaintances will remember him as the sweet boy singer, who gave his services so cheerfully and derived real pleasure from the thought that he was giving enjoyment to others.

His kindliness, thoughtfulness, gentleness of nature and sweet disposition leave to his family and all his friends "a something glistening in the sun for memory to look back upon."

For Naturalization.

A special session of the District Court of East Norfolk will be held at the court room, Monday evening, Oct. 6, at 7 o'clock by Judge Avery for the naturalization of aliens to accommodate applicants who are unable to attend the regular sessions of the court without interferring with their work.

SWEDISH WEDDING.

Groom Head Rigger at Shipyard--Bride Miss Peterson.

Faxon hall presented a very pretty scene Saturday night with its decorations of palms, ferns and pine boughs, and flags, both American and Swedish. Add to this prettily gowned ladies and the picture is complete.

The occasion for this was the wedding of Mr. Charles Pearson and Miss Clara M. Peterson. The wedding was public as in the mother country and friends of the young people came from far and wide.

Rev. Henry Hanson, pastor of the Swedish Methodist Episcopal church performed the ceremony. Miss Hannah Edholm was maid of honor, Miss Hannah Carstrom, Miss Sigred Chelstrom and Miss Edith Svenson maids of honor. John Pearson was the best man and the ushers were Theodore Hermansen and Oscar Sandberg.

The bride wore a white moire silk with lace and pearl trimmings. The veil was caught up and fastened with orange blossoms and she carried a large bouquet of bride's roses. The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore white and carried pink and white carnations.

After the ceremony the party proceeded to make merry. A wedding supper was served and there were musical selections by an orchestra and vocal selections by Miss Bertha Carlson and Gustaf Livendale, and later dancing. Many presents were given the bride and groom.

The Coal Strike.

An open air meeting was held in City Square Saturday night which was addressed by William Mailey, a coal miner, who was recently in the Pennsylvania strike region.

The speaker said that the Republican party was all at sea regarding the proper way to adjust the present difficulty. Senator Lodge declared against constitutional amendment one day and Congressman Littlefield advocated it the next. The Democratic party, he thought it useless to say anything about, as it was so near dead now that it could not be revived.

The present strike he said was due to an effort on the part of the operators to break up the miners' union. He denied the reports of lawlessness on the part of the strikers, and said that the newspaper reporters in the strike district were obliged to send in such reports to hold their positions.

SHE HAD HER WAY.

The Story of a Tennis Racket and a Sarcastic Maiden.

She was a demure-looking girl, young and slight, and her hair clung to her forehead in babyish little rings. In her hand she held a tennis racket. Three of the strings were "sprung."

She explained to the salesman in the big sporting goods house that the racket was an expensive one; that it had broken at the first trial; that the fact of its having done so had caused her much annoyance, as she had bought it for a birthday present. In conclusion she was here to return it.

The salesman noted the babyish curls, and, adopting the manner of a bored but rather good natured cat to an irresponsible kitten, he promised to have the racket restrung.

"But I don't want it restrung," said the girl. "I want a new one."

"Oh, but I can't give you a new one," said the clerk reprovingly. "This one has been used."

"Yes," said the girl meekly; "it has been used, and therein was my mistake. You see, I fancied I had bought a tennis racket and so described it to the recipient. He foolishly believed me and used it. Had we both known that your firm was charging $7 for papier mache souvenirs fashioned after the form of a racket, why, he would have put it upon his wall as a decoration. Yes," she continued politely; "I admit we erred in using it." And she smiled prettily.

Then she gave her address and walked out. The next day the firm sent a new racket.—New York Times.

The Rainbow.

When a ray of sunlight falls on a raindrop, it is refracted; then part of the light is reflected from the internal surface and again refracted on leaving the drop. The white sunlight is not only refracted when it enters and leaves the drop, but dispersion also takes place. The eye sees bright circles of light for each kind of light, and since sunlight is made up of different kinds of homogeneous light we get a series of circular arcs, showing the spectrum colors, the red being outside and the other colors following in the order of descending wave length. The whole constitutes a primary rainbow. A secondary bow is sometimes seen outside the first. This is formed by the light being twice reflected inside the raindrops. The less refrangible rays are on the inner side. Rainbows due to still more internal reflections are too feeble to be observed. It is possible to get a white rainbow if the sun is clouded or if there is a mixture of raindrops of very different sizes.

ALONE ALL NIGHT.

Fell from Late Train and Broke His Leg.

Otto Anderson of Cranch street, had an experience Saturday night which he will not soon forget or care to repeat. Anderson went to Boston Saturday night and took the 10.28 train for home. When the train was near the bridge over Butler's brook, he accidentally fell from the train. How he fell he does not know and no one saw him fall. He struck on his head on a pile of rocks. The force of the fall broke his right arm and he was cut and bruised about the head. He was unconscious for a time and when he came to he was so weak he could not help himself.

He managed, however, to roll off the track down the embankment where he remained all night. About 6 o'clock Sunday morning a little girl residing on Butler road, saw the man and going to the street railway car house she reported the matter to the watchman, who notified the police.

The ambulance was sent down and Anderson removed to the City Hospital. His injuries are not necessarily dangerous and he will probably recover.

TWO PETITIONS.

McKnight and DeNormandie to Contest Representative Nominations.

The secretaries of the various Republican ward caucuses have received notices from John McKnight and Eugene F. DeNormandie of their intentions to contest the nominations for Representatives at the caucuses, and arrangements have been made for recounts of the votes in all wards by the chairmen and secretaries.

The recount is made under Section 98 of the caucus act.

The recount will be as follows:

Ward One,—City Hall, Monday, 6 P. M.

Ward Two,—Republican headquarters Tuesday, 11 P. M.

Ward Three,—Council chamber, City Hall, Monday, 6.30 P. M.

Ward Four,—Republican headquarters, Monday, 7 P. M.

Ward Five,—Boston Bazar, Monday, 12 o'clock noon.

Ward Six,—City Hall, Tuesday, 7.30 P. M.

FREEMAN GAINS.

The recount of the vote for Representative in Ward Five, was held this noon at the store of Charles R. Sherman at Wollaston. Mr. Freeman was present in person to watch the recount. Mr. McKnight was represented by Lawyer McAnarney and Mr. DeNormandie by a Mr. Wilson.

Messrs. Adams, Badger, Nicoll and Sandberg were not represented.

The result of the recount was a gain of two for Freeman, while DeNormand and Badger lost one each.

Open Fight in Street.

There was a lively scrap on Chestnut street this morning and for a time blood flowed like water. The two principal were a driver of a milk wagon and a coachman. It appears that the milkman ran into the carriage and as a result there was a wordy war.

The two men then went down Chestnut street to see which was the best man. Both were pretty well pounded about the face and were bleeding profusely when a girl employed at the cafe ran out and stepped between the two men.

This ended the fight. Quite a crowd had collected by this time and word was telephoned the police station, but the fracas was all over and the principal gone before an officer could be sent to the scene.

Both men were about the same size and build, and were evenly matched. Opinions differ as to who proved to be the best man.

Many Bidders.

If the number of contractors that have asked for plans and specifications of the battleship Louisiana be any indication—and it generally is—of the number of ultimate bidders, Wednesday noon at the navy department will be an interesting occasion, says the Washington correspondent of the Herald. All of the big ship building concerns on this coast, as well as those on the Pacific coast, have shown a disposition to come into the contest for this one ship, and some very close figuring and no end of rivalry will be in evidence.

The secretary himself is taking a good deal of interest in the matter—not only because the vessel will be the first one contracted for under his administration, but because of the economic question involved in the building of this ship by contract and the construction of her sister ship, the Connecticut, at the Brooklyn navy yard.

NEW COURT HOUSE.

A Washington Street Lot Contemplated for Building.

A movement with a strong backing of the local bar and others has been started for a new court house, to be located in the new building to be erected on the site of the old car barn on Washington street.

Plans have been made which provide for a building two stories high in front and two stories in the rear, and the size is ample to provide for a large District court room and a large Probate court room, and also two rooms for the justices, a consultation room, a clerk's office, and an office for the probation officer. The floor space would be nearly double the present accommodations.

The location on Washington street is a central and desirable one, and all the rooms will be light, airy and pleasant.

Now that the construction is about to begin, the county commissioners should promptly avail themselves of the opportunity to have quarters which will be adapted to court purposes. The growth in court business the past year has been remarkable, and the need of larger quarters is evident.

If the quarters offered by the syndicate are not secured at this time it may be a long time before such an opportunity is offered again, and probably not at so low a cost.

We understand that a great proportion of the lawyers who practice before the court have urged larger and more convenient quarters.

☞Job Printing at Ledger Office.

Lightning Precaution.

An electrical engineer declares that the center of the room is the safest place from lightning.

"There is a constant tendency on the part of the electricity in the sky to reach the ground," he says. "To do this it must have a conductor. Atmospheric electricity always follows the outside of the conductor or agency that leads it to the ground. That's why the middle of the room is safest during an electrical storm.

"I know of a number of instances where a bolt of lightning followed the walls of a room, burning it on all four sides, while the people in it, being away from the walls, were only slightly shocked. That is the only safe precaution known to science."

A State Dinner In Venice.

In 1552 the patriarch of Aquilela feted Ranuccio Farnese, the pope's nephew, in the palace on the Gludecca. The rooms were decked with extraordinary sumptuousness, cloth of gold, paintings and illuminations adding to the effect produced by the patriarch's cooks. Among the guests were twelve gentlemen in fancy marine costumes of green satin with red lining, wearing caps of the same colors and each accompanied by a lady dressed in white. This repast lasted four hours, varied by music and the professional entertainers of the day. It ended with the cutting up of certain large pies from which live birds flew out into the room. The guests strove with each other to catch these birds.

Discourteous Courtier.

Once upon a time the prime minister went to the king and complained that a certain courtier, who was very hard of hearing, had been making very uncomplimentary remarks about his sovereign.

"Your majesty should speak to him about it," said the minister, "that it may cease, but you must needs speak loud."

"I will speak so loud," answered the king, "that I guarantee the offense will never be repeated."

He then sent the offending courtier to the guillotine.

Moral.—Ax speaks louder than words.—New York Herald.

Rare Consideration.

Naggsby—If you don't like your job, why on earth do you cling to it with such tenacity?

Waggsby—Well, you see, I have friends in the same line of work, and if I let go some of them might stumble into my place and regret it ever afterward.—Los Angeles Herald.

A Fastidious Freak.

Manager—What is the matter with the glass eater?

Assistant—He is getting too tony.

Manager—How so?

Assistant—He refuses to eat anything but cut glass.—Philadelphia Record.

"The Morning After."

Alice (finding a roll of bills under her plate)—You were out awfully late, Arthur. Is this conscience money?

Arthur (timidly from behind his newspaper)—No, my dear; hush money.—Puck.

BRYANT DOWNED.

Unable to Deliver the Senatorial Delegates as Promised.

Hon. Albert A. Brackett, for many years a selectman of Milton, will probably be the Republican nominee at the Senatorial convention this evening in Wesleyan hall, Boston.

The Republicans generally appreciate what Hyde Park did to make possible the nomination of Hon. Eugene H. Sprague of Quincy, both in 1900 and 1901, and the hearty support which that town gave to the candidate at the polls, but it seems that the Hyde Park friends of Wilbur H. Powers made a mistake when they attempted to get the Quincy delegates through Mayor Bryant. Had they sought assistance of others they might have been successful.

When it was learned that Mr. Bryant was for Powers, the anti-administration men took up the gauntlet, and now it is said that 13 of the 16 delegates are for Mr. Brackett. Evidently Mayor Bryant is in the minority.

Should Mr. Powers secure more than three delegates in Quincy he will not have Mr. Bryant to thank, but Senator Sprague and others who realize what is due Hyde Park.

THE BALKY HORSE.

A Little Trick That, It Is Said, Will Start Him Every Time.

For the benefit of those who have been caused a great deal of anxiety by a balky horse, lost trains as well as tempers and sometimes even ruined the horse, the next time they have the experience to run across a balky horse, no matter how bad he is, let me tell you how to start him ninety-nine times out of a hundred.

Of course it may fail one time in a hundred. When a horse balks, no matter how badly he sulks or how ugly he is, do not beat him. Don't throw sand in his ears, don't use a rope on his fore legs or even burn straw under him. Quietly go and pat him on the head a moment. Take a hammer or even pick up a stone in the street, tell the driver to sit still, take his lines, hold them quietly while you lift up either front foot, give each nail a light tap and a good smart tap on the frog, drop the foot quickly and then chirp to him to go. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the horse will go right on about his business, but the driver must keep his lines taut and not pull or jerk him back.

If I have tried this once, I have tried it 500 times, and every time I have suggested it people have laughed and even bet $5 and bottles of wine that I could not do it. So far I have won every bet. This may make you smile, but a horse has more common sense than most people are willing to give him credit for. The secret of this little trick is simply diversion. I am a firm believer that with kindness and proper treatment a horse can be driven with a string.—Horse Shoers' Journal.

The Little Finger Nail.

Forty years ago in certain parts of the United States it was the custom to grow long nails. I well remember some of the swells and puffers who devoted more attention to their little finger nails than they did to their teeth, and often have I seen the fifth digit with a claw on it an inch and a quarter in length. The nail was carried in a stall, and on occasion was split after the manner of a steel or quill pen, so that its wearer could sign his name to a check with it, says a writer in the New York Press. The trimming of nails today is an art which gives employment to many pretty women who style themselves manicures. Nearly every first class, up to date barber shop has its manicure, who delights the man needing a shave or hair cut with an innocent flirtation. She dresses garishly and has a strut on her that would arouse the envy of a saddle astride fox chaseress.

Where Women Propose.

In the Ukraine, Russia, the woman does all the courting. When she falls in love with a man, she goes to his house and informs him of the state of her feelings. If he reciprocates, all is well, and the formal marriage is duly arranged. If, however, he is unwilling, she remains there, hoping to coax him to a better mind. The poor fellow cannot treat her with the least discourtesy, nor has he the consolation of being able to turn her out, as her friends in such a case would feel bound to avenge the insult. His remedy, therefore, if determined not to marry her, is to leave his home and stay away as long as she is in it. A similar practice to that in the Ukraine exists among the Zuni tribe of Indians. The woman does all the courting and also controls the situation after marriage. To her belong all the children, and descent, including inheritance, is also on her side.

COAL FOR THE POOR.

Mr. Coffin Would Close the Public Schools.

Editor Ledger:

The coal question, now so serious and uppermost in everybody's mind, should receive our most serious consideration and to allay suffering and possible death radical measures should be adopted.

My personal investigation of the subject, after talking with one the great heads of labor, with the wholesale and the retail dealers in coal, with heads of both Catholic and Protestant churches, with the rich and the poor citizens, with locomotive engineers, with several travelling men who have visited the mines, and with a miner who has worked underground, from all these have I gleaned the fact (and the general public is well aware of the truth) that very little coal is in sight or on hand, and when that is consumed nothing is to prevent the most acute suffering. Something radical must be done, and a suggestion at this time will be acceptable from anyone who can see a way out.

My suggestion is that all schools and public buildings not actually needed should close and the coal stored in their cellars be given to the poor, thereby saving lives, which is our first consideration. Is it not better to give our children another season of rest than to use the very substance that in the end might possibly prolong their very lives.

Would it not be better that their education be delayed a little, than that possibly our lives should be at stake later on? If this coal strike continues much longer the result must surely be seen even by the most dulled intellect, and if today I was a member of our school board I should go on record in favor of closing our schools at once until such times as this coal question made it possible that every inhabitant could get a sufficiency.

Another Tenderloin Victim

New York, Sept. 29.—An autopsy was performed yesterday on the decapitated body of James B. Craft, a wealthy resident of Glen Cove, L. I., who was murdered early Saturday morning in the Empire cafe. The coroner's physician who performed the autopsy refused to say what it showed. The point of interest in this is whether or not "knock-out" drops had been given Craft before he was attacked with a cleaver. Thomas Tobin is under arrest, charged with murder.

To Bring Roumania to Terms

London, Sept. 29.—Advices from Brussels say an agreement will probably be reached between the heads of high finance in Europe to prevent the issue of any Roumanian loan until the oppressive anti-Jewish legislation of that country has been modified. Such action would embarrass seriously the Roumanian government in the redemption of a large amount of treasury bonds payable in 1904.

Turks and Bulgarians Fighting

Constantinaple, Sept. 29.—Official telegrams received here say that 300 Bulgarian revolutionists, who were surrounded by Turkish troops at Vodena and who succeeded in forcing the cordon after a sanguinary fight, lost 52 men killed and 112 men wounded. The Turks also suffered severe losses. The pursuit of the Bulgarians continues.

Queer Methods Exposed

Frankfort, Sept. 29.—A dispatch from Mannheim announces the arrest of Herr Henninger, a director of the Rheinan-Mannheim Chemical company, and says that other arrests in connection with the company's failure are imminent. The chemical company filed a declaration in bankruptcy Saturday. An examination of the books showed that it had worked at a loss for many years and that the deficiency had been concealed by false entries.

LODGE ON THE TARIFF

Declares There Can Be No Sectional Legislation

NO REVISION AT PRESENT

As It Would Mean Injury to the Business Interests of the Country—Nothing to Be Gained by Reciprocity With Canada

Boston, Sept. 29.—Senator Lodge was the principal speaker at the dinner of the Republican Editorial association at Young's Hotel Saturday afternoon. His speech, which was a very important one, dealt entirely with the questions of reciprocity, and a possible revision of the tariff, on both of which questions he declared that it would be best for the country to trust the Republican party.

He was emphatic in his declaration that on the Alaskan boundary question no administration or president, Republican or Democratic, would ever dare to yield an inch of American territory to England, and said while that question remains in abeyance talk of reciprocity with Canada is worthless.

The burden of Senator Lodge's speech was that the tariff should not be tampered with at this time. He declared that an attempt to revise the tariff now would be to injure the business interests of the country to a degree that could not possibly be compensated for by any advantages that might acrue from tariff revision.

He admitted that the Dingley tariff bill was not a perfect law, but declared that much of our present prosperity is due to it, notwithstanding. Touching upon the matter of duties on hides in that law, Senator Lodge said that he and his colleague, Senator Hoar, permitted it to be incorporated into the bill only under extreme pressure. The Massachusetts senators were forced to the alternative of subjecting hides to a duty or of causing the defeat of the whole bill. They had chosen the broader course, understanding perfectly well that their decision adversely affected the shoe manufacturing industry of New England. But in doing that, they had assisted New England and the country at large in attaining a general prosperity. It was simply a case of the greatest good for the greatest number.

Touching upon reciprocity with Canada, he maintained that the Republican party had always favored such a movement, and had done all that ever had been accomplished toward that end. He declared that the Democrats had simply talked reciprocity; that the only steps ever taken in that direction were by a Republican administration.

Mr. Lodge was not optimistic regarding the advantages to be gained by this country in reciprocity with Canada. The question resolved itself down mainly to one of coal. Under reciprocity we would send Canada good coal and she would send us poor coal. Again, reciprocity would give Canada an added market of 80,000,000 of people, it would give us an additional market of 5,000,000.

He said that the form of reciprocity advocated by Blaine and McKinley must of necessity have a limited scope. He referred to the Argentine treaty, which would benefit New England, but which is strenuously opposed by the cattle raisers of the west and the wool growers of Ohio.

A tariff treaty with France could not be accepted by the United States on the basis proposed, for the reason that this country would be giving France preferential rates, while our goods would be forced to go into France precisely the same as those for any other country. France discriminates against the United States, and that fact must be taken into account in any treaty relations between the two countries.

Senator Lodge said he did not want to be understood as opposing reciprocal arrangements of the right kind. He declared his conviction that some reciprocal arrangements can be made with all the world.

Dealing more specifically with tariff revision, Senator Lodge said that there could be no sectional legislation. In other words, New England could not insist on tariff revision for this particular section without sacrificing much more than could possibly be gained.

The speech concluded with the declaration that the Republican party could be trusted to effect tariff revision when conditions warranted such changes, and that when that time comes the tariff would not be revised on free trade or sectional lines.

Clear Field For Alger

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 29.—Following the withdrawal of D. M. Ferry from the race for the United States senatorship to succeed the late James McMillan, the friends in charge of the receptive candidacy of Benjamin Hanchett of Saginaw have decided to make no further active efforts in his behalf. This leaves the coast entirely clear at present for Mr. Alger.

Kossuth Statue Unveiled

Cleveland, Sept. 29.—A statue to the Hungarian patriot, Louis Kossuth, was unveiled in this city yesterday in the presence of 50,000 people. The statue stands on a pedestal and is about 20 feet high. Addresses were made by Mayor Johnson, Senator Hanna, Congressman Burton and Governor Nash. Addresses were also made in several foreign tongues.

FOUGHT A BURGLAR

Plucky Woman Then Sought the Aid of Bowdoin Students

Bath, Me., Sept. 29.—Armed with a sandbag a burglar assaulted Mrs. Sarah A. Knowles of Harding's Station late Saturday night. He struck her several times and threw red pepper in her face and mouth and attempted to gag her.

She fought the intruder and drove him off, he leaving by the window in her room. He got Mrs. Knowles' pocketbook, and in turn she pluckily held on to the burglar's cap.

Mrs. Knowles ran into the road in her night robe and stopped a trolley car which was carrying home Bowdoin students. She told her story and the students searched the premises. Later they found a young man who was hatless on the road a quarter of a mile away. He gave the name of Ritchie, and appeared to tell a straightforward story.

Mrs. Knowles says she was awakened by a blow on the head and a man asked her for her money. She replied that she had none. Then he struck her and threw the red pepper. Mrs. Knowles is 58, and lives alone.

Sheriff Dunn, with Deputies Stackpole and Bisbee, are at work on the case, assisted by the Brunswick officers.

Unfortunate Seamen

New York, Sept. 29.—The bark Kentmore arrived in port yesterday after an unusually tedious voyage lasting 197 days. The Kentmore sailed from Yokohama in December last. Many of the crew are suffering from scurvy. Dr. Doty says almost all the crew are in a pitiable condition. Malnutrition is responsible for the illness. Several have suffered from moon blink. It is said on board that the men were supplied with very little besides salt meat. The ship stopped at St. Helena to land an injured man, but no fresh meat and vegetables were brought on board at that port for the crew.

Violent Strike Demonstrations

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 29.—Violent demonstrations against the Hudson Valley Railway company have caused shots to be exchanged and there are two men locked up in the county jail charged with being implicated in the attack on the company's property. The trouble developed late Saturday night when attempts were made to burn the bridges between this place and Ballston Spa. Obstacles were also placed on the tracks and the depredators sought to ground the trolley wires.

Awaiting Hill's Arrival

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 29.—Few of the delegates to the Democratic state convention, which is to begin its work here tomorrow, have arrived on the ground, and those here know little as to nominees or platform. Talk in this direction is halting until the arrival of Senator Hill. It is generally understood that with the arrival of the senator the situation will be materially cleared.

Killed Wife and Surrendered

New York, Sept. 29.—Harry Rose, stage manager of the Garrick theatre, shot and instantly killed his wife at their apartments. Immediately afterwards he surrendered himself to the police. Rose, according to his statement to the police, detected his wife in an intrigue and was maddened by her admission of guilt. She was formerly an actress.

Following Up the Moros

Manila, Sept. 29.—A second expedition against the Moro position at Macin, island of Mindanao, left Camp Vicars yesterday. It is in command of Captain Pershing, and is composed of a battalion of infantry, a troop of cavalry, three sections of artillery and a detachment of engineers. The actual date of the assault upon the forts is indefinite.

Americans Maintain Order

Colon, Sept. 29.—The situation on the isthmus remains unchanged. Free transit between Colon and Panama obtains, and American marines and bluejackets are still travelling on all trains. Commander McLean of the cruiser Cincinnati will sail for New York tomorrow. Commander Mason will then assume command of the Cincinnati.

Five Men Killed

McKeesport, Pa., Sept. 29.—Of the eight men injured Saturday evening by the blowing off of a furnace top at the Duquesne plant of the Carnegie blast furnaces, five are now dead. The other three men injured are all reported to be in a serious condition and their recovery is doubtful.

Doctor and Justice In Jail

Freehold, N. J., Sept. 29.—Dr. Hendrick and former Justice of the Peace Stanton of Hoboken, accused of conspiring with Miss Biggar to obtain for her the entire estate of the late Henry M. Bennett, are still locked up in jail here, no bondsmen having appeared in their behalf.

Not Hungry Enough to Work

Washington, Sept. 29.—Indian Agent Hazlitt of the Fort Defiance agency, Arizona, denies the reports that 6000 Navajo Indians are starving. He says he wants to hire 100 Indians at $1.10 a day to work on a railroad, but cannot get one, from which he infers that none of them could be very hungry.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Tuesday, Sept. 30.
Sun rises—5:39; sets—5:29.
Moon rises—4:57 a. m.
High water—10 a. m.; 10:30 p. m.

The low area that was central Saturday night over southern Michigan has reached eastern New York with decreased intensity after causing showers in the lower lake region, the middle Atlantic states and New England. There will be showers in New England.

GOT CAUGHT IN FOG

Steamer City of Bangor Finally Brought Up on a Ledge

Rockland, Me., Sept. 29.—Steamer City of Bangor, with 125 passengers on board, which left Boston on its regular trip Saturday evening, ran into a dense fog Sunday morning when off Monhegan and struck on the ladges at the southeasterly end of the island. The boat ran into a sort of cradle in the rocks and by the aid of its searchlight was seen to be almost on the land. The boat was running about 12 miles an hour, and Captain Arey, who was in command, says he heard the fog signal at Manana island, apparently on the starboard quarter, but later found that it was on the port side.

The steamer's whistle was answered by the Monhegan fog signal, and soon the life saving crew appeared. Their services were not needed, although 11 of the passengers were taken ashore by them.

The ship did not make water very rapidly and in three quarters of an hour slid off the ledge, aided by the rising tide, and headed for Rockland. There was no panic among the passengers.

When off Spruce head it was found that the water was rapidly filling the lower hold and that there was danger of the fires being extinguished. The vessel was at 6 o'clock headed for Lobster cove, where it was beached. Word was at once sent to Rockland and steamers Mt. Desert and Catherine soon arrived and the passengers and cargo transferred. On arrival here the Catherine took the passengers for up-river to Bangor. When off Belfast the Catherine's propeller broke and the passengers will be taken to their destination on another steamer.

Almost Caused a Death

Attleboro, Mass., Sept. 29.—George Benvie was a passenger on a train from Providence and as it was approaching the station here two young men pelted hard pears at the coaches. One pear smashed a window and forced broken glass into Benvie's neck. One piece perforated his jugular vein and another cut a gash an inch long in his throat. The injured man nearly bled to death before a physician's office was reached. Two young men were arrested.

Assault May Prove Fatal

Clinton, Mass., Sept. 29.—Charles Bowes, familiarly called "Bone," 28 years old, is wanted here on the charge of murderously assaulting Andrew Henderson. Both are negroes. Henderson is at a hospital with chances about even for his recovery. The quarrel, it is said, started over the ownership of a lantern, during which Bowes knocked Henderson down and cut him several times with a razor.

And Still No Agreement

Boston, Sept. 29.—When the directors of the New England Milk Producers' union and the Boston contractors concluded their deliberations Saturday night, they were apparently just as far from reaching an agreement upon the price to be paid for milk during the next six months as when they first met three days previous. The original demand of the producers for 40 cents a can was not modified.

Confesses to Incendiarism

Greene, Me., Sept. 29.—William Ellsworth, aged 73, an inmate of the town farm, has been locked up at Lewiston after self-confession of setting fire to the town farm buildings yesterday. All the structures were destroyed with their contents, including the cattle. Ellsworth says he set the fires for revenge. The town's loss is $3000, with no insurance.

Was Lying on the Track

Woburn, Mass., Sept. 29.—An unknown man about 23 years old, who was lying across the track, was run over and killed by a trolley car last evening. Motorman Murphy states that the man was not seen until the car was almost over him and too late to stop. The victim was well dressed.

Supposed Incendiary Fire

Woburn, Mass., Sept. 29.—Fire wiped out the structure known as the "Old Ramsdell Shop" yesterday, the loss of about $20,000 falling upon the American Hide and Leather company. The police are of the opinion that the fire was of incendiary origin and the state officers have been notified.

Postoffice Safe Blown Open

Manchester, N. H., Sept. 29.—The postoffice at Goffstown was broken into Saturday night, the safe blown open and a considerable sum of money taken. A box of bills was left, and the condition of things about the place indicates that the intruders were frightened away.

Murder at Boston

Boston, Sept. 29.—In a quarrel over some money matter in which a trivial amount was involved, Guy Oteri, 45 years old, last night shot and killed Filippo Dandrea, a fellow Italian, 43 years old, at the corner of Tremont and Vernon streets. Oteri was placed under arrest.

Corean Monarch Lives

Berlin, Sept. 29.—An official telegram to the Corean legation here says the Emperor of Corea is alive and in the best of health.

The Seoul, Corea, correspondent of the Paris Figaro said in a dispatch published Sept. 25 that the Emperor of Corea, Yi Hieung, was reported dead.

Negro Burned at the Stake

Corinth, Miss., Sept. 29.—Writhing in the flames of fagots piled high by hundreds of citizens, Tom Clark, a negro, was burned at the stake here yesterday. Clark had confessed to the assault and murder of Mrs. Carrie Whitfield.

Misapprehension as to Roosevelt's Tariff Plan

A PERMANENT COMMISSION

Whose Duty Would Be to Furnish Data to Congress—Would Go a Long Way Toward Lessening Friction Between the East and West

Washington, Sept. 30.—Friends of the tariff commission to which the president alluded in his address at Logansport the other day, insist that there is considerable misapprehension on the part of most of the newspapers regarding the real nature of the proposed instrumentality. It is perhaps unfortunate in bearing the same name as the agency employed 20 years ago, which was a failure. What the president clearly contemplates is a permanent commission whose function should be not to frame tariff laws and fix rates, but to furnish the necessary data upon which congress may do these things.

In the matter of free hides, for example, of which there is much talk but relatively little information, nobody knows to this day, definitely and conclusively, what the effect of the hide duty has been upon the price of hides in this country and in South America, its effect on the domestic leather manufacture, or the export trade in boots and shoes or even domestic prices in those articles. Everybody is talking in the dark, doubtless upon general lines which are reasonably correct, but without that definite information which the investigation of such a commission might furnish. If men could be employed on this investigation sufficiently strong to command public confidence, their conclusion in such a matter as the hide duty would go a long way toward lessening the friction between east and west every time the subject is now mentioned. The protectionist advocates of the removal of the duty naturally feel that if the full facts could be known their western opponents would not insist upon the retention of the duty. The other side takes the opposite view. Vagueness of information seems responsible for much of the misunderstanding.

"The next house of representatives will be Republican, but by a reduced majority," says Representative Dalzell. "This is an off year with us, and I presume it will be difficult to get out the vote. I do not care to hazard any figures on the subject. Tariff revision and the trusts will of course constitute the issues. All I care to say along this line, however, is that there will be no revision of the tariff attempted at the short session of the Fifty-Seventh congress. We will pass the appropriation bills and one or two other matters that are claiming legislative action, and then go home."

Family Poisoned by Arsenic

Vincennes, Ind., Sept. 30.—Hudson Butler, his wife and five children are at the point of death from arsenical poisoning. The family became violently ill after dinner yeterday, excepting a young son who declined to partake of a dish of beans. What seems to have been a plot to kill the family was disclosed by an expert examination of the beans, which showed the presence of arsenic.

Reformed Boxers Participated

Pekin, Sept. 30.—The college at Tung-Chou, which was destroyed in 1900, and where 145 Christians were massacred, was reopened yesterday. Forty-eight officials and 8000 Chinese who were once Boxers and who now reside in the Tung-Chou district participated in the opening ceremonies. The college received many congratulatory gifts.

Combination In Lead

New York, Sept. 30.—The Herald says that plans were practically concluded yesterday for the formation of a mammoth lead combination which will include all the important lead manufacturing concerns in the country. Its capital will be at least $60,000,000 and the plans for financing the deal have been satisfactorily arranged.

Owes His Life to a Neighbor's Kindness.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbor. He was almost hopelessly afflicted with diarrhoea; was attended by two physicians who gave him little, if any, relief, when a neighbor learning of his serious condition, brought him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which cured him in less than twenty-four hours. For sale by all Druggist.

A COAL PROPOSITION

Which Is Expected to Enlist Sympathy of Three Million Voters

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 30.—Plans for the organization of the People's Coal league were launched in this city yesterday by Herbert Myrick. The platform in brief is: "We demand that the federal government own the coal mines and administer them in the interests of the whole people."

Myrick claims that the adoption of his plan will permanently solve the coal question by electing to congress on Nov. 4 men who have pledged themselves to favor government ownership of the coal mines. The plan includes soft and hard coal. The scheme is declared non-partisan and non-political and is designed to effect "such reform of the coal industry that a recurrence of existing conditions shall be impossible."

The league will have headquarters in Chicago, New York and in this city. A branch of the league is to be organized in every township and precinct. Myrick says he will have more than 3,000,000 affiliated with him in less than a fortnight and that the plan will sweep the country from end to end.

Detroit's Broad Invitation

Detroit, Sept. 30.—Steps were taken last night by the special committee of the common council appointed for the purpose, for the holding of a conference in this city Oct. 9 of citizens from all parts of the country to discuss ways and means of securing supplies of anthracite coal. Invitations were sent out last night by telegraph to the governors of 19 states and the mayors of the principal cities in these states to send delegates to the conference. The Associated Press was requested to announce that the invitation was meant for the country at large, it being manifestly impossible to telegraph to every point.

Mitchell Is Mum

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 30.—President Mitchell and District Presidents Nicholls, Duffy and Fahy of the United Mine Workers arrived in town last night from Philadelphia. Mitchell positively refused to make any statement as to the object of his visit to the Quaker city. The feeling is very strong at strike headquarters that a settlement of some kind is pending.

Boston to Have a Meeting

Boston, Sept. 30.—Mayor Collins has called a conference of representative men of Boston to be held Wednesday noon in the common council chamber to consider ways and means for relieving the present coal situation in view of the threatened suffering of the poor of the city.

A Day of Peace

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 30.—In remarkable contrast to last Monday and the Monday previous, yesterday was wholly free from disturbances. Up to a late hour last night not a single act of violence worthy of note had been reported in the anthracite region.

Hustling For Gold Abroad

Vienna, Sept. 30.—The Allgemeine Zeitung says it hears that the United States has applied to some of the largest financial institutions in Vienna to borrow a portion of their gold reserve, which is very large. The cellars of the Austro-Hungarian bank are reported to contain American gold eagles amounting to from $12,500,000 to $15,000,000. The American bankers offer to repay the loans they ask for in interest-bearing bills of exchange.

Big Strike at New Orleans

New Orleans, Sept. 30.—Not a street car left the barns yesterday except a few early mail cars. All the electric linemen in the city were called out in a sympathetic strike in the afternoon. This means that the city will soon be in darkness unless the trouble is adjusted quickly. No telephone, telegraph, electric light or trolley wires can be mended now.

Hunting For Miss Biggar

Bayonne, N. J., Sept. 30.—Acting under a warrant, a constable yesterday came to this place to search for Laura Biggar. The constable and Captain Foley of the Bayonne police made a search of Dr. Hendricks' sanitarium. They did not find anything bearing on the case. The house was deserted, even the doors having been left unlocked.

Shaw to the Rescue

New York, Sept. 30.—Secretary of the Treasury Shaw, who is in New York, has issued a statement in which he says that the banks will hereafter not be required to carry a reserve against government deposits, secured by government bonds. This will make over $30,000,000 available today.

Another Trunk Mystery

Rappahannock, Va., Sept. 30.—Bayard Wright, local agent for the Weems Steamboat company, yesterday discovered a skeleton in a trunk which had been stored in the company's warehouse here for about eight years. The skeleton was apparently that of a child 12 years old. Some tattered clothing hung around the remains.

Terms of Protocol Fulfilled

Pekin, Sept. 30.—The restoration to the Chinese yesterday of the Pekin-Shan-Kai-Kwan railroad, with the consent of the allies, fulfills the terms of the protocol. The guards who are keeping open the line of communication from Pekin to the sea will be retained indefinitely.

FISHER PLEADS GUILTY.

A Confession Which Amazes People---Took $285,000 in a Year.

Boston, Sept. 30.—John M. Fisher, head of the stock brokers' firm of J. M. Fisher & Co., pleaded guilty to nine indictments charging him with defrauding customers by means of the United States mails in the United States district court yesterday afternoon. The case had entered upon the second week of its trial, and during its progress many witnesses had sworn to depositing money with the firm for which they had never received the slightest return.

Fisher's partner, Frederick E. Betts, indicted with him on the same charges, gazed defiantly at the head of the firm as he answered "guilty" to each of the indictments.

Yesterday's testimony was corroborative of what had been given before and Fisher evidently realized that a strong case had been made out against him. Postoffice inspectors told of the seizure of incriminating evidence; telephone and telegraph officials had testified that the firm had had no direct wire to New York city, and Miss Jackson, a mailing clerk in the office, told of her duties and the arrangements of the office.

The postoffice inspectors had completed their testimony when Fisher was seen to whisper to his counsel, Mr. Baker, who, after talking earnestly with him for a while, held a consultation with the district attorney and his assistant, at the close of which Assistant District Attorney Casey asked the court that Fisher be arraigned. This was done and Fisher was asked if he desired to withdraw his plea of not guilty.

"I do," he answered.

Then the nine indictments, one after another, were enumerated to him. In each case he withdrew his former plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty.

Judge Lowell explained to the jury that Fisher's plea affected him alone, and ordered the clerk to record the plea on each of the indictments. That done, Mr. Casey called Fisher to the witness stand and the latter proceeded to tell, without reservation, how he, a former driver of a laundry wagon, and Betts, an employe of an express company, without a penny of capital, posed as bankers and brokers, and took from their dupes $285,000 in little more than a year.

"Mr. Betts did not ask me for any capital, neither did he say he had any himself or that anyone was going to give him any."

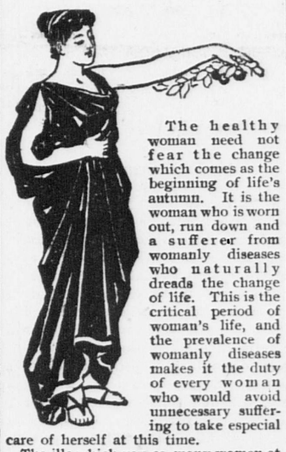
"Before you entered into business with Betts, did you sign any written articles of partnership?" inquired District Attorney Moulton.

"I believe there were some written papers of partnership made out in April or May, which I signed," replied Fisher. "Betts kept those papers. All I know about them is that they entitled both of us to draw a small salary and 10 percent of the profits was to be mine. Nothing was said about a third party to the partnership, nor about the remaining 90 percent of the profits. In May, 1900, I entered the office. It was the first time I had ever been in a broker's office. For about four months I sat in a chair in the board room where the quotations were posted, and I learned the names of the various stocks. I also met customers, received their investment, which I turned over to the bookkeeping department, and made out the receipts. Betts kept the money."

"Do you recall the circulars of June and July?" inquired Mr. Moulton.

"Yes, I do," was Fisher's reply.

At this point counsel for Betts asked that the examination be suspended until today and the court was adjourned.



The healthy woman need not fear the change which comes as the beginning of life's autumn. It is the woman who is worn out, run down and a sufferer from womanly diseases who naturally dreads the change of life. This is the critical period of woman's life, and the prevalence of womanly diseases makes it the duty of every woman who would avoid unnecessary suffering to take especial care of herself at this time.

The ills which vex so many women at the change of life are entirely avoided or cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It makes weak women strong, and enables the weakest to pass through this trying change with the tranquility of perfect health.

"I have been a very healthy woman, and this time has been very hard with me," writes Mrs. Maggie Morris, of Munson Station, Clearfield Co., Pa., Box 16. "I am come to the time of change of life, and I have been sick a great deal off and on. When Mrs. Hemmis moved beside me I was sick in bed, and when she came to see me and we were talking over our sickness, Mrs. Hemmis told me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' also 'Pellets.' I got her to bring me a bottle of each from the drug store and I used them. They did me a great deal of good, and I got two more bottles of 'Favorite Prescription.' I never saw such a wonderful cure. Before I commenced your remedies I was good for nothing; was in such misery I hardly knew what to do with myself, now I can do all my work myself and feel well."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are easy and pleasant to take.

Good Afternoon.

We see no necessity at the present time of closing the schools, that their supply of coal may go to the poor. When the city is unable to get a supply of coal to distribute it will be different. To close the schools would not solve the coal strike. The quickest way to bring the coal strike to a head is to raise the price of coal to $50 or $100 per ton. Something would be done then Meanwhile the city might buy at wholesale a cargo of coal so that it can relieve distress and suffering this winter.

Would that the conscience of all evil doers might smite them as in the case of John M. Fisher and Charles Carlson. These two recent examples show that the path of the transgressor is not always strewn with roses.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Maine, in our judgment, has made a great mistake in facilitating easy-going manufacture of wild-cat corporations. The power of states to control corporations within their jurisdiction ought to be exercised. This organization of corporations in one state to do business in another state, or for purposes of speculation, is to pretend to do business, and then to evade business. That operation is a nuisance, since it enables corporations, for example, organized in Maine, to defy the laws of other states which are practically left helpless. —Lewiston Journal.

☞The prisoner who swam Shirley Gut and escaped from Deer Island, only to be recaptured in Boston, repeated the first part of the preformance on Sunday and is still at large. Prior to the swimming feat he had to file his way out of his cell, and then slide down a long wire cable, so that his latest break for liberty was a most difficult, as well as dangerous, affair. He has not been recaptured, but he probably will be, for he cannot keep away from the neighborhood that, environs his dark-eyed love.—Lynn Item.

Not Dead but Dead Drunk.

Word was received at the police station early Monday evening that there was a dead man on Edison street. An officer was sent down and found a man dead drunk. When the fellow came to his senses he said his name was Thomas Gladstone and he was fined $3 in court under that name this morning. Not having the money he went to Dedham. He later said the name Gladstone was fictitious one.

New Choir.

The choir of the Wollaston Unitarian church is composed of the following: Miss Viola Bicknell, Mrs. Fred Merrill, Miss Ernestine Litchfield, Mrs. A. C. Doane, Messrs. Herbert Gurney, Percy A. Hull, J. Q. Lichfield, Avery Bennett. Miss Bicknell is from Hingham, a teacher in the Massachusetts Fields school and is a pupil of Miss Gertrude Edmunds of Boston.

A QUINCY BOY

Now a Resident of East Milton

Is Nominated for Norfolk Senator.

Albert A. Brackett Unanimously Selected.

The Republican convention of the First Norfolk Senatorial district was in session less than an hour, and might have adjourned earlier, but it desired to hear from the nominee.

There was a full attendance of delegates, viz: 16 from Quincy, 5 from Braintree, 6 from Weymouth, 2 from Holbrook, 2 from Randolph, 2 from Canton, 7 from Hyde Park, and 4 from Milton.

Hon. B. H. Woodman of Braintree was chairman and Frank Mason of Weymouth secretary.

Ex-Councilman Frederick L. Jones moved on informal ballot for nominee for senator, and was chairman of the committee on ballot.

There were cast 43 votes of which 1 was for E. A. Sprague, 16 for W. H. Powers of Hyde Park and 26 for Albert A. Brackett of Milton.

The convention then proceeded to a formal ballot when Mr. Power received 14 and Mr. Brackett 30.

Upon motion of Mr. Humphrey of Hyde Park, the nomination of Albert A. Bracket of Milton was made unanimous.

H. C. Gallagher of Milton was re-elected on the State Committee.

Voted that the district committee include the member of the State Committee and the chairman of the city and town committees.

A committee of four including T. H. Newcomb of Quincy, waited on the nominee, and Candidate Brackett addressed the convention thanking the delegates for the honor conferred, and saying it would be his endeavor, if elected, to discharge the duties to the best of his ability, and to look faithfully after the welfare of the district.

Candidate Brackett entertained the delegates at the United States Hotel after the convention.

Damon—Eacret.

A very pretty wedding took place last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eacret, when their daughter Effie and Mr. Israel Damon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Damon, of Quincy, Mass., were married. The ceremony was read by Rev. George F. Flichtner, of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, of whose choir Miss Eacret has long been a member.

The bride was attired in white silk mull, en traine, with tucks, white applique, and white velvet ribbon trimming. She wore a tulle veil and carried lilies-of-the-valley.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Elizabeth Eacret, as maid of honor, in a gown of white dimity. She carried American Beanty roses. Miss Jane Lark Eacret and Miss Irene Eacret were bridesmaids. They wore blue mull and carried white roses. The bridegroom's gift to the bride was a gold watch.

Mr. Damon's best man was his college chum, Mr. Charles T. Pettingell, of Harvard, 1901.

Only the immediate families of the bride and groom were present. Miss Helen Nicholson, cousin of the bride, played the wedding music.

After a short trip to regions unknown, the newly married pair will make their home at Wellesley Hills, Mass., near Rockridge Hall, where Mr. Damon is an instructor.

Humors

They take possession of the body, and are Lords of Misrule.
They are attended by pimples, boils, the itching tetter, salt rheum, and other cutaneous eruptions; by feelings of weakness, languor, general debility and what not.
They cause more suffering than anything else.
Health, Strength, Peace and Pleasure require their expulsion, and this is positively effected, according to thousands of grateful testimonials, by
Hood's Sarsaparilla
Which radically and permanently drives them out and builds up the whole system.

CITY BREVITIES.

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

Miss Margaret Sibly enters Simmons College.

Mrs. Mary Keith of Washington, D.C., is at present in Wollaston.

Preparations are being made for the annual fair of Memorial church, Atlantic.

Henry L. Kincaide & Co. are selling a surprisingly large number of oil heaters.

Miss Bertha Nichols of Botolph street is visiting relatives in Woburn for a few days.

Mr. Savillian Foss of Beach street, with his family, have gone to Boston to spend the winter.

Mrs. George Stone of Wollaston has returned from Vermont where she has been spending the summer.

Elmer W. Baker will open a dancing class this evening at Faxon hall, and on Saturday afternoon one for children.

Miss Makenzie of Billings street has issued cards announcing a sale of fancy trimmings to be held at her residence.

Mr. Howard Bowles and family of Wollaston Park are going to Groton where they expect to reside in the future.

Mr. Dorety, janitor of the Massachusetts Fields school, is to reside in the house of Mr. Howard Bowles on Beach street.

Miss Blanch Bristol of Uxbridge, who has been visiting Mrs. George Hill of Walker street, left Tuesday for Bath, Maine.

Miss Elizabeth Corlew will open a class in dancing and deportment, in Wollaston hall (formerly Brasee hall), on Wednesday, Oct. 8, at 4 o'clock.

There will be a reception to mothers and little ones at the Mothers' meeting at Bethany church tomorrow. Mrs. W. H. Albright of Roxbury will speak on "Good reading for children."

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid Alliance will be held in the Unitarian church vestry Wollaston, Wednesday, at 3 o'clock. All members are requested to be present, as important business is to come before the meeting.

A cordial invitation is extended to the parish and friends of Rev. and Mrs. Leon H. Austin to a reception to be given them in the Washington Street Congregational church, Thursday evening, Oct. 2, from 7.30 until 9.30.

The window in the Chinamen's shop in Sagamore block, which was broken a few nights ago, has been reset with a sash dividing the panes in the large space. It is the only show window in the block which has not a whole pane of glass in front.

Mr. and Mrs. George B. Wendell of East Milton are being congratulated on the birth last Saturday of a son and heir. Mr. Wendell is well known in Quincy where he resided up to the time of his marriage to Miss Eaton of Milton.

Watch Your Coal.

Parties, whose present idenity is unknown, attempted to replenish their coal bin Monday night, by helping themselves to the supply carried by C. H. Hardwich & Co. This firm's supply is in a bin near the engine house. The watchman on duty discovered the parties and gave chase. They ran toward Brewer's corner where he lost them. If the parties got any at all it was a very small amount.

Agrees with Mr. Coffin.

Editor of Ledger:

In reading the issue of the Ledger of Sept. 29, I believe with Mr A. G. Coffin, that before the city of Quincy pays these big prices for coal to keep the school houses open, let the children go out and play on mother earth until coal comes down. They will be healthier and stronger than they would be in school tied up in confinement.

W. E. Nightingale.

Wilson May Run.

The Ledger stated a few days ago that it was rumored that one of the two Democratic candidates for Representative was to withdraw. It is now said that William J. Colligan is the candidate to withdraw and that the City Committee will fill the vacancy by nominating George H. Wilson.

☞The Quincy bowling alleys on Granite street have been leased by Messrs. Ferris & Littlefield and are being thoroughly renovated and put in first class condition. In connection with the alleys will be a finely equipped Pool Room with three first-class tables. They will be opened about October 2, and announcement of opening night will be made in these columns. tflwp

A Big Fall Festival.

Again the Brockton Fair is one of the great attractions of the hour. The dates of the big festival this year are Sept. 30, Oct. 1, 2 and 3.

The attractions are finer than ever. The trotting is always fast at the Brockton track, one of the finest in New England, and some of the events will be made speedier than ever by the new method, best two heats in three instead of three in five. There will be something new to this section on a half mile track. Roman chariot races, each driver urging on four fiery horses at full speed. The horse show has made a name for itself, and the equine four hundred will be in evidence again.

The stage show is full of reliable attraction and the usual large percentage of novelties. A human torpedo will be exploded in midair to drop to the earth. A midway furnishes something to amuse all day long. Running races and bicycle races will fill in the gaps on the track. Three fine bands will play. In every part of the huge grounds there have been improvements designed to add to the comfort and convenience of all who attend.

THE RECOUNT.

No Material Change in Vote for Republican Representatives.

By the recount thus far of the Republican vote for candidates for Representatives, the votes of Messrs. Adams, DeNormandie and Sandberg remain the same, Badger loses 1 and Nicoll 2, Freeman gains 1 and McKnight 3.

WARD ONE.

A recount of the Ward One votes was made at 6 P. M. Monday, by Chairman Prescott and Secretary Matthews in the presence of representatives of Messrs. Freeman, DeNomandie and McKnight.

The result was a gain of two for Sandberg and one each for DeNormandie, Nicoll and McKnight, and a loss of one for Freeman.

There were six tickets without a vote for representatives, and bullets as follows: Sandberg, 24; DeNormandie, Freeman and McKnight, 5 each; Adams and Nicoll 2 each, and Badger none.

WARD THREE.

Some minor changes were the result of the recount of the Ward Three votes. The changes were not material, however, and the result will not be changed. On one ballot that was thrown out, the voter had crossed the names of Sandberg and Nicoll and then had started to mark a third name. The caucus officer had evidently counted this ballot for Sandberg and Nicoll.

This lost both gentlemen one vote. Another ballot that the caucus officers had credited to Nicoll, the recounters gave to McKnight for he gained one vote while Nicoll lost two and Sandberg one.

At the recount two of the tellers made Nicoli's vote 217 and two made it 220, but as Mr. Nicoll had no interest in the result, no attempt was made to see which was correct.

WARD FOUR.

The recount of the votes of Ward Four for Representative did not change the ultimate result, but did show that the votes of that ward were proficient at shooting bullets. There were 91 blanks for Representative. In a few cases the voter did not check any of the seven names, but in a majority of the cases the voters checked one name only, that of E. J. Sandberg.

Mr. Sandberg lost one vote by imperfect marking, and Mr. Nicoll also lost one vote while Mr. McKnight gained one. The tellers did not agree on the vote for Mr. DeNormandie, but upon going over the ballots a second time they did agree and his vote was not changed.

Brookline for Wright.

The Brookline Chronicle says:

"This talk for a new man for county commissioner to succeed Marshall P. Wright, that we hear more or less about, is to be described as nothing more than a saturated solution of rhodomontade. Mr. Wright, having served with such satisfaction to the voters of the country, has furnished no occasion for his removal from the board, and to seriously propose to replace him with another man, without any reasons, belittles the importance and responsibility of the office and tends to convert it into nothing more than a bait for incompetency.

Mr. Wright is the legitimate Republican candidate this year, having been substantially indorsed by a very large Republican vote, and his business experience is likely to be most useful in connection with the erection of the new registry of deeds in Dedham. We therefore hope that Brookline Republicans will rally to his support."

Music and Flowers.

The funeral of Warren Mitchell was held Monday afternoon from his late residence on Franklin street. The services were very largely attended and there was a profession of beautiful flowers which almost hid the casket. The ritualistic burial service of the Episcopal church was conducted by Rev. George A. Strong. During the service the choir of Christ church sang "When our Heads are Bowed with Woe" and "Lead Kindly Light," and John Findlay sang the solo "Holy City." The burial was at Mt. Wollaston.

—The women who laugh usually have good digestion, admiring husbands and children, and enjoy wonderful social popularity. Of course the laugh must be timely, for a woman wanting in sympathy is most unlovable.—Old Colony Memorial.

DEMOCRATIC MOVE.

To See the Voting Lists Used at Republican Caucuses.

William T. Shea, a well known Democrat of Ward Four, was about City Square this morning seeking signatures to a petition which is to be presented to the Registrars of Voters, requesting them to make public the voting list used at the Republican caucuse in Ward One last week. The petition when seen this morning was signed largely by gentlemen prominent in or known to be affiliated with the Democratic party.

The move of Mr. Shea is an unusual one, and it is doubtful if the Board of Registrars have any such authority. In the first place they have not the voting lists in their possession.

Section 98 of the Caucus Act reads:

"The secretary of each caucus shall preserve for ten days all ballots cast and all voting lists used at the caucus. If during said time ten voters entitled to vote in said caucus shall file with him a written request so to do, he shall PRESERVE said ballots and voting lists for three months, and shall produce the same, if required by ANY COURT OF JUSTICE or convention having jurisdiction or authority over the same."

P. O. Examination.

The annual Clerk-Carrier examination for the postoffice in this city will be held in Boston, November 19. Blank applications and information concerning this examination can be secured from Mr. John H. McDougall at the postoffice or from the Consolidated Board of Examiners at Boston. The applications should be properly executed and filed prior to the close of business on October 20.

This examination offers a good opportunity to those citizens of this city who are desirous of entering the government service, and it is hoped that all so inclined will file applications for the same. The age limits are 18 to 45 years, and all male applicants must weigh at least 125 pounds and be not less than 5 feet 4 inches in height, in their stocking feet. All male applicants who pass the examination will be entered on both the clerk and carrier registers and are therefore eligible to appointment for both positions.

To Washington.

Among those who have signified their intention of going to Washington with the Grand Army this week are Chief of Police Hayden and Mrs. Hayden, Mr. and Mrs. Mark E. Hanson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Hearn, James Merrill, Edwin Hodges, Henry P. Kittredge, Jeremiah Ford, Henry J. Mathews, George Chubbuck, A. Myette and Charles Leavitt.

Not so Dangerous

The street railway own two poles near what was the green plot near the fountain in City Square. The removal of this plot left the poles in the street and in a dangerous position at night. A lantern has been hung upon the poles up to Monday, when the street railway placed a series of fire lights upon each pole.

Travel Thursday to Sunday.

Thursday, Oct. 9, over the Boston & Albany R. R. to Albany, Hudson River Steamer to New York. Thence via Fall River Line back to Boston for $5.00. Descriptive leaflet. Address A. S. Hanson, Gen. Pass. Agent, Boston.

—The city of Concord, the capital of New Hampshire, is to erect a new municipal building at a cost of $79,350.

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

Oil for Fuel.

With coal prices soaring as rapidly as the supply diminishes the substitution of some other fuel becomes necessary, and various expedients are being tried.

In New York experiments have been made with some success in the use of crude oil. One large iron works in that city has found it perfectly satisfactory.

The company has a steamer furnished with an oil tank and oil burning furnaces, and is completing the installation of the system in a fleet of seven steamships which are to be used as oil transports between New York and Texas. Fuel oil has been found satisfactory in locomotives and it is even now being used for cooking and heating purposes in many homes and apartment houses.

The Tribune tells of a new apartment house in 54th street which is to be completely fitted out with a system of heating by oil. A tank for the oil is placed in the cellar, and pipes run throughout the five apartments. The attendance upon one furnace is required where by the coal method five would have to be watched.

Cooking will be done entirely on stoves with oil for fuel, and the heating will be either by hot air or steam heating furnace which will burn oil. The cost of crude oil will soon be about 75 cents a barrel.

Three and one-half barrels give as much heat as one ton of coal, and at the present time cost as much as a ton of coal at $3.50 The oil boom in Texas and other parts of the country is expected to reduce the price considerably.

As coal is likely to be higher in price it is well enough to investigate the possibilities of oil.—Beverly Times.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

INHALED CARBONIC GAS

Probable Cause of the Death of Novelist Zola

WIFE IS ALMOST OVERCOME

Pet Dogs In Room With Unfortunate Couple Suffered No Ill Effects—Nothing Yet Developed to Substantiate Theory of Suicide

Paris, Sept. 30.—The death of Emil Zola, the well known novelist of the realistic school, who gained prominence in recent years because of his defense of the Jews and former Captain Dreyfus, only became generally known late yesterday afternoon and has caused a great sensation.

EMILE ZOLA.

M. Zola and his wife retired at 10 o'clock Sunday night. Mme. Zola was gravely ill when the room was broken into yesterday morning. At about noon she was removed to a private hospital, where she recovered consciousness for a short time and was able briefly to explain to the magistrate what had happened.

The Zolas returned to Paris from their country home at Medan Sunday. Owing to a sudden spell of cold weather the heating stove in their bedroom was ordered to be lighted. The stove burned badly, and Zola was asphyxiated by fumes from the fire. The pipes of the stove are said to have been out of order.

To the magistrate Mme. Zola explained that she woke early yesterday morning with a splitting headache. She wakened her husband and asked him to open a window. She saw him rise and attempt to move toward a window, but he staggered and fell to the floor unconscious. Mme. Zola fainted at the same moment and was, therefore, unable to give the alarm. Mme. Zola does not yet know of her husband's death, and it is feared she may suffer a relapse when informed of it.

Zola's remains lie upon a divan in the centre of the spacious drawing room of his house under a canopy of rare and ancient hangings. The body is covered with a sheet and in the light of electric lamps the face of the dead man shows a waxy color.

The servants of the Zola household, hearing no movements in their master's apartments in the morning, entered the bedroom at 9:30 o'clock and found Mme. Zola lying on the bed inanimate. M. Zola was lying half out of bed, with his head and shoulders on the floor and his legs on the bed. Doctors were summoned, but they failed to restore Zola to life. After prolonged efforts they resuscitated Mme. Zola.

A slight odor of carbonic gas was noticed when the servants broke into the bedroom. From the position of Zola's body it was evident that he had tried to rise, but had been overcome by the fames which apparently escaped from the defective stove.

It was reported here during the day that there were evidences of suicide in the death of Zola. Nothing has so far developed to substantiate this theory, and the statement made by Mme. Zola to the magistrate seems to disprove it. Zola dined with a good appetite Sunday evening, and the servants of the household ate of the same dishes. No unusual sound was heard from the bedroom during the night. Two little dogs belonging to the Zolas passed the night in their master's bedroom. They were alive yesterday morning.

A druggist, who was the first to arrive at the house to attend M. Zola and his wife, said:

"When I entered the bedroom M. Zola was lying partly on the floor. No special odor likely to cause asphyxiation was distinguishable. I think the accident was probably caused by the Zola's inhaling heavy carbonic gas, which lay mainly below the level of the high bed. This would account for Mme. Zola's escape. They were not suffocated on the bed. M. Zola was awakened by the gas and he was seized by vomiting, fainted and fell to the floor, where he was suffocated. Mme. Zola also was overcome by the gas, but to a less degree than her husband."

The prefect of Paris has ordered the city architect to examine the bedroom in which Zola died and has issued instructions that an analysis be made of his blood and of the atmosphere of his room.

M. Zola was born in Paris April 2, 1840.

PRODUCERS FAVORED

In Controversy With Contractors Over the Price of Milk

Boston, Sept. 30.—The directors of the New England Milk Producers' union yesterday voted to accept the offer of the Boston contractors of 37½ cents a can for milk during the winter months, and announced that while this price is in force the retail price of milk in Boston will be 8 cents a quart. The producers consider that they have secured an important concession in the fact that the word "surplus" is eliminated in the new agreement.

Under a former arrangement, which was abolished a little over a year ago, what milk was not sold in Boston by the contractors for immediate consumption was converted into butter and the producers received pay for it at the rate it was worth for butter making. Last winter they accepted 36 cents a can for their milk and provided that the contractors should be allowed 1½ cents for looking after the surplus. Under the agreement signed yesterday the surplus, which, to please the producers, must be referred to as "over-production," is to be limited to what it was last winter unless the contractors receive more than they ask for regularly, and anything over last winter's over-production can be converted into butter and the producer be paid at the butter price.

High Premiums For Seats

Boston, Sept. 30.—Bidding on the auction sale of seats for the Friday afternoon rehearsals of the Boston Symphony orchestra reached $305 yesterday. Three seats in row 1, on the centre isle, were knocked down to a ticket broker, and since the premium must be paid on each seat plus the regular price of $12, these three seats cost their present owner $951. The same broker paid also the next highest premium, $200, for the three corresponding seats in row H. The six seats cost him no less than $1597.

Peterson Brothers Sentenced

Boston, Sept. 30.—Carl Peterson and his brother, Julius C., who were indicted on seven counts for burglaries committed during the past few months, the latter of whom was found guilty by a jury and the former of whom pleaded guilty without a trial, were yesterday sentenced to state prison, Carl receiving a sentence of from 8 to 10 years and Julius one of from 7 to 9 years. Had they received the full sentence possible under the seven counts they would have been given 70 years.

Old-Time Rush Revived

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 30.—President Eliot's plan for abolishing the "bloody Monday" freshman rush at Harvard was spoiled last night, when the freshman and sophomore classes came together in the college yard. It was a fierce battle and the freshmen won in the first onslaught, many men on both sides showing marks of it in bruises and torn raiment. After the rush the freshmen paraded the yard, singing football songs.

Danger In Converters

Buttonwood, R. I., Sept. 30.—During a severe electric storm Miss Elizabeth Kilroe, aged 35, was electrocuted when she touched an incandescent light in an attempt to turn on the current. The burning out of the converter was the cause of the mishap. Three persons have been electrocuted in this vicinity within a year because of similar accidents to converters.

Trust Issue Paramount

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 30.—The Democrats of the Third congressional district yesterday nominated John R. Thayer for a third term in congress. The nomination was unanimous. In his speech of acceptance he declared the trust issue paramount in the campaign and said it can be met by the reduction of the tariff.

Foss Sure of Nomination

Boston, Sept. 30.—By the recount of votes cast at the Republican caucuses in the Eleventh congressional district, which was completed last evening, Eugene N. Foss gains one delegate from Melvin O. Adams, thus giving him 57 delegates in the convention to 49 for Adams and assuring him of the nomination.

Identification of a Suicide

Fall River, Mass., Sept. 30.—The dead man found on a raft in Stafford pond a week ago with a bullet in his head has been identified as T. Brenna, a carpenter who had gone from Boston to Providence in search of work, where he pawned a watch, thence coming to this city, where he bought a revolver.

Coal Goes Up In Smoke

Wickford, R. I., Sept. 30.—About 400 of bituminous coal owned by the Wickford worsted mills was partially burned yesterday, and will probably cause the throwing out of employment of about 150 persons. The fire was caused by spontaneous combustion.

Hurrying to Daughter's Bedside

Spokane, Sept. 30.—The mystery of the disappearance of Evangelist Charles D. Crittenton, the millionaire founder of rescue homes, has been cleared up. He left the city Friday morning and is hurrying to New York to sail for England, where his daughter is reported dangerously ill.

Went the Full Limit

London, Sept. 30.—A stubborn contest was fought at Gateshead last evening between George Dixon, American, and Will Curley of Newcastle for a purse of $2000. Having gone the full 15 rounds, the fight was declared a draw.

Marriage Rumor Refuted

Madrid, Sept. 30.—The story of the marriage of Queen Maria Christina to Count de la Escosura is declared here to be false.

COLER FOR GOVERNOR

Unless New York Democrats Should Stampede to Hill

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Three important facts were developed with regard to the Democratic state convention late last night. First, one of Judge Parker's particular friends brought the judge's absolute refusal to accept a nomination for the governorship even if given by acclamation. Second, Hugh McLaughlin of Brooklyn arrived and took charge of the Kings county delegates in favor of Bird S. Coler, and third, a strong sentiment developed towards making Senator Hill the candidate.

At midnight it looked as if Hill, controlling the convention, would have to nominate a candidate who, like Coler, is strong with the up-state and Kings county delegates, or else the convention, taking matters into its own hands, will nominate Hill. Senator Hill does not want the nomination; but, say his friends, if the convention were to be stampeded and nominate him it is difficult to see how he could possibly refuse.

With Judge Parker out of the reckoning, it may be asserted that Coler is the leading candidate for the nomination for governor. The rest of the ticket is absolutely undecided on. There are many candidates for each office.

McLean and Salazar Confer

Panama, Sept. 30.—Returning the official visit of Commander McLean of the cruiser Cincinnati, General Salazar, commandant of the Colombian forces on the isthmus, called at the American consulate here yesterday afternoon. He was received by Commander McLean, Commander Mason and Consul Ehrman. Commander McLean told a representative of The Associated Press that he had come to an understanding with General Salazar, as a result of which there is no danger of difficulty or friction in the future. He seems to be very much satisfied with the result of the conference, which has produced a good impression in all circles.

Serious Riot In Gotham

New York, Sept. 30.—A feud between two rival factions, one living in the Ghetto and the other near the Chinese quarter in this city, came to an open battle last night. Nearly 200 people were engaged and clubs, revolvers, knives, bricks and stones were used by the rioters and many of the fighters were hurt. Thirteen arrests were made. The immediate cause of the fight was the beating of Mike Dowe. He was so badly hurt Sunday night last that he died and his associates started out last night to avenge his death.

Retirement Not Considered

New York, Sept. 30.—Secretary of War Elihu Root arrived in this city last night. In answer to a question as to whether there was any truth in the rumor that he intended to leave the cabinet, the secretary said: "The rumors about my retirement are fallacious. I have given the matter no consideration and do not intend to retire."

President Making Good Progress

Washington, Sept. 30.—President Roosevelt passed an uneventful day yesterday, remaining most of the time in his wheel chair. He is reported to be progressing satisfactorily. There were no visitors except Dr. Lung. Dr. Shaffer, the New York bone specialist, returned to New York yesterday afternoon.

Study Sacrificed For Football

New York, Sept. 30.—Captain Weekes of the Columbia football team was yesterday, in company with five other players, debarred from playing football because of scholarship deficiencies. Their disqualification is only temporary and can be removed by the passing of examinations.

It Is Senator Alger

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 30.—Governor Bliss last night affixed his signature to the commission that makes former Secretary of War Alger a United States senator to succeed the late James McMillan.
